Students Advised on Conduct During Time of Crisis

PRESIDENT CODY

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

London: Chamberlain left Heston airport at 2.35 a.m., E.S.T., with large crowds cheering him on.

Brenner Pass: Il Duce reached the Brenner Pass at 12.06 a.m., E.S.T., and was met by a representative of Hitler.

A broadcast from a North Carolina radio station about 5 a.m. held very little hope of averting war.

Prague: In Prague it is reported the Czechs are still afraid that they may be betrayed. Naturally a war would have disastrous results upon the little nation, but even more than war she fears to be turned over to the Fuehrer. The feeling of relief throughout the rest of the world is still not prevalent in the Republic, and a pessimistic note that it is impossible to avoid war is still reported to be the feeling.

There is no doubt that the Fuehrer's attack on their leader Benes is resented, and they would have liked to have heard some of their friends express through Mr. Chamberlain some condemnation of the man who they feel is attempting to save his own face before the German people by forcing him to resign his position.

Ottawa: Prime Minister Mackenzie King abandoned plans for the summoning of Parliament until after the Munich conference, indicating that Ottawa still has faith that war may be averted. However, the various departments of national defence are passing such measures as show that they are making all necessary preparations for war.

London: Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain flew from England to Munich early this morning to make his last plea to Adolph Hitler for peace. At Munich the four leaders, Hitler, Chamberlain, Mussolini and Deladefier, on the invitation of Hitler, are meeting in conference to try and solve the problems which have led Europe to the very brink of war.

The proposal came only twenty-four hours after Herr Hitler had sent London word of his resolve to mobilize and march upon Czechoslovakia. A wave of relief swept over England and the continent and indeed throughout the world as it was felt that once again the crisis was averted, and there was still another avenue to peace opened up.

Throngs of Londoners hailed Mr. Chamberlain as a national hero and marched past his home cheering for their leader. He advised them to go to bed and sleep in peace, but at the same time there was no cessation of the grim work carried on by the light of flares and Britain still hurriedly prepared for any emergency. While Mr. Chamberlain was at the height of his triumph, Anthony Eden left the scene in grim silence, indicating by his gesture that he still has some of the worries of the Czech people upon his shoulders and fears no doubt for their fate as the four powers meet together.

Hushed and Solemn, Hundreds of Freshmen Hear Dr. Cody's Counsel

"Seems Youth Bears Heaviest Burden," Declares Dr. Cody, Addressing Hundreds of Serious Students in Convocation Hall, Impressing on Them Their Responsibilities and Duties in Times of Crises

"SOMETHING LIKE REIGN OF ANTI-CHRIST HAS COME OVER LARGE PART OF EUROPE", SAYS PRESIDENT OF CRISIS

"Can there be a stronger challenge to the youth of the world?" H. J. Cody, President of the University of Toronto, asked several hundred serious-faced freshmen yesterday in Convocation Hall, referring to the menace of force presented by totalitarian states personified by present day dictators. "It seems that on youth the heaviest burden must be laid."

Gravely the students, wearing coloured ties and other insignia of their newness to university, listened, putting from their minds for the moment the thoughts of then-trivial-seeming initiation activities. Gravely they listened as their mentor, sometimes in a voice that trembled with emotion, impressed on their serious responsibilities and duties to God and country, in times of tense crises and world-important situations.

S.A.C. SETS MARK FINDS JOBS FOR 900

Summer Camps and Hotels Provide Most Student Jobs

Through the Students' Administrative Council of the university, many part-time and permanent positions have been secured for undergraduates and graduates of the University during the past year.

The majority of the placements have been summer jobs which enable students to partly or wholly meet the costs of their education. Last summer more part-time employment has been provided than ever before, and it is estimated that almost 900 students were satisfactorily placed.

Summer camps and hotels provided the greatest number of positions, where students undertook everything from waiting, to instructing canoeists and (Continued on page 4)

STAINED WINDOW HONOURS TRUSTEE

In Memory of N. W. Hoyles, Window Depicts Century-Old Decree

Honouring N. W. Hoyles, a trustee of Wycliffe for many years, a stained glass window was unveiled Tuesday at Wycliffe College chapel, at the annual meeting of the Wycliffe College Alumni Association. Mr. Hoyles died in 1927.

The window was unveiled by Mrs. T. W. Murphy, a daughter of Mr. Hoyles, the invocation, dedication, and prayer being said by Right Rev. H. J. Hamilton. Closing prayers were said by Rev. N. B. McElhann, principal of Wycliffe.

Issuing of the royal decree, four hundred years ago, that the Bible in English be placed in English churches is illustrated by the window.

Following the dedication, J. Shirley Denison, K.C., gave a brief address in tribute to Mr. Hoyles.

"We dare not be neutral on great moral issues—on political issues that grow out of the maintenance of right, and truth and decency," said the President. He told the students that one day they might have to make a great sacrifice either for a great cause or their country, and exhorted them to keep themselves fit so that the sacrifice would not be lessened by offering a maimed body.

"All the liberties we have taken for granted are now a cause for maintenance," said Dr. Cody. "Those truths that seemed platitudes are now the oriflame of a crusade. Something like the reign of anti-Christ has come over large parts of Europe. Ruthless cruelty is not only practised, but justified by fanatics. Liberty of soul, mind and body is disappearing. The State as a monstrous idol is deified and worshipped. Plighted trust is freely broken; democracies are ridiculed and personality is held cheap."

"Our house stands together and its pillars shall not fall," he said of the British Empire. "If the worst comes to the worst, where shall Canada be? I believe her heart is unchanged, that her outstretched hands are clasped in help to Britain and that there is a determination, no matter what her racial people, that Canada shall play a manly part side by side with other parts of the British Empire."

It seemed "preposterous, incredible and an outrage of humanity," he continued, that "a few ambitious, fanatical, unbalanced supermen" should involve the world in the catastrophe of war.

"My mind goes back," he said at the outset, "to twenty-four years ago when clouds of war came over this land and the civilized world. Gradually these walls were vacated. Some came back. Some did not come back. They gave themselves to the great cause of freedom, justice and mercy."

"And now another cloud hangs over us. Terror and propaganda have brought great sections of the civilized world into a sorry state."

"The Memorial Tower," he added, "is an abiding challenge for freedom, justice and mercy, and the essentials of a free, humane civilization."

"Will the future be a soulless mechanism with no freedom, with tyranny, anarchy and bloodshed, or will the spiritual regain mastery? Today in clouds of darkness and anxiety and with a sense of overwhelming responsibility, yet in renewed faith and hope and without hatred for any one, the university faces its task and begins another term. Deo adjuvante," he said.

TO THE STUDENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

Under world conditions of appalling seriousness, when peace seems to hang by a thread, we open the present university term. Our immediate duty is to begin and carry on those studies which are prescribed for our mental discipline and our equipment for living. Let us keep cool heads and strong hearts; let us seek to understand the great principles of human conduct and international relations that are at stake in the crisis with which we are confronted. We have heard the sharply contrasted speeches of Herr Hitler and Mr. Chamberlain, and we are proud of the Imperial Prime Minister's statement. He knows the unspeakable horror of war; he is laboring for peace to the very last moment; he brings out into clear relief the fundamental issues—not a quarrel about boundaries in Czechoslovakia, "a quarrel which in principle is already settled", but the resistance of free people to a threatened domination of the world by force and fear. Life without liberty is not worth living.

We in Canada are an integral part of the British Empire. Its ideals are ours; its safety is ours; its danger is ours; we are bound up with it in the bundle of life. To adapt Kipling's words, our house must stand together and its pillars must not fall. The free alliance of all parts of the Empire shall be stronger than the military alliance of dictators. If the worst comes to the worst, I believe there is a deep determination among our people that Canada shall play as manly a part, as she did in the last world struggle, side by side with the Motherland, on behalf of freedom, justice and mercy.

It seems preposterous, incredible and an outrage on humanity that immeasurable sorrow and destruction can be let loose upon vast masses of people by a few ambitious, unbalanced, or even malevolent "super-men". May Divine Providence and human reasonableness ever yet avert the tremendous catastrophe of war.

With special earnestness devote yourself to your present tasks. Begin work now, and work steadily day by day. Your academic tasks are at the moment your most important tasks. Subordination to these, take as full a part as you can in the general life of the University. Form new and helpful friendships. Keep fit in body, mind and soul, so that you may have no "mained" or useless sacrifice" to offer to God at your country, whatever be the call of duty in the future, in times of peace or even in the grim arbitrament of war. Remember a wise saying of Disraeli: Life is too short to be little", and make the most of these precious days at college.

My best wishes for the coming university year.

(Signed) H. J. CODY, President.

E. J. URWICK SPEAKS AT U.C. CONVOCATION

Six and a half hours of work and five and a half hours of leisure is the student's ideal timetable, according to Professor E. J. Urwick, who addressed the University College Convocation last night at Convocation Hall.

Professor Urwick warned that the main difficulty encountered by undergraduates and graduates alike was that they did not tackle their problems of reading, thinking, and lectures, in the proper light. Their work should be carefully organized and executed, he said, with the proper amount of enthusiasm.

Extra-academic activities are to be encouraged, Professor Urwick contended, and should also be executed with the same vitality as academic work. Nothing is more distasteful, he continued, than to see a person waste his spare time in fruitless pursuits and pleasures.

Friend to Student House Warden Returns

Year-Long Leave of Absence Ends as J. B. Bickersteth Returns from England

Friend, advisor, confidant and teacher for hundreds of male students of the University of Toronto, J. B. Bickersteth, the Warden of Hart House, has returned from England where he stayed during a leave of absence of nearly a year.

Following a custom of years, the Warden has gone to England for the summer months. While he was visiting his home in Canterbury, he suffered a recurrence of an illness that had troubled him periodically since several years after the Great War. Although his condition was not regarded as serious, he was placed under a doctor's care and it was thought imperative that he take a complete rest.

Given a leave of absence of some months duration, by the University Mr. Bickersteth spent the latter part of 1937 in Ruthin Castle, a medieval building in Wales converted to a hospital where he was under the care of Sir Edmund Spriggs.

Dismissed by the hospital, the Warden visited the continent. On his return, he spent some time in Devonshire. After a year's absence he came back to Toronto several weeks ago to re-occupy the Warden's chair in Hart House.

Game Admission

Arrangements have been made to allow students on presentation of registration cards and 25c, to the student section of the stadium. Students will use the south entrance, the same as last year. Gates open at 1.30.

CLARE BROWN

The new secretary of the Student Christian Movement at Toronto is Miss Clare Brown, a don at the Graduate House. Miss Brown took her M.A. at Columbia and last year was assistant to the Dean of Women at the University of British Columbia. Now she is in S.C.M. work in order to help give undergraduates opportunities of realizing that religion gives a challenge for progress in all fields, religious, social and political.

This is especially so in the international field at present, Miss Brown feels, for if war breaks out, the great work of the S.C.M. would be to keep students' minds clear against propaganda and a wave of hatred, and fanned for the work of future reconstruction when we must look for a really just peace settlement. Peace groups must keep that in view and not fight over minor differences of principle.

An Interesting Side-Show

During the past several tumultuous days, while freshmen have been more interested in reading the latest headlines than enrolling in classes, and sophomores have neglected the usual tie-clipping program in order to devote their time to the latest news flashes, there has been an apparent tenseness over the entire campus, which makes it a different place than it usually is during the first few days of school.

The editorial board of The Varsity feels the responsibility of its task in attempting to present a sane and sober policy to a campus in a time when emotion and fear run high. Today the college paper enters upon its fifty-eighth year of publication, and during those years it has had a long and interesting history. The Varsity has been the occasion of many controversies on the campus and with the faculty, but it has also filled an important place in the growth of this University.

Naturally it is expected that University students will have ideas, and more often than not the ideas of the editorial boards have been somewhat radical. In the eager bursts of youthful enthusiasm these ideas may overstep the bounds of rational thought. Even back as far as the cobwebby eighties editors have become involved in problems where their ideas have conflicted with those of the older and more experienced members of the faculty and the Students' Council. The tendency of the downtown press to make big news out of small things has created many problems.

For three years, however, there have been no serious difficulties between the staff of the paper and the Student's Administrative Council which publishes The Varsity, and during those years The Varsity has been able to take on more and more the aspects of a true newspaper.

As yet we have not a complete masthead, but we have inherited some splendid material from our predecessor. We are proud also to have on our editorial board last year's editor-in-chief, whose experience and training we are sure will stand us in good stead. New reporters are wanted and the staff of the paper will be ready at any time to interview those who would like to spend some of their time working on a paper where experience is gained much more pleasantly than in the ordinary way.

Stephen Leacock, who himself worked on The Varsity while at the University of Toronto, writes, "In every good circus the side-shows excel in interest the attractions of the main tent. Of college activities one at least, namely college journalism, is more useful if rightly undertaken than half a dozen lecture courses." Mr. Leacock, however, goes on to tell us that he himself resigned his position before his term was up, feeling that other things needed more of his attention and he humorously tells of G. Howard Ferguson and W. L. M. King, who might have had splendid careers if they had not wasted their time on The Varsity.

New students coming from all parts of the Dominion will find that a University such as this is a large and heterogeneous place. Many colleges and faculties are knit together with a common loyalty to a common cause and a common purpose. Smaller loyalties to colleges and staffs, teams and societies, may break up the great spirit which tends to unite the University as a whole, and often at the beginning of the term especially, it appears that each college would like to engender in its new members a loyalty to itself rather than to the larger body. Let us say now, that the student who does not get to know this educational institution as a larger unit, and understand its traditions and ideals, fails to get the most out of his college career. We feel that along with other things, The Varsity plays a mighty big role in welding together all the units of the great University of Toronto.

Still in Suspense

Today the world has started to breathe a little more easily again, as the heads of four great nations met this morning at Munich to try and settle their problems without resorting to war. The whole of civilized society is anxiously awaiting the outcome of this conference which may decide the course of European history for the next decade.

The discussions at Munich must eventually end in one of three ways. Britain and France may stand fast at their previous proposals and Hitler refuse to accept them. This means war. Second, Hitler may accept the British and French proposals. Or third, Chamberlain and Daladier, profiting by the war scare in their respective countries, may use that as an excuse for granting further concessions to Hitler.

If Hitler is honestly interested only in the Sudeten area, as he claims, and has no ambitions for further expansion in Europe, he will accept the original British-French proposals. A method will be found whereby he could do this without losing prestige at home, (probably through the resignation of President Benes) and all will be quiet again in Europe.

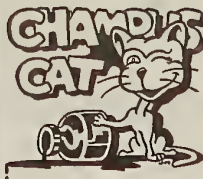

On the other hand, if Hitler is using the Sudeten trouble merely as an excuse for his expansion eastward and ultimate clash with Russia (and this is probably the real issue), he will not accept the original proposals but will make demands that Czechoslovakia be made permanently impotent as a military power or threaten to go to war.

It is possible that even he has been made to realize what his army chiefs have known all along—that the present alliance against Germany is so strong that defeat is inevitable. The above fact has certainly impressed itself on the countries of Central Europe who have, in the past few days, actually rushed away from the German side and joined up with the democratic nations. Further proof can be seen in the report (which, though not official, is becoming increasingly persistent) that Italy intends to remain neutral in case of war.

The only way, therefore, whereby Hitler can successfully continue his aim of eastern expansion is to obtain further concessions from France and England. And here the real danger lies. France must follow English policy and in the past few years that policy has not been unfriendly in its dealings with Fascist powers. The fact that Hitler called the present conference is an admission that he cannot cope with a situation in which the democratic powers put up a strong and united front. Mr. Chamberlain, therefore, has the whip hand, and he can enforce a strong, just, solution or he can revert to his previous policy of appeasement. Perhaps it would be more assuring to those of us who honestly believe in democratic institutions if Anthony Eden and not Neville Chamberlain were representing Britain at Munich today, but by now it is possible that Mr. Chamberlain has also learned that a policy of continued concession is no way of dealing with dictators.

There is little doubt judging from the feeling of the people seen in the past few days that Canada is standing behind the British policy, and even the most pacifists are gripped by the isolationist policy of those to the south of us. Those who are ready for peace at any price, will welcome the outcome of the conference, as long as there is to be no war. But there are those who, thinking of the reshaping of the map of the world since 1931 may still be a little afraid as they think of Ethiopia, Spain, China, and now Czechoslovakia.

It is interesting to note the apparent inconsistency of last year's pacifists, many of whom had distinct leanings to the left. We feel that if this threatened war doesn't strike we are all going to have a better chance to look at things more logically, and perhaps reach a saner pacifism than we have had in the past.

September twenty-ninth, a memorable day in the history of the world. Thursday morning and a solemn hush falls throughout the universe.

The German hand on the Czech windpipe relaxes a little. The Jap Foreign Minister falters and pauses in the midst of an apology. The only Spaniard left in Spain ceases his search for a countryman. Haile Selassie stops clamoring for the annexation of his minority in Harlem. Hank Greenberg turns from his infanticide and the Babe breathes a little easier. The pursuit of slap-happiness halts as Baby Yack can't stand the pace. Grandpa Snazzy pauses in his omelette manufacturing and all eyes are turned westward because . . . THE CAT WALKS AGAIN! THE CAT.

Art, Music and Drama

Royal Alexandra

As risque a bit of drama as ever made a first nighter laugh with lowered eyes is Max Gordon's show The Women. Personally it should have been part of Billy Minsky's repertoire. The piece is a beautiful example of the spicy type of suggestiveness that smart Broadway crowds go mad about.

You certainly will not go berserk over The Women, but there is no doubt you will be entertained. The dialogue is about the cleverest that has been heard here in a long time and if you're not up on choice epigrams about sex, you will be after the first act.

The plot deals with how gossip and female "cattiness" can wreck a marriage, and points out that although most women are pills, many of them are sugar-coated pills. The story and dialogue also infer that all men are sex-mad fiends. In other words, every character in the play is a cynical female except the heroine and she's no rose. After three lively acts of dirty cracks, double ended remarks and snappy comebacks, there is a happy ending.

The cast is composed exclusively of women, the chief part being taken by Lois Wilson of movie fame. Miss Wilson would do well to forget film technique and concentrate on stage work. Her posing was too obvious. The cast were fairly competent and we don't envy the casting director when there are forty parts in a play and each so tricky that only a Duse would do justice to them.

Gerald Weingarten

Art Gallery

The current exhibition in Hart House features the oils and drawings of Lawren Harris, young Canadian artist who studied at the Boston Museum of Fine Art and completed his course there in 1931.

The exhibition contains some of his earlier portraiture, and landscapes of a more recent period. It is evident that his portrait technique has influenced his landscapes. This effect is mainly noticed in his handling of smooth shaded tones which works all right with skin texture and materials, but which when applied to landscape scenes, gives an effect of unnecessary generalization and produces a decorative piece rather than a vital one.

He carries simplicity to the point of barrenness in some of the landscapes, yet his tree studies are rather well done, and reminiscent of the stark sketchiness of Carl Schaeffer. Harris obtains his starkness by means of angularity and monotones.

His portraits are splendid pieces of work, their main virtue being the subordination of background and costume by the clever gradation of tones.

In the sketch room are some Van Gogh and French Impressionist reproductions. Outstanding are Cezanne's "Aqueduct" and Matisse's "Goldfish".

Thirty-five New Professors, Assistant Professors Named

For the coming year, the University has appointed nine new professors and has made twenty-six professional promotions. All faculties are represented on the new lists. The Faculty of Arts leads the list with two new professorships and fourteen promotions.

In the Faculty of Arts, Dr. R. M. Saunders, who made the statement last March that Czechoslovakia was doomed and that Germany would march within six months, has been promoted to the position of Assistant professor in the Department of History. In the same department, Professor B. Wilkinson is the highest ranking new arrival, with the position of Professor of Medieval History.

Dr. Leopold Infeld, who for some time was engaged in mathematical research at Princeton with Dr. Albert Einstein has been brought to the University of Toronto as Lecturer in Applied Mathematics. Dr. Infeld received considerable notice from the press last summer for his co-authorship with Dr. Einstein of a popular book on the Theory of Relativity.

The other new appointment in the Faculty of Arts went to Professor H. A. Logan, associate professor of Political Economy. In the promotion list are found Professors McTaggart (Physics), Gordon (Chemistry), S. N. F. Chant (Psychology), Brown (English), and Woodhouse (English), who are now professors. Promoted to the rank of associate professor are Professors Robinson (Mathematics), Smith (Physics), Beattie (Chemistry), McCurdy (Philosophy). The recently appointed assistant professors include Professors Wright (Chemistry), Baer (Organic Chemistry), Brieger (Fine Art) and Coe (Political Economy).

In the Faculty of Medicine, Dr. C. C. Lucas was promoted to an associate professorship in Medical Research at the Banting Institute. Doctors Wagner and Erb were promoted to assistant professorships in Pathology and Bacteriology.

The Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering has two newly promoted professors, Dyer (Ore-Dressing) and King (Assaying). In addition three members of the staff have been appointed to associate professorships, Smith (Electrical), McIntosh (Mechanical), and Jackson (Applied Physics). Dr. C. G. Williams is a new Professor of Mining Engineering and is head of that department. Robert F. Legget, assistant professor of Civil Engineering, and G. F. Tracy, associate professor of Electrical Engineering, are two more new members of the Engineering staff.

Dr. Healy Willan, composer and organist, whose First Symphony was given its world premiere at the Promenade Concerts last summer, has been promoted to a professorship in the Faculty of Music. Dr. Willan's favourite sport is to astound musicians and laymen alike by composing extemporaneous fugues on any theme at all.

Mr. Leo Smith, leader of the 'cello section in both the Toronto and Promenade Symphony Orchestras, authority on mediaeval music, and composer of children's songs, has also been promoted to a professorship in the Faculty of Music.

Professor J. A. Long has been promoted to an associate professorship in (Continued on page 7)

Radical Reductions Effected In Prices of Hart House Meals

A reduction in the price schedule for Great Hall meals has been made for the coming year, it has been announced by J. R. Gilley, Comptroller of Hart House.

A new twenty cent lunch has been placed on the Great Hall menu, for the convenience of the student population who are at the University for lunch. This lunch, having three courses, is five cents cheaper than the same meal last year.

In addition, meal tickets valued at $4.20 will be sold to Hart House members for $3.75. Six fifteen-cent breakfasts, six twenty-five-cent luncheons and six thirty-cent dinners are included in this ticket. They are good at any time during the term.

Another new Great Hall feature for the coming year is the abolition of the necessity of buying tickets at the Hall Porter's desk. Members will pay for their meals at the door of the Great Hall.

With the attraction of reduced prices and excellent meals prepared by a competent dietitian, it is expected that a large number of students will take their meals in the Great Hall.

The new regime, inaugurated this year is seen as an effort to bring to its former status as a student eating place the Great Hall. When Hart House was first constructed, the Great Hall was invariably packed with students who chose to eat there. But with the extension of Bay street and the arising of the boarding-house type of student life, patronization of Great Hall became less.

Under the new administration, the meals will be served in accustomed magnitude and of the usual excellence. Soup, rolls, meat course, dessert, and all the fixtures of a well-appointed meal will be provided for in the reduced price.

Comptroller J. R. Gilley wishes to draw to the attention of the students that it is to their advantage and convenience that they lunch as early as possible in Great Hall. He prophesies that the one-o'clock rush for the great hall will be great enough to warrant the early attendance of those who may eat before one o'clock.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Margaret Conlin

For the benefit of freshies here, we shall outline some of the major attractions included in this year's sports program. If you are the spectator type of athletic co-ed we recommend one afternoon a week (preferably Saturday) in the Great Outdoors at Varsity Stadium. However, if you plan a more strenuous campaign for retaining that girlish figure every facility has been provided via the compulsory athletic fee. The aforementioned fee provides at reduced rates, riding, golf and later on, skating and skiing privileges.

Since the Interfaculty Golf Tournament, sponsored by U.C. with Helen Scott in charge, is scheduled for Monday, October 17th, would-be Patty Bergs are urged to practise now. This matter is simplified by taking advantage of the students' rates provided at the Woodbine Golf Club. This course is quite accessible; take a Bloor car east to the city limits where the club bus meets street cars every ten minutes.

If you have ambitions to conquer a horse while the perfect weather for riding is still with us, the Glen Mawr riding school is just as accessible. A Yonge car north to the city limits does the trick and here too a jolly service takes you to the stables.

Or do you have tennis ambitions? Since the Intercollegiate Tennis Championships are to be decided here over the October 14th week-end, the cream of Varsity's feminine tennis world are already practising faithfully. Prior to this tournament the interfaculty meet will be run off and we are counting on a display of potential Intercollegiate material from the ranks of freshie stars.

Unfortunately there are no university tennis courts, but in the meantime if you crave a few sets "just for some fun", St. Joseph's, Victoria, and St. Hilda's have their own tennis facilities. If you are not registered at one of these colleges, surely you have a friend there. Faculty tennis managers are urged to complete faculty tournament play as soon as possible since the interfaculty meet must be concluded early in order to give the Varsity Intercollegiate team a chance to practise together. If you have ambitions (and talent) to make the Intercollegiate team, the only method is via the faculty, then interfaculty process-of-elimination route. It looks complicated but it's quite simple if you follow directions. Your faculty tennis representative has all the answers. We shall devote a column to this question of Intercollegiate tournament rules, etc., within the next few days. The U. of T. Tennis Club, of which Clare Walsh, noted figure in Canadian tennis ranks, is president, has been concentrating on making this coming meet, at which Queen's, McGill, Western, McMaster and Varsity will be represented here, an outstanding success.

If, dear freshie, you find that none of the sports included in your athletic fee is what you yearn for, then a visit to the Lillian Massey Building may prove something. This haven-for-the-sportsminded is situated on the south-east corner of Queen's Park and Bloor Street. For further details see your local handbooks. At the L.M. one may find class or any of the gymnastic groups which may appeal. Individual colleges have their own P.T. rulings and where P.T. is compulsory for freshies it usually suffices as an athletic outlet.

If bowling is your forte take note.

Graduation Photographs

Last year, with complete satisfaction to the colleges, faculties and individuals concerned, we photographed graduating classes in School, Victoria, Trinity, St. Hilda's, St. Michael's, Household Science, School of Nursing, Dentistry, Osgoode Hall, and the T.G.H. School of Nursing.

May we quote on your photographs this year?

dramatic groups. The Canadian National Exhibition secured a large group of students through the employment bureau of the S.A.C. for ticket selling, and work in the Midway booths. The bureau once organized and sent a complete orchestra to a summer hotel this year. The diversity of jobs was wide and undergraduates could be seen this summer toiling in the tobacco fields and canning factories of Ontario. Others drove ice trucks and worked in filling stations throughout the Province.

Winter work for undergraduates is also being obtained. The Toronto Public Libraries are employing men already, and the employment bureau expect to place a good many more during the school term.

This year there have been more applications than before, yet despite the business recession a total of 1,700 were placed last year, and Mr. Macdonald predicts a greater turnover this year. "In fact, this is becoming one of the chief activities of the S.A.C.," he added. The growing importance of the S.A.C. in the university is reflected by the recent addition in space and improvements in the offices, undertaken by the Board of Governors with the permission and co-operation of the Board of Stewards of Hart House.

Last year a bowling club was organized and arrangements made with a local hall for special hours for Varsity students. This inauguration was quite successful and the facilities will again be available if there is a sufficient demand for this sport.

The basketball season commences in each faculty in a few weeks. The interfaculty championship will be decided before Christmas and after Christmas practices for the Intercollegiate senior and intermediate teams will begin. The Interfaculty swimming and badminton meets are held after Christmas, and are immediately before the Intercollegiate meet. There is no Intercollegiate hockey championship, but the Interfaculty hockey series here after Christmas is quite unique.

By now you should be practically exhausted, so we shall leave you with a local warning to freshies. Don't attempt everything now. Remember the basketball season is yet to come. And if you survive that—the hockey games should give the finishing touch.

Goody, Goody Barber Shop Gets Trimmed Itself

A recently renovated barber shop has greeted returning students in Hart House during the past few days.

During the summer the shop has been modernized, with new indirect lighting and green venetian blinds. The colour scheme is green, with the chairs newly upholstered in green leather. The walls and ceiling have been done over in green and white.

Students have reported a great improvement in the appearance of the shop due to the redecoration.

GOLF TOURNAMENT FEATURES CHANGES

Individual as well as Faculty Team will be Chosen

Next Monday, October 3rd, the first intramural golf championship is to be held at the Woodbine Golf Course. There will be, this year, an individual championship as well as a faculty championship team chosen. The team will be composed of the four low gross scorers from each faculty.

The tournament is to be run in several flights with prizes for all sections. This will give the higher scoring men a chance to win something. Also awards will be made for low gross and low net scores and as a special innovation there are to be sealed hole and mystery prizes.

Intramural championship points will be given on the same basis as other sports for entry, intramural finalists, and championships. The only condition governing entry to the tournament will be a qualifying score of 125. This is high enough to let all interested get out and boost their college intramural standing.

This new tournament does not take the place of the qualifying round from which the intercollegiate team is taken. However, in order to be eligible for this round an entry must be submitted to this intramural competition. The best thirty men of the preliminary games will qualify for the intercollegiate event. All those who desire to enter must sign the lists in the Athletic Office. These rules are being rigidly enforced, by the committee in charge.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

PRELUDE

With the first issue of The Varsity going to press, another busy season of university sport begins . . . football games, soccer games, hockey games will be covered . . . some people have criticized this column and have suggested that sport in general, not necessarily pertaining to the university should be covered . . . if these people will send in twenty chocolate milk tops and three cents we will send them a copy of our favourite downtown newspaper . . . and before the curtain goes up on another year we wish to apologize now for the mistakes which appear, from time to time in these columns . . . it is difficult to keep them all out . . .

THE SITUATION AT WESTERN

The football situation this year is complex . . . so complex that only the experts who have made a science of studying out possibilities really know what is what . . . Looking down London way we find feeling running high . . . Already posters have been printed taking it for granted that Western will win their league games and will be in the playoffs. Coach Storen can take it for granted that his boys will be in there around Nov. 12th. The Mustangs in their first exhibition game defeated Royal Military College by a score of 38 to 0. . . this may not mean anything but then again it may mean . . . For a backfield Storen has the quartet, Hildon, Faust, Kennedy and Farmer. . . Faust is the ace of this backfield . . . he is faust and tricky . . . Hurley, veteran quarterback, a good field captain, will be at the calling position. . . Willis, considered the best centre in Canada and captain of the Purple and White, will form the pivot point of the line . . . add to this gang Oliphant, MacLachlan, Temkow and Stark and Coach Johnny Metras has quite a line to work with . . . it certainly looks like Western will take the championship . . . maybe.

... AT MCGILL

McGill, who has been out of the running for a few years, has come right back with a contending team this year . . . Coach Kerr's hopes soar high as he watches Westman kick the ball 60 to 70 yards. . . It was this department that has kept the Redmen on their own little reservation and away from championship aspirations. . . now this deficiency is fixed . . . so look out. Alec Hamilton, Powerful Perowne and Kenny are back . . . add to this combination the fact that this team defeated the new big four entry, the Montreal Cubs, 14 to 3 . . . so McGill might take the championship . . . well maybe.

... AT QUEEN'S

The Tricolour team, strongest when they look meekest, and they certainly look meek this year, will in all likelihood retain their championship. . . Reeve looked worried and started moaning after their first Tricolour practice . . . he only had little Annan, Carson, Stollery, Palthouski, Kerr and Springing Sprague back . . . he claimed he had no line, no kickers, no ends . . . but looking closely you'll see a fair team shaping up . . . with only a week of practice they met the Nationals, a powerful team, and dropped the game by a score of only 5 to 0. Varsity meets Queen's in Kingston to open up the Intercollegiate series. . . Queen's will win . . . maybe.

... AT TORONTO

Last but not least the Blue and White . . . Varsity has the best backfield they've had in quite a while . . . all veterans, tried and true, rich in experience. . . Cam Gray with four years behind him . . . Mumford starting his third senior season . . . MacDonald, long distance forward passer . . . tricky MacQuarrie . . . "Scorcery" Sommerse; add to these "Be" Rowland from R.M.C. . . Prince, Scott . . . as ends Holden, Beattie, Jarvis and Shukun . . . linemen like Schwenger, Sirdovan, Isbister, Moose Rogin . . . a better balanced team is hard to find in either the intercollegiate or the big four union . . . but they haven't a chance . . . no sir not a chance . . . probably lose every game . . . Reeve has won championships by crying the blues, we'll see what we can do.

NOTES OFF THE CUFF

First interfaculty golf tournament is to be held at Woodbine Golf Club on Monday . . . interfaculty points will be awarded to rankers . . . in order to qualify for the intercollegiate team it is necessary to play in the tournament. . . The soccer team would appreciate it if interested spectators would keep off the back campus so as to permit them to practise . . . Wes Cutler is now line coach at Varsity . . . and if anyone wants to learn to crack the whip see Bill Bryers with the intermediate squad . . . intercollegiate tennis begins soon . . . boy what a racket. For rifle practise see local cadet office. . . And so till tomorrow, I'll be bombing you.

PLAN LECTURES ON AERONAUTICS

Twenty-five to thirty students are expected to enroll in the two-year course in aerial navigation which will prepare them for transportation work in this field, said Professor T. R. Loudon, director of the new course, yesterday.

The new course is designed to equip the student for work in the transporting rather than the designing end in this field," he said. The graduates of this course will be qualified for several positions in the field of aerial navigation. Among these are commercial and transport pilots, navigators, dispatchers, radio operators and several other positions.

That the student must obtain his private pilot's license before his second year is one of the prerequisites set forth in the course and is one of the high standards of entrance requirements. The course, financed by the Dominion, may be taken by any qualified Dominion resident.

University of Toronto Seen As Student League of Nations

From one country that is embroiled in a furious war, from another that may soon be, and from other countries that have been comparatively peace-loving and have not supplied any war news for a number of years, scholars have come to the University of Toronto to satisfy their thirst for knowledge.

One student who is attracting a great deal of attention, especially around the north end of the campus is a dark-eyed, diminutive co-ed who has come thousands of miles from her home to register in the Household Economics course. Mary T. Mathew, scarcely over five feet in height, has come all the way from the extreme south of India to see what Canadian education is all about. To say that she attracts attention is an understatement. Not only is she quite pretty, but she has disdained the western style of dress to wear a silken sari, the black-laced edged garment traditional to the native Jacobite Christians of southern India.

Although she considers this country

Satisfied with her botanical work, Miss Mathew came to this university to clear up the intricacies of household management. She intends to return to her home in India where she expects to occupy a teacher's chair.

Mary Mathew is not the only native of India who has come here to study. A countryman of hers, Gopalayanger, is studying botany here on a Vincent Massey Scholarship. Gopalayanger received his master's degree several years ago from Mysore State University. Following the completion of his research work here, the handsome Indian intends to return to his university and continue his lecturership there. While in Toronto, he is residing at Gander House.

From a country which has been the topic of conversation for a very long time comes Walter Kanow, the German exchange scholar. Kanow, a graduate of the University of Freiburg, specializes in economics and is taking a post-graduate course here in that subject. It would be thought that Kanow would be full of news about the international situation, but although he was brought up in the Black Forest area, he would not commit himself beyond saying that the embroglio was overrated by the newspapers on this continent. Registered in University College, Kanow is staying at the University College residence at 73 St. George Street.

Northern China sends two representatives in M. F. Tong, a co-ed who is taking a post-graduate course in chemistry. With her is a compatriot, H. Y. Chang, who also comes from the northern part of China. Chang is registered in the graduate school of Social Studies. From Canton comes C. G. Wong, who is attending the Ontario College of Education.

Taking various studies in the university are three co-eds from other Canadian universities: Miss McKim from Dalhousie University; Miss Caron from Mount Allison University, and Miss McEwen from the University of British Columbia.

Almost as far away from his home as anyone in the university is R. A. Shand, who left Olveston, Montserrat, British West Indies, to take a forester's course here.

Wanted--- Reporters

You don't need to know how to write because if you're willing, you can be taught. Of course, if you have had years of experience on the London Daily Express, we won't hold it against you. In fact all the better.

But if you are just a freshman, a soph, a junior or a senior, med, arts, forestry, S.P.S., O.C.E., or Ontario Veterinary College, and have a faint hankering to get in on a year full of killer-diller fun, a hankering for excitement untravelling by an axe murder or a prolonged European situation, a hankering for prestige only matched by that of the doorman of the Park Plaza, then come right along to The Varsity office in Hart House, or the Women's Varsity office, room 42 U.C., and join the staff of one of the best college newspapers on the North American continent, the undergraduate newspaper of the University of Toronto.

You will learn the theory of journalism from competent instructors and will have a whale of a lot of fun while you are doing it.

Come into the offices mentioned between 12 and 2 o'clock today.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE MEN
Don't miss the S.C.M. Supper Party Monday night, October 3rd, in Hart House. Supper in the Great Hall at 6 p.m. and meet in West Common Room at 6.45. Dr. Wilfred Lockhart will speak on "The Undergraduate and Religion".

MAKE 2 CHANGES IN HOUSE STAFF

Secretary and Assistant Secretary's Posts Taken by New Men

Hart House has recently lost the services of two valuable members of the administrative staff. Mr. C. R. Delafield who has been Secretary of Hart House during the last six years has recently received an appointment with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and is working in the Toronto office of that organization. He will be greatly missed by all members especially those interested in music, art, and the theatre. The University Drama Committee and the University Drama Festival owe much to his energy and devoted work.

Douglas L. Emond has been on the staff of Hart House for the past eleven years. As Assistant Secretary most of his work was in the Comptroller's office, and many University clubs will miss his efficient co-operation and genial assistance in their various functions. He now goes to continue his studies and is spending some years at the University of Rochester.

Henry J. Sissons has been appointed Secretary of Hart House. After graduating from Victoria in 1937 he spent the past year at the University of Berlin where he coached in his leisure time the German students in hockey. Mr. E. A. Willkinson has been appointed to succeed Mr. Emond. He also is a Victoria graduate and last year received much commendation for the efficient manner in which he managed the affairs of the Victoria Music Club.

HUNTING CASTLE? CONSULT S.A.C.

Big rooms, little rooms, bachelors' apartments or suites of rooms—all can be obtained through Harold Copp, Meds VI, who has been in charge of the S.A.C. service for out-of-town students for the past three years.

About the beginning of September Harold Copp began to make his rounds inspecting all types of homes and boarding houses. He rates the room AA, A+, A, B, according to their comfort, cleanliness, furnishings, location, and so on.

This year Mr. Copp has been able to obtain about ten rooms free in exchange for services such as tending the furnace (engineers note).

Surprisingly enough, about 15 co-eds have invaded the portals of Hart House where Harold Copp is to be found and he was able to accommodate them, for "one can hardly turn them down", he said.

AROUND THE TRACK

with Fred Rowell

The 1938 track and harrier season is the heaviest that has ever been arranged for the club. The dates for the track are: the Junior Interfaculty Meet on October 6th, the Senior Meet on October 12th, the Intermediate Intercollegiate Meet on October 19th in London and the Senior Intercollegiate Meet in Montreal on October 21st. The dates for the harrier are: the Interfaculty on October 15th, Buffalo State at Toronto on October 29th, Toronto at Alfred, November 5th, and the Senior and Intermediate Harrier Meets on November 12th.

The Junior Interfaculty a week to day on the sixth is an innovation this year and its continuation next year will depend on its success. It is open to all those who have not competed on previous intercollegiate teams. This excludes all intercollegiate men from previous years.

There is usually a great delay in track men turning out promptly and the race for places on the senior and intermediate teams is wide open. Only four men trained all summer and two of them, Larry O'Connor and Dave Crichton, will not be competing this year. Three more began turning out in the first two weeks in September. With this splendid record to go on every man will be as good as another.

Due to the number of vacancies on both teams, freshmen are especially urged to turn out. The senior team is defending the first track title it has won in eight years and if the athletes hesitate in turning out poorer but better trained men may make the team. The intermediate team which was trounced last year after two overwhelming victories in 1935 and 1936 is always built around the freshmen who fail to make the first team and others who fall short of senior calibre. The strength of this team is dependent on the strength of the freshmen, and last year's disaster is due to the fact that last year's freshman crop was the weakest in several years. From the advance turn-out of freshmen this week it seems that already this year's crop is superior to that of last year, but there are still a great number of vacancies in the running and field events. Candidates for the harrier teams are also urged to turn out immediately.

This year's senior team will be built around the Intercollegiate Sprint Champion, Gordon McHenry, the famous Brown twins of international fame, and Doug Armstrong, who next to O'Connor is probably the fastest hurdler to ever enter the university. The men who will support this quartet depends on a large turnout especially among the freshmen. Report to Hec Phillips at Varsity Stadium every afternoon, rain or shine between four and six-thirty.

FAST BLUE TEAM READY TO DEFEND CITY RUGBY TITLE

Will Meet Beaches' "Purple Horde" on the Gridiron Saturday

When the 1938 edition of the University of Toronto football squad trot on the gridiron this Saturday to defend their city championship against the onslaught of Beaches' "Purple Horde", the fans will see in action a Blue machine that packs really fine potentialities. A team that appears to be capable of going a long way towards retaining the city title and what is more important, of regaining the intercollegiate championship.

Graduation has only taken six of last year's team, that came so close to winning the Yates Cup. And to fill this gap Coach Warren Stevens has ample material, from intermediate and inter-faculty ranks. Some of the boys who made the team last year but spent most of their time catching slivers, appear to be slated for stardom.

Most of the new faces will be seen along the centre of the line to take the place of Williams, Brebner, Casson and Sissons. However, Doug Turner is back at centre, and the famed Frankie Sirdevan, with Schwenger and Al Isbister of last year's boys. Moose Rogin from Assumption College are the nucleus of the 1938 line, the balance from intermediates and juniors of last year, with MacMillan, MacLachlan, Shiffman, Ross and Meen among the most likely aspirants.

The tackling corps should be the class of the college or any other league. For all four of last year's ends have returned, and Holden, Beatty, Shukun and Jarvis are a formidable quartet that should prevent opposing halves from taking any lengthy excursions.

As powerful as the Blue defensive system should be, the attack will probably outshine it. Up to date the team is carrying nine halves, any one of whom is a star in his own right. The mighty Cam Gray, along with Mumford, MacQuarrie and Macdonald are left of last year's regulars. Scott is back to take up where Barry Gray left from last year's regulars. Scott is seen much action last year, is running like a "blue streak" this season. But in addition there are Charlie Prince of Vic, Bee Rowland from R.M.C. and Phil Isbister of the intermediates, some of whom are not one whit behind the others in ability.

The only difficulty "Steve" should have is picking his starting line-up, and deciding who will do the punting for Gray, Isbister, Rowland and Prince can all hoist the pigskin.

However, Saturday's game will throw a lot of light on matters, and the boys will all be out strong to show Warren Stevens that they have something on the ball. The Beaches will have to be at their best to duplicate their last Saturday's victory.

VARSIITY MEETS BEACHES IN DE GRUCHY CUP DEFENCE

Noted Mathematician Welcomed to University

Dr. Leopold Infeld, New Mathematics Lecturer, Wrote History of Physics With Albert Einstein

Among the new members of the staff of the University of Toronto is Dr. Leopold Infeld, lecturer in the department of Applied Mathematics. Dr. Infeld comes to the University from Princeton University's Institute of Advanced Study, and, though hardly over forty years of age, has a long record of achievement in his field.

Leopold Infeld was born at Cracow, now part of Poland, and studied at the Universities of Cracow and Berlin. After teaching at Cracow and at the University of Lwow, in Poland, he was awarded a fellowship from the Rockefeller Institute to study at Cambridge. He worked at Cambridge from 1933 to 1935, and it is at this university that he did some of the outstanding work which has brought him sharply to the interest of the mathematical world. Working with German refugee Dr. Max Born, Dr. Infeld completed a series of seven papers on the field theory. This theory bridges the modern field of Quantum Mechanics with (Continued on page 5)

Celebrities Sign Guest Book

The Signature Book, which is to be found in the Rotunda of Hart House, has been honoured by the addition of several world famous names since October 13 of last year. Travellers from far and wide, who, having passed through the portals and halls of Hart House have inscribed their names in this book. Among the signatures we find the names of a novelist, musicians, an artist, statesman, and an aviator.

Thomas Mann, called by many the greatest novelist of contemporary times, left his name here, while visiting Toronto on a lecture tour last spring. The members of the Hart House String Quartet, namely James Levey, Harry Adaskin, Milton Blackstone and Boris Hambourg, inscribed their names after enjoying a triumphant success on the continent.

The name of Mr. Frank Ashton-Gwatkin, aide to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, is found herein along with Lord Stanley, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, and that of the Honourable Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

Dr. G. F. Marrian Authority on Hormones Goes to Edinburgh

Dr. G. F. Marrian, Professor of Biochemistry, will leave the University of Toronto on January 1, for the University of Edinburgh where he will occupy the chair of chemistry in relation to medicine at that university. When announcing Dr. Marrian's resignation, Dr. Cody lauded him for the fine work he had done, especially in the field of sex hormones. "He is not only a great research worker but a great teacher," said the president of the University.

Dr. Marrian's post will be taken over by Dr. Leslie Young of the University of London.

Reporters Wanted

There are still a few positions open on The Varsity. Anyone who is really interested in the matter is invited to apply. Previous experience is not necessary, but you must be willing to learn. Apply at the m's editorial office on the second floor of Hart House or the women's editorial office in the West Wing of University College between 12 and two o'clock.

St. Hilda's Residence Opened

The new St. Hilda's Residence on Devonshire Place was officially opened on Saturday, September the seventh, at three o'clock. Mrs. Albert Matthews, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, performed the cutting of the ribbon, and gave a short address. President Cody, Provost Cosgrave, and Mrs. M. M. Kirkwood, Principal of St. Hilda's, also spoke. Guests were conducted through the building by last year's graduates. The opening of the new residence marks the fiftieth anniversary of St. Hilda's College. It began in 1888 with four girls in a house in Trinity Square. Later it was moved to 99 St. George Street. The residence on Devonshire Place, which was commenced last September, is the result of several years of planning and saving on the part of Trinity College and the St. Hilda's Alumnae. It was financed partly by voluntary subscriptions, and partly by the endeavours of the Alumnae, in the form of annual sales and garden tours.

The building is of modern Georgian design, and contains every facility for comfortable living, recreation, and study. There is accommodation for seventy-five students and the necessary staff. A special feature is Cartwright Hall, dedicated to the former principal, Dr. M. Cartwright, which will be used for college dances and dramatics. Adjoining the building are five tennis courts.

Merit Medal Not Awarded This Year

No one in the University of Toronto could qualify for the Governor-General's award for general efficiency, it was discovered at the commencement exercises at the close of the academic year last June, and the nice gold medal which was to be awarded is going begging for a year.

Generally considered to be the highest award in the University, it is believed to be the first time in a long spell that the prize has not been given. But it should not be thought that the brilliance of last year's students was not very great. Nor should the lack of a winner be seen as a sign of the decadence of the educational system. It was explained by the registrar's office that, however brilliant, there were no students eligible to receive the award on account of the terms. (Continued on page 5)

REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Munich: The four great powers reached a peace pact here last night, and announced agreement on plans for ceding the Sudeten area to Germany. Evacuation of the area predominantly German by the Czechs is to begin Saturday and be completed in ten days.

In the other disputed sections which cannot be termed predominantly German there are to be plebiscites under an International Commission formed by the powers. The final terms of the boundaries are to be determined by the same Commission.

Voting is to take place not later than the end of November, and it is believed that the Saar plebiscite will be used as a pattern. Another conference of the "Big Four" is to take place within the next three months to consider the matters of Polish and Hungarian minorities within Czechoslovakia if some peaceful solution is not reached between the contending parties before that time.

All residents of the Sudetenland are to be allowed to quit the area if they so wish, but it is believed that there will be no provision made to compensate them for the property which they give up.

The areas where the plebiscites are to be granted will be occupied by representatives appointed by the nations to protect the citizens until the vote is taken.

London: Activity for the protection of London from immediate air raids slackened off, as a general feeling of relief and security was evidenced. Everywhere praise for Chamberlain is to be heard.

Washington: The White House issued a call for prayer for continued peace of the world as proceedings were followed with interest.

Toronto: People on the streets during the night showed great joy and relief as they read the news in the morning papers. The great strain of the past few days was over as citizens retired satisfied that the world had been saved from the brink of a monstrous catastrophe. Some interviewed during the night were definite in their assertions that they knew all along there would be no war, but others admitted that they had been under severe tension, and were glad that it was all over for the present.

Co-Eds Defend Tradition As Initiation Threatened

Mike's Have No Trouble

The Dean of Women at Victoria College yesterday told girls at that college that further initiation of freshmen would be opposed on the grounds that it created ill-feeling between sophomores and freshmen. The faculty felt, therefore, that they could no longer countenance the public ridiculing of newcomers.

History Staff Predicted Czechoslovakian Crisis

German Invasion Predicted Last March By Flenley and Saunders In Varsity Interview

On Sunday, March 13 of this year, the German Nazi government absorbed the Austrian Republic and caused a wave of excitement to sweep the world and send stock-markets shaky. September 13, exactly six months later, saw the world in the midst of a Czechoslovakian war-scare which has affected world stock-markets even more profoundly. At the time of the Austrian occupation, observers were speculating as to Hitler's course of action with regard to the Czechs and the Sudeten Germans.

During the week following the Austrian occupation, The Varsity carried two interviews on the situation given by Professor Ralph Flenley and Dr. R. M. Saunders of the History Department.

Professor Flenley's interview on March 16 opened with the statement, "I don't know that we are going to have an immediate crisis over Czechoslovakia. I also don't think that Hitler has the same particular affection for Czechoslovakia as he had for the inclusion of Austria."

A few paragraphs later, Professor Flenley, while not forgetting the optimistic statement he had just made, qualified it with a warning note. "Although the inclusion of Czechoslovakia is not on the same plane with the inclusion of Austria, the Germans are not forgetting the Sudeten Deutsch in that country."

On the possibility of cession of the Sudeten areas to Germany, Professor Flenley expressed his belief that the country needed the Carpathian mountains. "Right now, Czechoslovakia is a Slavic island isolated in the midst of a German ocean."

His final statement concerned the position of the American countries in the European situation. "That broadcast," he said, referring to a broadcast made during the occupation of Austria and emanating from four European capitals, "has demonstrated more than ever that isolation is impossible."

The following day, March 17, The Varsity carried an interview given by Dr. Saunders which though disagreeing in some respects with Professor Flenley, carried the same general outlook.

Teams Tangle To-Morrow As Blues Strive For Fifth Successive Win

Lack of Practice May Prove Handicap As Blues Encounter Seasoned Beaches

Tomorrow afternoon after only three weeks of practice Varsity Blues make their season debut against Balmy Beach.

In spite of their evident disadvantage due to so short a period of preparation the Blues seem to have enough power and speed to make the outcome purely a matter of conjecture.

Last year Varsity won the city title by defeating the same eastenders. This year, however, Balmy Beach are undoubtedly stronger and better balanced. To offset their rivals' rise in strength the Blues present a squad whose first team is of about the same calibre as last year, but a squad whose reserve strength is equal to its starting line-up, and it was in reserve strength that the 1937 team fell down.

New Course On Adult Instruction

Possibility of the establishment of a course for leaders and instructors in adult education at the University of Toronto is foreseen, following the request of the Canadian Association for Adult Education that the Director of University Extension undertake to provide such a course.

According to Mr. Dunlop, there are two difficulties in the way of the formation of the course. One is that not much can be definitely offered in the way of employment to those who take the proposed training, because instruction of adults is at present only part-time work, and is a matter of teaching (Continued on page 5)

Last Male Sanctuary Now Invaded By Female Intruder

The only retreat of University Man has been invaded by a female. Hart House, the last stronghold of masculinity on the university campus has surrendered to a woman and henceforward, it will be a woman's hand that prepares the meals in the Great Hall.

According to an announcement from the comptroller's office, Miss Muriel E. Ransom has been appointed to the position of supervisor of Great Hall. She succeeds Mr. Bartholomew, who held the position for a number of years.

Miss Ransom is a graduate in Household Economics of this university. After being graduated she had experience first at Biegwin Inn and later in Montreal. For the past three years she has been employed by the T. Eaton Company under Miss Violet Ryley. Her duties included the supervision of the Men's Grill.

Beaches Confident They Can Break the Jinx Which Has Followed Them In Previous Games

For many long lean years Balmy Beach has been striving to win the city championship and the De Gruchy trophy, without success. In spite of fine records achieved later in the year, the East-enders' pre-season form has yet to click in the city civil war. Now, at last, after a scintillating victory over the highly touted Argos last Saturday, Coach Alec Ponton appears to have the team that should defeat Varsity, the present titleholders, at the stadium tomorrow afternoon.

Medicine Freshmen Warned

Take care, little freshman in the Doctors' Course. Take care.

Them teaching medics in the Cut and Slice Building may not look bulky, but they sure know how to plough.

According to President H. J. Cody, who knows if anyone does, students in first-year medicine who fail in two subjects and do not succeed in passing these in the ensuing supplemental examination will not be permitted to continue the medical course.

"These students are obviously not adapted to the course and merely clog the classes," Dr. Cody said. "Suppose there are twenty-two repeaters in the first year medicine; not more than two of these will ultimately make the grade and graduate. The measure is designed to keep the unequipped out of the course and provide for the selection of a better student."

Those who fail in the supplementals will not, however, be deprived necessarily of a university education, he pointed out. They may register in the arts course if they so desire. They will, of course, have to start as freshmen again.

The ruling regarding the first year medical students comes into force at the end of the coming academic year.

Vassar Peace Pact Signed

At the Second World Youth Congress, which assembled at Vassar College, New York, from August 15 to August 24, the Vassar Peace Pact was signed. Representing the peace sentiments of six hundred and fifty delegates from fifty-three countries, the Pact stressed the ideal of international co-operation and urged the adoption of practical methods to aid refugees and to quarantine aggressors.

Meeting on the tenth anniversary of the Kellogg-Briand Peace Pact, the Vassar delegates signed their pledge (Continued on page 5)

Price of Peace

Latest reports from Munich indicate that the "Big Four" (the term itself seems to have an ominous note) have reached complete agreement in the settling of the Czechoslovakian crisis and that only the technical details still have to be worked out. It is reported also that the Czech government has accepted the new plan with only minor reservations. Although it is still too early to assert that the danger of war has completely passed, since once before negotiations broke down just when a settlement seemed certain, all signs indicate that a final solution will be effected this time.

The exact text of the plan has, as yet, not been made known, and until this information is made public it is impossible to say definitely whether the solution is along the lines of the original British-French proposals or whether it gives in to the demands made by Hitler in his second meeting with Chamberlain. Reports from usually well-informed sources, however, seem to indicate that peace has been maintained largely along the lines of Hitler's demands, and that as a result, Germany now becomes the dominating country in Europe.

History certainly was made at Munich yesterday, but the essence of that history may be far different than the preservation of peace about which today's headlines will be shouting. The explanation has been offered for the action of Chamberlain and Daladier, that Britain and France were deeply impressed by Hitler's promise in his Berlin speech that he has no further territorial ambitions in Europe and therefore they gave him his way in Czechoslovakia. But perhaps it would have been well for them to remember that in May 1937 Hitler said, "We do not want to annex Austria or to interfere in her internal affairs."

On the other hand the turning over of the Sudeten region to Hitler and the crippling of Czechoslovakia may mark the end of the long line of concessions which has been forthcoming to dictator nations since 1931. It is reliably reported that Hitler's General Staff told him that the German army would be at its greatest relative strength in comparison with the British and French forces in September of this year, and that after that time its relative strength would decline on account of the economic advantages and rearmament programs of the democratic countries. Certainly Britain and France will rearm more than ever now, and it would not be surprising to see the bellicosity of Hitler and Mussolini decline in direct proportion with the decline in the relative strength of their armies.

Furthermore there will probably be a change in the attitude of the general public in both Britain and France. (And in a democratic country the attitude of the general public is very important.) The ordinary person in Britain and France does not want war, but though at present he has apparently forgotten that Hitler broke his pledge not to invade Austria, it is doubtful if he will allow Hitler to break his pledge not to expand further in Europe, for even Mr. Chamberlain has said "If I thought that any power were trying to dominate the world by use of force, I would be compelled to resist it."

As a result, therefore, the guarantee of her new frontiers given to shorn Czechoslovakia by Britain and France may mean more to her than the treaty she had to date with France. Hitler has promised that he desires no further territorial expansion in Europe. If he intends to keep that promise, all is well, if not, he must be made to keep it.

Support the Red Cross

Today the Red Cross climaxes its drive for funds with its annual tag day. There are many organizations which merit the support of the public, but there are few which do work which may be compared to the Red Cross. The assistance which has been given to the organizers of the campaign by the Toronto papers and radio stations, as well as by civic authorities is an indication of the respect that is held for the society, and is an assurance to any would-be contributors that they are lending aid to a work which is well worth a sacrifice of every individual in our city.

There are many tasks undertaken by the Red Cross, and the recent high tension concerning international relations and the threat of war, has brought to our minds its great value during the past. In time of flood, fire or famine the Red Cross has been one of society's strongest agencies for the alleviation of distress, and through it many sympathizers have been able to make their contribution with the confidence that it would be used to do the greatest amount of good.

One of the greatest works which is carried on and extended from year to year, is that of caring for the health of the pioneers and out of the way settlers of the northern outlying districts of Canada. One who has not seen or experienced pioneering cannot understand the sacrifices of people who are doing their best to eke out a living from Canada's frontiers, without the comforts of civilization and the security of an adequate health service. To those people the Red Cross attempts to bring through outpost hospitals, often staffed with one nurse alone, some of the services which medical knowledge and experience is able to contribute.

The outpost is often little more than a nurse's headquarters, and from it she makes continual visits to schools, homes and small villages to care for those in need. One hospital in the north is a railway car equipped for use as a ward, and this may be transferred quickly to the place where it is most needed.

The Red Cross depends to a considerable extent on the givings of the average citizen, whose contribution cannot be great. Nothing is too small to be used, so let us remember that today we have a chance of sharing in the work of a great institution, respected throughout the world.

Painless Culture

In a recent interview, Luise Rainer, Austrian-born film actress, recalled her early days in Hollywood when her training in English included viewing films daily as the quickest means of acquiring the language. Success followed her efforts, and she was soon able to converse freely with little accent.

Students learning French would do well to follow her example. Psychology shows that the process of learning is hastened when hearing is associated with visual action.

In support of this principle, and through co-operation of the University College French Department, the Hollywood Theatre again brings to Toronto a series of French films as a comparatively painless method of instilling some knowledge of French diction into the student mind.

The series commences Saturday morning at the Hollywood, and includes the pick of recent French films, noted for excellence of diction and technique. It is not only a source of education and culture, but an amusement as well.

Mr. King has come in for his share of criticism during the past few days, because he was unwilling to assume the responsibility of committing Canada to war, before she has been asked by Britain to commit herself. Those who have noticed the trend of Canadians to pacifism during the past few years, and the agitation when Britain commenced to build up her armaments should realize that Mr. King is not a dictator. The same persons and papers who criticize him now would be the first to raise a noise were he to act dictatorially at other times. By waiting he has had a chance to find out public opinion which is to support the Empire if she is forced to go to war to stop an aggressor. And it has also given the Canadian people time to decide a thing for themselves or at least make them feel they are deciding for themselves.

This afternoon there is to be a meeting conducted by Wilf Lockhart in Hart House Chapel, where members of the House are invited to meet for prayer for peace.

73 KING ST. W. 12 BLOOR ST. W.

A shot rang out across the campus. No, it was not the minority in the Faculty of Forestry clamouring for self-determination, or a border violation on the part of S.P.S. It was the 116th person who had just asked me the inevitable question: "Did you have a good summer?"

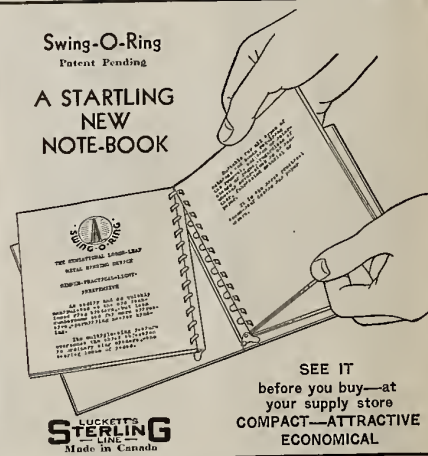

"Did I have a good summer?" I laugh mirthlessly to myself and think back. A good summer, yes, that horrible month of June when I had to lie awake nights thinking up excuses for failing my year when the results came out. Those horrid days walking hot pavements in search of a position. (After three days it was a job I was seeking.) That visit to the farm for a long, interminable month, working in the fields under a blazing coppery sky, covered with the dust of all the flora in the neighbourhood, my allergic sinuses jumping convulsively... ah! That mosquito-infested month at a camp for boys, working 24 hours a day with juvenile delinquents... the one who wanted to be a professional murderer especially. Those awful days working in a coal dump up north, with the temperature 88 in the shade, only there was no shade, and shovelling coal till every nook and cranny in my lungs was filled to capacity with the stuff. The awful thoughts that kept cropping up from time to time... will they let me in with all those BL's?... will they let me in at all? The good old summer time... hah!

We are interrupted... an old friend approaches, beaming. "What's that?" I ask, "Did I have..." Bang! Another shot rings out, and I carve out the 117th notch in my gun. By the way, did you have a good summer?

INTERMEDIATE RUGBY TEAM HAS CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES

Bryers Expects Strong Reinforcements
Down from Seniors
To Aid Team

Although the team is still in the formative stage, Varsity's 1938 entry in the intermediate rugby loop seems assured of giving Western, McMaster and the championship Guelph outfit a real race for intermediate honours this season. Coach Bill Bryers of Argonaut fame is more than satisfied with the material at hand and is counting on Warren Stevens to send down some classy reinforcements from the senior ranks.

As the Varsity senior team is well stocked with reserve strength, it seems likely that Coach Bryers will not be disappointed. He has hopes of getting either Phil Isbister or Bee Rowland as kicking half, and several linemen who may find senior company a little too tough.

Bryers also has a host of promising freshmen and juniors coming up. In addition to the holdovers from last year he has a newcomer in Hugh Bailey from Etobicoke High School who at present is sharing punting duties with Ralph Sweet, an Ottawa product. Tentatively included in the backfield cast are Jim Murray of North Toronto C.I., Milne and Owen from last year's squad. Along the line the starting line-up is still uncertain. Tony Irwin of the juniors will probably start at snap. Tom Jarvis and Ross Dunford are another pair of graduates from the juniors who will likely make the grade at outside berths.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shiffman

READY! HIP ONE TWO THREE . . .

Tomorrow afternoon one of the strongest teams ever to represent the University of Toronto is going to step out on the gridiron to meet the most powerful aggregation ever to don the old gold and blue. These two outfits are going out there to battle all the way. Varsity to retain the De Gruchy Memorial Cup and the Beaches to break a jinx and separate the students from their silverware.

When an untested and untried team takes the field for the first time many things can happen . . . it can fumble . . . fall apart . . . fizzle out, lack timing or on the other hand it may click on all its plays . . . make holes in the line . . . It is this question mark that makes these pre-season games so interesting and should fill the stands. We now wish to state, and it is our sincere opinion that this year's Blue and White squad are going to defeat all opposition, take the city series and go through the intercollegiate series without a defeat . . . we believe that in spite of the fact that the Beaches have a powerful squad they cannot compare to the strength both initial and reserve possessed by the Blue team. There should be nothing to stop the Blues from sweeping the Beaches back to the east end from where they came "like the wolf in the fold (Argos), with helmets all shining both blue and old gold" . . . no, nothing to stop them except the fact that they still have to get their first game under their belt and may get an attack of fumbleditis . . . but let's keep our fingers crossed. . .

LOOKING AT THEIR STRENGTHS

Balmy Beach . . . Ponton's Balmy Beach team, went in against the Argos, the underdogs . . . against a highly touted, well drilled machine, the defending Canadian champions, without a blare of trumpets or any build up. They went in there and the line, led by Casson, formerly a Varsity middle, now teaching at Humberstone, out-fought, out-drove and out-played the Double Blue . . . they tore holes, blocked a kick, did everything a line should do to the Argos' line . . . this same line will be back in there tomorrow to wrestle with the Blue line . . . unfortunately they will be missing Paul McGarry, husky inside, who was injured in the Saturday contest. On the half-line, Ed Thompson, Manorek, Lush and Ab Box formed a quartet that were steady, dependable and took the "Three Star" rating away from the highly touted Argo backfield. Manorek proved himself an excellent plunger, making Argos' secondary look like a secondary school's secondary. Lush Young, inexperienced, just up from high school, showed he could run that ball back and was a sure catch. Ab Box, kicking and passing, was steady and a little short of sensational.

Varsity . . . they haven't played a game this season but are as strong if not stronger than the team that took the cup last year . . . if anything they are more experienced . . . at centre Doug Turner, strong defensive and offensive, flanked by the line of Sirdevan, who we think could hitch on with any team in Canada, Schwenger, ditto, Isbister and "Moose" Rogin . . . four big, fast and solid line men . . . Jack Holden, veteran end, Norm Beattie, Ted Jarvis and Ben Shukin, two sets of ends that can match speed, tackling ability, etc., with any ends in any league . . . Prince and Scott both experienced quarterbackbacks at the field general's position . . . when it comes to halves there are plenty . . . two complete backfields to choose from . . . Mumford unfortunately is ill how ill no one knows, but there is a possibility that he will play on Saturday . . . but "Bee" Rowland (who hasn't a little honey as yet) running, plunging half from R.M.C., has been taking his place in practice . . . it is unnecessary to tell the virtues of "Long Passer" MacDonald, Lucky McQuarrie . . . and last but not least Cam Gray . . . punter, passer, and plunger Cam is in for a busy season as this year his punting duties will be shared by his team-mates and they will be able to use him for other duties. One of the boys that was used last year as much as the harpist at the Prom Concerts, we think is headed for a big year. He has shown speed galore and shifty stride. We will wait until he shows his stuff before shooting our face off. . . In reserve strength Varsity can, for the first time in many a moon, feel secure . . . there's a plenty . . . line men, halves, centres and even managers. It is this last point (not managers but reserves) that makes Varsity tip the scale to their side . . . there is power and unlimited potentialities in the 1938 Blue and White squad.

CAN IT BE TRUE???

That after Stevens heard that Westman took time off football practice to get married, it is rumoured that freshmen have been delegated to watch the Big Blue team, especially that that well, are going steady, and to report immediately if they enter a jeweller's shop . . . That Mumford really has an attack of appendicitis and may be out for some time . . . we certainly hope it isn't true . . . That Fennel, who played outside for the senior football squad last year, and spent his summer in the North West Territories, hasn't forgotten that he should be back or did the dog sleigh break down . . . That instead of cheer-leaders who can do double flips this year we are going to have female cheer-leaders, picked for their beauty who will lead our team to victory by standing on the side-lines and attracting the attention of opposing colleges. . . All those in favour of this idea please write Sports Editor, Varsity. Wow! . . . First get a good look at Moose Rogin . . . then try to believe that he was once a child prodigy on the fiddle . . . he played with Windsor Symphony Orchestra at a tender age, then came his great choice, basketball or violin, so he chose basketball . . . and now he's playing football with Varsity. Whew!

NEW ATHLETIC FEE PRODUCES INTEREST

Privileges Include
Rugby Games, Ski Trails,
Golf Lessons, Riding and Figure Skating

Last year, an athletic fee was introduced to the students that proved to be extremely successful. The inauguration of this fee by the Athletic Association produced a vigorous interest in all branches of athletics, and attendances picked up in every field of sport. Rugby and hockey once again proved their superiority and popularity with over ten thousand people on an average coming out to watch the gridiron tussles and over four thousand to witness the ice games. These sports did much to give the university a true spirit, and it is believed that this year, Varsity spirit will rise to a higher level.

Through this new fee, there were many additional privileges. One of the most popular was the series of golf (Continued on page 4)

FRESHMEN DEFEAT SOPHOMORES

Eggs and Tomatoes
Fly in Bitter Conflict
As Initiations Are Held
At Victoria College

Freshmen and sophomores alike were removing tomato seeds and fragments of eggshell from their persons last night following the annual pushball fight between the two factions, which is a regular annual feature of initiations at Victoria.

Just about this time last year the freshman class at Victoria faced the sophomores on the Victoria football field for the fight, and surprised themselves by winning, but this year they stood at the sophomore end and were in turn defeated by the current crop of freshmen.

The pushball, fully six feet in diameter, was pushed by the two teams towards the goal lines, to the accompaniment of a barrage from both sides of rotten eggs and elderly fruit. There were no serious casualties, but no one in the fight escaped a coating of the offensive stuff.

The sophomores were outnumbered at least two to one, but the freshmen conceded that they gave a good and lasting account of themselves.

House Hall Porter
Confined to Hospital
With Heart Trouble

A familiar figure was missing from his post at the Hall Porter's desk in Hart House when students returned to the university for the coming year.

John Warwick, known as Jack by freshmen and seniors alike, for nineteen years a Hall Porter in Hart House, has been confined to his home since August 15 with a heart condition, and it may be some time before he resumes his duties.

The Hall Porter's desk has been receiving countless inquiries as to Jack's whereabouts ever since registration began, marking the esteem in which he is held. It is said that whenever Jack went away for a holiday he would meet some student or graduate whom he knew.

Jack, a Great War veteran, was for years the means whereby the freshmen found their way through what was to

Monday Morning
Opens Struggle for Varsity's Collegiate Championship

At 9 o'clock Monday morning, Oct. 3, play will commence for the University of Toronto Tennis Championship at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, 44 Price St. The draws will be published in both the Monday morning Globe and Mail and Varsity papers. All entries must be in not later than 12 o'clock Saturday, Oct. 1, and must be accompanied by the $1.00 entry fee.

There are plenty of vacancies to be filled on both the senior and intermediate squads. The intercollegiate competition will be staged at McGill this year, Oct. 17-18-19. W. Pigott, B. Hall and P. Snyder are all back this year and sure of a berth on the senior team.

It is possible that Dr. Art Ham, ex-Davis cup player, will be able to coach Varsity squads this year. This, together with the wealth of talent available, augurs well for Varsity's chances to win another intercollegiate title.

DALY TO PRODUCE U.C. FOLLIES

Veteran Players, Collaborators Return to Participate in Senior College Event

Once more the University College Follies is swinging under way, and in the opinion of the directors will probably be the greatest show in the history of the college.

This year, the co-operative system will once more be put into play. Tom Daly, who is well known about the campus for his work in various shows, will take charge of production. Lou Weingarten, and Frank Shuster, who have worked on the Follies for the past two years, will be back again this year. Both have studied with the Theatre of Action and are former pupils of David Pressman of the New York Neighbourhood Playhouse.

Johnny Rooke, responsible for most of the hit tunes of last year's show, will contribute new songs. Mavor Moore and Helen Gardner of the U.C. Players' Guild, hold executive positions on the production. According to the committee, casting will begin next week, followed by immediate rehearsal. The production is scheduled for November 18th.

ARTHUR LISMER

TO TEACH ART

Arthur Lismer, Educational Supervisor of the Toronto Art Gallery, has left to become Professor of Fine Art to Teachers College, Columbia University.

Born at Sheffield, England, in 1885, Mr. Lismer came to Canada in 1911. A noted artist, he became a member of The Ontario Society of Artists, The Canadian Society of Graphic Arts, The Canadian Society of Painters in Water Colour, The Group of Seven and The Canadian Group of Painters.

"No one will replace Mr. Lismer," said Helen Frye, Assistant Educational Supervisor, "but children's Saturday morning classes at the Art Centre will continue as usual. The educational staff has been reorganized to enable us to carry on without him."

Last year more than 1,500 children were enrolled in the Art classes which Mr. Lismer organized in 1929. He is partly responsible for the establishment of similar classes for children in South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Mary Conlin

Once again may we remind you that if you are anxious to make a place on the intercollegiate tennis team the first step is to sign for your faculty tournament. The interfaculty meet then follows and all concerned are expecting to see it concluded by Wed. Oct. 5. If you remember the Thanksgiving weekend immediately precedes the week-end of the meet here, so that the team which will be formed after the interfaculty meet won't have much time to practice. Hence the need for haste in all faculties.

Claire Walsh, the Varsity Tennis Club president, is busy inducing Meds and others to enter at least one team in the meet. It is to be hoped that Meds can fulfil this hope because there is material there and it would only mean two weeks of practice.

St. Hilda's lost many of their brightest tennis stars through graduation, and are counting on the freshmen to make some competition. Betty Kirk and Joan McMaster, members of St. Hilda's interfaculty tennis team last year, are practising daily and what with their smooth new courts, etc., St. Hilda's may produce . . .

But we are calling Victoria to take the interfaculty honours. With Claire Walsh, intercollegiate title holder for three years, leading their entries, Victoria will probably repeat last year's victory. They have lost Velma Richardson of last year's intercollegiate team, and another important factor in last year's interfaculty win, but are counting on some surprise packages in the freskie ranks.

St. Mike's, too, have lost through graduation. Gerry Ryan, last year's team captain, will be replaced by Win Flanagan. Lacking outstanding players such as Agnes Gardner, former intercollegiate star, a few years ago at St. Joe's, the Saints are counting on a strong team to make things interesting.

Over at U.C. the tennis fans are lamenting the loss of Joyce Teegenbaum and Polly Shaw through graduation. Add to this the lack of practice courts and their difficulties are quite apparent. U.C., however, since they have the greatest number of co-ed athletes will certainly provide some sparkling competition.

We were speaking with one of the Pharmacy co-eds yesterday regarding the possibilities of Pharmacy entering a tennis team in the interfaculty meet.

Ann Leach

The students and faculty of University College mourn the passing of Ann Leach, who attended this University for the past three years and would have begun her fourth year in the Modern History course this week. She died at her home in Orange, Massachusetts, last Sunday night.

A message from her family, stating simply that she died in her sleep, was received on Tuesday. The next day, a letter, probably detained by floods, arrived from Ann herself, telling that she intended to return for the University College week-end house party.

Ann had resided at Falconer House for three years and was to be its head-girl this year.

Her many friends on the campus will remember her for her activities in the Polity Club, of which she was president, and for her representation of the Women's Undergraduate Association at the Winnipeg Conference last Christmas.

ATHLETIC FEE

lessons given gratis by Dave Hutchinson, professional at the Woodbine golf course. The figure skating continued under the successful teaching of Charlie Zwygart.

The opening of the new ski trails found many of the addicts of this winter sport out in full regalia to take advantage. It is estimated that over two thousand students took advantage of this offer. Riding privileges also proved popular with over eight hundred students, and seven thousand more were to be found at one time or another on the Varsity skating rink.

There is no doubt in the Athletic Association's mind that the athletic fee has proven beneficial, and the vast majority of the student body are of the same opinion.

but our little pharmacist was very dubious. So far Pharmacy women have not entered interfaculty competitions. We would like to see them organize and meet the other faculties.

If you were misled by our directions to the Woodbine Golf Club (we were) we hasten to make this correction. If you're travelling by street car, just go to Woodbine Ave. (not to the city limits) then north by bus to O'Connor Drive and east by foot over the viaduct to the club.

We haven't seen any co-eds bicycling around the campus yet, even though they've threatened to do so. It must be their native timidity or the you-go-first idea. If some brave soul would grip the matter by the handlebars we would soon have another sport in our un-follicle books.

DR. LEOPOLD INFELD JOINS FACULTY

 the nineteenth century electro-magnetic wave equations.

After 1935, Dr. Bora went to the University of Edinburgh, where he is now, and Dr. Infeld was invited to come to bring him out of the esoteric field of advanced mathematics and into the public eye.

Working with his colleague, Dr. Albert Einstein, Dr. Infeld collaborated on a work, The Evolution of Physics, which traced the history of physics for the layman. Although Dr. Einstein had been entertaining the plan of a popular book on physics for some time, this book was Dr. Infeld's idea; and though the book is a true collaboration if the two scientists, Dr. Infeld is responsible for the actual writing.

The Evolution of Physics was first published this summer, and one reviewer has characterized it as "lucid but not light". The importance of the book may be judged by the fact that its publication sent Dr. Infeld's name into every literary periodical, and his picture into every newspaper front page.

Regarding the University of Toronto's acquaintance of Dr. Infeld's services, Dr. Sygne Professor of Applied Mathematics, had this to say: "We are very glad indeed to welcome Dr. Infeld to our staff. He is that rare combination—a scientist of the first rank who has the capacity and desire to make science intelligible to the layman."

"I feel sure," continues Dr. Sygne, "that his presence is going to mean much to the staff in stimulating research, and to the students in making applied mathematics appear as exciting as it really is."

GOVERNOR'S MEDAL NOT AWARDED

 According to these provisions, a student to be eligible must take, in addition to a regular honour course, two special courses in English. But if he or she happens to be taking English as part of the regular work that student is not eligible.

And it so happened that all the brilliant students took English as part of their regular course.

And so one perfectly lovely golden medal is languishing in its plush-lined box, without an owner.

CO-ED INITIATIONS

expects to be initiated and regards it as a slight if the sophs neglect their duty," said Doris Kline.

An opponent of initiation declared it was a ridiculous, humiliating business which should be stamped out.

This comment was not favourably received and the motion to abolish initiations was defeated by 92-9. "The students," a voter declared, "are being deprived of their rights to self-government."

The original ideas of coloured mortar boards and placards for freshmen will be carried out by Victoria sophs with a final secret initiation day.

St. Michael's College sophs suffer no opposition in carrying out initiations. Freshies will appear with creamed, unmade-up faces and manly (the suspending kind) garters. Original 250 word compositions must be orated (sop box fashion, from prominent points on the campus).

Trinity freshmen will be subjected to the traditional squashing parties in which gowned sophs put them "on the spot" for their misdeeds. Elaborate politeness is required and freshmen are forced to run messages, make beds and open doors.

U.C. lassies will be subjected to as yet unknown initiation guaranteed to show them life as it should be lived.

Medical, Nursing and Occupational Therapy facilities will appear in costume next week.

Thompson. Their aerial offensive, both kicking and passing, based mainly on the veteran Ab Box, is one of the finest in the country. Rounding out a squad that is perfectly balanced, are such defensive stars as Charlie Box, Sid Reynolds and Jack Casson. Undoubtedly Balm Beach is a formidable machine.

When interviewed on Thursday evening, Coach Alec Ponton did not commit himself in any way, but one could not help but feel that he is certain that he has a great squad, and one that will win on Saturday, probably after a tough struggle.

Mr. Ponton stated that the Purple and Gold "are going out to win on Saturday, and we fully realize that we will have to play up to last week's form if not better, to beat Varsity". He went on to discuss his team, which in his opinion was exceedingly well balanced and to air a few opinions on the football situation in Canada as a whole.

Coach Ponton expressed the idea that is gaining prevalence in eastern football circles, that for this year at least the Big Four will not be the unquestioned class of the country. But since either the O.R.F.U. or the intercollegiate circuit will be the faster and better balanced of the three.

Which league it will be may never be known definitely, but the game tomorrow should shed light on this very moot point. As things stand now it appears as though Varsity may have to call on the so-called "Indian Sign" they have had for four years on the Beaches to retain the city championship.

WORLD YOUTH CONGRESS SIGNS VASSAR PEACE PACT

emphasizing five basic principles: to develop a spirit of fraternity and collaboration between the youth of all nations; to urge the respective authorities to take the necessary concerted action to prevent aggression or, once started, to bring it to an end; to give effective assistance to the victims of treaty violation and aggression; to refrain from participating in any aggression, whether in the form of supplies of essential war materials, or of financial assistance; to seek to establish political and social justice in their own countries, and to advocate that international machinery be immediately instituted to solve differences between nations in a peaceful way.

The Peace Pact was the outcome of the proceedings of four commissions, studying "The Political and Economic Organization of Peace", "The Economic and Social Status of Youth and its relation to Peace", "The religious and Philosophical Bases of Peace", "The International Role of Youth".

Canada was represented by eighty-two young people of whom, forty-nine were members of the official delegation. The Canadian Student Assembly and the Student Christian Movement were the only organizations of Canadian university students represented.

Despite Loss of O'Connor and Crichton
 Coach is Confident
 In Younger Stars

Varsity's senior intercollegiate track team suffered a crushing blow when Larry O'Connor, sprint star and world record holder of indoor hurdles, graduated this year. In addition, Dave Crichton of S.P.S., regarded as the best middle distance runner in Canada, will be ineligible to carry senior colours.

However, Coach Hec Phillips is not entirely lacking in optimism. Lloyd Delaney, winner of the 220, quarter and half mile in the intercollegiate meet; Gordon McHenry, intercollegiate sprint champ, and Harold Brown, can capably take care of the shorter distances. Coons of S.P.S. and Delaney in the quarter, Delaney and Wishart of Dents in the half, and Watts and Thompson in the mile, will all be available.

Al Forrest and Bill Hogg most probably will do the running in the three mile races.

Even this early in the season Hec Phillips has untraced two promising freshmen who have better than average chances of making the senior team. They are Gerald Broderick of Vic and Ron Moore of U.C. All other freshmen who are interested in track and field events are urged to turn out.

 The first number was Handel's overture in D Minor, arranged by Elgar. The work is one of those satisfying, solid compositions, and Sir Ernest's reading brought this out to the full. After this, Mr. Wilks played Liszt's E Flat Concerto, and his brilliant technique and fine tone were shown to good advantage.

Strauss' Death and Transfiguration was superbly played by the orchestra. Every member was in top form, and Sir Ernest handled it magnificently. The first half of the program ended with Johann Strauss' delightful waltz, Voices of Spring. Everybody from Sir Ernest himself down to the last Eskimo Pie boy thoroughly enjoyed this.

The second portion of the program included two famous solos for the English horn—the slow movement from Dvorak's New World Symphony, and Rossini's overture to William Tell. Neither was played particularly well, but the Sebezro from the same symphony was handled capably, as was the "march" section of the overture.

Mr. Wilks played a short Chopin group with great delicacy and taste, and it was well received by the large crowd.

At the close of the concert, Sir Ernest, in a very brief speech, said that we all had good reason for feeling that we have felt for some time. In a memorable performance of Elgar's Pomp and Circumstance March, the orchestra paid tribute to the statesmen responsible for relieving the tension in Europe.

The reason why girl S.P.S.ers do not hang on rails, says Ellen McRostie, I Architecture, is because they're afraid to. But she's not afraid of being on her feet for two hours and a half at a draughting board—says she's standing it pretty well so far. Ellen would like to do remodelling or interior decorating eventually.

FIRST ALL-UNIVERSITY DANCE TO BE HELD NEXT MONTH

of Bert Niosi, considered by many to be Canada's "King of Swing", will be inaugurated in Hart House on Friday, October 14.

The All-University Dance, the first dance of its kind to be held in Hart House at this time of year, will replace the Hart House Masquerade. Bert Niosi who has recently been "barnstorming" will provide the musical rhythms for the affair, which will take place on the evening preceding the McGill game.

It is expected that the Lambeth Walk, a new dance novelty which was originated in England, will succeed to the position held last year by the Big Apple.

The quadrangle of Hart House will be opened and lighted for the convenience of the expected crowd of 2,000 who will enjoy dancing from nine until two. Tickets may be obtained at the Hall Porter's desk or through any college society.

UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY ANNOUNCES SCHEDULE FOR COMING SESSION

The U. of T. Symphony Orchestra is reorganizing for the coming year, and is in need of new players. It rehearses every Monday evening in the Women's Union, 79 St. George, and gives its annual concert in Convocation Hall in the spring. Last year, about 1,000 people attended the concert.

This winter, the orchestra will study Haydn's C Major Symphony (No. 82), and will play a group of specially orchestrated Bach organ works. There will, of course, be shorter numbers, and Brock McElheran, the conductor, promises to include a Strauss waltz. There is a possibility that the orchestra may give one or two out-of-town concerts, but this is by no means definite.

The first rehearsal will be on October 17 at 7:30 sharp. Anyone interested in joining should phone the conductor at Mi 8636 as soon as convenient.

HIGHER STANDARD ATTRIBUTED TO MATRICULATION

Honour Matriculation Credited by President Cody with Better Type Of Students

That a better type of student now attends the university as a result of the adoption of the honour matriculation standard was the opinion voiced by President H. J. Cody recently.

"They are better prepared for university and are more mature. At the end of the first year in arts the failures used to run like 34 per cent, now it is scarcely 20 per cent, and in some cases as low as 18. Much of the problem of proper selection of students for university has disappeared as a result of the higher entrance standard required."

The university registration this year is expected to be approximately the same as last the President believes. However, there is some indication that the registration of women may exceed what it has been in the past.

"Whitney Hall and Hutton House residences for women at University College have been filled for three weeks." W. J. Dunlop, Director of University Extension and Publicity, said: "This is unusual. There is no room this year for students in physiotherapy and occupational therapy as there has been in the past. And these courses are already filled; it seems a pity but we can't accept more applications."

C.O.T.C. ENROLMENTS BOOSTED BY CRISIS

Major Watson Reveals Effect of European Tension On Enrolment and Enquiries Regarding C.O.T.C.

There has been a noticeable increase in the enrollment in the courses offered by the Department of Military Studies here, Major M. D. Watson, Director of the Department revealed.

Not only has registration increased but the number of inquiries as to the nature of the course has jumped 50 per cent.

The reason for the marked increase, even though registration has been proceeding only a short time, was found in the present general feeling of uneasiness, caused by the attempts of leaders of European states to increase their power, said Major Watson.

Primarily a course of study pursued only by those who intended to enter the non-permanent militia, it has attracted many persons who wish to have a knowledge of military practice in the event of a declaration of war.

Not characterized by any practical work such as gunnery, or field work, the course is devoted mainly to the theory of military administration, military history, strategic and tactical theory, and related subjects.

VICTORIA COLLEGE PLANS BIGGEST "BOB" YET FOR FRESHMEN

Preparations are already under way for the presentation of the biggest and best Victoria College "Bob" to be held at Hart House Theatre on October 11. For many years held in Burwash Hall, the "Bob" has been forced to move to a larger hall to enable a bigger freshman class to participate.

Ross Dunford, successful director of plays, is in charge of this year's program and promises a shorter, snappier, streamlined "Bob". "Better than ever

C.U.P. Meets

Tomorrow the executive of the Canadian University Press, consisting of the editors of The McGill Daily, The Queen's Journal, and The Varsity, meet for its first conference of the year at Queen's University. The C.U.P., which was organized last year, plans to continue its program of news coverage through Canadian universities again this year, and believes that it will be of even more value than it was last.

At the meeting tomorrow The Varsity will present a motion that a national survey of student opinion be taken throughout all the universities of Canada, and will propose that a questionnaire on peace and war be drawn up and issued in all the university papers for the purpose of taking a straw vote.

DOCTOR BURTON ANNOUNCES COURSE IN AERONAUTICS

Doctor Patterson of Royal Aircraft Establishment Will Give Four Lectures On Air Friction

The Department of Physics has recently announced that a course of four public lectures will be given on problems of high-speed flight by Gordon N. Patterson, Ph.D., A.F.R.Ae.S., of the Royal Aircraft Establishment, Farnborough, England, on October 3, 5, 6 and 7, 1938.

The first lecture will be on Monday, October 3rd, at 5 o'clock in Room 43, McLennan Laboratory.

According to C. L. Burton an analysis of the resistance or drag of a high-speed aeroplane gives rise to many new problems. These problems will be discussed in a series of four lectures: introductory; skin-friction drag; form drag; interference drag; effect of compressibility; engine cooling and heat regeneration; wind tunnels for testing models of high speed aeroplanes.

"Too Terrible" Say Dental Nurses Of Operation

Can it be that only the spirit of our co-eds is strong and that in reality the flesh is weak?

The following episode would seem to point to that conclusion.

The other morning two young girls who know you are taking the course in dental nursing went to one of their first demonstration periods.

A lad of thirteen, the victim, had turned up with two very offensive wisdom teeth. The operation had every sign of being interesting and the two prospective nurses were prepared to begreatly from the performance.

At the last moment it was perceived that the gums housing the offenders would have to be lanced.

The dentist went to work. In two minutes the first nurse-tete had passed out and in a trice her companion had become violently ill, to put it politely.

At lunch time when the two nurses had recovered sufficiently to be interviewed on the catastrophe they made only one statement.

"Oh!" they said, "it was too terrible."

Outstanding Artist Joins Department of Fine Art

Charles Comfort, A.R.C.A., Receives Post as Department
Instructor

Mr. Charles Comfort, A.R.C.A., outstanding Canadian artist has been appointed to the post of instructor in practical drawing in the Fine Art department of the University this year.

Mr. Comfort was born in Winnipeg and is a graduate of the Art Students' League of New York City. He has been in Toronto since 1919, during which time he has been responsible for many well known works of art including the murals in the North American Life Building and the Toronto Stock Exchange. He also designed the narrative frieze which adorns the facade of the latter building.

His work in the Fine Art department will consist of demonstrations in the different traditional methods and explanation of the various steps in the material production of works of art. Fine Art students will "learn by doing," according to Mr. Comfort's plan.

Three of Mr. Comfort's paintings are in the Tate Gallery exhibition of "One Hundred Years of Canadian Art". One of these is Young Canadian, which has been hanging in Hart House reading room. The other two are Emanuel (Continued on page 4)

University College Literary Society To Hold Elections

Elections of U.C. Literary Society offices are to be held in the Junior Common Room of University College on Tuesday, October 4, from 11 a.m. to 2.15 p.m. Students of all years may vote.

Those running for office are:
Literary Director: A. B. McIlmoyle, G. W. Stoddart.
Assistant Secretary-Treasurer: Bob Ferguson, Eric Hardy.

472 EXECUTIVE
President: Maurice Aykroyd, Bill Moore, Gordon Waldie.
Secretary: John Clarry, Jack Francis, Bill Kaufman.
Treasurer: Allen Clavir, Jack Laidlaw, Bill MacDonald, Stuart Miles.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE MADE ON UNIVERSITY GROUNDS

A number of necessary construction jobs were completed on the campus in the past summer. The walk and steps behind the University Library have been transformed from cinder to cement. Paved roads have also been built around the University Press and Baldwin House. Four girls' fraternities have vacated the houses at 102 and 104 St. George Street and these are being altered for the use of the psychology department.

FRESHMEN ATTEND DANCE GIVEN BY NEWMAN CLUB

To introduce the hospitality of Newman Club to Catholic freshmen was the purpose of the opening affair at Newman Club on Saturday. Saturday's party was the largest in many years, about 200 students enjoying the music of Vic Oakley and his recently augmented band. Tom Brett, Osgrade '40, welcomed the new members and introduced the club chaplain, Rev. A. E. McQuillen, who is beginning his third year with the club.

The tea dances will continue every Saturday at 5.30 and all Catholic students in the University are invited to attend.

Staff Meeting

There will be a meeting of The Varsity staff in the Women's Union at 4.30 Tuesday. Reporters and prospective reporters especially are expected to attend. Tea will be served.

PLAN TO EXTEND S.C.M. ON CAMPUS

Autumn Planning Conference Held by Student Christian Movement

Representative members of the Student Christian Movement in the University discussed and formulated the main outlines of the coming year's work at the Autumn Planning Conference held Saturday and Sunday at Camp Westowans. Plans were also laid for the expansion of the Movement on the campus.

The most important decision reached regards the holding of a "Religion and Life Week" in the spring term, probably in February. Central in this will be a series of addresses to show the relationship of religion to life. Rev. Dr. W. C. Lockhart hinted that a leader may be brought from England for the purpose.

Other plans include a conference week-end in November when worldwide aspects of the Church will be studied, a series of weekly worship services, study groups on varied topics. (Continued on page 4)

A. B. KUHN TO DELIVER SERIES OF LECTURES

Alvin B. Kuhn, Ph.D., of Columbia University, who is in Toronto for the month of October giving a series of special lectures and week-day classes under the auspices of the Toronto Theological Society, will give an address on Sunday evening at 7.30 p.m. in the Theological Hall at 52 Isabella Street when his subject will be "Hell: Fire Doctrine".

Varsity Frosh Parade in Pyjamas As Current Season Declared Open

The opening of the University year brings with it the open season on freshmen, and bloodthirsty sophomores in every college and residence are taking full advantage of the opportunity thus presented.

Pyjama parades are the most common form of indignity being forced on the residence frosh. Knox, Burwash and University College residences have all had their annual parades, each ending with a mass serenade beneath the Whitney Hall windows which immediately brought a drenching downpour of water from the self-same windows.

The police seldom interfere in the initiation proceedings but they were summoned on two occasions this year—once when a group of pyjama-clad freshmen insisted on rolling up the carpets in the lobby of a downtown hotel, and again when the neighbours thought there was a riot in a nearby residence.

Residence freshmen received their traditional welcome to the university last night, when, from two places on the campus, they were dragged forth

Pictures of Restored Fort

of Highways

In these days of discussion on the Maginot line it may be noted that the British Board of Ordnance prepared plans in 1828 for a line of fortifications to protect Canada. Fort Henry, Kingston, was the only unit completed, according to Roy Kemp, who has recently returned from a business trip to Kingston.

For man years old Fort Henry lay in ruins. Now it has been restored to its original state. Resembling in some ways a medieval fortress, the fort has walls thirteen feet thick. There is a most encircling the fort. It has a drawbridge and a swing bridge, and there are underground passages. Renowned as a public works project Fort Henry is an object of historical interest for tourists.

Beaches Downed, 10-6 In City Series Windup

Cam Gray Stars in Blue Team's Triumph After Being Elected Captain Before Start of Game, Figuring in All Scores

POOR FIELD GENERALSHIP SLOWS BEACHES

By Ed Goodman

The University of Toronto football team defeated Balmy Beach 10-6 on Saturday for the city title, with Capt. Cam Gray figuring in all ten of the Blue squad's points. The blonde veteran who was elected to the team captaincy just before the game, kicked a single and a field goal, tossed the touchdown pass to Ted Jarvis and converted the try for good measure. This lead, all acquired during a hectic second quarter, proved sufficient for victory, for a fighting Blue team held their opponents to an unconverted touch and a single rouge. They faltered slightly in the third period when the east enders plunged through the line and secondary for smashing gains, but came back strong as the game ended.

Poor field generalship, and faulty catching by their halves, prevented the Beaches from overcoming the Blue lead and the college squad tightened up and regained the upper hand towards the end of the last period with Frank Sirdevan leading the comeback with a brilliant defensive display. The game as a whole was only of mediocre quality, in spite of flashes of good football by both teams. Catching was poor, and both secondary defenses were rather slow in covering up, although Doug Turner performed brilliantly until he was injured. The ends on both squads, however, stood out in sharp relief with their hard, and constant tackling. Holden of Varsity and Reynolds of Beaches being outstanding.

The first quarter was scoreless when Beaches kept mugging their scoring chances by fumbling. Box, in spite of a strong wind at his back, was barely outkicking Gray. Rowland, filling in for Don Mumford, was plunging well. Beaches should have had a single but elected to pass instead of kick, and it was grounded.

Barely had the second quarter started when the Varsity line smothered Box before he could kick, and Varsity got the ball on downs at Beaches' 35. Gray kicked for a single. Three minutes later the same thing was repeated and Gray kicked a placement from the (Continued on page 4)

Poses as Theolog To Qualify As Miner

A fourth year Trinity man brings back this anecdote from the mining district of Northern Ontario. It seems that a certain youth looking for employment near Kirkland Lake, and bitterly cursing his lack of qualifications, adopted the bold plan of going up to a mine and announcing to the boss that he was a student.

"A student from where?" asked the boss. "From Varsity," he replied. "What course?" followed up the boss. The youth was not quite prepared for this nasty turn of affairs, and the only university course that he could think of was Theology, which he blandly declared to have been the object of his intense study for some time.

"Well," said the boss, "if you give the boys a little sermon every week in the bunkhouse, I have a job for you, right now." With amazing equanimity, the "student" bought an old Bible and a batch of ready-made sermons. He was still preaching when our Trinity man left.

So Duff-Cooper Resigns

It required the resignation of the first lord of the admiralty to introduce a sane and sombre note into the wild jubilation with which Neville Chamberlain was greeted on his return from Munich as a saviour of peace. Certainly, in view of Alfred Duff-Cooper's resignation, we ought to review the facts.

With Hitler threatening to invade Czechoslovakia and war seeming imminent Chamberlain flew to see Hitler and came back with a solution by which certain areas of Czechoslovakia would be turned over to Germany. (A solution which, by the way, had been proposed weeks before in the "Times" which is controlled by Lord Astor, one of the strongest pro-Nazis in Britain.) After consulting Daladier and forcing the Czech government to agree to the plan Chamberlain again flew to see Hitler and arrange final details. At this second meeting, however, Hitler presented new demands and submitted a map on the basis of which he wanted the crisis settled. Chamberlain, with public opinion in England rising against Hitler, refused these demands and returned home. Then, as he was explaining the ominous situation to the British Parliament he received a message from Hitler inviting him to attend a four-power conference at Munich. Parliament was in an uproar, except for one man—Anthony Eden, who saw through the bit of theatricals, and strode, grim and silent, from the room.

Chamberlain went to Munich carrying the whip hand. Hitler had backed down and called for a conference. Poland and Hungary seemed none too anxious to support Germany in a war. And it was becoming increasingly evident that Italy intended to stay neutral. Soon after the conference started reports were heard that an agreement had been reached and that there would be no war. And then the official text of that agreement was made public—peace had been preserved by giving Hitler everything he had asked for at his second meeting with Chamberlain and which the latter had then refused to grant. It was the democracies and not the dictator countries which had backed down.

The Czechoslovakian incident represents the first time that the democracies of Europe interfered when the dictators threatened aggression. In Manchuria, Ethiopia, Spain, and China, they merely closed their eyes to the whole affair, but in the case of Czechoslovakia they interfered—to keep peace, but indirectly to help a dictator who seemed to be going to have difficulty to fulfill his boasts. It is no wonder that Anthony Eden strode grim and silent from the parliamentary chambers. And it is no wonder that Alfred Duff-Cooper offers his resignation. These men are not Communists, or Socialists, or even left-wing Liberals. They are "old-fashioned" Conservatives who still believe that Great Britain should remain a true and strong democracy and not act as "yes-man" to Hitler and Mussolini.

In this connection it is interesting to examine the text of Duff-Cooper's resignation. As a former member of the British Cabinet he probably knows something of the grandiose scheme which Chamberlain has of preserving peace in Europe. His statement reads "I profoundly distrust the foreign policy which the present government is pursuing and seems likely to continue to pursue."

The resignation of the Navy Minister will probably not embarrass the Chamberlain government to any extent. He will merely be replaced by a man who has more pro-fascist views. But for us in Canada it raises the none-too-pleasant prospect of a Britain closely allied with Germany and Italy. Slowly the pro-fascist steam-roller is forcing men such as Anthony Eden and Alfred Duff-Cooper out of prominent positions and unless there is a sudden change of policy, the final showdown might find Britain using her influence on behalf of the Fascist powers and against the Democracies.

Hart House Glee Club

(Submitted)

Everyone on the campus has heard the Hart House Glee Club and is justly proud of this fine organization. For many years now the club has gone through a gradual evolution under the direction of its various leaders until it has reached today its present high position under Dr. Charles Peaker, the present conductor.

The club consists entirely of members of Hart House and is of necessity a purely masculine affair. There is always a dire need of tenors (whose scarcity is indeed the eighth wonder of the world) to give it the added flavour of femininity.

Among the concerts at which the Glee Club appeared last year are Alumni Night, the Convocation for the Hon. Cordell Hull, the Eaton Auditorium Midday Musicales and a Sunday Evening Concert in the Great Hall. Further engagements are already being planned for the current year.

Freshmen are urged to take advantage of this excellent opportunity of participating in one of the University's outstanding organizations. If you think you can sing, or even if somebody else thinks you can sing, come out to the Organization Meeting on Tuesday, 4th October, at 5 p.m. in the music room of Hart House and learn the truth. Tenors will find the going much easier—because of the rarity of the breed they are twice welcome.

In the Hart House Glee Club members of all faculties meet together on the common ground of music and so the club is recommended as a means of broadening one's acquaintance and enjoying good fellowship. A further advantage of the club is that it takes up comparatively little of your time. Regular rehearsals are held every Tuesday at 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. This means only an hour a week which could not be spent in a more profitable and enjoyable fashion.

Strike Up the Band

More than one person noted the lack of colour, enthusiasm and noise at Saturday's rugby game when Varsity again won the city championship. One of the big reasons for this was the absence of the Varsity band. Next weekend, however, when the intercollegiate schedule opens in Kingston, the band will be on hand.

Meanwhile, the band needs more players. Undergraduates with previous experience playing band instruments can still secure places in the band by merely reporting for practice. The director, Captain John Slatter, may even detect latent genius. Besides, the band will supply instruments for those who can not supply their own.

Apart from the excellent training, various special privileges are offered to members. Among these is the opportunity to visit other universities on trips capably managed by Mr. E. A. Macdonald of the S.A.C. Musicians are invited to turn out to Room 5, S.P.S., where practices are being held at 5 p.m. daily this week.

let's go places

This week Shea's Theatre are showing a double feature . . . for a change. The first picture, Racket Busters, features George Brent. The aforementioned film is first in a cycle of racket-busting SHEA'S pictures dealing with the exploits of a certain lad Dewey of New York. This deals with how the trucking racket is smashed. Good entertainment and lots of fights. No. 2 is The Champ, starring that arch-fiend Johnny Davis. All about a small-time trumpeter who makes a go of things. . . . You might like the picture if you care for Mr. Davis' facial contortions calculated to appear cute, but giving one the impression of a severe attack of acid indigestion. . . .

G.L.W.

This year The Varsity's advertising is better than ever. In the first issue there was a record, when two hundred lines more were sold than in the first issue last year, which was a record up to that time.

WIREGARTERS WINS CZECHS ARE N.S.F.

Popular Premier Returns to Migraine and is Acclaimed

Migraine, Sept. 30, 1938: Thousands of Migrainians thronged to hear the popular Prime Minister of Migraine who has just returned from the Munich Conference. Surrounded by thousands of members of the Tab-Shirt Party, Prime Minister Wiregarters shouted, "There will be peace in my time!" It is interesting to note that the statesman is not expected to live much longer. "And if Russia and Czechoslovakia form a bloc, they'll get their blocs knocked off," screamed the aged minister. "Hitler has not gained a thing. He wanted Slovakia, Ruthenia, and Sudetenland. But instead, we gave him Sudetenland, Slovakia and Ruthenia," he thundered.

Wiregarters spoke at length on democracy. "Look at Germany," he shouted. "You look at it," said a person in the crowd, and was immediately shot. The minister pointed out what a fine land Germany was. For people who want fresh air, there are fresh air camps. For people who like to tour there are touring camps. "In my last visit to Germany I was amazed at the amount of people there who like to concentrate," said Umlauf.

"Let us not be fooled by outward appearances of Czechoslovakia," he murmured. "It acts as if it were a democracy, but it is not. Many countries give the appearance of being what they are not. Look at the United States of America . . . it is neither holy nor Roman nor an empire . . ."

GEORGE BERNARD PSRAW

Art, Music and Drama

Hollywood Theatre

Abus de Confiance, the first in the new series of French talking pictures, was presented at the Hollywood Theatre Saturday morning. The French department of University College, which sponsors these pictures, should be commended for choosing a film featuring Danielle Darrieux to inaugurate its fall program.

The acting, not only of the heroine, but of all the characters, was superb. Each played his role as if he had been born into it. Danielle Darrieux was as natural an unemployed law student as she was a lady of leisure or a graduate lawyer. The scenery and background, too, were most realistic. We saw real stone buildings, active figures and well defined horizons—infinitely superior to the painted pastboard and artificial settings of the Hollywood stage.

The plot in Abus de Confiance was not as strong as some that have been shown here. Although far from being a trite theme it seemed at times rather a spinless one. The effective acting did more to bind the play together than did the story.

This series of talking pictures will continue next Saturday morning when Nostalgie, starring Harry Bauer, will be presented. Harry Bauer will be remembered for his magnificent portrayal of Beethoven in Un grand Amour de Beethoven, one of the films which was shown at the Hollywood Theatre last fall. J.T.

VICTORIA SOPHOMORES HOLD ANNUAL FROLIC

Members of class 471 of Victoria College, played again their childhood games, French Tag and London Bridge is Falling Down, as they gathered at their annual class hike up on Armour Heights on Saturday afternoon.

"The Old Ontario Strand" and other traditional songs were sung by last year's freshmen between bites on hot dogs as they stood around a blazing fire.

After the refreshments and sing-song the hikers returned to Wymilwood. Here they danced to the music of George Carby, who is a member of class 471.

Student Golfers to Open Tourney This Afternoon

Intramural Golf Tournament Opens at Woodbine Today

Next Monday, over a hundred aspiring students of the University of Toronto will lay aside their pens, and take up their nibblies in an attempt to solve the tricky Woodbine layout, and bring honour to their respective faculties.

The coveted Intramural Championship is at stake, and an added inducement for the more expert shotmakers is the chance to gain a place on the U. of T. Senior Golf Team. This team will participate in the Intercollegiate Tourney to be held in Toronto on Friday and Saturday of next week.

Owing to the proximity with which the Interfaculty tournament follows upon registration, some difficulty has

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

TWO CUPS OR ELSE!

Speaking of football, and what else is there to talk about now that the Anglo-German Treaty has been signed, we have a worth-while suggestion to make to whoever is in charge of the De Gruchy Football championship. Our suggestion is that two cups should be awarded in the final city football game . . . one for each half of the game or how else will Balmby Beach ever win a cup . . .

Jack Holden

we tried the other way, that is with only one cup, for five years in a row, and Balmby is just about ready to give up (not that I blame them) . . . now how about trying it our way . . . if our way had been tried on Saturday each team won half a game and each would have won a cup, that's fair, isn't it . . . then Coach Ponton would have really been able to smile instead of wearing that grim grin but it was nothing as compared to the smiles that played on the faces of the Argos team as they sat in the stands, slumped in their seats with their hats pulled down over their faces trying to hide the tears that rolled down their cheeks from time to time . . . really it was pathetic . . . imagine the Canadian Champs defeated by a team that was in turn being humbled by a bunch of "school boys", as one Argos' gent remarked with evident disgust . . . which brings up the old problem of Big Four calibre vs. Intercollegiate players, and that we think there is any comparison, but if records are records . . . well! Now for Saturday's game . . .

THE TUNER UPPER, A DOUBLE FEATURE

History was made in more ways than one on Saturday when Varsity defeated the Beaches 10 to 6, for it was the first time since we've been calling them that we have expected correctly. This brings us up into the group of experts that count with an average 1000 p.c. for the season, yet we had to be helped by Ab Box's calling at the quarterback position to make our calling correct. . . . Remember the first half. Balmby's ball, score 0 to 0, on Varsity's 25 yd. line . . . a splendid scoring chance . . . enabled away on a major score try that failed . . . remember the last ten minutes of the ball game utilized in pushing Varsity back through the centre of the line for repeated, but little yardage gains, abandoning the use of their powerful aerial attack that was functioning so well . . . plunging instead of kicking on third down at Varsity's 35, also lost valuable yardage when there was still plenty of time to win by singles . . . but it is tough to think of it while playing in the game . . . it is much easier to grandstand quarterback after the game is over. . . .

FIRST FEATURE . . . VARSITY—

Saturday's game was distinctly a double feature . . . Varsity as the first feature and the Beaches the second of the double bill . . . starring in the first feature was Captain Cam Gray . . . elected prior to the game to lead the Blues to victory . . . his kicking was as good if not better than Box's . . . his educated toe kicked a single, a placement, and a convert . . . his passing and Ted Jarvis's catching resulted in the touchdown that won Varsity's game . . . Doug Turner, who's defensive play kept the Beaches' powerful line bucks helpless . . . he was injured but not seriously and will be fit for next week . . . Sirdevan and Rogin who led the Blues' front line, in opening holes and blocking Box's punts . . . and Jack Holden who tackled hard and consistently. The first feature was worth four stars . . . it showed that Stevens has a team that may take the Intercollegiate race . . . his backfield was well balanced, sure catchers and good defensive . . . his team has scoring strength . . . his line is good . . . it showed the crowd that the University of Toronto has a team this year that should get all the support the students can give them . . . even right up to Kingston where the boys will need it next Saturday.

"OLD GOLD AND BLUE"

The second feature was called "Old Gold and Blue" . . . featured Manorek, hard hitting Hamilton ball . . . he moved the sticks repeatedly . . . six times in a row . . . cutting further and further into Varsity territory . . . Sammy Sward, who shared in the bucking duties and who ran the end for Balmby's five spot . . . Coach Ponton had his team pushing Varsity all over the lot . . . their timing was good . . . faking perfect . . . and seemed to tear the Varsity line to pieces . . . but there is a little doubt in our minds as to the legality of their plays. A team coming out of a huddle must come to rest before putting the ball into play . . . and yet on Saturday from where we were sitting it looked as if the Beaches were actually moving forward as the ball came out and were in motion . . . but who knows better than the referees

Ted Jarvis

One thing the pre-season games have done is clear up a lot of doubt . . . now everybody knows who is going to win next Saturday in Queen's . . . and the week after that . . . in fact the experts have published the results of the intercollegiate race in the Star Weekly calling Varsity, Western, Queen's and McGill to finish in that order . . . aren't you happy, Steve?

thirty, Prince held the ball. Beach pressure as a result of a Box to Box pass was relieved by MacLachlan recovering a fumble on the Beach 35 yard line. A Gray to Jarvis pass was called complete for interference on Beach's fifteen yard line. Prince called the same play right back and Jarvis received the ball over the line for a touch.

Starting the second half Beaches looked like a different team. Thompson ran a kick back 25 yards to his own 40. Manorek, Seymour and Sward then proceeded to plunge down to the Varsity 15. Reynolds attempted a drop kick that failed. Scott fumbled the ball on his own 1 yard line and Beaches recovered. Sward went around the end for a touch that was unconverted.

Beaches continued to press in the last stanza and Box kicked a rouge. The Blue line began to get used to Beaches' fast moving plays and a third down plunge was stopped dead at centre field. Box should have kicked there and the result might have been different.

explored the photographic possibilities of old Fort Henry. His photographs of the fort were used as publicity pictures by the Ontario Department of Highways.

"Hardly the Parthenon," stated Kemp, when interviewed by The Varsity, "but nevertheless Fort Henry has a massive dignity. It is also a symbol of an earlier stage in Canadian development." His photographs dramatize the heroic qualities of ancient armaments and qualities of defence.

"The scheme of rebuilding the old fort was very commendable. Both the Dominion and the Provincial governments collaborated in the project. This is surely munition making without the sting," he stated.

in accommodation and in facilities with the Women's Union, headquarters of the U.C. Players' Guild. The two stages are dissimilar, the Trinity one being wide and shallow, while the Guild stage is more rectangular.

The fear that Cartwright Hall may promote disunity in the field of campus dramatics has been dispelled by the rumour, as yet unconfirmed, that the two societies plan some sort of co-operative activity. Gossip has it that they may agree upon a form of interlocking membership, where members of one may attend performances of the other. Such a scheme would further the establishment of dramatics as an all-university activity, an end which has been pursued diligently for the past three years by the University Drama Committee.

INTERFACULTY GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP GOES TO DENTISTRY

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

London: British Government has made a loan of $50,000,000 to the Czechoslovak Government to help in economic reconstruction, refugee resettlement, and other necessary tasks resulting from the Munich Agreement.

Budapest: The Hungarian Government has delivered a new note to Czechoslovakia calling for immediate negotiations on Hungary's minority claims. Mass meetings throughout Hungary demand immediate occupation of Czechoslovak territories.

Prague: The Czech Cabinet is taking a pro-German swing, as statesmen realize that Czechoslovakia is no longer able to pursue an independent foreign policy.

Sudetenland: Hitler and his army begun their occupation of the Sudetenland Monday at 11.16 a.m. when they crossed the border at Wildenau.

ST. JOSEPH'S GIRLS HOLD ANNUAL HIKE

A truce between zealous sophomores and stubborn freshmen at St. Joseph's will be mutually welcomed today when both factions join in the annual hike out in the Don Valley region. Every year the trials of initiation are dispensed with for one afternoon as the entire college joins in its first joint outing. While initiation formally concludes on Thursday, today's pause in sophomoreish friendliness will be a relief to the freshmen at St. Joseph's who had counted on a dignified type of initiation, a la Victoria College. For the duration of the afternoon the new girls will suffer no indignities other than collecting wood for fire, making the coffee and otherwise honouring their seniors.

Last year this yearly custom of spending one afternoon advancing the "back to the land" idea was cancelled and the freshmen missed one of the most enjoyable features of the fall term. However, the weather today seems more promising and the sophomores are going to make up for lost time. Late yesterday they were uncertain as to how they could associate with the freshmen without impressing them with their superior knowledge. But this can be accomplished if they try hard enough. No one has yet equalled the record set a few years back when one freshman missed the trolley and had to hike back into town. But worse things may yet happen when hiking on a hike.

COFFEE SQUASH PLANNED BY S.C.M. FOR TOMORROW

The University S.C.M. is holding what is popularly known as a "coffee squash" in Wymilwood at 7.30 o'clock on Wednesday evening, October 5th. Chancellor Wallace of Victoria University, will speak to the gathering. The study groups for this year will be announced and their leaders introduced. The serious portions of the program over with, there will follow folk dancing in the traditional S.C.M. style, with the coffee squash to bring the evening to a close.

Professor Criticizes British Foreign Policy

Dr. Carlyle King Rebuked in Turn for "Betrayal of Confidence"

CAUSES EMBARRASSMENT

Special C.U.P. despatch from The Sheaf, University of Saskatchewan. Dr. Carlyle King, popular English professor at the University of Saskatchewan, has achieved considerable notoriety in the province for his outspoken declarations on British foreign policy and colonial administration. During the course of an address to a public meeting in Saskatoon last winter he was reported to have said that the British Empire was not worth fighting for.

This drew a storm of protest from various branches of the Canadian Legion and other patriotic organizations and individuals. Among other charges was one alleging a betrayal of confidence expressed in him by the I.O.E.E. a few years ago when they awarded him their overseas scholarship. Throughout the controversy the vast majority of his students, while not necessarily agreeing with his opinions, registered their insistence that he be allowed to publicly express those opinions.

Many of his critics do not know that he is an avowed pacifist. He is chairman of the Saskatchewan branch of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, an international pacifist society.

NEW BUFFET STYLE HELPS CO-EDS DIET

Happiness reigns supreme at St. Hilda's College—the co-eds there have found a new and effortless form of dieting.

Breakfast and lunch are now served in the English buffet style and the girls claim that when they have to serve nerve to go up and get that extra themselves, they just haven't got the second or third helping so injurious to the girlish figure. Thus the co-eds, rather than brave the titters of their fellow schoolmates by arriving at the buffet table a second time, are rapidly losing weight. But they don't seem to mind. It gives them a chance to get rid of some of that alarming "summer" avoirdupois.

With the meals in buffet style, students can slip in and out of the refectory with not a sound. The ever-late co-ed no longer has to stand blushing in the doorway, trying vainly to think up an excuse. Buffet style also has its defects as one of the students exclaimed ruefully, "We don't get enough meat!"

REGISTRATION INCREASES AT COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

Although the number has not yet been computed, the enrolment at the Ontario College of Education is definitely up, say reports. There is an increase of approximately fifty students over last year's enrolment.

Dean Althouse said that he could not give the exact number of last year's graduates who got positions. Of the 225 who received their recommendation certificates, he ventured to say that from 175 to 200 obtained posts.

"The classes of the last two years did not materially increase unemployment among teachers," said Dr. Althouse. "However, the extra fifty enrolled this year may create quite a different situation."

Staff Meeting

There will be a meeting of the entire staff of The Varsity in the Women's Union at 4.30 p.m. today. Reporters and prospective reporters are urged to attend. Tea will be served.

Dr. King's Letter

Reprinted from "The Sheaf."

"I deeply regret that I cannot keep my promise to the League for Peace and Democracy to take part on September 29 in their symposium on the present international situation. Violent epithets attacks and demands for my dismissal following upon my most recent public address have been so bothersome to President Thomson (who is staunchly attached to academic freedom) that it does not seem expedient for me to speak again in Saskatoon for peace and democracy.

"My critics will not do me the courtesy or justice of finding out at first hand what I have said; they have preferred to condemn me on the basis of newspaper reports plus prejudice. Actually my criticism of British foreign and domestic policies and British exploitation of colonial possessions in Asia and Africa has not been more severe than that made in England by eminent and honest men, Lord Olivier and Lord Ponsonby for example. I should be happy to substantiate this in detail to anyone who is interested. Why a professor in Saskatchewan may not repeat what a member of the House of Lords may say in England, is a mystery which those perhaps will explain who are most frequent in our Province about British freedom of speech."

ACCARATE TO ADDRESS SOCIAL PROBLEMS CLUB

The Social Problems Club will hold its first meeting this Friday in the Economics Lecture Hall from 5 until 6. The subject, "Spain and the International Scene". The speaker, Manuel Accarate, vice-president of the United Socialist Youth of Spain, an organization which really does act, for it recruited half a million youth who fight in the trenches not only against Fascism but also against the 52 per cent illiteracy in Spain before 1935.

Every student is urged to come to this free lecture and to learn more about the Social Problems Club.

Negro Frenzies on the Wane Lambeth Lends a New Refrain

From England come the new versions of ballroom dancing, replacing steps of Negro origin such as the "Big Apple" and "Suzy Q". The "Lambeth Walk" is Mayfair's choice, but the "Palais Glide", the "Blackpool Walk", and the "Muster" are also popular among those who know. These steps are more dignified if somewhat duller than last year's terpsichorean trends. They are like square dances but not so bouncy and too, too English. "If you like Punch, you'll like the Lambeth Walk," says Sidney Jones, I.V. Trinity, and adds, "All you need is a partner who knows how. A moron with one leg could do it. I did it very well myself."

The Palais Glide is much more intricate, and it is inadvisable to attempt it unless you are concealed beneath one

SEEDED NETTERS CAPTURE ROUNDS OF TENNIS MATCH

Favourites Advance as Second Round in University Tourney Ends

SURPRISE WIN BY SHORTER

The tennis ball started bouncing merrily yesterday morning at the Toronto Tennis Club when the inter-faculty tennis championships got under way. Two rounds were completed and the seeded players advanced with little trouble.

Bill Piggott and Bruce Hall, top favourites in the tourney, pulled away from the field by taking their matches with little difficulty. Bill Small experienced difficulty in topping McAllum, but finally took the match in three sets 6-3, 5-7, 6-1. Paul Snyder, dark horse of last year's senior squad, showed up well, as did a newcomer, Gordon Shorter, who hails from Ottawa.

Results of first round:
B. Hutcheson defeated Stewart 6-0, 6-0; Phillips def. Hignell 2-6, 6-2, 6-0; R. Ferguson def. Young 6-1, 6-3; Malton def. Wright, default; R. Young def. Mason 6-0, 6-2; R. Campbell def. Bennett 6-4, 6-6, 6-4; C. Wilson def. Francis 6-4, 6-2; J. Willard def. Schmidt 6-1, 6-2; Lamb def. Prideaux 6-2, 6-2; McGoey def. Anderson 6-0, (Continued on page 3)

ALUMNUS-PRESIDENT DIES AT DALHOUSIE

Mackenzie Gave International Fame to Provincial Seat of Learning

Halifax, Oct. 3.—Dr. Arthur Stanley Mackenzie, first Dalhousie alumnus to become its president and under whose guidance it arose from a provincial college to a university of international renown, died in hospital here yesterday.

Dr. Mackenzie, who was 73, had been ill only a short time. His death followed closely upon that of another who had done much to establish the "little college by the sea"—G. Fred Pearson, a recent chairman of the Board of Governors, who died Sept. 21.

When "A. S." Mackenzie came to Dalhousie in July, 1911, he found it a college of one brick building, with small invested funds and with physical assets

First Annual Meet Held At Woodbine Golf Club

NEW SEASON OPENS FOR U.C. PARLIAMENT

Governor General Bowlen to Deliver Speech from Throne

For the seventh successive year the University College Parliamentary Club will hold regular weekly sessions in the Junior Common Room of the college. The first meeting of the year 1938-39 will be held this coming Thursday afternoon, October 6th at 4.00 p.m. sharp, when the speech from the throne will be debated.

The University College Parliamentary Club is a debating parliament, the primary purpose of which is the furtherance of all literary and particularly debating activities on the campus. The procedure is strictly formal and parliamentary although not necessarily always serious, and there are political

LOUDON INTRODUCES COURSE IN AVIATION

Canadian youth seem to be becoming definitely air-conscious as twenty-one students have enrolled in the recently inaugurated course in Aerial Navigation provided by the University Extension department, it was revealed yesterday by Professor T. R. Loudon. Although the course was available last year, it was not started until late in the fall and only two persons enrolled.

The course covers two years and before the second year the students must have obtained their private pilot licenses. Backed by the government Department of Transport, it forms a link in the task of building up an adequate system of air transport in Canada. Most of the members of the course are aiming at positions as airport dispatchers and meteorologists, and they are to be given a course in airline operations by a high official of American Airlines, who will come to Toronto once or twice a month.

PSYCHOLOGISTS ACQUIRE ADDITIONAL QUARTERS

Another sorority house has given way to the growing needs of learning.

The university has acquired the house at 104 St. George Street to take care of the ever-expanding psychology department. Three of the four apartments in the building are already vacated and the fourth will be left at the end of the year. One lecture room has been provided, the rest of the space is to be used for professors' offices. The house at numbers 102 and 104 will in future be known as 104. It is the only change in the quarters of a department this year.

Students' Directory

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

Low Gross Score Winners Have Further Chance to Gain Laurels

REPRESENT TEN FACULTIES

The University of Toronto's first annual Intramural Golf Tournament was held yesterday at Woodbine Golf Club with over 125 entrants. Ten faculties were represented in a keenly-fought battle which saw the Faculty of Dentistry's team cop the Interfaculty championship, with a four-man score of 313. S.P.S. and Trinity were close behind with 319 and 320 respectively. The calibre of golf was exceedingly good, as is shown by the fact that the 30 low gross scores (who qualify for the Intercollegiate trials) were all under 85.

Strongest faculty from the standpoint of numbers was Trinity. S.P.S., U.C. and Vic were also very well represented. Dents, of course, by virtue of their victory, garnered major intramural points, along with S.P.S. and Trinity.

Results were as follows:

- Low Gross—
1st Bob Reid 70
2nd R. S. Harris 76
Low Net—
1st D. R. Warren 96-30-60
2nd D. B. Nicol 81-18-63
3rd Flight-Handicaps 1-12:
Low Gross, B. Moriarty 78

'UNCLE TOM' AIDS FOOTBALL HEROES

If Varsity doesn't come out on top with the rugby championship firmly clutched in her right hand it won't be the fault of "Uncle Tom" at Diana's. "Uncle Tom" is the genial gentleman whose friendly welcome makes Diana's on Bloor Street the place where Varsity students would rather go.

"Uncle Tom" is not content with merely predicting a victory for Toronto. He is taking steps. It has been his custom to stand the players to free milk shakes after a win. But after nearly losing "Diana's" to a "fellow from Kingston" last year, "Uncle Tom" resolved to use more potent incentives. So this year the rule is: if the team wins they get milk shakes, if they lose they wash dishes.

The spring is a sad and harassing time for everyone, what with exams and leave-taking, but it has one bright spot for Uncle Tom. It is that the fraternities bring back the culinary and dishes they have "borrowed" during the year. And that is a Good Thing.

EXHIBITION GAME OPENS SOCCER SEASON SATURDAY

With the current Intercollegiate soccer season opening up next Saturday, the Varsity soccer squads are getting ready for a gruelling season. This year, for the first time, soccer will be classed as a first division sport owing to the popularity it has gained in the past few seasons. Any man that makes the senior team will receive first colours and everyone including freshmen are eligible for the team.

Coch Slade has been retained from last year and is also quite confident that the highly cherished Blackwood Trophy will nestle in the Toronto household at the end of the current campaign. The Blues will play R.M.C. in an exhibition game on Saturday morning on the front campus.

Let Them Speak

Carlyle King, professor of English at the University of Saskatchewan, aroused a great deal of disapproval when he criticized certain aspects of British diplomacy, in public speech at Saskatoon. Not only did these people disagree with him, they also demanded his dismissal from the staff of the university. Dr. King took this threat so seriously that he declined to make a projected speech at a meeting of the Saskatoon League for Peace and Democracy.

In this country, a person is usually allowed to say what he pleases, and if what he says amounts to nothing more than vulgar libel, sensible people disregard him. If on the other hand, what he says is a reasoned criticism of a man or a group of men, then sensible people either agree with him or disagree with him, and state the points on which they disagree.

This process is known as debate, and is the basis of the method of determination of policy among the democracies of the world. When, because of disagreement we bring pressure to bear upon him, and cause him mental or bodily discomfort either by economic coercion or force of arms, it is then a case of sheer lawlessness and a negation of the democratic principle of freedom of speech. Academic freedom should be particularly inviolable in a healthy country.

The serious part of the business is that Dr. King refused to speak at the next meeting of the League for Peace and Democracy. This shows that he believed that the designs of his opponents on his liberty carried weight. If that is the case, we reach the unhappy conclusion that in Canada, the machinery that has been designed to uphold the tenets of democratic freedom has started to fall to pieces, and unless we make a serious effort to preserve this machinery, we shall soon find ourselves under a tyranny.

The professor can be commended for declining when it is considered that he would have put his President in a very awkward position had he accepted. But university Presidents should not have to be embarrassed by narrow-minded factions with a silly axe to grind. We agree heartily with the policy of The Sheaf in attempting to expose and eradicate such tendencies on the part of certain elements.

Fight Fascism

To the Editor:

The treaty recently concluded between Hitler and Mr. Chamberlain does not remove the menace of Fascism to Europe and ultimately to the British Commonwealth of Nations. The Fascist dictators broke the Spanish non-intervention pact, and in 1914 an autocratic German government dismissed as "a scrap of paper" the solemnly contracted London Pact guaranteeing the integrity of Belgium.

Hitler has his eyes on Alsace-Lorraine and Switzerland, half of whose people speak German. He aims to press Hungary, Bulgaria, and the balance of Czechoslovakia into economic subservience to Germany, so that all these countries may serve vaile-nilly to help build up the Fascist war machine for the conquest of the globe. In Mexico, Brazil, and Roumania—nay, even in Canada and the United States Hitler's advance guards of propaganda are fostering undemocratic ideas. He wants these countries to be neutral at first, and then supine to his invasion when the Fascist colossus has dominated Europe and spreads over into North America. But today—alas for Hitler—the economic and military strength of the Democracies with Russia is twice that of the Fascist powers.

What can the student do about Fascism? Clearly, blind patriotism does not suffice; while we praise Mr. Chamberlain for his personal courage, we must subject his policies to intelligent criticism and clear-cut protest against what we hold to be wrong. Mr. Duff-Cooper's resignation shows that even high-placed Conservatives at times find Mr. Chamberlain to be wrong.

Defeatism—throwing up our hands in despair—is no better. I take it as a premise that all of us hope to do our share in making this a better world to live in. But local good work that we do is made void if by defeatist non-interference we help the forces of Fascism to foist world-enslaving autocracy upon us. Fascism is militant and dynamic. Its philosophy of lies grows by engulfing bodies of people who do not sense clearly and do not defend the benefits of democracy and liberty so dearly won by our forebears. These words Democracy and Freedom, which formerly used to be platitudes, have as the President said, become "the oriflammes of a new Crusade".

Through the Progressive Student Movement each of us can do his part to defend Democracy against Fascism. We can act. Don't be a cynic and think: "Empty words!" Don't ask as though the answer were a fore-ordained negative: "What has the student movement done in the past?" The progressive student movement is part of the general movement of politically awake people whose modest day-to-day acts and decisions when added together in their grand total really help peace and democracy. Take the plight of the Chinese. To free this civilized and peace-loving people and to remove the menace to our own shores and to Australia of a power-mad Japan astride Asia, we buy silk and rayon in place of silk. We buy British toys in place of Japanese. Paltry, useless efforts, you may say? Not at all. In their sum total they have reduced Japan's silk exports by 30 per cent and her toy exports by more than half. Japan cannot buy so many war materials to further her heinous program in Asia.

Take Spain. The small contributions of ordinary people like ourselves have in their summation provided asylum in Britain and France for thousands of war orphans and have brought ships full of food to the semi-starving children who remain in Spain.

The organizations representing the progressive student movement on our campus include among others the Liberal Club, the C.C.F. Club, the Student Christian Movement, and the Social Problems Club. I write on behalf of the SPC but cite the others to stress that the movement is by no means confined to one club.

(Signed) Griffith P. Taylor.

Occasionally members of The Varsity mast-head find it necessary to be in the inner office of the Students' Administrative Council offices in Hart House, and it has been surprising the number of people who insist on using the wrong door. This makes things difficult for the staff of the Council office, and it is only excusable insofar as students forget that there have been changes made in the office. However, on the next door the words are printed and it would be appreciated very much if people would endeavour to enter by this door.

Every morning there are enough copies of the college undergraduate paper printed to supply each undergraduate student at the University with a paper. These are distributed to all the residences and faculties, and placed where they may be obtained easily.

If at any place there is a scarcity, or an over-supply, we would be glad to make adjustments and if need be run off more copies. Any complaints or suggestions would be welcomed by Mr. Macdonald at the business office.

Forestry Students up a Tree
Until Wiregarters
Confesses

TOMORROW: EAST LYNNE

Toronto, Oct. 4, 1938: A tragic scene was enacted at yesterday's emergency meeting of the Caput, called together to investigate the stories circulating about disappearing students and bleached bones at the bottom of the Hart House swimming pool.

With tears streaming from his eyes and in a halting voice, ninety-three year old Professor Umlauf Wiregarters broke down amid a barrage of questions and confessed that he had placed a man-eating tiger shark in the Hart House pool last Michaelmas on a dare. Since then, frantic mothers, agonized fiancées and indignant finance companies have plagued the switchboard with calls for Philip Morris. Three hundred and fourteen unclaimed tote-box cards tell a mute tale.

The Caput were first informed of the tragedy by the Macdonald Tobacco Company who had been receiving the cards in groups of fifty-two complete with joker. This was followed by a complaint from Mr. Winterburn who found eighty-four slide-rules floating in the chlorinated foot-bath.

There is a time and a place for tiger-sharks. There is also a time and place for fiends like Wiregarters. "The time is now, and the place is in Kingston and we don't mean R.M.C."

Hardest bit of all was Simcoe Hall. "Three hundred and fourteen gone," murmured the Bursar brokenly. "All have perished and so have my hopes of ever getting the rest of their fees!"

let's go places

Authors are sometimes very queer. For instance they may not realize that they are in love with a girl. Publishers on the other hand are more practical. They can tell you what a HAS NANCY manuscript is worth.

They also know the value of women. Then you have people who may be classified as "lugs". Now place one beautiful wench with an author, a publisher and a lug; and you have the set-up for "Three Loves Has Nancy".

Janet Gaynor is the beautiful, innocent gal from 'way back home in love with a home town product, more commonly known as a hick. Her baby talk gets by?—Franchot Tone and Robert Montgomery offer a very fine interpretation of author and publisher respectively. Seem to be right at home in a class apartment.

Those two ace dumb guys, Laurel and Hardy, are more stupid than ever in the second feature, which is appropriately named "Blockheads". Anything can happen when Stan and Oliver get together and in this film practically everything did happen. It's a gargantuan riot! Worth seeing itself.

RUGGER SQUAD PRACTICE FOR EXHIBITION MATCH

With ten of last year's team back the rugger squad is looking forward to a most successful season in spite of the fact that the Australian stars, Gengos and Christenson, and W. A. Scott, Bob Young and Stu Reid have left our ranks. Dan Coughlin, last year's captain, is back, but only in the capacity of coach.

A warm-up match is scheduled for next Saturday with the Toronto Irish. On the following week-end Queen's will open up the Intercollegiate series with a visit to Toronto. In view of these approaching matches it is urged that all players turn out regularly for the practices which are being held on the front campus at five o'clock daily. Anyone desiring to turn out with the squad whether experienced or not would be extremely welcome.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Marg Conlin

Orchids to the peppy co-eds at Western who successfully demanded instruction in the science of watching a football game intelligently. Their pleas were heard and a series of lectures is at present being given as an aid to understanding and appreciating the finer points of football. Most appealing feature of what is probably the most popular lecture on the campus is the professor himself. He is the captain of the team.

This innovation is just another one of those things which are fast putting Western co-eds at the head of the class in extra-curricular activity. Last year their Beth Forbes was the eyesore of all eyes as she led the Western band in all their razzle-dazzle. A woman band leader on this side of the border is quite a novelty, in fact her appearance had all the glamour of Hollywood. Perhaps this year when Western are so determined to take the football honours (aren't we all?) they will think up a co-ed cheer leader. Who knows what goes on there in their seances.

By Thursday we hope to be able to tell you who's who in the potential star material for intercollegiate tennis ranks. Additional lights in the faculty matches are Annabelle Macklin of basketball fame and one of the favourites at St. Mike's. St. Hilda's are counting on Kay Hilder to bring the tennis spotlight back from Victoria, where it has been focussed since the Varsity advent of Claire Walsh.

Congratulations are in order for the women medics who are working so hard in order to enter a tennis team from Meds in the Interfaculty meet. Household Science are also entering a team for the first time, so that more competition than ever before is assured. The meet this year is to be held at the Canadian National courts on Cottingham Street.

Some of the local basketball managers have been busy already lining things up for the season ahead. St. Mike's, who were Interfaculty Champions last year, may be without the services of Miss Marjorie Rean, who coached them to victory last year and who formerly starred for Western.

The golf tournament is slated for October the 17th at the Mississauga Club and Helen Scott and her committee at U.C. are anxious to make the day enjoyable in every way. If it is successful this year in producing championship material, perhaps by next year the much-discussed Intercollegiate meet will become a reality. But next year's Sportsman can tell you more about that.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

A LITTLE WHITE BALL

Yesterday saw the beginning of new activity in Varsity athletic circles. The first interfaculty golf tourney ever held around these parts was run off at Woodbine Golf Club without a hitch. The entry list numbered well over a hundred and the calibre of golf displayed was exceedingly high. Last year's team captain, Bob Reid, led with a low gross of 70. Bob joined the hole in one club just a fortnight ago while playing over the same course. Harris, from Trinity, was next with a 76, with Bill Morrison of hockey fame springing a surprise with a 78.

The low thirty of yesterday's tournament qualify for the trials for the Intercollegiate golf team. The men qualifying and their starting times will be found elsewhere on this page. The golf club executive also announced that the six low scores in this 36-hole test would constitute the senior team. All players must, if they have not already done so, sign eligibility certificates at the athletic office by 5 p.m. today. A fee of $1.00 will be charged for tomorrow's play.

After imparting this information to the contestants, we are taking the liberty to suggest that if your lectures will stand a little cutting it would be worth while for anyone at all interested in golf to journey out to Woodbine and form a little gallery for the boys. The students at Varsity fall only too often to give the secondary sports the support that they deserve.

THE PROGRAM WIDENS

The tennis tournament to pick a team to defend the intercollegiate title has now reached the quarter final stage. At the present time it appears as though the winner will be either Bill Pigott or Bruce Hall, with the latter a slight favourite. Intercollegiate tennis in Canada bears favourable comparison with amateur tennis as a whole throughout the Dominion. Hall's Dominion rating of number ten and Murray of McGill's rating among the first three (his exact position is not definitely set in my mind) are ample proof of the excellence of the game being played. The make-up of the team will probably consist of Hall, Pigott, Snyder and one of the five remaining dark horses.

There is one more important sport event taking place on the campus this week, the First Annual Junior Intramural Track Meet on Thursday. This meet is designed mainly for novices and freshmen and anyone who has never placed among the first four at any event at a senior interfaculty meet is eligible. The entries are going to be taken at the track and we personally are looking forward to see if anyone can be discovered to take the places of O'Connor and Crichton.

FRESHMAN FOOTBALL

Since the beginning of the school year, most of the attention heretofore has been centred around the senior football team and what a fine chance they possess of winning the intercollegiate title. The little residue of attention has been devoted to the intermediates as a reservoir for senior material. Yesterday, however, Coach Don Graham took his first survey of the material available for the junior football squad, which is mainly composed of promising freshmen. The turnout is by no means complete, as many more who are eligible (under 21 years of age) are expected to turn out within the next few days. It would facilitate matters greatly if those who have any gridiron aspirations would apply for uniforms in the junior locker room at 415, or to speak either to the team manager or to Don on the back campus where the practices are held.

Instead of being entered in the junior city series, the team this year will perform in a college group very similar to the intermediates. Some very fine junior machinery has been produced in the past at Toronto which has brought a great deal of credit to the university's football such as the Dominion championship team in 1932, starring Coulter, Upper and Jackson and Don's city title-holders in 1936 with such outstanding performers as Scott, Somers, MacLachlan and Shiffman. Perhaps this year may see a repetition of former numerous successes.

valued at less than $500,000. Students numbered only a few more than 400. When he retired in 1931 he had left his own monument, The Medical, Dental and Law Schools, from which sprang some of Canada's most noted surgeons, statesmen and lawyers, had been re-organized and incorporated. The Arts and Science Faculties were enlarged. Departments of Commerce, Engineering, Pharmacy, Music and Fisheries had been added. Nearly 1,000 students were enrolled.

Born in Pictou, Sept. 20, 1865, MacKenzie was the sixth college president that little Scottish county had given Canada when he became president of Dalhousie. He attended public schools at New Glasgow and Halifax and entered Dalhousie as a student when only 17 as a winner of a George Munro Scholarship.

DR. KING CRITICIZES FOREIGN POLICY

Last week he spoke to the Kinsmen Club in Saskatoon, outlining what he considered true patriotism should mean. It involved a critical analysis of British diplomacy. (Dr. King is not among those who think Chamberlain should have resisted Hitler to the point of war.) From that speech criticism arose again and "demands for his dismissal" became so powerful that he felt he could speak again only at the risk of losing his job or putting President Thomson of the university in an embarrassing predicament. He preferred neither alternative so he refused to speak at the meeting sponsored by the League for Peace and Democracy last night. That refusal was the occasion for his statement, published in The Sheaf today.

The Sheaf intends to obtain statements from the President and as many as possible of the Board of Governors. It is his hope that Dr. King may be allowed to resume, unhampered, stating his opinions on matters of international politics.

The Prime Minister and the Speaker and will deliver the Speech from the Throne. As usual his entourage will be picturesque, including two aides-de-camp, and several members of the Texas nobility, from which the Governor-General is descended.

To welcome the newcomers, the Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. Sally Macdonald, and the Prime Minister, the Hon. Al Rose, will be on hand, in addition to the speakers, who will soon be announced.

Campus Quiz Favours Female Cheer Leaders

Students Cast Votes for Co-Eds — Must Have "Oomph"

SCHOOLMEN SUPPORT IDEA

"What this college needs," says the result of a campus quiz conducted yesterday, "is a female frenzy leader." Of dozens of students questioned, only two co-eds and one male student expressed disapproval of the idea.

The others went farther than merely endorsing the idea; they offered suggestions, hints and generally showed themselves eager to co-operate.

One co-ed, Ella Wilson, III Victoria, expressed her willingness to lead the cheers. A first year medical student, Maynard Young, thought the idea was so good that he offered to donate his girl-friend.

"I think that a good jitterbug could do the task," he amplified. Mr. Young did not reveal his girl friend's address. The consensus was that life and colour would be added to the games through the influence of girl cheer leaders.

Certain qualities were demanded by students questioned. If the girl cheer leader were to conform with the qualifications of the student populace, she would be a good looking girl of the athletic type. As well as good looks and a trim figure, she must have plenty of "oomph."

Clothing was also considered as a vital necessity by all. Most would be pleased if the scream liner wore a white outfit and Varsity colours.

Trinity Dramatic Society Forms Entente With U.C. Players Guild

"To avoid over-production," said Douglas Hicks, President of the University College Players' Guild, which officially opened its 1938-39 season with a tea party in the Women's Union yesterday, "the Trinity Dramatic Society and the Guild have arranged to present their plays on alternate weeks, members of both organizations attending the plays."

There seems to be a growing entente between the societies which many members hope will lead to a fuller year in dramatics, said Hicks.

On the weeks between productions the Guild will hold "workshops" for those especially interested. At these, costumes, staging, and other theatre matters will be discussed, and experiments made. Plays will be read as well. The Guild directorate planned the "workshops" to bring to an organized state the great deal of informal discussion that they found followed many of the plays last year.

be: the New Testament records dealing with Jesus; the relevancy of Christianity to the problems of the world; the meaning and significance of the missionary task of the church; the value and place of worship; the relation of Christianity and world peace; personal problems of Christian life in the university; town planning and municipal problems as a background for detailed work in connection with unemployment and relief.

Seen as supplements to the curricular work of students, the discussions will be led by Dr. Wilfred Lockhart, Rev. Kingsley Joblin, Miss Clare Brown, and Raymond Booth.

EMMANUEL WELCOMES GRADUATE STUDENTS

The students entering Emmanuel College for graduate work from other universities were tendered a special welcome at a reception given the Emmanuel students and their wives by the Faculty-Wives Association in Emmanuel College library last night.

The new students were urged to make haste to enter into the larger life of Victoria University and the University of Toronto, by Dr. Wallace, Chancellor of Victoria University. He indicated that such a broader education was essential for those entering upon a course of study for the ministry. Principal and Mrs. Davidson and the Chancellor received the students, most of whom have only recently returned from their work on various home mission fields of Canada.

East House First Under Wire In Annual Residence Bed Race

While the total population of Whitney Hall, clad in dressing gowns, leaned out windows to get a better view, and inveterate Trinity pranksters tossed water bombs and light explosives on passers-by, a phalanx of East House sophomores and freshmen piloted a springed chariot down St. George St. to win the annual University Residence bed race and win the battered Nevins Cup.

On the stroke of twelve, midnight, three beds representing East House, North House and South House weighed anchor and shot away from the corner of Devonshire Place and Hoskins Avenue. Pushed by a dozen or so pyjamaed freshmen, each bed carried a sophomore jockey and was surrounded by a convoy of shouting sophomores. They were cheered around the corner of Hoskins Street by co-eds with their hair down, leaning from their windows in Whitney Hall. They were speeded on their way down St. George Street by "The Salt of the Earth" which hoisted from Trinity residence windows. Flash bulbs flashed, cars scuttled into laneways, as the beds careened down the street, pursued by scores of camp-followers. Fisticuffs, tumbles, and rattling springs featured the epic marathon. Striped pyjamas, polka dot pyjamas, green, red, orange, and purple pyjamas made it very pretty to watch.

In record time, the East House bed, pushed by fourteen freshmen and piloted by a jockey from second year Dentistry, Merrill Weicker, reached the finishing line—the College Street car tracks.

This is the second time in two years that the trophy, donated by a former student from New York, has been won by the East House chariot. Before that it was in the possession of South House. In the fourteen years before its capture by South House, it was won thirteen times by East House.

Following the race, the entrants hobbled and panted back to the Devonshire Place residence to swirl milk and gnaw sandwiches. Only one bed was intact—the East House bed. The others were transported back in pieces.

No injuries or fatalities were reported, although in the race last year, a student inadvertently slipped under an automobile and fractured his leg.

Football Ushers

Seasoned Players Advance to Quarter Final with Easy Wins

TWO UPSETS MARK PLAY

Play narrowed down to the quarter-finals in the U. of Toronto Intercollegiate tennis tournament at the Toronto Tennis Club yesterday morning.

Once again, last year's senior contenders proved their superiority by taking their victories in a fairly easy fashion. Bill Pigott experienced little difficulty in taking Ferguson, while Hall and Paul Snyder took their wins in a decisive manner. The Snyder-Ross Campbell match was interesting from a spectator's point of view, but the former was too steady for the inter- (Continued on page 4)

INTRAMURAL TRACK SET FOR THURSDAY

On Thursday, October 6th the Junior Intercollegiate Track Meet will be held, commencing at 1:30 p.m., sharp. Those eligible will be those who have never competed previously on senior or intermediate intercollegiate track and barrier teams. This ruling was passed yesterday by the Intramural Athletic Committee. This ruling does not disbar a member of an intermediate team, for example, who did not compete. All entries will be post entries, but every man must have had his physical examination or he will not be allowed to compete.

There will be forms in the Athletic Office, Hart House, and at the stadium where athletes may fill in their name and health card number. This must be done before any entry can be accepted. This meet will be conducted as part of the intramural contest for the T. A. Reed Trophy. Every man entered will score points for his faculty. There will be four places to count extra points for the Trophy besides helping to win the championship. The officials will be undergraduates and anyone wishing to help officiate should report to the track (Continued on page 4)

Frank O'Hara Scores Student Christian Movement as "Red"

VICTORIA COLLEGE PLAYED

Accusations made last night by an insurance broker of Port Huron that the Student Christian Movement in the University of Toronto was a hotbed of communism and that three professors were out and out reds, were refuted decisively by Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the university, when contacted last night.

According to press reports, Frank O'Hara, a Port Huron insurance broker, declared to a meeting of the Sarnia Rotary Club that Toronto was the principal centre for communistic activities in Canada and that the Student Christian Movement, especially in Victoria College, was distinctly communistic.

Communism, he said, had invaded many of the leading institutes of learning in the United States and Canada, including Toronto, McGill, and Manitoba Universities. Three professors at the University of Toronto, he told the Rotarians, were known communists. One, he amplified, made periodic visits to Moscow.

Referring to McGill University, O'Hara said that the Students' Dramatic Club there was also communistic.

A complete denial of the charges of the Port Huron insurance broker was issued last night by President Cody. He expressed not the slightest concern over the assertions.

"That is the sort of thing that is so easy to say and so frequently said, completely without foundation," he said. "People so recklessly pin the word 'communist' on those that are looking for some sort of socialistic reform. I know the overwhelming majority of the students have no tendency toward communism, in fact, as far as the students are concerned, I feel I can give any such charge a blanket denial."

"As far as the assertion that three professors of the staff are known communists is concerned," President Cody continued, "I haven't discovered any who are. I know there are one or two (Continued on page 4)

STUDENT COUNCIL FINDS MANY JOBS

At least 150 students at the University of Toronto have been provided with part-time jobs for the current academic year so that they may be financially able to acquire a university education. These jobs include those of waiters, ushers in concert halls, library attendants, and similar occupations, and have been provided to students by the employment service conducted by E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council.

Since the beginning of the term, the employment bureau has increased its scope and has exceeded all previous figures as far as placing of students in part-time positions is concerned. This year, Mr. Macdonald has found positions for students in nearly all the branches of the Toronto Public Library. Eight in all, have been supplied with work of this kind.

Restaurants, tea shops, hotels and similar enterprises require a great many waiters, and have had frequent recourse to the employment service of the S.A.C. These jobs do not require all the spare time of a student and (Continued on page 4)

LITTLE UNEMPLOYMENT

"German youths, though faced with many hardships, are without fear for the future," stated Dr. Hartmannshausen in an interview with The Varsity yesterday. "Economic conditions in Germany are such that every boy over eighteen knows that he will be provided for by the government."

Fraulein Hartmannshausen recently returned from Germany to resume her duties as don at a Victoria College residence. In a motor trip through Germany and Austria this summer she was impressed by the order maintained by the government.

"At the present time there is absolutely no unemployment," she said. (Continued on page 4)

ALTERATIONS MADE IN COUNCIL OFFICE

Because of the financial support of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, the offices of the Students' Administrative Council, long crowded and confining, have been enlarged to allow for the greater amount of space made necessary by increasing activities of the student organization.

Realizing that more spacious quarters were needed, the Board of Governors, with the co-operation of Dr. H. J. Cody, president of the university, authorized work to begin early in the summer. With the additional co-operation of the Board of Stewards of Hart House, the work was completed for opening of school this fall.

The main alteration effected was the transferring of the office of E. A. Macdonald, the secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., from the west of the office to the east end. The secretary's office and the reception room have been greatly increased in size.

Mr. Macdonald wishes to point out that the door previously used to enter the office, is now the wrong one. To get into the office, the door to the west must be used, he said.

NINE GRADUATE DOCTORS SIGN FOR CANCER COURSE

Nine graduate doctors have so far registered for the post-graduate course on cancer offered by the Faculty of Medicine in the University of Toronto, commencing today and continuing for a week. The course was limited to 20. Professors and well-known practitioners are in charge of the course, which consists of lectures, demonstrations and operations in the Banting Institute, the Toronto General Hospital, and St. Michael's Hospital. Cancer in the fields of surgery, gynaecology, otolaryngology, radiology and pathology is the subject of study.

Germany Bans S.C.M.

Word has just been received in the office of the S.C.M. in the University that the German S.C.M. has been forbidden by an official decree of the Third Reich. The official communication which appeared in the German press on August 19th indicated the action thus: "The Leader of the S.S. and Head of the German Police in the Ministry of the Interior has by a decree dated July 22, 1938, dissolved and forbidden the German Student Christian Movement and the German Women Student Christian Movement, as well as the Auxiliary Movements of both organizations. The decree is based on the first paragraph of the decree of the President of the Reich concerning the protection of the people and the State. All further activities, which represent an attempt to continue those organizations or a new founding in other forms with the same or similar purposes, are also forbidden on the basis of paragraph 4 of the same decree."

The German Student Christian Movement has through its history played an important part in the life of the German universities and its loss is a great blow to the World's Student Christian Federation. During the past years under the Hitler regime the German S.C.M. has taken an uncompromising and courageous stand for the Christian faith and has resisted the paganism of the new Germanic faith and the Aryan racial creed of National Socialism. It continued to hold its conferences and meetings in spite of police interference and fellow members of the S.C.M. here are confident that the German S.C.M. will remain as strong as ever and continue to find expression for its life in some new form.

The continuous reports of such high-handed actions on the part of the Reich, can have none other than the effect which they have upon the citizens of democratic countries. Of course Hitler in his speech a few days ago, made light of these things which the rest of the world makes a great fuss about, and explains that they are very small in comparison with the sufferings of a great people, forced out of their rightful place in society. In that he may be logical.

However, when a dictator gets the church, and organized religious bodies like the S.C.M., in a position where resentment is only natural, he must be very strong some place or very weak somewhere else.

It is All-University

To replace the old masquerade ball which for many years was one of the social functions of the campus, this year an all-university dance has been organized to take place the Friday night preceding the McGill rugby game. There is no dearth of dances, parties, or any other type of entertainment or amusement on the campus, but anything which is "all-university" is commendable.

For a long time it has been felt that the University itself, or at least some body of undergraduates representing the University should organize a dance such as is to be found on the campuses of other Canadian universities. Especially after rugby games is there felt to be a need for such an affair. Where fraternities and sororities are powerful, it is difficult for a college itself to "put over" a dance. But at Queen's University for example, anyone who has attended an after-the-game dance knows that it is Queen's, and the spirit present is not affected by any lesser loyalties to a social club bearing Greek letters, or a smaller college flag.

The masquerade ball was a popular ball in its day, but of recent years masquerades have become less and less popular. Now that it has gone, there is no reason why a bigger and better party cannot take its place. Any dance preceding a game hasn't got much chance of obtaining the coveted attendance of the team, as do the after-the-game affairs in the down-town hotels. However, if any inducement to secure the attendance of either football players, or McGill students, up to see the game, could be made, it would be worth-while and would tend to the popularity of both the dance and the Saturday performance at the Stadium.

Awake and Live

The Peace Pact of the Four Powers has done one important thing for student youth: it has made it clear that we must live for a cause rather than die for it. The Pact has not eradicated the causes which created the recent crisis; it has simply routed them for the time being. What Bunny Austin calls moral rearmament must begin with the individual today: university students are responsible for what they can do themselves, as individuals. Have an intelligent understanding of the working of our own political machine, of the social and economic problems in our own province; do we know more than the name of the Rowell Commission; and having thought courageously—not halting propaganda without applying reason—are we ourselves of such a character that we will give our convictions selfless expression?

Hitler is a step ahead of us in realizing that what a nation needs is an inspiration both of its people and its leader towards a common ideal: whether that inspiration is for getting or giving depends upon the quality of the thought of its people.

If we believe in everyday patriotism that reconciles order and freedom, that transcends political antagonism, if we see that the inspiration of leaders and people determine the policy of a nation, then, since we would have committed ourselves to die to prevent the success of a policy in which we did not believe, surely we are committed to live actively so that the policy in which we do believe may succeed.

Youth Movements and Peace

World youth movements take themselves very seriously. They are energetic and enthusiastic—essentially youthful. But from their proceedings there occasionally arise useful hints for those who claim to be more mature.

The recent World Youth Congress elicited youthful statements of sound social principles, a few of which are even today, eminently practical. They should not be overlooked but there are other by-products of youth organizations.

Youth movements as now constituted cannot stop war themselves. They never said they could. But their members in all countries can communicate. It was by employing modern methods of communication that Adolph Hitler won power and how holds it. One may scoff at "blarney", but today's greatest crises were conceived by just that stimulus. The youth movements of the world may yet be stronger than their non-members imagine... especially, if they find able leaders and wax militant.

Finance and leadership are the prime requisites. Hitler and Mussolini provided both for their gangs. Joseph Goebbels in My Part In Germany's Fight brags of how it was done. And several hundred thousand young people are showing ever greater interest in propaganda technique.

"When we see a woman with a cigarette between painted lips, with scarlet finger-nails, and yellow finger-tips, sitting on a stool in a hamburger teaching a cute but somewhat piqued two-year-old to sip pop out of a bottle without a straw, attempting to flirt with the hamburger disher, and talking in sentences decorated with lurid slang... well, when we see such a woman we begin to think that maybe Plato was right."

So far as our knowledge goes this column has in the past devoted itself largely to criticism, with occasional advance remarks about specific events; this year we purpose to extend its scope a little and comment from time to time on more general matters. From time to time means when (a) we have ideas, and (b) space permits.

Today, if we are to accept the report that Toscanini's passport has been cancelled and that he has been forbidden to leave Italy, it seems only decent that we should offer our condolences to the National Broadcasting Company, whose symphony orchestra, it appears, will have to muddle through this year without its star conductor. The orchestra is a good one, but no better than others which are heard regularly on the radio, and usually these others have the advantage of playing in a concert hall. This undoubtedly does things for the quality of their tone.

It seems to us, therefore, that the N.B.C. orchestra's most valuable function last year was that of bringing Toscanini back to America. The world's greatest conductor is an asset to any country, and it's easy to understand the attitude of the Italian government. But we feel that he ought to be a little more generous. —H.C.

SOPH-FROSH BANQUET CONCLUDES INITIATION

Last evening the initiation of University College freshmen was officially brought to a close at the annual Soph-Frosh banquet held in the Great Hall of Hart House. With toasts to the college and university, words of welcome and advice were given to the incoming year by Principal Wallace and Registrar McAndrew. The main address of the evening was delivered by J. B. Bickersteth.

Speaking of Sport

By Alan Harvey

SEASON OPENER

Queen's and Varsity, traditional rivals of the gridiron, have a date to keep this coming Saturday afternoon at Richardson Stadium. These friendly foes take up again an argument that ended last November in victory for Queen's, following a bitter eighty-minute struggle which saw the Blues separated from the Yates Cup by a single point.

During the off season the U. of T. forces appear to have been strengthened, while Queen's have lost several stars through graduation. The locals have about three players on hand capable of hoisting the pigskin with the best of them, in the persons of Cam Gray, Bee Rowland and Charlie Prince. Mr. Reeve does not appear to have a booter who can come close to any one of this quartet.

On performance the Blues hold a decided advantage. In two contests the Reeve team have been unable to gather more than a single point against Montreal Nationals and Ottawa Rough Riders, while the Blues came out of their only engagement to date with a 10-6 victory.

Stevens' pets will probably be in top shape for their grid debut. Doug Turner will probably start at snap, and Don Mumford, absent from last Saturday's matinee, is also scheduled to start.

WHAT PRICE INTERCOLLEGIATE FOOTBALL

When Varsity defeated Balmy Beach 10-6 last Saturday afternoon, they exploded forever a myth that has long been cherished by the sports-writing members of the Fourth Estate. That myth is the superiority of the O.R.F.U. and the Big Four to the Intercollegiate Union.

This writer was also completely sold on this false assumption. To me the Argos and the Beavers were several notches above the grid proletariat. In my book, for instance, the Beavers held a relation to college teams comparable to that of the Yankees and the Maple Leafs. I made idols, short years ago, of Pee Wee Chandler and Lionel Conacher and Frank Turville, and cast a disparaging eye on the feats of Long John Sinclair. Matching poor defenceless Varsity with those terrific Argos was like asking Dobbin to step six furlongs with War Admiral.

That was until the hapless students began belting your beloved Balmies around like breaking sticks. At first you laughed uneasily and explained, not very plausibly, that it was "just one of those things". Finally you admitted that you were prepared to concede superiority to Varsity if they should win the 1938 DeGruchy Cup from Balmy Beach.

You still thought you were pretty safe, so you made bets which gave you much the worst of it, Balmy Beach having been made the favourite. And you were still thinking comforting thoughts about the law of averages and Don Mumford being on the sidelines and the Sports Editor of your paper calling Varsity to win when Ted Jarvis picked a pass out of the air and hurtled over the line for a touch.

At the half with the score 10-0 in favour of the Blues you grinned a sickly grin over murky coffee and sallow sandwiches and predicted an eleventh hour rally.

Your voice sounded rather hollow, too, when you joined in the victory cheer and you told your friends that you knew Varsity would win, all the time, this was their year, and didn't McQuarrie play a good game.

P.S. We'll lay you 3-1 Varsity doesn't win the DeGruchy Cup next year.

SIDELINE SIFTINGS

Warren Stevens injected Lou Somers, his most persistent bench warmer, into the fray late in the fourth quarter Saturday. On the last play of the game Somers gathered in Box's lofty punt and raced down the sidelines for twenty yards, like a scared Seabiscuit in full flight.

Ponton's Beavers may have gone well against Argos in the first DeGruchy Cup game, but Saturday p.m. Alexander's band went ragtime . . . intercollegiate golfers who survived the qualifying round will play their remaining games at the York Downs Golf Club, instead of at the Woodbine course as previously stated in this column . . . just so you can have an excuse to cut this out and paste it in your bathroom for the privilege of seeing how wrong we were, we call Varsity to go through the schedule undefeated.

SIX-MAN FOOTBALL COMES TO VARSITY

Engineers Tackle Victoria on Thursday for First Demonstration

POPULAR IN SMALL SCHOOL

Something new in the realm of sports will be displayed on the back campus this Thursday, when S.P.S. will meet Victoria College in a game of six-man football. This will be a demonstration of a sport which has gained the fancy of all who have had the good fortune of seeing it played.

Mr. McCutcheon is quite certain that six-man football will make a hit in our university. It retains most of the rules allows for four substitutes. The rules held in regulation rugby. The teams allow body contact, tackling, forward passing, and scrimmage, all of which are in evidence in our present rugby.

The O.R.F.U. have taken up this pastime and are encouraging it to a great extent. The sport is well fitted for the smaller colleges who find it difficult to field an eleven-man team, and who have not enough funds to equip an entire regulation rugby team. If the students take to this form of rugby, it will be put in intramural competition as an interfaculty sport. Mr. McCutcheon would like to hear any suggestions or criticisms of this pastime.

FOUR COLLEGES ENTER SAILING CLUB REGATTA

Saturday, October 8th, is the date set for the annual dinghy regatta to be held here by teams representing McGill, Queen's, Royal Military College, and the University of Toronto sailing clubs.

Last year R.M.C. played host to the sailors for the regatta, but this year it will be possible for Toronto fans to witness the events with more ease.

The competing teams will be selected within the next few days and on Saturday morning and afternoon will compete in the eight dinghies supplied by members of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Mary Conlin

One advantage of writing men's sports is that the football team can always be relied upon to provide something interesting when there is a scarcity of news about other campus sports. Unfortunately, football is out of our line (technically speaking), which leaves us with very little to write about, since the tennis results in faculty play will not be completed until tonight.

We've been hearing now and then about the activities this year of the sporting greats who provided material for this column last year. Noticeably absent from tennis gatherings on the campus are Joyce Tenenbaum, of the intercollegiate team last year, who is mastering the advertising game at present; and Gerry Ryan, St. Mike's captain for the past few years. Gerry is specializing in the Physical Training course at the Ontario College of Education these days and considering the possibilities of basketball coaching this winter. Her chum and academic rival since high school days, Sunny McLaughlin, is a probationer at St. Michael's Hospital, where she is getting lots of exercise pacing the corridors. One free-thinking co-ed whom we shall miss this year is Margie Mickie, the Gravenhurst gal who introduced roller skating to the natives hereabouts. Pat Downey,

U.C.'s badminton starlet with Johnny Marshall last year in the intercollegiate meet, is around town and keeping up with her badminton nicely, thank you.

The plans for entertaining the visiting tennis players here over the October 14th week-end are to be completed this Friday when the Athletic Directorate holds its first meeting. The teams will be the guests of the various residences and the Tennis Club is planning a social program guaranteed to keep them happy.

We hear that Marian Walker, youthful golfing sensation hereabouts, is registered at U.C. this year. Her presence is a decided advantage to any golf team, and with such stars as Phil. McSweeney, and Fran. Barbour, not to mention a few of the best, U.C. are sweeping the field at the interfaculty more confident than ever before of meet.

The other colleges, however, are counting on the skill of freshmen to gain the lead in their search for this title. We have news of sturdy material at St. Mike's and St. Hilda's too, but this chapter will be continued tomorrow.

WOMEN'S BOOK EXCHANGE REPORTS GOOD SALES

According to Miss A. E. Parkes, sales in the women's book exchange have been excellent. Since people are being more careful about bringing in the books required in this year's courses, the books are sold immediately.

Both volumes of Representative Poetry are much in demand and there is a long waiting list for all first year books. Books that are not sold are sent to the Salvation Army for distribution. Miss Parkes drew attention to the war in Spain which is even affecting the sale of books here. "Because of the war," she said, "getting Spanish editions of books, Don Quixote for example, has been one of the greatest difficulties we have encountered."

ST. MIKE'S SOPH-FROSH DECLARE DAYS' TRUCE FOR HIKING PARTY

While the formal conclusion of initiations is still one whole day away, a truce in the Soph-Frosh enmities was declared yesterday to allow both factions to go on a hike through the Don Valley district.

Depending as they had, on a comparatively mild form of initiation such as the co-eds of Victoria College are subjected to, the first year co-eds of St. Mike's welcomed the little pause in the warfare. For the whole afternoon, they were forced to do only such undignified tasks and courtesies in undignified tasks as the collection of wood for the fire, making the coffee and remaining humble and courteous in the presence of their academic elders. A joint outing for the entire college, the annual hike was cancelled last year on account of inclement weather.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS HOLD OLD BOYS' REUNION

The Toronto section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers held a well-attended reception and Old Boys' reunion in the Hart House Main Room at eight o'clock on Friday evening.

Chairman for the evening was Mr. W. J. Gilson. The present members, ex-members, and prospective members spent the evening singing, reviewing memoirs, looking over old photos, listening to short speeches, and being entertained by a magician.

GERMANY DECLARED READY FOR FUTURE

"There is even a scarcity of labour in some sections. At eighteen years of age German youths are placed in labour camps for six months and then conscripted for military service for two years."

Dr. Hartmannshagen found the roads through Germany in excellent condition. A speed limit is unknown and the tiny cars racing at breakneck speed across the countryside where towns are unknown.

A new factory, it has been announced, will be opened very soon in Germany to construct automobiles for as little as nine hundred and ninety marks or two hundred and fifty dollars so that all Germans may possess them.

Regarding the German occupation of Austria, Dr. Hartmannshagen said little more than that the people seem to welcome the Hitler regime. "They threw flowers on our car when they saw its German license," he said. "Very little is changed for the common people except laws regarding divorces which were never permitted in Austria before. Whether the existing military laws are beneficial to the young people I cannot say. It depends on the individual."

shirt should be worn, and another declared indefinitely that she should wear "something more intriguing" than the Western co-ed drum-major wore.

Clark Muirhead, I.S.P.S., was the only male to voice complete dissent against having girls aiding with the cheerleading at Varsity. "They have not the spirit of the man," he declared, "and I believe there would be more cheers before the girls got under way and more laughter afterwards. It would distract one's attention from the game."

Other S.P.S. men, however, took a favouring stand. Jack Green, I, an intermediate Varsity man, remarked that new life and colour needed to be added to the games, by means of reformation of the cheering section.

"Along with the girls should come swagmen for the cheering section," was Regan Kirkwood's, III S.P.S., view.

C. P. McShane, III St. Mike's, proved to be the ladies' staunchest supporter. Formerly a student at Syracuse University, he claimed that providing the girls chosen have good looks and plenty of "oomph," it will go over as big at Varsity as it does down there. "I believe 3 or 4 girls of the athletic type should be chosen and dressed smartly. However, boys and other such gymnastics should not be carried too far," he further stated.

Ninety per cent of the men questioned were hearty in favour of woman suffrage in the cheerleading field, believing that increased attendance and volume in cheering would follow.

Two, although in favour, were dubious about the propriety of such a course and Arthur Gibson, I Trinity, remarked that he wanted "to see them adequately clothed."

J. Hess, III Forestry, speaking for a group from the senior faculty, remarked that "While at present Forestry students as a whole do not attend the games I feel sure that more would attend if grass-skirted co-ed cheerleaders were offered as an inducement."

Bob Summers, II Meds: "Women have an elevating effect. They would encourage the players to do or die and make that Varsity line see red."

Bob Arthur and J. Armstrong, also of Meds, thought that the idea should be given a trial and were in favour of flashy costumes preferably form fitting. A sentiment among the feminine population of Varsity is overwhelmingly in favour of having girl cheerleaders to lend colour and enthusiasm to the rugby games during the fall campaign. Only two girls cast votes against the idea.

Barbara Grey, Trinity I, said that she would yell for men but that girls would leave her unenthused.

Marg Glover, U.C. III, couldn't imagine herself leading cheers but approves the plan.

All the girls interviewed claimed that they admired the co-ed drum major with which Western favoured Varsity field between halves of last year's. The general feeling among the co-eds favoured a brief costume in blue and white. Kay Scott, U.C. III, enlarged on this opinion by saying that the girls who led the cheers would have to "let themselves go".

Events that make most use of student work are the rugby games. Since the privileges allowed to the student were increased last year in a reorganized athletic fee, attendance at the rugby games increased to such an extent that extra ushers and marshalls were required. These were recruited from the ranks of unemployed students. Forty ushers and eight marshalls are employed each Saturday when there is a rugby game.

Since the concert season has not yet been started, positions as ushers and so on have been scarce to date. When the season gets into full swing, said Mr. Macdonald, many students will be able to make the odd dollar or two ushering and waiting at tables.

Editorial work was found for one student when the agency was notified by a semi-monthly sport magazine that an editor was needed. As yet, no announcement has been made regarding the final selection of the editor. Two students applied for the position.

First year students are greatly in demand by householders who require certain domestic jobs done. For taking care of furnaces, doing odd jobs and so on, a student may earn his board and room.

So far, said Mr. Macdonald, the greatest number of students have been supplied with this work.

today between four and six-thirty and hand in their names to Fred Rowell.

The meet will be wide open with no faculty ruling a favourite, Nick Laidlaw and Prodrick are the outstanding representatives of Trinity College and Victoria in the sprints. There are a great number of new men in the weights. Watt of Meds is the outstanding middle distance runner. Wood of the School and Orr of Meds are the hurdling favourites. A large entry list is expected and many men who have not been out to practice will be entered.

Prodrick, Wood and Watt are favourites for the senior team. This meet, it is hoped, will serve as an indication of what new material there is for the track and barrier teams as well as providing those who are not of senior calibre a chance to score points for their faculties.

mediate performer, and Snyder's two-handed backhand, plus a remarkable steadiness, proved to be the deciding factor.

However, all was not sweetness and light during the day, and two upsets were recorded. Bob Young, formerly of McMaster, smashed his way to a win over Al Phillips, of last year's second squad. Also Bill Small upset Gord Shorter's applicant to the tune of 6-3, 8-6.

It has now been verified that Dr. Art Ham will be available to coach the news to the teams chosen. There is a possibility that the semi-finals and the net squads this year, which will be good finals may be played at the new Trinity courts, but today's matches will be played at the Toronto club.

Results—Whitting def. Hutchison 6-2, 6-0; Piggot def. Ferguson 6-2, 6-0; Young def. Phillips 6-2, 6-1; Snyder def. R. Campbell 6-4, 6-3; Seagram def. McGoey 6-3, 6-1; Small def. Shorter 6-3, 8-6; Nash def. Haig 4-6, 8-6, 6-2; Hall def. Ferguson 6-3, 6-0.

Wednesday's matches—9 a.m.—Snyder vs. Young, Seagram vs. Small.

11 a.m.—B. Hall vs. Nash.

12—Piggot vs. L. Whitting.

at Victoria who are socialists and one or two in other parts of the university.

"But one man at Victoria—the one who has to bear the brunt of such charges—is anything but a communist. He's miles and miles from it. He is an extreme kind of an individualist. I personally don't agree with most of his political views, especially his views in regard to the relationship of Canada with the Mother Country in the event of war. But then, there are lots of others who do agree with him. There is a great deal of difference of opinion throughout Canada and right in the Dominion Cabinet."

"Some of these people are members of the C.C.F. I don't know any one who is a communist."

President Cody recalled that a few years ago some students tried to form a communist club in the university, but that there were not enough communist students to elect officers, so the idea was dropped. He thought that was a pretty good indication of the attitude of the student body.

"There used to be a few old Jews inclined that way," he added. "But they saw that Russian communism was as totalitarian and as repressive as the totalitarianism in Central Europe. I think even in the city there are comparatively few Jews who have communist tendencies. They know that they receive pretty fair treatment in British countries."

Chancellor E. W. Wallace of Victoria University laughed. "I haven't heard anything about communism in Victoria. If there were anything of that sort, it seems to me that I would have heard about it," he said.

Charges of Communism Ridiculed at Victoria

Authorities and Students Alike Regard Accusations
as Joke

D'HARA MISTAKEN

An attitude of open ridicule was taken yesterday with regard to the accusation that the Student Christian Movement, especially in Victoria College, was a hotbed of Communism made by Frank O'Hara, a Port Huron insurance broker, at a meeting of the Sarnia Rotary Club, Tuesday night.

Rev. W. C. Lockhart, General Secretary of the S.C.M. here, considered the charges absolutely absurd.

"Mr. O'Hara," he said, "is accusing the movement of dishonesty, as though we were Communists masquerading as Christians."

"Our purpose is to present the challenge of Christianity to the entire University, and expose the weaknesses of secularism and paganism. In the Movement, because it is a fellowship of all who are willing to test the reality of the Christian faith. However, as far as I am aware there are no members of the Communist party who are active members in the Movement."

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

MUNICH PACT DENOUNCED

London: Winston Churchill led the attack against Prime Minister Chamberlain's four-power pact, created at Munich. Mr. Churchill declared it was total defeat, and meant a loss of British prestige, and German European domination.

STEWART WINS ELECTION

Toronto: Mr. William J. Stewart, former mayor of Toronto, was conceded the Parliam. Riding by-election last night within an hour after the polls had been closed. Mr. Stewart, under the Conservative banner, gained a majority of over 5,000 over Russel Harvey, C.C.F. candidate, who ran second.

YANKEES BEAT CUBS

Chicago: The world champions, New York Yankees, won the first game of the World Series yesterday afternoon by defeating the Chicago Cubs, and big Bill Lee by the score of 3-1. The Yanks are after their third straight World Series title and will place their hopes of winning the second game, by pitting "Goofy" Gomez against dubious "Dizzy" Dean.

Formal Ceremony Marks Close Of Initiations for U.C. Girls

Today first year girls of University College are free. From now on they shall be distinguished from sophs only by the classes they attend. No longer will they have to wear the distinguishing colours which announced to the world that they were green as the back campus. Never again will they have to walk around with their names emblazoned on their lapels.

Preceding the formal initiation a number of short plays were presented by the freshmen and the actresses in the skirts, despite the fact that they performed on very short notice, were said by the seniors to have reached the heights of dramatic achievement.

All the plays had one common feature—the fact that the audience roared with laughter throughout each one. The girls in the skirt which brought forth the most applause were rewarded

A. RANKIN ELECTED S. A. C. PRESIDENT

New President Formerly Active in Various University Activities

Alex Rankin, B.Comm., was elected President of the Students' Administrative Council at its opening meeting yesterday, succeeding to the position held by Dr. Frank McGinnis, according to an announcement from the council.

Mr. Rankin, who graduated last term, engaged in a variety of activities during his undergraduate days. Besides his work as vice-president of the Students' Administrative Council, he took an active interest in athletics, was a prominent member of the Commerce Club, and in his final year was President of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society.

For three seasons he was a member of the Senior Intercollegiate Track Team, and was always interested in the welfare of the track and harrier clubs.

After finishing his course last year, Mr. Rankin took an extended trip to Europe, but he has now settled down in an accountant's office, which will be his headquarters for some time to come.

CO-EDS RELUCTANT TO LEAD CHEERS

The problem is still unsolved. But the solution is becoming evident. Judging from various opinions gathered around the campus officialdom, it does not appear likely that a trim, pretty co-ed will lead the cheering section at Varsity games this fall. It does not appear likely that the Big Blue team will be spurred on to do or die by the hoots and hollers of a nice, short-skirted blonde.

The problem of finding a girl who would be willing to act as a cheer leader is not to be solved easily. Expert advice, however, was given by a brown-eyed, tall, brunette from St. Mike's, Lorna Smith, who brought cheers out of the grandstand like a Houdini last year at the final inter-faculty game between Victoria and St. Mike's. Lorna doesn't think much of the idea. She knows.

According to E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., the organization which appoints the cheer leaders, it is not likely that co-ed leaders will even be considered.

READER'S DIGEST IS FAVOURED MOST AMONG STUDENTS

Fashion Magazines Deemed Popular Among Women Undergraduates

MAGAZINES AVIDLY READ

The Reader's Digest is the most battered, torn, dog-eared magazine on campus common room tables, it was learned from a survey of Hart House, Wymilwood, Women's Union and residence house committees. In Victoria and Whitney Hall women's residences house committees selected by the girls themselves and advised by their dean, choose the subscription list for the year. In most cases, this was just being completed.

The librarian in St. Hilda's residence also relies upon popular opinion. Hart House, of course, can cater to almost any interest in its members, allowing for art, camera, Canadian and current event periodicals besides those completely of an entertaining nature. Even so, they give four stars to the Reader's Digest, Magazine Digest, Illustrated London News, Life, New Yorker and New York Times Weekly, the first eight of their list of sixty.

The women's common rooms, having more limited resources, curtail their subscriptions to those giving most satisfactory relaxation, although the St. Hilda's librarian asserts that interest in current events is very keen and that the New York Times Weekly is badly battered at the end of the week. Besides the Reader's Digest and Illustrated London News, they intend to take L'Illustration and Stage.

Whitney Hall and the Women's Union give Reader's Digest, Vogue, Punch, Life and Mayfair the greater share of attention. Atlantic Monthly, Illustrated London News and Manchester Guardian Weekly also appear on the prospective list.

TRAVELLING STUDENTS TO ADDRESS V.C.F.

'Security' will be the subject of Jocelyn Ritchie of III U.C., who spent last year travelling in France and Germany, when she speaks in Wymilwood this afternoon at the V.C.F. tea, to which freshmen are especially invited.

Ian MacLeod, Vic III, who comes from Formosa, a part of the Japanese Empire which has suffered from Chinese air raids, will take 'Purpose' for his subject, and Arthur Custance, IV U.C., will deal with the question of 'Forgiveness'. Each of these brief statements will be made in the light of a faith in a living Saviour.

U.C. ELECTION RESULTS

Voters representing a fair proportion of the population of University College yesterday elected the 472 executive and decided the winner of the by-election for the position of literary director of University College Literary and Athletic Society.

The new president of the freshman year is Maurice Aykroyd. In the by-election George Stoddart, who was social director last year, polled 78 votes to cop the position of literary director.

The complete vote is as follows:
Literary Director (by-election):
Austen McIlnoye, 28.
George Stoddart, 78 (elected).
Assistant secretary-treasurer:
Eric Hardy 64 (elected).
Bob Furusson, 37.
President 472 Executive:
Maurice Aykroyd, 21 (elected).

INSURANCE FIRMS REFUSE POLICIES TO COLLEGE MEN

Girl and Flask Combination Said to Account for Frequent Mishaps

TEEN-AGED DANGEROUS

"Most auto insurance firms are wary of insuring college boys because of the risk of getting the campus cut-up on their list," said W. G. Robertson, general manager of the Ontario Motor League, yesterday.

"It is the girl and flask combination and the general irresponsibility of youth, apparently, that account for the high frequency of accidents in the lower age brackets," continued Mr. Robertson, commenting on the fact that many people in Ontario are unable to obtain policies on their cars.

Mr. MacDonald of the American Automobile Insurance Company, when approached on the subject, said that out of 200 firms in Ontario, only one issues its policies on an occupational rating basis and that that is the only one refusing policies to students as such.

"The hesitancy of other firms," said Mr. MacDonald, "is merely because the so-called teen-aged drivers have statistically the most dangerous record."

VICTORIA PRESENTS 66TH ANNUAL 'BOB'

At eight o'clock next Tuesday night, the curtain in Hart House Theatre will be raised for the presentation of the 66th annual 'Bob', the biggest, best performance ever seen by Victoria freshmen, sophomores and their guests.

The "Bob" is the oldest tradition in Victoria College history. Begun in 1872, it has developed from a small gathering of chestnut-toasted to its present streamlined version. The purpose of today's "Bob" is twofold, namely of formally initiating the incoming freshman class and of honouring the memory of Robert Beare. With a colourful tradition behind them, this year's Bob committee has worked hard in an effort to present what bids fair to be an outstanding evening's performance.

Although in 1929 and 1930 the "Bob" degenerated into a musical comedy it staged a comeback and for the past few years has been conducted in traditional fashion, full of humorous skits, take-offs, and singing. Ross Dunford, director of the "Bob", has cleverly patterned the program to follow those of past years and at the same time infused it with up to date music to give us a streamlined version of that time-honoured affair—"the Bob".

Music will be provided by Fred Evis and his orchestra. A new feature will be innovated, a march of time event, tracing the history of the "Bob" from its inception. This event was planned several years ago but never materialized because of the limited facilities of Burwash Hall. The move to Hart House Theatre has eliminated this difficulty and a well-rounded program has thus been arranged.

Tickets for the "Bob" can be obtained in Alumni Hall any day this week.

Canadians Better Fed Than English Cousins

SCIENTIFIC TRENDS SEEN AS WEAKNESSES

Return to God and Christ
Viewed as Basis for World Community

ISMS MUZZLE THINKERS

"The weakness of our democratic system is the scientific trend of our mind which is impartial to everything," said Chancellor E. W. Wallace, at the S.C.M. Squash in Wymilwood last night.

"Totalitarianism is strong," he declared. "In its provision for wholehearted abandon to definite courses of action. Our open-mindedness is only a half-way house. We must work to definite convictions. The disasters of the last decade have shaken our confidence in fixed and firm things. We pinned our hopes for world community to a political league and it vanished as a cloud or dream, to the stabilizing of international trade and credit, and it failed, to education, and a world-wide fellowship of scholarship, and in Germany today every independent thinker is exiled or muzzled, and Italian professors are told what to teach and what not.

Perhaps we are forced back to one God and the Lord Jesus Christ, for a more enduring basis for world community. A Chinese Christian doctor, bound and persecuted by the Japanese, teaches his children to treat the Japanese Christians as fellows. In all our study of Christianity and its implications we cannot escape our Christian responsibility. For to a great many members the Movement represents the Christian religion.

In calling the meeting to order, Bill Fennell addressed the assembly as "Dear brother: Red". He asserted that the Chancellor's two interests at Vic were the S.C.M. and the Music Club, but Dr. Wallace corrected that his chief interest was scholarship, even to the Indian "B.A. plucked" type. Humorously he said, "I am here to hear what I have been reported as not having heard in Victoria."

Definite Nutrition Policy Seen Advisable for Canada

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS

"The movement in nutrition is the second greatest movement in public health," said Sir Edward Mellanby, K.C.B., M.D., F.R.S., Secretary-General of the Medical Research Council of Great Britain, speaking on "Nutrition" to a large audience in Convocation Hall last night.

"It is second in importance only to the sanitation movement of the nineteenth century, which led to the elimination of diseases such as malaria and smallpox. Equally great improvements can be expected in the future as a result of the present nutrition movement," continued the famed nutritive expert.

Sir Edward pointed out that Canadian people are, on the whole, better fed than those in Great Britain, but there is still room for considerable improvement. There is a great difference in the standard of health between the poor and the well-to-do, he added, with the mortality rate among the former much higher. Especially are they more susceptible to such diseases as bronchitis, and tuberculosis, while appendicitis and diabetes are more prominent among the wealthy.

The first meeting of the Students' Administrative Council for the year 1938-39 was held in the Women's Council Room, 82 University College.

The following items of business were transacted:

1. Election of Mr. Alex. Rankin, U.C. '38, as President of the Council.
 2. Appointments to The Varsity staff: Managing Editor, Mr. Seaborn Albright; News Editor, Mr. Douglas Elliott; Women's News Editor, Miss Betty Kirk; Sports Editor, Mr. Bernie Shiffman; Women's Sports Editor, Miss Margaret Conlin; Feature Editor, Mr. L. W. Weingarten; Exchange Editor, Mr. Frank Shuster; Art, Music and Drama Editor, Mr. Herbert Cowan.
 3. Appointment of Mr. Jack J. Brown, Vic '39, as Photographic Editor of Torontonians.
 4. Appointment of Mr. Ted Macdonald, U.C. '39, as head cheerleader, and of Messrs. Ames, Dobson and McCormick as his assistants.
 5. Acceptance of auditor's report for 1937-38.
 6. Acceptance of budget of Committee on Sporting Activities.

Many Dignitaries will Attend First Session of U.C. Parliament

This afternoon will witness the opening of the first session of the Parliament of University College, in the common room at 4 o'clock. His Excellency Lord Bowen of St. George and Davenport will arrive in state.

Lord Bowen will be accompanied by two aides-de-camp. The senior aide-de-camp will be none other than Quartermaster Sergeant McLaughlin. The junior aide-de-camp will be Lieutenant Colonel Douglas Morton, V.C., D.S.O., etc. There will also be in attendance a detachment from the band of the local regiment.

Viscount Bowen is expected to arrive sharply at four o'clock with his full entourage. Immediately on his arrival he will be escorted to the chamber by Prime Minister Allan Rose and further supported by the leader of the Opposition, Miss Sally Macdonald. From usually unpeppable sources it is reported that among the ceremonies attendant upon the vice-regal arrival will be an inspection of the C.O.T.C. band during its daily parade. At the conclusion of the ceremonies a lusty salvo of twenty-one guns will emanate from the ancient artillery on Observation Hill.

A worthy successor to such prominent speakers in the past as R. A. Bell, recently appointed secretary to the leader of the Conservative Party, the Honorable R. J. Manion, and Edward Shortt, who toured Great Britain as one of the two members of the Canadian Universities Debating Team, is Mr. George Stoddart, well known university debater.

Defensive Warfare

Of late years it has become popular to look upon any possible war as something that would be bloodier, glastier, and deadlier than ever before. More than one speaker has created terrific effects by stating in unqualified terms, that another war would absolutely wipe out civilization.

In glowing terms they have painted pictures of London, Paris, Berlin, New York and Toronto being blown to bits, all the great art galleries and libraries of Europe lost, and in the words of one imaginative enthusiast the "streets of Toronto running rivers of blood. Magazine subscribers have caught the imagination of the public and made fortunes selling articles about how new-fangled gases would penetrate all gas masks, and little bottles of germs would be emptied over great cities and wipe out civilian populations with horrid and unnamable diseases. The trouble is, germs will bite black men as quickly as red men, and the wind is always apt to change.

But germs will bring results all right, but they will be the same results as in the last war. Germs are always present and if the conditions are conducive they will work fast. In the Great War there were two civilian deaths to every military death. And the experts agree that in another war the civilians are going to take the brunt more than ever.

The fact is that the arts of defensive warfare have increased much more rapidly than those of offensive warfare. While they have been making the poison gases better, they have been making gas masks a whole lot better. While the aeroplanes are being made bigger, faster and more deadly, the anti-aircraft guns have become perfected to the state that they can literally spray the sky. A smart pilot could dash in and bomb London, but he would have to be more than smart to get away with it.

The Spanish War has been going on for a long time, and yet the new-fangled devices haven't seemed to make a very great effect. And there isn't any doubt that if any of the great powers of Europe had had them they would have been used before now. Even the Chinese, who are not civilized in the arts of modern warfare seem to be waging a fairly successful battle against the well-equipped Japs.

It might be possible to go in and drop bombs on a capital every day, but life would go on, and it would take a good many bombs to wipe out a nation so that a new government could move in. The chances are that the next war will be won or lost by an economic blockade, or a slow starvation, and the climax should be an internal revolution.

War is still the expedient of uncivilized creatures, but the paradox seems to be that the more civilized a nation is, the more efficient methods of performing mass murder it has. And in a foolish old world it seems impossible to use the experience of the centuries to prevent us doing things which hold back the wheels of time a decade or so in every generation.

An Expensive Party

In yesterday's by-election, Wm. J. Stewart was elected with an outstanding majority to a seat in the Queen's Park legislature. Some time ago when it was assumed that Mr. Stewart would be the Conservative candidate, the Liberals withdrew their candidate so that Mr. Stewart, the party whip, would be assured a place in the assembly. This was a fine gesture on the part of the Liberals, who realized the value of Mr. Stewart to the opposition.

Mr. Stewart served the city of Toronto so long as mayor, and has proven himself such a valuable public man, that any party should recognize his worth and be glad to see him represent a part of the city. The extra seat meant little to the Liberals, and an acclamation would have spared the government a considerable sum of money. However, the money had to be spent, for the C.C.F. party insisted upon running a candidate, although they must have held out very little hope of winning, if any.

Although a C.C.F. in the House would be a fine thing for the party, competing in campaigns, and enforcing by-elections merely for the sake of publicity paid for by the public, is a foolish pastime for any party.

Don't Block The Door

There is an item in architecture which is quite apparent on this campus almost totally by virtue of its great numbers. It might also be added that sometimes this item is important because of its beauty and sometimes it is worthy of notice, at least, because of vast amounts of labour responsible for its existence. The item in question is a "door".

Doors are fine things. People have become accustomed to using them, since they seem to be one of the necessary things in our lives. One goes into a building through a door and when one has dispensed with his business in that building, one makes his exit through one of these things, too. A door.

Some doors are beautiful and some are somewhat drab-looking, some are wide and yet others are quite narrow, some of them swing but then again others slide, some have windows in them and others have not, some creak and others have the hinges well-oiled, some are heavy and require a great deal of strength to open while others are comparatively light in structure and open at the push of a finger, most doors have locks—but considering all these things doors serve a common purpose. A person usually expects to make an entrance or an exit by a door.

University College has quite a number of doors. They range in importance from the front door, through the class-room door and basement door categories, to the back door. Some of these are quite ugly but yet the front door is one of the most beautiful on the campus and carries a great deal of tradition behind it. It has wonderfully carved facings at each side. However, considering everything it still serves the purpose of a door—when one is able to push one's way through it.

It seems customary each morning for a large number of eds and co-eds to congregate in the U.C. rotunda. Some of them don't seem satisfied to congregate in that place so they choose themselves a nice cosy spot in the centre of the door-way and the group spreads out from this focus. In a short while quite a number of people have assembled themselves and are enjoying each other's company by chatting, and reminiscing, perhaps.

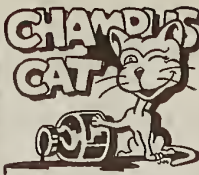

Now it is almost a physical impossibility to shove or push one's way through the aforementioned door when such a condition of assemblage exists. Two or three hundred people an hour find it necessary to patronize this item of architecture through a morning of lectures.

In view of this necessity wouldn't it be a fitting thing to perhaps leave passage through this doorway vacant of loiterers, and enable the many hundreds walking hastily to and from lectures in various buildings hither and thither on the campus, to make an unpretentious entrance and wend their diverse ways to lecture rooms? And then allow them to wend their ways out of the building when they find it necessary to leave?

New Council President

The Varsity wishes to extend congratulations to Alex Rankin, who was elected President of the Students' Administrative Council in its opening meeting yesterday afternoon. We are especially glad that Mr. Rankin, who has had a very active college career understands this paper very well and has always taken a keen interest in its work. Last year he was Vice-President of the S.A.C., and of course has an intimate knowledge of the work undertaken by that organization.

In assuming his new position he succeeds Dr. Frank McGinnis, who has held this responsible and enviable position for the past two years. To be President it is necessary to be a graduate of the University.

ANSLUSS!

Only a few far-seeing people stopped to think when it was announced in October, 1938, that the Department of Psychology had annexed four sorority houses to allow for its expansion.

These people became much worried, since it had not been long since Psychology had been recognized as a science at all. It had expanded steadily, and these far-seeing individuals feared for the future when this act was announced.

They had not long to wait, for in 1943, out of a clear sky, the Department announced that it would take over Hart House for its own use. It had now grown so powerful that opposition was useless, so accordingly Hart House was annexed, the Varsity office was padlocked, and the staff thrown into the swimming pool. They retired to the outskirts of the campus and continued publishing in secret, however.

Not satisfied with this, the Department announced in 1945 that psychology would henceforth be taught at Victoria College. This move was so radical that it caused an uprising, which was speedily put down by the powerful department.

In 1950 the Department took over the Park Plaza. Next morning the Varsity appeared with a mourning border, and half the staff committed suicide.

By this time students entering the University of Toronto (since the benevolent department still allowed this name to be used) could register in the following subjects: Psychology Ia, psychology Ib, psychology Ic, psychology Id, and psychology Ie. An optional subject, psychology If, was permitted.

If only the masses had listened in October, 1938!

An Apology

Before the flood of correction and recrimination starts to pour in we hasten to explain that we know all about the later developments in the Toscanini situation. He got out of Italy, and all is well.

After learning this we were eminently successful in having our remarks removed from Tuesday's paper, but made the mistake of taking for granted their exclusion from yesterday's issue also. Our consternation and remorse are of course unbounded, and we take this opportunity of getting out from under. We admit, however, that our opposition as to the Italian government's motive was entirely wrong. —H.C.

Photography

Yousuf Karsh, one of our outstanding Canadian portrait photographers, has a group of pictures on show at Simpson's art galleries. Mr. Karsh was born in Armenia but came to Canada as a refugee when only a boy. He started photography under his uncle and later he came a pupil of Garo.

The chief characteristics of Mr. Karsh's style are his strong tones and his unusual backgrounds. His picture of Madge MacBeth, taken with a backlight which throws a strong pattern of shadows on a translucent curtain in the centre background, illustrates this latter point.

One of the best pictures is Elixir. Its subject is a large flask within which are three shadowy dancers, symbolic of the "elixir" of life inside. As to how it was made that is difficult to say. Because of the elongated distortion of the figures, it was more likely done by double printing than double exposure. An effective portrait, and one that has been shown in several salons, is his picture of Nicolas Has. This photography shows Mr. Karsh's partiality for strong tones, as indeed do most of the other pictures in the show, there being only two or three pictures with a short tonal scale among the hundred or more shown. The composition of this picture is based on the well-known diagonal. The head is in the upper left-hand corner and inclined so that it nicely balances the longer diagonal of arm and shoulder. The texture of skin and hair is well rendered and the character well portrayed.

Excellent texture is also shown in the gowns of several fashionable brides and in City of Straws, a striking picture in the commercial style, but which has only a momentary attraction.

Keith Jackson

Art Gallery

At a well attended gathering in the Art Gallery on Wednesday noon Lawrence Harris Jr., young Toronto artist, put forward views on art, some of which were very typical of artistic trends among the younger group of painters. At the outset of the talk, Mr. Harris emphasized the fact (which has been obvious to the many who have seen his pictures in the Art Gallery) that he has purposely left out detail. Especially in his two canvases "Spring Foliage" and "Autumn Landscape" he has aimed at a simplicity of design and mass which, he says, gives them a "posterior" feeling. He stated that the main purpose of these is decorative.

At art school in Boston his attention was turned to the painting of portraits, and the main portraits in his present exhibition reflect that training. With the exception of 3 negro studies, the sitters for his portraits were recruited from park benches in lower downtown Toronto. His landscapes find their origin in the region about Schomberg, just north of Toronto.

But Mr. Harris stated that at the present time he was more interested in landscapes because of the freedom of treatment that is possible in this field. He deplored pure photographic imitation and pointed out that his paintings were interpretations. He had altered colours and positions, and as Mr. Lismer stated last year, believed that it was up to the artist to improve on nature, re-arranging the figures in his picture to suit his own particular needs and aims.

The enthusiasm being shown in these noon-hour talks has led the Art Committee of Hart House to arrange that as many as possible of the artists who are to display here this season shall come to review their work to those many who are interested in hearing the artist as well as admiring his work. CHARGES RIDICULED

Bill Fennell, president of the Student Christian Movement at Victoria College, the college named particularly in Mr. O'Hara's charges, laughed at the assertions. "We are certainly not Communists at Victoria," he said, "unless our aim to improve conditions makes us so. I think the charge is ridiculous." Many other students at Victoria were inclined to treat Mr. O'Hara's remarks as a joke.

Chancellor Wallace in reply to the charges said: "I am sorry to see an old and discredited story has turned up again. As far as Victoria College is concerned, what was said at Port Huron is not in accordance with the facts. Members of the staff are carefully selected for their scholarship and Christian character. The Administration does not presume to investigate the political or other private opinions of staff members but in the common life of the college it is not difficult to know their general views. I can categorically state that there is no member of the Victoria staff that is a communist."

"As for the S.C.M., I happen to know rather intimately what it is doing. Its members do discuss frankly and freely matters which concern the well-being of our people. They are concerned to know the principles of Christianity and to see these principles applied to the life of our time. Certainly there are many varieties of opinion among its members, but it is thoroughly Christian and in that it is far from being communist."

ories per day, including a good supply of protective food stuffs, of which potatoes are one of the best and cheapest." He added, as an interesting sidelight, that invariably the persons who are fond of sweets and desserts have very little use for alcohol.

Among the necessary vitamins for good health, it was explained, are vitamin B-1, which is present in large quantities in milk; vitamin D, necessary for the formation of good teeth and supplied by milk, egg yolks, cod liver oil and green vegetables; vitamin C, the lack of which causes scurvy, and vitamin D, the lack of which causes rickets.

Sir Edward stressed the fact that milk is the greatest of all the protective elements. "Whenever you find a race that consumes large quantities of milk," he declared, "you find strong, healthy people. By experiment it has been proven that children grow more rapidly and are more physically sturdy when fed large quantities of milk."

Sir Edward concluded with the advice that a definite nutrition policy be adopted in this country, with the object of keeping the price down on protective foods for the sake of the poor.

BIG BLUE TEAM INVADES QUEEN'S TOMORROW

Queen's Team Full Strength For Tomorrow's Opening Tilt

Reeve and Art are Counting on Strong, Experienced Line to Show a Stonewall Defence and be a Big Factor in Upsetting Varsity in Surprise Win

HOPE TO BREAK EARLY SEASON Jinx

By Sports Editor, Queen's Journal

Again this year Varsity and Queen's meet as opponents in the opening clash, this time, however, in Kingston. Warren Stevens' Beavers took the opener in Toronto in 1937 but then the Tricolor came back to win the next two contests and the championship. Queen's have always been noted for slow starts but this year the lads are determined to break precedent and start off with a victory.

Although the Queen's gridders failed to give a brilliant display against Montreal Nationals and Ottawa Rough Riders they put on a great defensive battle. Captain Art Stollery and Archie Kerr, two veterans of long standing, absented themselves from the latter game so that their injuries would have time to heal for this Saturday.

With the other colleges fielding improved teams the outlook seemed very bad for the Tricolor on paper in early season. But since the middle of September much has happened to change the views of Queen's followers. A collection of youngsters, interspersed with a few veterans, showed a stonewall defence to two highly touted squads in exhibition tilts, and although beaten, put up a good fight.

In its lone exhibition game Varsity upset the dopsters by defeating the powerful Balmy Beach team and this gives the Blue team a better pre-season record than the Tricolor. Ted Reeve is saying little but the cagey mentor of so many championship teams knows all the answers and is due to spring an unlooked for surprise on the confident Beavers.

Doug Annan of last year's squad has played flying wing in both exhibition games and there is a possibility that Tufty Griffiths will be ready by Saturday. 'Smoking Joe' Turner, a newcomer who played with Carl Cronin's Calgary Bronks for the past two seasons, and George Carson, senior end for two years, are the running halves. Ted Reeve has three kickers of almost identical ability in Bob Davis, Ted Bishop, and Jack Brown, all newcomers to senior football. Captain Art Stollery and Bob Simpson will likely share the quarterback duties.

Exponent of Swing Niosi to Play Here

All-University Fall Dance to Feature Canadian Swing King

FORMER ROYAL CANADIAN

Said to be the foremost exponent of Dixieland Swing in Canada, Bert Niosi and his orchestra will swing into action at the All-University Fall Dance on Friday, October 14th.

Niosi, born and raised in the same town as the famous Lombardos, and taught by the same teacher, brings a lifetime of musical experience to the bandstand.

A former member of Lombardo's Royal Canadians, Niosi now typifies the Benny Goodman school of swing. Niosi's clarinet will dominate the melody section of the band, while Johnny Niosi, Bert's brother, will take care of the rhythm with his drums.

A versatile musician, playing clarinet, saxophone, flute, trumpet and piano, Bert Niosi has repeatedly refused offers to play with some of the greatest name bands in the U.S.A.

CEDRIC HARDWICKE FAMOUS STAGE STAR WILL SPEAK HERE

University Drama Committee Sponsors Address in Hart House Theatre

WINNER OF MEOAL

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, distinguished star of the English stage, whose performance in Shadow and Substance won for him the Drama League medal, has accepted an invitation by the University Drama Committee to speak on the Drama in Hart House Theatre on October 11th.

Sir Cedric is probably best known to Canadian through his outstanding work in such film successes as Les Miserables, Green Light, Nine Days a Week, Becky Sharp and Rome Express. These pictures have established him on this side of the Atlantic as one of the most finished and talented performers of the modern stage. He is George Bernard Shaw's favourite actor, and was chosen by that playwright to create the leading roles in many of his plays.

Shadow and Substance, after an all-season run in New York, opens at the Royal Alexandra Theatre Monday night for a week's engagement. At the request of Sir Cedric, Canada is the first to see this great success on his transcontinental tour, which includes over sixty cities and will continue until next June when Sir Cedric must return to London to fulfill his engagements there and again resume the direction of the Malvern Festival.

V.C.F. Tea at Wymilwood

President Desmond Hunt welcomed newcomers to the Varsity Christian Fellowship yesterday, when a tea was held at Wymilwood. The speakers were Mr. Arthur Cusque, Miss Jocelyn Ritchie, and Mr. Ian McLeod.

They were introduced by Mr. Hunt, who explained that the purpose of the Fellowship is to strengthen the spiritual life of its members and to bring students into personal contact with God. Its activities this winter are to include daily prayer meetings, and a series of weekly study groups.

Mr. Hunt closed the meeting with the hope that all students interested in the Fellowship would consult the executive members.

STADIUM USHERS

A meeting of the stadium ushers will be held in the music room, Hart House, Friday, October 7th, at 5 p.m. Passes will be given out and assignments made. Places are still available for second year men.

SENIOR SOCCER STARTS SATURDAY

Has Been Raised to Grade of Senior Sport This Year

SIX VETERANS ON SQUAD

Soccer has been raised to a grade A senior intercollegiate sport this year. Other years it was not accorded this position, but was ranked as an intermediate game.

An innovation also is the grouping of the teams into two leagues. Western, O.A.C., McMaster and Varsity form one section while McGill and R.M.C. form the other. Playoffs will be between the leaders of these two sections.

Varsity starts the season at Western tomorrow. The Blue men have been practising all week and even though they were defeated 2-0 by R.M.C. in an exhibition game last Saturday, hope to give Western a real battle.

S.A.C. LOANS HELP NEEDY STUDENTS

Since the founding of the Students' Administrative Council loan fund six years ago $16,097 has been loaned to needy students, according to E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer. The loans made since January, 1938, already have reached the total of $3,550.

Unlike a Shylock lender, the Administrative Council seeks no interest, but the appreciation of the students. The students themselves own the loan company, and it is with their money that many students are able to continue their academic careers.

It is the out-of-town student who makes the greatest use of the loan fund according to Mr. Macdonald. He comes to Toronto not only to bear the burden of his university fees but also the cost of his room and board.

Today the loan fund is stable and can successfully stand on its own feet. It provides for both men and women in the final two years of their courses.

Blues Meet Traditional Rivals In Game With Galloping Gaels

Varsity Team Wants Dry Field for Game but Are Confident of Victory No Matter what the Weather may be on Saturday

TURNER AND MUMFORD ON INJURED LIST

Tomorrow at the Richardson Stadium in Kingston, Queen's and Varsity, Canada's greatest and most traditional gridiron foes, open the regular intercollegiate schedule. The Blue team are making the trip without two of their most-outstanding veterans. Don Mumford, one of the hardest plunging halves in Canada, is now in the hospital with stomach trouble as yet undiagnosed. Doug Turner, regular centre, is on the sidelines with a wrenched knee.

The loss of Mumford and Turner, although undoubtedly serious, should by no means be a mortal blow to Varsity's chances. This year Steve's team is strong in reserves, and Dee Rowland will fill in for Mumford, while Turner's place at centre will be taken over by the hard-tackling "Beefy" McMillan.

For the past six years the Blue team has failed to register a win over Queen's in their home town. Although they have won several intercollegiate titles during that period the best that U. of T. football squads have been able to do in Kingston is to tie the Tricolour once. Before their rabid cheering followers Teddy Reeve's fighting team are practically invincible.

Although no official statement has come from Warren Stevens and his assistants, there is a feeling around the campus that undoubtedly this year the Blue machine will avenge themselves with a smashing victory. It has been a long bitter period of waiting, but the supporters of this year's Blue avalanche are certain that the end is near.

On the other hand, nothing about the game has been heard from the usually loquacious Moaner Reeve, coach of the Tricolour. His squad this year is somewhat of an unknown quantity, but he has enough veterans back from last year to make them really formidable. Stollery, Annan, Patowski, Carson, Conlan and a few more of last year's champions make up a team that is not to be slighted.

The latest weather reports indicate a hard dry field, which should be still another factor in the Blue team's favour. But with rain or without, the Varsity wingline are reputed to be able to hold their own with the champs and even a cloudburst should not affect the outcome.

LIFE AT COLLEGE TO FROSH LIKING

Most Freshies Confess to Attending College for Education

OPINIONS OFFER

Unanimous approval of campus life was expressed by classmen and women of 4T3 interviewed yesterday.

Most of the freshmen confessed that they came to college for an education and a background of culture. S.P.S. men and medicals, however, will have none of the latter, and must have jobs. A few co-eds intend to become great Canadian novelists and some came because they had nothing else to do. The general opinion expressed, however, is, as usual, to have as good a time as possible and be educated simultaneously. Opinion differed as to what was the pleasantest aspect of college life. A Victoria freshman is unique in preferring the academic part; most residence girls like residence life and find that even sophomores can be helpful at times.

An S.P.S. man said he valued the freedom most and explained that he went to S.P.S. because next to a monastery it is the best place to get away from women. Other S.P.S. freshmen, however, agreed that next to lunch, time they like co-eds best.

Most freshmen considered initiation fun, and not in the least humiliating. U.C. freshmen enjoy making beds, but some Victoria girls objected to knowing and listening nursery rhymes, 'r.

Band Makes Debut At Tomorrow's Game

Captain Slater Indicates Good Turn-out and New Tunes

ORUM-MAJOR LACKING

The University band makes its debut this year at Saturday's game at Queen's. During the last week Captain Slater has had the boys out on the campus every night whipping them into shape.

"Yes," he said, "the band is in fine shape. We had 52 out for the first practice. There are quite a few new members, and they are shaping up well and should be in good trim by Saturday." Captain Slater pointed out that his first interest was to get the boys to march well and play in time, but as soon as this was done, he had a large amount of new music for them.

Regarding the lack of a drum-major, Jack Richmond said that there were no prospects in sight. "There is not much likelihood of a co-ed getting the position," he said.

Dark on the Campus

Seven thousand students look at Hart House clock several times every day. But nobody looks at it at night. It seems incredible that this clock, which is the only large, outdoor timepiece on the campus, should lie practically useless after dark. Although curricular activities cease at 5 p.m., there are recreational and educational functions which bring students to the campus nearly every evening in the college year. For the benefit of those who attend such affairs, as well as night workers in the library and students in residence, the dial of Hart House clock should be illuminated. In its present state, at a distance of ten yards, it is of less avail after dark than the humblest tinker.

Order Now

Enthusiasm for the all-University dance next week is still on the rise. Let it be noted that all tickets are to be ordered beforehand and cannot be purchased at the door, and it would facilitate work for the committee considerably if they were able to make an estimate of prospective guests this week.

If numbers warrant it a second orchestra will be procured, but this will not be done until the subscription list indicates that there will be a large crowd. It is hoped that freshmen will take advantage of this occasion to get initiated into the mysteries of Hart House dances. Any who have friends in McGill University coming up for the game might be interested to note that McGill students are invited to attend, and their train will be in Toronto in sufficient time. McGill students can sign on their own campus for reservations.

An A. M. & D. Alteration

In keeping with the policies of the Art, Music and Drama editor, who intends to make his department even better than it has been under some of his very capable predecessors, we have decided to give the column a more important position in the paper than it has had in the past few years. The art, music and drama criticism, especially the music, has been rated as one of the best in any of the Toronto papers. And indeed it should be, for there is no reason why a University paper, read by students, who are professionally more interested in the arts than the rank and file of the public, should not aim to give a just criticism of the concerts, exhibits, and performances which appeal to University interest.

The various auditoriums, halls, and theatres whose productions are reviewed from time to time, have always kindly co-operated with us, and have refrained from criticising the column, which attempts at least to bring the best to its readers.

This year we intend to branch out and make some comment on popular radio concerts, as well as comment on the trends in music and art. To undertake this it is felt that it would be just and fair to give the old A.M. & D. a more pretentious head, and put it in a place on the page where it may be more readily found. Rather than making such criticism in the editorial columns, we will confine it to the regular column, and initial each article so that readers may know whose ideas are being set forth.

Henceforth then the A.M. and D. will be found in the editorial columns and carried over if necessary in single column to some other part of the paper.

As our staff of critics is neither as large nor experienced as it might be, we would welcome anyone who would be willing and able to comment on current exhibitions.

With the helpful co-operation of the C.B.C., we will also be able to bring advance publicity and criticism for those programs in which you may be interested.

Art, Music and Drama

Those reviewing art, music and drama are chosen, because they are well qualified for the job, and not because they happen to be on The Varsity staff. It would be simpler to praise everything that we review, and we would not have to worry about hurting people's professional pride. However, it is the policy of the A.M. and D. editor not to be unpleasant even in his unpleasant criticism, and it is found that by reviewing fairly and constructively, the criticism is valued, and we believe helpful to those interested in studying the arts.

Trinity College Review

The Trinity Dramatic Society inaugurated their season yesterday afternoon on the new stage in Cartwright Hall. Their choice was Sidney Box's powerful fantasy of peace and war, Fantastic Flight.

The story is an involved one dealing with a pacifist who finds himself at the head of an armament works, and his search for true peace.

The entire play was done on a low level of energy. As a result, much of the power was lost, and the intensity that a war play of this nature should possess was lacking. The characterizations which were sketchily drawn, can easily be excused due to lack of rehearsal, and this unfortunately resulted in an incomplete understanding of the play itself on the part of the actors.

The acting, which was but fair, had its bright moments. We especially liked that of Stuart Parker as Plither, secretary to the pacifist. He played capably and his sincerity was a good contrast to the others, who seemed to lack faith in the situation.

Except for a few minor technical mishaps, staging and setting were excellent. Direction by Betty Blair was good. We believe that with a more serious approach to drama technique on the part of this acting group, and with the new facilities of the Cartwright Hall stage, the Trinity club can be expected to produce fine entertainment for the new University drama season.

Frank Shuster

Garden Theatre

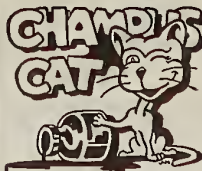

In 1921 Russia found itself in a critical position. Torn by civil strife it was in no position to defend itself against an invading Japanese army. How the peasants of the Soviet Union banded themselves into an army and succeeded in driving the Nipponese from their land is told in the new Russian film The Defence of Siberia.

The picture is truly a tribute to the brilliant Soviet film technique. Simply yet powerfully the story unfolds itself . . . how a humble townsman organizes the men of the surrounding countryside into a powerful military machine which finally smashes the elaborate Jap invasion.

Most outstanding feature of the production is the simplicity and sincerity of the actors. One finds it hard to believe that the stars of the picture are actually actors and not ordinary peasants. Hollywood would have played havoc with a similar theme, making it one of their usual extravaganzas. The Russians repress any Cecil B. DeMille brainwaves and keep the film simple and powerful.

Finest acting job in the production is done by Leo Sverdlin, who does a marvellous characterization as the leader of the Japanese forces.

Never to be forgotten is the scene in which the courageous guerrillas return to their village to find it completely destroyed by the Japs. The peasants tramp silently through the smoking ruins amid a deathly silence . . . a thrillingly dramatic silence.

FIGHT ABOUT PICTURES

Toronto, Oct. 7, 1938: At a meeting of the Ward Four Burial Society, Guest Speaker Unifant Wiregarters arose and denounced the Hart House Billiard Room as a den of Communist intrigue. "Down with snooker," shouted the speaker. "Even the snooker balls are red." In a broken voice the late octogenarian warned his audience about Moscow gold and Russian billiards.

Mr. Wiregarters went on to say: "The Senior Rugby Team is not beyond suspicion," he declared. "Yesterday I walked into the locker rooms while the boys were out practicing and what did I find? . . . three Union suits. Tear up the cobblestones, ring the tocsin and let's gang up on McMaster. Remember what Hitler said. . . . A purge in hand is worth two in the putch!"

Varsity Intermediates Play Western at Stadium Tomorrow

Bryer's Coached Squad Has Many Players Cut from Senior Squad

EXPECT GOOD KICKING

Varsity intermediates, who make their season bow to football fans this coming Saturday afternoon, are cocking a speculative eye on the intermediate intercollegiate title. An also-ran last fall, this year's entry has been considerably strengthened and will be a power to be reckoned with in the coming race.

Warren Stevens swung his punning knife early in the week, cutting loose several standout players, including Phil Isbister, Shifman, Ross and McIntyre, who will strengthen the already potent intermediate squad. Phil, a veritable chip off the Isbister block, which is recommendation enough, will divide the punting duties with Ralph Sweet, who came to Toronto by way of Ottawa. Hugh Bailey of Etobicoke, a real prospect, and Jim Murray, a holdover, are also slated to see backfield duty.

PRACTICE HOURS

Practice hours for lacrosse and volleyball can be arranged by applying to the Intramural Office, Hart House.

RUGBY PRIVILEGES GIVEN STUDENTS

The first Varsity home rugby game will be tomorrow when Western intermediates meet Varsity seconds. They will play at 1 o'clock at the Stadium and should have student support. The second game will be Argonauts vs. Hamilton Tigers, the first home game in the Interprovincial League. As student tickets cover all intercollegiate home games (except playoffs), students thus have the opportunity of seeing the interprovincial teams in action. Students are warned that the student entrance at the south door of the Arena is open only until 2.30. The gates open at 1 o'clock and, of course, the first

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

SOUNDING THE WARNING HORN

So far this season the Big Blue football squad has been boosted higher than a kite . . . it's been picked to win all its games . . . the experts had selected it to top the Intercollegiate scramble . . . and it is our opinion that they deserve it. Tomorrow they have to fulfill all these promises . . . tomorrow they have to tie the bell on the eat's tail right under the kitchen stove

Warren Stevens

The Varsity . . . four years it rained, two years it was dry and still it was the same . . . no wins.

Teddie Reeve is a funny customer. When he raves about how slight his chances are for a victory, he's dangerous. He's even more dangerous when he doesn't say anything and Teddie could certainly dole out Harpo Marx these days. Reeve, after his first practice, dished out a plate of gloom and since then he's been tuning up a team into key. From the east, from the west . . . well you know . . . football players have returned to give Queen's a team to be proud of.

Special information to anyone that has been thinking of laying odds on Varsity; they should be vitally interested in the following information. The Queen's "Under-raters" are captained this year by Art Stollery . . . 4th season . . . calls signals, plunges and passes . . . In the half-line that is Joe Turner at 165 . . . tall, rangy, runs wrecked (. . . from Calgary and like a deer . . . played with Bronks for two seasons (comprehenz?). Amman at flying wing, remember . . . The only weakness we can find is in the kicking position. Young Bob Davis, an Ottawa boy who played with the intermediates, is trying to fill Munro's shoes, but . . . George Sprague . . . third year on the line . . . Archie Kerr, second year line . . . Jerry Conlin, third year line . . . Nick Palthouski, second year . . . at centre, tackles like a fiend . . . "Fuzz" Jack, second year on the line . . . George Edwards and Louis Mulvihill . . . mix them all together and well . . . Tea Revives You! (not me)

Queen's has been under-rated, vastly under-rated . . . Varsity has been given plenty of publicity and whereas we don't believe they have been over-rated, we would like to point out that actually the game is played on the field and on the field in Kingston . . . "So beware the Ides of October 8".

Wednesday . . . three days before the Queen's-Varsity clash it began to rain . . . Ah! The Fates sitting up there had been bribed again by Teddie Reeve and they started pumping water that they had saved for weeks down on a little plot of mud called Richardson Stadium. Said Shippy, manager of the Blues—"Well, I guess the auxiliary hoses are also running full blast on that field. Freshmen must be damping (I'm sorry) up the water so it shouldn't roll off . . . but we'll win if we have to play in canoes . . . Said Stevens, coach of the Blues—"Oh well! I knew it . . . rain, rain . . . but listen . . . If I have to get the boys into wetsuits and costumes and they have to swim under water all the way we'll win . . . See! But the Varsity "Board of Hexers" woke up early Thursday morning and called to the Gods with a chant going something like this—

Rain, rain, please go away Varsity has a football game to play Come again another day,

Note: P.T. credits will be given to the person writing the most suitable last line. But believe it or not it worked. Teddie Reeve was double-crossed and the Fates stopped the pumping.

Everything was a bowl of cherries . . . sun was shining, birds were twittering. When the news came in on Thursday that Doug Turner was definitely unable to play in Saturday's contest. Turner, one of the finest

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Marg Conlin

The new tennis courts at Trinity may be responsible for additional delay in the women's intercollegiate meet. At any rate there are so many girls at St. Hilda's entered in the college tourney that the semi-finals have not yet been completed, and the tennis club is desperately trying to rush the intercollegiate meet to completion by Saturday. It seems as if the only solution would be to choose a team at St. Hilda's which would be open for challengers until a set date. Otherwise the chances of selecting an intercollegiate team which might have a little practise together before next Friday seem practically nil.

About 20 have signed at U.C. for the golf tournament. There are still a few who are expected to be out providing the weather doesn't drop to zero before the 17th. Marj Mosbaugh, the defending champion and Meds' hope for faculty honours, will have more experienced opposition this year in the person of a fresher at U.C. whose handicap is 4 and whose name is Marion Walker. Dorothy Jansen, a senior at St. Joseph's, who has never entered the tourney before owing to the time attached to leading her course, impressed Yours Truly very favourably last week when we had a game with her under very trying conditions.

Nora Fletcher, a Margaret Eaton graduate, will be coaching basketball at St. Mike's this year, but the coaches at the other colleges have not yet been named. Or if they have it is still a deep, dark secret. The most promising material at St. Mike's in the basketball line-up is Peggy Arnold, who formerly starred on the senior team at Macdonald Hall.

One of our new reporters has been trying for the last few days to bring in some news about the golf prospects at Victoria. We haven't any news from our St. Hilda's news hawk yet either, but any day now.

If you are going to Kingston for the week-end be sure and visit their famous gymnasium (you probably will dance on the basketball floor anyway).

Twenty-six and twenty-four points respectively. The star of the meet was Brett of Dents. Single handed he placed Densbury fourth among the competing colleges with eighteen points. He won both the pole vault and the high jump, finished second in the javelin and discus and came third in the shot put.

BLUES END SIX-YEAR JINX BY WIN AT QUEEN'S SATURDAY

Intermediate Blues Downed, 7-4

Western Colts Win Out By Narrow Margin Here

Varsity Intermediates Lose Lead in Last Minutes of Game

KING RACES FIFTY YARDS

A blocked kick late in the fourth quarter resulting in a converted touch-down, gave Western Colts a narrow 7-4 verdict over Varsity intermediates in the opening game of the intercollegiate season Saturday afternoon at Varsity Stadium, to spoil an otherwise perfect day for Varsity footballers.

The Blues appeared to be certain winners entering the final minute of play, with the scoreboard showing 4-1 in their favour and the ball at centre-field.

At this point a rangy Western half-back named Joe King entered the picture. King sprinted through the Varsity kick formation, blocked Sweet's attempted kick, and raced fifty yards to the goal-line. With a half-dozen Blue tacklers hanging on, he lurched over the line for five points and victory. Guthrie's successful convert was superfluous, and the final whistle went with Western on top, 7-4.

Western, expected to be a soft touch for the supposedly stronger Varsity machine, dominated play from the start and went into an early first quarter lead behind Kroll's strong booting. Varsity steadied away in the second quarter, however, and finally evened the count when Sweet intercepted a Varsity forward, setting the ball within range of

Rugby Game and Reception at Hart House Wind Up Initiations

In a hard tackling affair last Friday afternoon on the back campus the sophomores of St. Michael's demonstrated their indubitable superiority over a numerous but shrinking lot of freshmen in a so-called rugby game.

At eight o'clock the same evening a reception was held in the East Common Room of Hart House. It proved to be a very stirring affair. The freshmen were made entirely responsible for the program and also for supplying the cigarettes and lunch. When placed the upper-classmen would pitch pennies at the feet of the red-faced performers but when displaced the howls and cat-

VETERAN TELLS OF SPANISH WAR

Robert Leslie, Returned from Spain, Addresses Social Problems Club

"One of the sorriest sights in Spain today is the children, who line up with hands outstretched for crusts of bread as the soldiers go for their meals," was the opinion of Robert Leslie, returned veteran of the Mackenzie-Papineau battalion in Spain, and a descendant of William Lyon Mackenzie. Mr. Leslie spoke at the first meeting of the Social Problems Club Friday afternoon in the Lecture Hall, Economics Building.

"After a while," he said, "you get used to seeing soldiers having their legs shot off or their brains blown out, but what bothered me most, what bothered all of us most, was the continual bombing of women and children behind the lines."

The government forces are outnumbered in airplanes and heavy artillery by five to one, Mr. Leslie pointed out, but because of the non-intervention committee, they cannot buy arms nor even food and clothing, while Franco is kept well supplied in all these by Italy and Germany.

DR. CARR TO DESCRIBE MISSION WORK IN INDIA

"India is the place to see surgery in dimensions not dreamed of in the West," according to Dr. Pleasance Carr, M.B., B.S., D.T.M.H., of Patna, Bihar, India, who will speak in the Canadian School of Missions at 5 p.m. under the auspices of the Varsity Christian Fellowship.

Dr. Carr, who was graduated from the London School of Medicine for Women, the Royal Free Hospital, and the London School of Tropical Medicine, will tell of her experiences in Zenana hospitals for women and children where tumors up to 48 pounds are not uncommon and many surgical and medical cases are in extremely advanced stages. The meeting is open to all.

S.C.M. BOOK EXCHANGE REPORTS A DECREASE IN SALES THIS YEAR

Nearly $2,000 has been returned to the 419 students who deposited books in the S.C.M. Book Exchange for sale this year. This represents a slight decrease in business from former years, and A. Manson, 3rd year Emmanuel, manager of the Exchange, attributes this decrease to a lack of stock. No books are overstocked, and there is a strong demand for Honour Science and Medical books in particular.

Paul Whiteman, King of Jazz Lauds Rhapsody of Gershwin

By Brock McElheran

Paul Whiteman, famous dance band leader, in an exclusive interview with The Varsity last Saturday evening, said that in his opinion George Gershwin's greatest work was the Rhapsody in Blue. It was Whiteman who brought it to the attention of the entire musical world when he conducted its first performance in New York fifteen or so years ago.

"Do you think that his Concerto in F will ever become as popular as the Rhapsody?" he was asked.

"No, I don't, but it contains some very good music."

The interview took place in one of the studios of C.F.R.B. immediately after Whiteman had spoken on the radio.

According to Whiteman, the Lambeeth Walk is making a great hit in New York. Apparently little is known about the Palais Glide, the other current European dance fad.

The Stokowski of Swing has no use for those who criticize jazz composers for not orchestrating their own pieces.

"There are hundreds of good orchestrators around. As long as the result is all right, what difference does it make who arranges a composition?"

Paul Whiteman does not feel that anyone has taken Gershwin's place as a composer. However, he spoke very highly of Raymond Scott, whose best works are as yet unknown.

The Jazz King's favourite game is hockey.

"I guess I rather lean to it because I was once a goalie myself," he explained. He frequently sees N.H.L. games during his tours around the States.

U.C. FOLLIES DRAWS TROOPS OF CO-EDS

"Great Directors" Confer at Casting for Annual Production

About fifty charming University College co-eds trooped merrily into the Women's Union for the purpose of breaking into the hit college show, the U.C. Follies. Tall girls, short girls, pretty girls and otherwise all entered the sanctum of the Follies committee with one purpose in mind.

Messrs. Daly, Shuster and Rooke, of the committee, were on hand to greet them, and with a professional air which would have made a Ziegfeld hilly, went about their work. First of all, they wanted girls who could sing. So they tested girls' voices. Secondly, a dancing chorus is needed, and the girls were required to state their dancing

GLOBE AND MAIL WRITER TO ADDRESS PRESS CLUB

Miss Jessie McTaggart, feature writer for the Globe and Mail, will be the speaker this afternoon at the initial meeting of the Women's Press Club in the Women's Union at 4 o'clock.

Miss McTaggart has had a wealth of experience since joining the staff of the Globe and Mail and is particularly noted for her intelligent stories about the frequent controversies pertaining to the management of the affairs of the Dionne quintuplets.

Band Makes Triumphant Return To Scene of Rugby Embroglios

While the Big Blue team pounded out its first rugby victory in Queen's territory for a number of years, the University of Toronto band pounded out its first martial bars for the season 1938-39, while nearly two hundred Varsity supporters cheered them on.

Marching with clockwork regularity, the band showed the results of weeks of careful training under the leadership of Captain John Slatter. It marched around the field and formed a "Q" before the bleachers filled with pyjama-clad Queen's freshmen, trim cadets from the Royal Military College and hundreds of other local students. Ap-

Students' Directory

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, since H.M. or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

UNIVERSITY LINKS MEN DOWN VISITING GOLFERS

The University of Toronto golf team defeated the visiting golfers from Queen's, McGill, and Montreal University Friday at York Downs to capture again the intercollegiate golf crown. The Blue and White links men won both individual and collective honours. They finished one-two-three in the individual scoring, while the team completed the lowest gross score.

Bob Reid, last year's champion, was again low scorer with a 74-83, with Sonny Morse and Bill Laird shooting 80-78 and 82-78 respectively. Ed Gibson was best for Queen's with an 83-81 while Frank Gibson topped the McGill marksmen with an 80-81. Clint Stephens carded a consistent 81-85. Varsity was also victorious in two-ball foursome play.

plauded, they marched back to their own side of the field where they banded out such modern selections as "Oh Mama".

Following the game, the band acted as the vanguard of a huge parade which snaked its way from the stadium to the centre of the town.

When the band was not playing, the eds and co-eds in the parade alternately moaned "poor old Queen's" and yelled the Blue and White war-cry.

Traffic lights meant not a thing when the parade reached the centre of the town. Every main intersection became the scene of organized victory cries and autos take the hindmost.

Toronto Wins Opening Tussle by Defeating Reevermen by 13-6 Count in Closely Fought Game, Winning in Final Half

McQUARRIE, McDONALD PLAY OUTSTANDING GAMES

By Ed Goodman

Six long years of Tricolour domination on their home gridiron were ended last Saturday by an irresistible University of Toronto football squad. In the first league game of the season Varsity defeated Queen's 13-6. The home team showed unexpected strength, however, and at half time were leading Stevens' Blue machine 6 to 1.

FORESEES CO-EDS AS CHEERLEADERS

Ted McDonald, Yell-Inspirer, Reveals Tricks of Trade

Ted McDonald, peppy cheerleader who has inspired Blue and White rugby supporters to greater enthusiasm for the last three years, yesterday asserted that it is only a matter of time until co-ed cheerleaders will take their place in leading Toronto's college yell.

"It may take time, but it would certainly add colour and enthusiasm to our cheering. Toronto is fairly conservative about such things, but we would like to get the idea of girls as cheerleaders if enough publicity were given it," he declared.

As practice for a game the boys have a few work-outs beforehand and get their program organized on a system—subject to change, of course—and when they get in front of the crowd they turn on the steam!

Cheer leaders work in co-ordination with the band to add the dramatic touch. If the game is a peppy one people want to cheer rather than shiver

EX-RUGGER STAR TO PLAY SOCCER

Tommy Rutherford, Known for Rugger Ability, to Join Soccer Club

Tommy Rutherford, who is well remembered for his playing in the rugger scrums, will be playing football this fall. The club has been exceptionally fortunate in having several veteran ball handlers from Western turn out. Alf Dodds, late of London, has good control of the ball and a terrific shot.

Only several of last year's intermediates will be moved up as there are all sorts of material on hand, both imports and last year's players. Summers, who plays fullback, may go up, while Powell, S.P.S. intercollegiate champ, is conceded a position.

There was a good practice Thursday on the front campus and the abovementioned players stood out well individually, but did not have the timing that Western has shown. However, Western has fewer individual stars and despite their longer training period the Varsity eleven expect to win the series.

If the team can win tomorrow's game they will take the league, as McMaster and O.A.C. have inferior teams.

Soccer has been gaining in popularity

Going into the second half the Kingston lads lacked the reserve strength to hold their lead against the onrushing Blue avalanche. Despite a disheartening injury suffered when Bucko Macdonald received a broken ankle on being tackled in the third quarter, Varsity swept all before them gathering strength as the Tricolour faded.

After ten minutes of play in the last half Can Gray shot a pass to Ben Shukun for a touchdown, that he converted. This try nullified Queen's early lead garnered when Smoky Joe Turner picked up Macdonald's fumble and ran 25 yards for an unconverted major score. Both teams had already registered rouges in the first half.

Queen's immediately opened up to regain their lost lead, but the wing line led by Ben Shukun and Frank Sirden, who were the outstanding defensive performers on the field, held them in check. On the half line Charlie Prince and Lou Somers, who were relieving the injured Macdonald, now lost for the season with a broken ankle,

RENOWNED ACTOR TO SPEAK HERE

Sir Cedric Hardwicke to Address Students in Hart House Today

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, appearing in the current Shadow and Substance, will speak in Hart House Theatre today at 1.30 p.m.

Busy not only with his stage work, but also with radio broadcasts for the C.B.C. Shakespeare series, Sir Cedric has accepted the invitation of the University Drama Committee to address a student audience. The wealth of experience, in films as well as in legitimate theatre, makes Sir Cedric's characterizations both complete and convincing. That same understanding makes him one of our more competent commentators on current drama.

After his address in the theatre, Sir Cedric will answer questions for those who are enthusiastic enough to skip their two o'clock lecture.

UNIVERSITY ROWING CLUB WILL TRAIN FOR REGATTA

The Varsity Rowing Club has been training in earnest for the past few months for the London Regatta, to be held in the near future. But there seems to be a general lack of enthusiasm among the students in regard to joining up with the club. The training is done at the Argonaut Rowing Club and there is no better spot for work of this kind.

Those interested in joining should get in touch with Mr. Martin or Earl Sigston at Wytheville College.

Whither Pacifism

Quoting The Varsity as suggesting that the hope of the future is that pacifists think more logically, The Telegram hopes that in the future pacifists think rather than emote.

It might just be mentioned that if all people thought as pacifists, we would have no fear of the clocks of the world running in reverse every decade or so. And when war barons start people thinking in terms of force, no one thinks logically. Times of peace are the times when we have a chance to think without the great distortion wrought by the powers of propaganda.

Pacifism is a great ideal, but it seems an ideal which is impossible to attain in a world of human beings. That pacifists are foolish spouters, who do not think in a rational way, is so much poppycock, but it is poppycock which takes on the semblance of fact, when we have a group of radicals professing pacifism who give up all their ideals and shout woe to the aggressor, when that aggressor treads upon something more dear to them than their pacifistic ideals.

To say that the Great War accomplished nothing, and that we are still suffering from its effects, is not the same as to say that the Canadian volunteers were a bunch of misguided youngsters who gave their lives in vain. Certainly the Great War was a terrible curse, but it might have been a much worse curse, had our lads sat back and gone to jail and let the other side win, rather than fight.

Perhaps the Tely would be interested in knowing that some of the greatest thinkers of the world are and have been pacifists. Perhaps it would be surprised to know that Aldous Huxley thinks as well as emotes.

For Christians the great task is to discover how Jesus Christ would act were he in the same position, and then act accordingly. If we can honestly believe that Jesus, were He in the world today, would, upon finding Himself involved in a just war, take up a tube of poison gas, unscrew the top, and turn out the contents over a city of civilians, then we don't need to be pacifists. If, on the other hand, we cannot conceive of Jesus sanctioning any act of warfare, then we have the choice of being an absolute pacifist, and taking the consequences, or renouncing Christianity.

There has been a distinct tendency to fashion and interpret Christianity to suit our own needs during the past few years. But we cannot do that. It is a fact; we have to accept it as it stands or reject it, and we have the perfect right to reject it if we have the courage. Adolph Hitler is reputed to have said that the anaemic gospel of the Jewish teacher, who said that we should turn the other cheek for a second blow, is not the thing for the German people. At least he is honest about it. There are a great many others who feel the same way, but haven't the courage to rely upon their convictions.

For many it is all incompatible. They cannot see Jesus as one who would stoop to the acts of warfare, and yet on the other hand they cannot conceive Him sitting back taking no action while a mad,

There are those who say that one cannot be a Christian unless he is a pacifist. Such a statement is a little too sweeping for the average person, many of whom would be glad to see it the same way, and would be willing to suffer the consequences of their belief in time of war, even to the extent of court-martial or imprisonment.

Fortunate will be the generation that has reached a complete pacifism. But while the world is still full of non-Christians, who make no pretence at following the tenets of Christianity or any other religion save a sublime gotism, we will either be forced to resort to arms, or trust absolutely in force greater than materialism. Such a trust carries us father than most of us are willing to go, but no one has the right to imply that those who have the courage to become pacifists, do not think.

A Special Convocation

Next Friday the University of Toronto will hold a special convocation for the awarding of honorary degrees. Her Excellency the Lady Tweedsmuir will receive the degree of Doctor of Laws (honoris causa). Lady Tweedsmuir is the only wife of a Governor-General of Canada on whom the University has conferred an honorary degree.

Others on whom the degree will be conferred include the Right Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice and Attorney-General of Canada; Dr. Sherwood Fox, President of the University of Western Ontario; J. J. Gibson, a Governor of the University and Vice-President and General Manager of the Chartered Trust and Executor Company; J. C. Robertson, Professor Emeritus of Greek Language and Literature in Victoria College, and Miss Jean Gunn, O.B.E., Superintendent of Nurses, Toronto General Hospital.

Unfortunately Convocation Hall is not able to accommodate all the students who will wish to attend, but tickets for the event are fairly distributed through the various college and faculty student societies. These tickets may be obtained at the Students' Council office in Hart House.

Besides taking part in the convocation by attending, the undergraduates through the assistance of the cheerleaders, who help to make the rugby games the colourful affairs that they are, will be on hand to lead the cheers for those who are honoured. It will be remembered that last year at the special convocation, Ted McDonald and his staff of enthusiasts played a very valuable part in the ceremony. We would advise all who wish to attend to make certain that they will have tickets immediately.

Don Cossacks

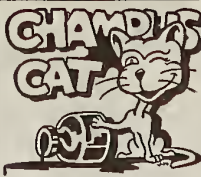

Critics must continue to live in hope that they may some day get something on the Don Cossack Chorus. On Friday night its position was still so unassailable that, in despair, we are almost driven to reproach it for allowing several of its members to be afflicted by the common cold. Sometimes the resulting imperfections were very obvious, but it was also very obvious that no one cared; the spell that these singers cast is caused by something more than technical purity.

As usual the program began with a sacred group—religious music in the virile Russian manner. The Don Cossacks are intelligent and sensitive men who sing ideas as well as words, and the deep solemnity of this part of the program was a startling contrast to the vocal fireworks which came later, notably in the marching songs. It would be rather an arduous task to go through and try to say something different about each item; besides there is a very rich musical season ahead and we must watch our adjectives carefully, but one thing should be mentioned, an impressive Cantata by Schwedoff glorifying the defenders and builders of the Russian Empire—apparently an assemblage of patriotic melodies, culminating in a very effective use of the first theme from the slow movement of Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony.

Serge Jaroff, the Cossacks' intense little conductor, keeps his forces always under perfect control, is clearly very proud of them, and smiles at his audience as though its approval were a pleasant surprise.

BABBLING BALLADS

It takes a lot of practice
To sit on prickly cactus,
Or listen to the looning of the loon;
But nothing can distract us
Like pithcanthropus eractus
Singing Spanish ditties to the moon.

Chorus:

Shrdlu, Shrdlu,
I would waltz with you
But my mammy is waiting outside.
She says it won't do
For a horse to moo
Or for me to be your bride.

I thought it was distortion

When I saw him put a portion
Of an undigested onion in his mouth,
But I was seasick with mortification
Of a steamboat on the orrion
Heading for Bermuda and points south.

The typical Hollywood version of a university appears in Hold that Co-ed, part of Shea's double bill this week.

How a university is used as a means of helping a state governor SHEA'S—on his way to a senator-DOUBLE ship in Washington forms the theme of the story with a background of rather surprising football games supplied. Thanks to John Barrymore's efforts as Governor Harrigan, and the antics of Joan Davis, who plays the part of America's only female football player, the picture manages to be quite passably amusing.

Part two of the bill is The Mysterious Mr. Moto, where Peter Lorre, armed with eyeglasses and a Japanese accent, plays the title role, keeping one jump ahead of Scotland Yard in the search for the ringleader of an international mob of assassins. He finishes this task by wrestling with a member of the gang, allowing Scotland Yard to complete the necessary jump and make the arrests. A rather informal Limehouse tavern provides amusement and local colour.

The newsreel and a short feature called Stronger than Fiction completes the bill at Shea's this week.

Varsity Soccer Squads Score Double Victory

Western's Senior and Intermediate Teams Downed
5-1 and 1-0

WESTERN GOALIE STARS

By a 5 to 1 score, the University of Toronto's Senior Intercollegiate soccer team emerged victorious from a meeting with Western on the latter's home field Saturday. Making it a double victory, the Varsity Intermediate soccer squad took Western's Intermediates 1-0.

In the senior game, Varsity tallied five times in the first half. Woods opened the scoring in the senior game when he scored for Western on a penalty shot, giving the home team their only score of the game. Play then became brisker and Honeyman soon equalized the score on a pass from Silks. Silks, working hard, fed two more passes, this time to Dadds, making the score 3-1 for the Blue and White. Mullett continued the Torontonians' barrage by raining in two more hard shots, adding two goals, to make the half time score 5-1 for Varsity.

The second half of the game opened with both teams working hard. Brilliant efforts, however, failed to score and the game ended with the same (Continued on page 4)

The Western goal-line.
The Bryers-coached Blues got another break in the second half when Jack Breen, alternate snap, came up with a loose ball at the Western 40. Following an exchange of kicks, Mike Mills, Varsity quarter, split the posts neatly with a placement from fifteen yards out.

Play ranged up and down field thereafter, with Varsity clinging to their slender 4-1 lead, until King broke up the kick formation and changed apparent defeat into hilarious victory for Western.

and a tired Ken McQuarrie, who had been playing outstanding football, both performed flawlessly to annihilate any Tricolour hopes of playing for the breaks.

Then with but two minutes to go Bee Rowland, who with his hard plunging and consistent kicking in the second half was probably Toronto's outstanding half line performer, intercepted a forward on Queen's 5 yard line, and on the first down he plunged for another touchdown that Gray converted.

With Rowland sharing the kicking duties Gray was left free to do his share of the ball carrying. And it was Cam who brought the ball within scoring distance after Ted Jarvis had recovered Stollery's fumble on Queen's 30, before the first touchdown. He ran 12 yards on a fake pass, and plunged through centre for 6 more before throwing the pass.

Varsity: Flying wing, Rowland; halves, Gray, Macdonald, MacQuarrie; quarter, Scott; snap, MacMillan; insides, Rogin, Mean; middles, Sirdevan, Schwenger; outsides, Holden, Jarvis; subs, Beattie, Shukun, MacLachlan, Beatty, Princes, Somers, Ibbister. Queen's: Flying wing, Amman; halves, Brown, Turner, Johnston; quarter, Stollery; snap, Palthouski; middles, Jack, Sprague; outsides, Mulvihill, Carson; subs, Sampson, Preston, Clark, McGill, Edwards, Bishop, Simpson.

Officials: Referee, Bartlett; umpire, Kress; headlinesman, Mungovan.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shiffman

'Twas A COSTLY VICTORY

And Moses spoke to Pharaoh and said, "Your dream symbolizes seven lean years and seven fat ones" or something to that effect and went on to say cash in while the cashing is good. Now to draw the comparison that I have been so clumsily trying to make. . . Varsity has just gotten over their seven lean years by finally defeating Queen's in Kingston. . . score 13 to 6 which looks impressive but actually is merely a seven-six win, and if you saw Sarnia "Steam Rollers" win over Balmy Beach in yesterday's contest you can imagine how close it was. But seven to six, thirteen to six, two to one, what's the difference as long as the heavy end of the score belongs to Varsity.

Spectators at the Tiger-Argo clash were shocked when the results of the Queen's game started coming in. First a Queen's single, then a touchdown and it looked as if Reeve had done it again. Gloom settled over the student section which suddenly turned in an uproarious cheer when Varsity came through first with seven points and then finally the 13 to 6 score to finish the game. Every body was thrilled. Varsity winning lacking the spark plug center, Doug Turner, and the line-crasher, Don Mumford. But in Kingston the victory was taken rather soberly. Buckle Macdonald, speedy safety man, brilliant passer and runner, broke his ankle and is out for the rest of the year. . . that makes the second regular backfield man to be lost to Varsity for the year. . . Stevens is going to have trouble filling this cavity which we hope won't get any bigger. . .

About the game itself there's little I can add to the newspaper accounts and radio announcements you have doubtlessly already read and heard. . . that Finkelstein leads Queen's baggage band and already know. . . that Turner is one of the nicest halves to come out of the west (note to football coaches: go west, young man, go west). . . that Reeve, who complained about lacking a kicker to let Johnny Munro's shoes make him laughing up his sleeve, because his boy Brown was outkicking Varsity's punters against the wind, and did he ever go with the wind. . . All this you know but remember two weeks ago I mentioned a little half back who was used to keep the polish on the bench last year, who if given a chance would show his stuff. Well, Saturday against Queen's Lou Somers got his first real chance and from reports it looks like he made good. . . good luck, "Scrooge". Another boy that made good on Saturday was Cam MacLachlan. . . Cam and Sirdevan were towers of strength on the line, ripping holes and playing heads-up football. For all-around play on the day. . . open field tackling, etc., it seems that "Shuky" Shukun, that big boy from Dentistry, finally found himself and scored the major by catching a nice pass to put Varsity back in the game. Bee Rowland, who filled in Mumford's place, played steady ball all game and cinched the game when he gathered in an attempted Queen's forward pass and raced the ball to Queen's five-yard line, from where he played it over.

GAZING IN THE CRYSTAL
Varsity and McGill are now on the up-stroke of a pretty shaky teeter-totter. McGill Redmen defeated Western and Varsity downing Queen's (who, by the way, are not out of the running), McGill carried along by Herbie Westman's kicking, scored four singles to Western's one and managed to keep Western's half line from shaking loose. Down at McGill 8,500 alumni and undergraduates had a big football rally. . . fires, etc. before their parades. . . first time since the great flood. . . Answer, 8,500 people can't be wrong. . . and from the looks of things these Redmen intend to keep on winning. . . at the same time Varsity Blues won their first game in Kingston in seven years and they intend to keep on winning. . . To this add the fact that Queen's and Western have lost a game each and do not intend to lose another game. . . Result—confusion. . . Now looking in the crystal we see McGill plays in Toronto next Saturday and both teams intend to keep winning and Queen's meets Western in London and both teams do not intend to lose another game because it virtually means elimination. . . yet one team has to win. . . unless we have two tie games in the intercollegiate loop, which is as unlikely as Varsity getting any of the breaks in the final McGill vs. Varsity game on Nov. 19th. Oh boy I dropped the crystal. . .

P.S. Sorry tells us Varsity to take McGill. . . Queen's to take Western. . .

LOST AND WON
The intermediates, who were leading the Colts or Mustangs till the last two minutes of play by a score of 4 to 1 allowed the ever-fighting Westerners to block a kick and race the ball over the line for a touchdown that was converted, fusing the game 7 to 4. . . but McMaster lost to O.A.C. by a huge score and Mac's were last year's champs. . . The golfers, however, took the intercollegiate championship. . . the U. of T. "dinghists" or sailors won whatever dinghists win. . . the track team leaves for Montreal this week, where they will defend their championship. . .

ST. MIKE'S FROSH ARE FREE AT LAST

calls shook the rafters.
President Hartford opened the evening with a few well-chosen words in which he compared the frosh to the well-known "amoebs". Addresses were given by Warden Bickerteth and Rev. Fr. McCorkell and were well received. Tap-dancing, the slag, various forms of music (?) and a fine skit "The Shooting of Dan McGrew", featured the evening along with songs and yells. Then the frosh were officially freed from their period of servitude which consisted of carrying trucks, shining shoes and other mental tasks. . .

and Ted is in his glory. But if it is slow, a cheer leader's lot is a hard one. Mr. McDonald has worked out a style of cheering peculiar to the university and feels that although it is effective now, the use of colour schemes and card designs would make things more interesting. "Canada seems somewhat colourless compared to the ideas from the American colleges and we could do with more of the spectacular," he amplified.

Asked if he was a member of the American Federation of Cheerleaders, he laughingly denied it.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Morg. Conlin

The intercollegiate tennis matches will be concluded today when the winner of the Ida Tiff vs. Ann McDonald match meets Claire Walsh. Yesterday up at the Canadian National Courts, the quarter-finals were run off with the following results:

Claire Walsh, Victoria, def. Betty File, U.C., 7-5, 6-0; Marjorie Bosbaugh, Meds, def. Win. Flanagan, St. Mike's, 6-4, 6-4; Ida Tiff, Victoria, def. Beth Stewart, U.C., 6-4, 6-4; Anne McDonald, U.C., def. Eleanor Walker, Victoria, 6-4, 6-4.

In the first match of the semi-finals, Claire Walsh defeated Marj Bosbaugh, while the second match of the semi-finals will be played today. Any of the semi-finalists, who automatically place on the intercollegiate team, may be challenged by those who still aspire to the team. In their first attempt in intercollegiate competition, Meds are to be congratulated for their fine showing. Marj Bosbaugh, Meds, has distinguished herself in the hockey circles around the campus, and last year was intercollegiate golf champion. Her presence on the intercollegiate tennis team this year will be a decided asset.

Some upsets occurred during the preliminary play on Friday. The most surprising defeat was that of Kay Hilder, St. Hilda's player and seeded number two in the meet. Anne McDonald, U.C., a newcomer to intercollegiate play, ousted the clever little blonde in the most outstanding match of the day.

Betty Kettles, a freshe at U.C., who amazed local authorities by winning the U.C. meet, was defeated in the second round by Ida Tiff, Victoria. A weak backhand, which the more experienced Victoria girl soon discovered, was the freshe's only fault, her drives particularly being remarkably deep.

Vera Argument, Victoria, another freshe, advanced to the second round after a prolonged struggle in overcoming Betty Kirby of St. Michael's. Marj Bosbaugh of Meds was extended to the third set before she finally took the tall Victoria girl. The opening round in which Betty Kirby and Vera Argument were matched, was marred only by the mass default of the Household Science team.

Yesterday's concluding play saw Rosemary Annesley, St. Hilda's lone survivor in the match, fall under the determined attack of Beth Stewart of U.C. The latter won in straight sets, but the play was closer than the score indicates.

The intercollegiate players arrive in town on Thursday evening, and will be "bunked" at local residences. McGill

AT THE VARSITY STADIUM last Saturday... WE ENJOYED the new Argo Cheerleaders trying in vain to get the students to cheer for the Argos... When a cheer was started, the college men would substitute any name but Argos, which riled the scream men no end... The highlight of the game was when a beautiful blonde escorted by three men seated herself in the middle of the student section... TWO THOUSAND STUDENTS STOOD UP AND CHEERED... and when a poor misguided youth by the name of Lipin was passed down from the top section to the bottom of the bleachers... another voice was heard to utter... PASS THE BLONDE DOWN... Unfortunately, this suggestion was vetoed, and once more the students were forced to watch the game... *

MORE LOGICAL REASONING comes from the Mississippi Collegian of Mississippi College... "A bargain is a good buy. A good-bye is a farewell. A farewell is to part. To part is to leave. My girl left me without a good-bye. She was no bargain anyways... *

Paul Whiteman

Paul Whiteman's concert at Maple Leaf Gardens last Saturday night might have been entitled "The Case for Swing", because we firmly believe that no enemy of popular music could listen to it without feeling that when well played, good jazz has a very real attraction.

To begin with, the orchestra is superb. Every man is hand-picked, and is "tops" in his field. Furthermore, most of them play several different instruments, thus giving their arrangers great scope for orchestral colouring. They think nothing of such fascinating combinations as two pianos and three English horns, or bass clarinet, two bassoons, and vibraphone. The different combinations available are far more in number than in a full symphony orchestra. One man we happened to notice played two different saxophones, oboe, clarinet, English horn, and bassoon. It takes most people a lifetime to learn either of the last two.

The intense vitality of the rhythmic variations proved to be a constant cause for admiration. Although Whiteman does most of his conducting from the knees down, he gets some amazing results from the men.

Before "swinging" the William Tell Overture, Whiteman, with the showmanship with which he puts across all his concerts, announced that he had just got in touch with the late Mr. Rossini, and the latter had promised to roll over once during the performance, very gently. It is our firm belief that the poor composer probably raised the lid of the coffin so as to hear better. There was more rhythm in that performance than in all Rossini's overtures put together.

Out of the most exciting moments during the evening was in a "jam session" put on by several members of the orchestra. The traps player turned it on by himself for about a minute. It was positively thrilling.

Rhythmically, the show was a tremendous success, but it was disappointing from a melodic point of view. There are many really lovely popular tunes, but practically none were played. When one of them was, (Now it Can Be Told), it was murdered by the noisy arrangement and performance. Tommy Dorsey's treatment in which the melody is given a chance, is much better from a musical point of view. Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue was played well, but here again the "sweet" sections were rather overwhelmed by the "hot" parts.

The stage show was good, with the Four Modernaires, a male quartet, proving most popular.

Brook McElheran.

Moscow: Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was denounced by leading airmen here yesterday, as they accused him of spreading lies regarding Soviet air strength.

score as at half time. Varsity showed definite superiority throughout.

In the intermediate game, the resulting 1-0 victory for the Blues gave no indication of the potentialities of the Toronto team, who dominated the play throughout. The team play of the Varsity intermediates was definitely superior to that of the Western aggregation and the only thing that kept the score down was the rather poor condition of the players, as well as the well-nigh miraculous net-minding of the Western goalkeeper. Bill Small scored the only point of the game early in the first half.

experience. Those who could do specialties were also welcomed to the fold.

However, there were so many beautiful young women who could sing and dance that the committee were in a bit of a quandary. Therefore today at four bells, once again the clarion calls for try-outs will be sounded and once again the pretty co-eds will troop forth, and this time the committee hopes to make the final selection.

This year the Follies will be presented on the eighteenth of next month, and Tom Daly, who is in charge of production, will get rehearsals under way this week. Lou Weingarten will direct the show once again this year and Frank Shuster will resume his position of associate producer. Johnnie Koohe has written some new hit tunes which bid fair to outdo any of the previous Follies music, and the show should once again take its position of the best show of the year.

GERMAN PEOPLE NOT IN SYMPATHY WITH WAR SAYS LEWIS

Marriage To Be Topic Of Noon Discussions

Rev. J. D. Parks, popular noon-hour speaker at S.C.M. meetings in Hart House last year, will address men in Hart House today on "Youth and Marriage". This is the first noon meeting that the S.C.M. has had this year, but plans are being made for a series which will be conducted by the best available religious leaders.

Mr. Parks, who for several years broadcasted from Carlton Street United Church (familiar to many as "The House of Friendship") is now minister of High Park United Church. He is noted for his keen interest in students, and is a friend of many theological students on the campus. Next week he will take charge of a group of the S.C.M. devoted to the study of youth problems in relation to marriage. This group, it is expected, will continue throughout the winter.

REV. J. D. PARKS

—who will speak today in the Music Room, Hart House, 1:30-2 p.m., on "Youth and Marriage".

VICTORIA CO-EDS WIN TENNIS CUP

The Women's Interfaculty Tennis Cup will once more grace the trophy board at Victoria College. Two of their co-eds, Claire Walsh and Ida Tipp, will play off tomorrow for individual honours, but whatever the result, Victoria is assured of interfaculty leadership.

Sparkling tennis featured this year's tournament, with plenty of upsets and surprises for added interest.

While many good players were put out early in the draw, the challenge matches yesterday provided an opportunity for those who had confidence in themselves to show their best. In the challenge matches only one upset occurred when Betty Fife, U.C., defeated Anne McDonald, U.C., 5-7, 6-4, 6-2. Anne had won her way to the inter-collegiate team, but her defeat yesterday means that her place among the inter-collegiate four will be taken by Betty.

Bobbie McDonald, U.C., turned in a brilliant effort on Monday against Marj Mesbaugh, M.C. The latter, a south-paw, won on superior placements, 9-7, 6-2.

Group leadership goes to Victoria with 23 points, followed by U.C., 16 points, M.C., 9, St. Hilda's 8, and St. Mike's 7.

The finals will be played today at the Canadian National courts, on Cottingham Street.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Toronto: Controller Dr. F. J. Conboy, Chairman of the Airport Committee, yesterday told a meeting of the Optimist Club that Toronto's Malton Airport will be the largest in the world and will be equipped with the most modern lighting system.

Fort Francis: Flares swept the area north of Fort Francis last night and laid waste many square miles of timberlands. Seventeen people were reported dead and a score injured.

Istanbul, Turkey: Dr. Walther Funk, Reich Economics Minister, reported yesterday that Germany will shortly begin negotiations in the United States similar to the recent British-German agreement. Dr. Funk believes that America now regards the German economic system as the most practical.

Piggott and Hall Battle To-day In Interfaculty Tennis Final

Both favourites in the University Interfaculty tennis tournament smashed their way to the finals with one winning in easy fashion, and the other pulling out a victory after a long five-set match. Bruce Hall, blonde Victoria student, won his spot in the final brackets by means of a soft win over Bill Small. The scores of the one-sided match were 6-2, 6-0, 6-3. Big Bill Piggott of School edged a win over Paul Snyder, also last year's senior squad, 5-7, 9-7, 6-8, 6-2, 6-1.

In the Hall-Small match, there was never any doubt as to the outcome of the match. Hall had his smooth backhand and forhand hitting the tapes with unerring accuracy, and Small wilted under the barrage of a well-aimed attack.

The Piggott-Snyder tussle proved to be the highlight of the tournament. Both boys were hitting the ball with good pace, and Snyder surprised all by standing up so well under the smashing drives of the big S.P.S. student. Snyder, with his two-footed lachard, upset Piggott's equilibrium in the first set and captured it 7-5. From then on the match was nip and tuck, but after the third set, Snyder finally broke under the deep drives of an accurate Piggott.

The senior and intermediate teams will be composed of five men each. Instead of a tournament this year, team matches will be run off with five singles and two doubles matches. The senior matches will be held at McGill beginning next week.

Students' Directory

Every University student is asked to make sure, at once, that his correct Toronto address and telephone number are entered upon his registration card in the office of the University Registrar, Simcoe Hall, or of his College Registrar or Faculty Secretary. The University Directory is now being prepared for the press and it is of the greatest importance that all addresses and telephone numbers be correct.

With only a couple of days to go, the tickets for the first all-university informal dance have been half sold out. The dance, which comes the night before the rugby game between McGill and the University of Toronto, will be very well attended, judging from the rush for the tickets, declares Ar Wilkinson, who is one of the convenors of the dance.

Ticket sales will cease on Thursday night at 6 p.m. and after that time, the Hall Porter and other ticket sellers will not be allowed to release a single ticket, so that those who wish to attend the dance are urged by the committee to get their tickets immediately. No tickets will be sold at the door of Hart House. Only 600 tickets altogether will be sold.

Majority of Freshies Satisfied With Liberty of Residence Life

"There are always the windows," was one U.C. freshe's reply to the question "What happens when your leaves are used or cancelled?" But further investigation revealed that the slimiest co-ed could not squeeze through the six-inch apertures allowed by Whitney Hall ground floor windows.

One Annesley Hall freshe, an erstwhile boarding school resident, stated that he had never found rules hard to break, but as she now finds regulations quite lenient, she does not expect to have to resort to anything underhand.

Casual leave for first year students is ten-thirty at most of the women's residences. In addition to this there is an average of two twelve-thirty leaves a week. Later leaves, though scarcer, can be obtained. First year co-eds are of the almost unanimous opinion that the leaves granted are reasonable. They did add, however, that they might feel differently after a year's experience.

Among the few dissenting voices are heard some of the boarders at St. Joseph's who consider themselves adults and expect to be treated as such. Everywhere there is a dislike for the fussiness over that one extra minute on the doorknob. At Whitney Hall these and any other odd seconds are added until the overtime amounts to fifteen minutes. After fifteen minutes "gating" sets in. In this entails the loss of leaves for some length of time, and the erring freshe will probably commence studying at seven-thirty every night. Gating is also the probable result of casually taking an overnight after hanging a "Sleeping" sign on the door knob.

KAPLANSKY WILL STUDY AT HARVARD

Ivory-Tickling Mathematician Expresses Views on Modern Music

Last year The Varsity carried an interview with a fourth year student named Izzy Kaplansky. The heading on the interview was Ivory-Tickling Mathematician is a Wow!

Since then, the ivory-tickling mathematician has come a long way. He participated in an international mathematics competition in collaboration with two fellow mathematics students, A. J. Coleman and N. S. Mendelsohn, and the three-man team defeated nearly fifty teams from the leading universities in North America.

Of all the team members participating in the competition, Kaplansky made the highest mark, and was awarded a scholarship to do post-graduate work in mathematics at Harvard. The University of Toronto awarded him a fellowship, and he is now doing post-graduate work here, upon completion (Continued on page 4)

HARDWICKE LAUDS IMAGINATIVE DRAMA

Noted British Actor Stresses Artistic Significance of Legitimate Stage

Almost five hundred students packed Hart House Theatre yesterday afternoon to hear Sir Cedric Hardwicke deliver his informal address. The distinguished English actor, guest of the University Drama Committee, was enthusiastically received by the throng of students that turned out to hear him. Stressing the importance of imagination in the drama, the speaker gave as an example Shadow and Substance, his current production. Speaking briefly on the merits of this extremely successful play, he said, "It is truly a great play because of its infinitely imaginative quality." He pointed out that the play derived its power from its gentleness and its suggestion rather than from a loud statement of bare fact.

Comparing the theatre to other art forms, Sir Cedric showed that while products of the other arts are static and never-changing, the drama is a living thing. For instance, once a painter has completed his work, the painting remains the same forever. "The actor (Continued on page 4)

SCENIC BRITAIN IS THEME OF LECTURE

Captain Fred Reid Delivers Illustrated Traveltogue on British Isles

The picturesque and historic places in the British Isles were described by Captain Fred H. Reid in his illustrated traveltogue "Highlights of Britain" at Eaton Auditorium last night.

Captain Reid secured his material last summer in an extensive tour of Great Britain and adjacent islands. He described the scenic Hebrides and Channel Islands and many of the more remote parts of rural Ireland, Scotland and Wales. Tales were told of historic places such as Glamis Castle, home of Queen Elizabeth, Holyrood Castle where the ill-fated Mary, Queen of Scots once lived, and the home of Robert Burns, which is said to attract more tourists than Shakespeare's house at Stratford-on-Avon. Moving pictures and photographs made description more vivid.

NO NECESSITY HERE FOR OFFICIAL GREETER OF VISITING STUDENTS

According to E. A. Macdonald of the S.A.C. the University does not state an individual official greeter whose duty would be to welcome students who are visiting from other universities.

Yesterday Mr. Macdonald said that this task was not left to any one person. Following the procedure of last year, a committee will be chosen by the S.A.C. later on in the season to look after the entertainment of visiting students. Notables who come here to lecture, and open buildings, usually do so on the invitation of the President of the University, Hon. H. J. Cody, or Hart House officials. "As far as official greeting is concerned," says Mr. Macdonald, "I look after most of that myself."

"The fear of war is the most terrible thing about Germany today," said Professor Lewis of Trinity College, in an address to the Commerce Club last night. "And it's a war that the German people are certainly not in sympathy with."

Professor Lewis, who is a member of the German department of Trinity College, spent nearly a month in Germany last summer. As a student of German language and literature, he has kept closely in touch with developments in that country and, during the past twenty years, has spent a considerable amount of time in Germany.

Stressing the fact that he was expressing only personal opinions, based upon limited contacts, mainly with people of his own or allied professions, Professor Lewis then proceeded to outline some of his own conclusions regarding Germany today.

He said that his acquaintances, many of whom were in sympathy with the Nazi government when he last saw them, in 1934, are, almost without exception hostile to the regime today. (Continued on page 3)

OUTLOOK UNFAVOURABLE FOR WOMEN'S BUILDING

Outside Grant Must Be Made Before Construction Plans Proceed

Plans for a Women's Athletic Building still need that $100,000 to become a reality, according to Miss Parkes, Associate Secretary of the S.A.C. That Hart House should offer swimming, badminton, basketball, baseball and gymnastic facilities to undergraduate men and that women should lack similar equipment for physical development during their four years of college life has been deplored each year with little result. Last year the situation was thoroughly canvassed but even with the addition of a reasonable amount to women's athletic fees, such a building (Continued on page 3)

KIDNAPPED--

Abducted by freshmen on the morning of the Victoria "Bob", Eric Best, sophomore president, was returned to the stage of Hart House in time for the first curtain last night.

Clad only in scanty diapers, Ernie, member of the Boh committee, was forced by compelling hands to face a gleeful crowd of 800 just before the Boh began.

Later garbed resplendently in tails Ernie told the story of a forced ride to a home in Lawrence Park. Blindfolded and driven in circles he was unaware of the whereabouts of the hideout until later. Unable to leave because of an embarrassment concerning apparel he remained with his capitors till 7:30.

"They were very nice about it all," stated the president. "Even the meals were excellent. The only part I didn't like was the stage exhibition."

GERMAN SITUATION TO BE DISCUSSED AT U.C. PARLIAMENT

The second meeting of the University College Parliamentary Club will take place this coming Thursday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Junior Common Room. The resolution will be "Resolved that this House deplores the foreign policy of the 'Jaime Berliet' government."

Education for Marriage

In the light of changing social standards and advances in scientific and psychological knowledge, Canadian university students feel that this is a day when moral attitudes between men and women should be re-defined and clarified. The student conference at Winnipeg last year resolved to recommend to various delegations that study groups on sex and marriage should be set up on the various campuses, and attempts be made to inaugurate courses on such subjects on the university curricula. Up until the present time little has been done on the Eastern campuses, to carry out the spirit of this recommendation.

Such problems are definitely difficult to handle. At the present time we seem to be between the tendency to revert to mid-Victorianism on the one hand, and swing to the blasé attitude to sex adopted by so many of the pseudo-modernists on the other. Courses in marriage have been introduced into some of the universities to the south of us and have been accepted with gratification by the students.

Last year Rev. J. D. Parks, then of Carlton Street United Church, now the minister at High Park United Church, spoke twice at S.C.M. noon-hour meetings for men in the Hart House music room. His first address, "The Case for Chastity" was attended by a great number of students, and in some quarters its popularity gave rise to a certain healthy but somewhat juvenile amusement. After the meeting many university students remained to discuss certain specific questions, which in many cases must have been real personal problems. This fact alone was a strong indication that there was a real and vital need, for someone who can treat the subject in as sympathetic a manner as did Mr. Parks.

It is an accepted fact that a university education postpones marriage beyond the age when normal people naturally tend to assume the responsibilities of married life. This in itself gives rise to special problems.

At the present time there is no way whereby university students can avail themselves of any course of lectures pertaining to the problems associated with youth, love, and marriage.

True enough there are many books written about the subjects, and with the exception of the silly embarrassment occasioned by obtaining these books at libraries, nothing stands in the way of a person who is interested in discovering the truths of the subjects getting these books. However, books are insufficient, as the courses established in other subjects such as economics, history, etc., indicate. There is a definite need for sex education, and it should be studied like other subjects.

It may be some time before it is felt that the need is such that it warrants a course on this campus, but in the meantime the S.C.M. planned to do something about it. Mr. Parks will speak in the subject "Youth and Marriage" today, in the first of the S.C.M. noon-hour addresses, and in the near future he will commence a study group for men on this and related subjects.

Perhaps no better man could have been chosen to assume the responsibility for this work, and those who have been familiar with him in his church work, or met him in Hart House last year will be glad to hear that they will have further opportunity to study under such a capable instructor.

Rugby Injuries

Sympathies are extended to the injured players of the senior rugby team who will be kept to the side-lines for some time to come. Don Mumford is reported as doing well after his appendicitis operation, and MacDonald as happy as can be expected with a broken ankle. Doug Turner will be back for snap-backing duties before long, but in the meantime Warren Stevens is thinking that Old Lady Luck has disappeared around the corner.

It is hard to look at an injured rugby player, who is used to spending most of the game in the game, sitting on the side-lines. And it is so much the worse when the home team is losing.

Sometimes we wonder that there are not more serious injuries in the gruelling game than there are. Judging by those sustained in high school and even in the interfaculty contests, senior rugby is almost a safe game to play. The reason is that senior players have better coaching, they have more experience and know how to fall, tackle, and charge with the least possible danger of serious injury to themselves and their opponents.

And they are also in better condition, and are able to "take" things which would almost kill an ordinary man.

This doesn't suggest that when a man is injured it is because he has had a poor coach, poor equipment, is in poor condition, or doesn't know how to play. There are bound to be accidents in any game of such a nature, but it is encouraging to note that there are so few serious injuries in intercollegiate sport; for this the various coaches and athletic associations may be commended.

Athletic Fee Endorsed

Last week the Emmanuel College Students' Society which voted down the athletic fee a year ago, indicated that it now heartily endorsed the fee by voting unanimously to pay it. When the new system was first inaugurated it was decided to allow the graduate colleges which supposedly would not derive as many privileges as the undergraduate colleges, to decide whether they would pay or not. O.C.E., Wyelife and Knox showed they wished to take in the rugby games and have the other advantages made possible, but Emmanuel College, knowing that there were a few students who would be unable to reap these advantages, decided not to enter.

A year ago there was a considerable feeling on the campus that this was just another fee of which already there were too many, and those working on Saturdays especially, implied that they were not in favour. After a year, however, it is very encouraging to those who worked toward making the fee a reality, to find that apparently all opposition has disappeared, and that another graduate college has expressed its approval.

It is interesting to note that when the fee was discussed in the open meeting of the above society, the President made clear his stand that each college had a debt to the University, and although there were some who would find it advantageous to turn it down, as a part of the University it behooved the college to assume its share of responsibility.

Shadow and Substance

For two acts Paul Vincent Carrol's "Shadow and Substance" is just another good Irish play, knowingly written, well cast and acted. But the third act is a bombshell which in a blinding flash of light illumines the two previous acts and leaves the audience numb.

This extraordinary piece of stage-craft is due in the main to the sheer power of the author's conception, and to Sir Cedric Hardwicke's performance as the priest whose synthetic ecclesiastical sincerity is blasted by the friendship of a "lovely child". Sir Cedric is a very great actor. His technique is so controlled and polished that every tiny movement, every slight inflection of his voice can be overwhelmingly impressive. In the last act particularly his voice was

About four nights ago (i.e., a four-night ago), a loud sigh of relief hushed itself over the campus and soon became mingled with a loud toothless cheer from Prof. Twotones McGurk. No, it wasn't because someone had discovered what is put in the Hart House vegetable soup. It was because they finally found that little tisket-a-tasket basket for which every radio singer has been searching all summer. And to think that it should be found right here on our campus! In fact, to think that it should be found at all! In fact, to even think at all! And you'll never guess who found it! The fifty-nine Green-Eyed-Whites! It seems that this ghastly band of purplish-iridescent ghosts were truckin' around the campus, derisively swingin' the beautiful aria from "La Flauto Travata" and her flea-flea, for the benefit of Prof. McGurk, who lay curled up asleep on the steps of U.C. muttering to himself, while struggling to wink his glass eye, "Why in the world does Donald Duck?" Suddenly there appeared a lovely little girl, carrying a little yellow basket (line 7 of the song, remember?). The Green-Eyed-Whites grabbed their back-teethed combs, and began to part their hairs with anticipation, comma, but meanwhile a frosh from South House dashed across the campus and asked her to next Saturday's football game. This delighted her so much that she kissed him mushily. Ummmm-yuhhh-ummmmm. (Wait till he finds that she has no registration card and can't get in for nothing!) The Green-Eyed-Whites grabbed the basket and turned it in at the Hall Porter's desk in Hart House, where it is now on display.

But by the way, why the heck does Donald Duck?

so subtly used that even the slightest change in pitch was like a rapier point. And even his little finger spoke worlds.

In striking opposition to Sir Cedric's smooth polish was the ingenious servant girl, Bridget, played by Julie Hayden. Miss Hayden's performance was of a kind we usually dislike—she was obvious, and her effects were obtained so obviously; but throughout the play she conquered by sheer intensity and sincerity. You forgot her shortcomings and were simply carried along by her spirit. An extraordinary feat! The rest of the cast was excellent, though most, including the inimitable Miss Allgood, showed a slight tendency to overplay, due of course to over-familiarity with the parts. Special mention should be made of the forceful piece of work by Lloyd Gough as the rebellious schoolmaster.

The production as a whole demonstrated the necessity of realizing the part and the play as a unity, and the need of studied control of technical resources in that realization. This is a lesson the campus as a whole should learn.

Theatre of Action

It is always stimulating to observe enthusiasts at work even when their enthusiasm is not harnessed in a completely satisfactory manner. Genuine attempt is to be congratulated. Progress is a virtue. The Theatre of Action is both stimulating and virtuous and is to be congratulated.

Its production of "Plant in the Sun" last night at Oddfellows' Temple was powerfully impregnated with pep if not with technical perfection. Most of the actors were convincing. Most especially so were Jules Ross (Issy) and Sydney Banks (Pee Wee). Benny Lemick took his part well. Jules Ross was the one actor who had a complete and interesting characterization worked out which he executed with excellence.

The excess movement of the actors did not harmonize with the weak voice production and the forced emotion. Each and every worker seemed to be of the same temperament and character (Continued on page 4)

Senior Track Meet At Stadium To-day

School Favoured to Retain Rowell Memorial Cup

This afternoon at one-thirty in Varsity Stadium, S.P.S. will defend the Langford Rowell Memorial Trophy which they won last year. Victoria College has entered a strong team and the race for the championship should be strictly a two-team battle.

Gordon McHenry, S.P.S.'s intercollegiate sprint and quarter-mile champion, is the favourite in the sprints over Harold Brown and Prodrick, Vic; Laidlaw, Trinity; and Ernie Smith, U.C. Dave Crichton, S.P.S., and Delaney, Trinity, will be co-favourites in the quarter. Dave Crichton will try for records in both the mile and the half. Dave will be pushed in the half by Delaney, and Kaylor, U.C., and in the mile by Thompson, S.P.S., and Watt, Meds. Crichton also will try to win the three mile over Forrest, Emmanuel; Hoger, S.P.S., and Louth, of Wyldlife. If Crichton wins these four events it will be the first time in history that they have been won by the same man. This feat will be all the more remarkable if he sets two records because his competition will not be exceptionally strong.

In the hurdles Armstrong will fall heir to O'Connor's crown if his leg holds up, otherwise Rowell, senior hurdler two years ago, and intermediate champion in 1935, should win. This should give Vic a solid block of points on which her championship aspirations will depend. Cases in the low hurdles is expected to provide Vic with the first three places. Rice, a Vic freshman, is entered in the highs. S.P.S. have two hurdlers entered, Hutton, who has placed in the intermediate met for the past two years,

SWIMMING CLASSES CONTINUED FOR MEN

Daily Classes will be Held with P.T. Credits as

STYLING EMPHASIZED

Resultant of the success of the intermediate swimming classes introduced last year for men in the Hart House pool, Mr. W. Winterburn, swimming instructor, announces that these popular classes will be continued this year. Provision has been made to hold one of these classes daily and P.T. credits will be given. Students may receive two credits a week provided one day elapses between classes.

"The emphasis in these classes will be on styling," stated J. Gordon Troyer, who has been appointed by the Athletic Directorate to continue the work he did last year in these classes.

"You can't achieve proper styling in such a stroke as the crawl working alone or even from reading a book on swimming," continued Troyer, who journeys each year to confer with Matt Mann, the great American swimming coach of Michigan State University.

Interested students should enquire early at Mr. Winterburn's desk as these classes begin next week. Following is the schedule of hours for the classes: Monday, 11 a.m.; Tuesday, 11 a.m.; Wednesday, 3 p.m.; Friday, 3 p.m.; Saturday, 11 a.m. and Wood, Orr, Meds, who won this event in the junior meet, is a strong competitor in the high hurdles.

Victoria rules the favourite in field events, just as S.P.S. is the favourite on the track. Harold Brown, British Empire champion in the broad jump, and his brother Wallace, intercollegiate record holder, should finish one-two in the broad jump and the shot put. Harold is expected to win the javelin and Wallace the discus. Bailey of Vic, winner of the shot put and discus in the junior meet, and Ebister, U.C., along with Joe Dales and Rowell, Vic, Bajourney and Brett, Dents, are formidable contestants in these events.

Trussler, U.C.; McHenry, Joe Dales and Bajourney will push Harold Brown in the javelin. Joe Dales, Vic, Brett, Dents, and McEwen, S.P.S., are favourites in the high jump. Prodrick and Cass of Vic are expected to help give Vic a clean sweep in the broad jump. The pole vault is a duel between Jack Dales, Vic, and Trussler, U.C., both of whom have been on the senior team for the past few years.

This meet is a toss-up, between Vic and S.P.S. The School can win all the track events with little reserve strength, as well as the relay, while Victoria will win most of the field events with second and even third men placing, as well as taking the hurdles. Dave Crichton's attempt to win four events and the performances of the international Browns along with McHenry, should make the meet an outstanding attraction with a large number of new records. Entries will be taken in the Athletic Office, Hart House, until 1 p.m. today.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodwin

ON LAST YEAR'S CHAMPS

When we avidly devoured our article on Saturday's football game we rather dejectedly became aware that the part devoted to the showing made by Queen's disappeared some place between Kingston and the right editor's table. After their showing on Saturday it is impossible to disregard Queen's as unworthy of titular consideration for the Tricolour looked very dangerous in the first half. And it was only their lack of alternates that caused the downfall.

On the half-line they have a lad who gives evidence of becoming one of the most brilliant running halves in Canada, Smoky Joe Turner. Turner is also an outstanding tackler and plays the outside position on punts. The kicking is looked after by Bob Brown, and instead of being a weakness, is undoubtedly a source of Tricolour strength. Captain Art Stollery does the passing and quarter-backing in an efficient manner. Most of the plunging is performed by Armour, who hits the line with real power. Up along the wing line Queen's were sparked in the first game by Nick Paitchowski at snap. Nick's tackling on Saturday was hard, clean and constant and he appears to be headed for certain stardom. Tuffy Griffiths and Conlin also went well defensively.

When Ted Reeves develops a few more reserve linemen, his team will be hard to beat. They started slowly last year and finally won the title and those who are predicting a Varsity-McGill playoff would be wise to reserve judgment.

TRACK NOTES

The interfaculty track meet is being run at the Stadium today. Varsity is preparing for its intercollegiate title defence, finds itself without the services of such outstanding speedsters as Larry O'Connor and Dave Crichton. Coach Hee Phillips should have a great deal of difficulty in filling the gap left by these men but he may discover some unknown speed demons this afternoon. In any event the meet is always full of interest and the rest of last year's team will be on hand. We are wondering whether the Brown twins, or the Dales brothers will be scoring more combined points. Either one of these brother acts is a whole track team in itself.

While on the subject of track, it has been brought to our attention that the interfaculty harrier meet has been shifted from October 22 to November 5. We wonder if Wyldlife will walk off with the meet again this year. It almost won them the Intramural sports championship last year.

SPORT BRIEFS

The Tommy London Regatta is scheduled for October 22. In the evening a dance is being run to which all university students are to be invited. . . . We liked the way the Kingston Whig-Standard referred to Ben Rowland of Varsity as Kingston's Bee Rowland. What did they call Johnny Monro of Harry Sunshine? Toronto's Johnny Monro. . . . Incidentally the Queen's students gave Rowland quite a riding on Saturday. They seemed to resent the fact that he didn't give up an academic scholarship at Varsity, to play for Queen's.

Back Campus Sports Review

VICTORIA

Despite a more or less permanent lease on the Mulock Cup, Victoria this year is looking for a few Cam Grays. The championship crew of '37 seems to be riddled by everything except marriages.

For example, Captain Roy McInyre, flashy Freddie Pollard and husky Jock Cheevers, are with the intermediates, while Aymer, brilliant quarterback, is now a junior. Charlie Prince, regal king of the kickers, is blue and whitening as a senior. Imparting his football knowledge to S.P.S. this fall is "Bunk" Reeves, and graduated into the cruel world is Downard, "Tiger" Fowler, Bill Wilson and Eric Rancey will probably be giving only vocal support from the stands. Jack and Joe Dales are still burning up the cinder tracks but should report later, and lastly it is even rumored that Ernie Best has been kidnapped.

On the other side of the ledger are such stalwarts as Jock Kimber, Don MacRae, Perc Shultis, Dick Stewart and John Hilton, all ready to do or die for the scarlet and gold. Among the new material, there is certainly not strength in numbers, perhaps not in anything else, although Doug McPherson and Bill Jolliffe look good.

Naturally, the biggest question mark is Charlie Prince's successor. Here Roly Ellison will undoubtedly fill the bill—Roy being known for his prodigious punts.

Which accounts for all departments except the masterminding. With the departure of Coach Murray Graham to Harbord, his assistant of last year, Ernie Rodway, an ex-Vic star, will take over.

All of which boils down to a none-too-proud outlook, especially since Conquergood, former Argo player, will be ineligible. However, Coach Rodway says Vic will make it ten years in a row even if he has to enlist the services of a co-ed cheerleader.

INJURED VARSITY STAR LOST TO BLUE TEAM FOR REST OF SEASON

The Blue and White team will be forced to do without an important cog in its gridiron machine for about five weeks. Bucko McDonald, star half of the Varsity football squad, fractured one bone in his leg and clipped another which will definitely keep him out of the line-up for some time.

Bucko will leave the hospital in two or three days and hopes to hobble about with the use of a cane. The accident resulted from a bad fall which occurred in the third quarter, when McDonald was tackled by a mass of Tricolour hussies.

There is a bare possibility that, with a speedy recovery, McDonald will be fit to play in the play-offs if Varsity succeeds in making the grade. It would certainly be a shame if he had to hang up his football uniform after having only participated in one game in his final year of playing for the Blue and White.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Mary Conlin

The annual controversy about the proposed Women's Athletic Building was revived on Friday at the first meeting of the Women's Athletic Directorate. In addition to the staggering sum which will be required before this scheme is completed, there are a few other minor difficulties to be overcome.

One of these is to find a suitable location. It seems that all the vacant land in the city is a good 45 minutes any way you travel, and the future co-eds who are to enjoy the privileges of the athletic paradise, may not want to hike to the city limits for the fun of a quick plunge before tea. So the matter still stands.

Two Victoria girls will meet today as finalists in the interfaculty tennis meet. Claire Walsh and Ida Tipp, having swept easily through preliminaries and after meeting the best of other college material, are now matched in what promises to be the best match of the tourney.

Congratulations to Betty File of U.C., who defeated Anne McDonald, also of U.C., in a challenge match at the Canadian National courts yesterday. Anne now relinquishes her place on the intercollegiate team to Betty, who was the only challenger to succeed in placing on the team.

From St. Hilda's comes the news that 5 girls have entered Monday's golf tournament, not in search of glory but mainly for the fun of it.

of which he will go to Harvard to take advantage of the scholarship.

But the ability that made Kaplansky one of the well-known figures on the campus was not in mathematics but in music. He can play anything and often does. He has played every piano in the university, and has been acclaimed at each.

In a return interview, Kaplansky clarified some of the problems that have, at one time or another, presented themselves to every student.

Asked what research workers in mathematics did, Kaplansky confided, "They discover things that have not yet been discovered."

"Have you discovered anything yet?"

"I have submitted a paper to the American Mathematical Society," he answered, "but I do not know if it will be accepted. It deals with a problem in combinatory analysis."

"You have the wrong attitude on the whole thing," he replied indignantly, when it was suggested that mathematical research boils itself down to scribbling numbers and drawing figures. "Imagine yourself in the sixteenth century when everyone was looking for the solution to the quadratic equation. Someone sat down and found the solution. In just that way, a mathematics research worker will consider an unsolved problem, and sit down and try to solve it."

"Does he have to sit down?"

There was no answer to this question. Kaplansky told exactly what a fellowship entailed. "Well, a fellow is a fellow who can park his cars where it says Staff Cars Only if he has any cars."

The fellowship itself combines post graduate work with elementary instruction or lecturing.

In reference to his musical future, Kaplansky stated—quite categorically that he intended to continue "ticking the ivories" indefinitely.

gleet or ignorance. Especially is this true of the women, who are treated with complete callousness as the result of the strong hold of religious custom. The frequent result is a delayed treatment and an unnecessary death. As examples of the widespread ignorance, Dr. Carr told of children branded with hot irons to drive out the evil spirits thought to cause the disease. Any appeal to the Indian-controlled courts is useless.

In closing, Dr. Carr urged that mere technical skill was not enough. Every member of a hospital staff ought to be a missionary. If Christian teaching is given at the same time, hospital treatments are the first step towards conversion.

COMMERCE CLUB HEARS LEWIS ON GERMAN SITUATION

He cited the case of a friend of his, an ex-serviceman and a pure "Aryan", who was dismissed from his position because the news leaked out that he had once voted on a Social-Democratic ticket.

"There is a universal condemnation of the Nazi anti-Jewish movement," continued Mr. Lewis. "The Germans I met went out of their way to tell me that they are heartily ashamed of it. I found not only passive disagreement, but a fierce resentment against this anti-Jewish policy."

"Despite lies, for example, which the German people have been fed regarding Czech atrocities in Sudetenland, few people seem to be taking notice of propaganda. They are well-informed, and, oddly enough, have access to most foreign newspapers."

Continuing on this topic, Professor Lewis said, "The German people are sick of propaganda. There is an actual revolt against the 'Blood and Soil' literature which is the only literature the regime allows. Intellectual leaders who can do so are leaving the country, even though the country would be glad to have some of them stay. Professors would rather not teach what they are told. Of course, they can't all leave."

"There is an overwhelming disgust with all the sullen features of the regime," Professor Lewis concluded, "and it seems to me inconceivable that Hitler and the party leaders could have dreamt of leading such a divided people into war."

"Most of the people with whom I talked agreed with Wickham Steed's estimation that sixty per cent of the German people are not in sympathy with the regime."

With Frank Shuster

VARSITY AS A RULE is pretty soft on the freshmen of this university, and our young neophytes should praise Allah, and wiggle, wiggle, wiggle, because they do not have to undergo tortures that other colleges have.

For instance, the freshmen of North-east Centre of L.S.U. have a hard life. . . . They must carry their books in a bucket (a little yellow bucket) . . . and they all carry alarm clocks. . . . The alarm clocks are set to go off at every hour, whereupon the freshman must yell "CUCKOO! CUCKOO!" The freshmen who are caught smoking have to purchase a five-cent cigar from a sophomore and smoke it. . . . MODIFIED RAPTURE. . . .

THE DAILY ATHERAEUM SAYS

Early to bed and early to rise Makes a man a bit unpopular.

ON THE SOCIAL COLUMB OF Oklahoma A & M was an Y.Y.A. dance . . . a society reporter of the Daily O'Collegian spent the greater part of three days trying to find out when and where the affair would be held . . . then came the scheduled night . . . a group gathered at the dance hall and no orchestra appeared . . . WHAT THE WHAT!

ULTRA REFINEMENT NOTE

Believe it or not, Oklahoma certainly keeps ahead of the times. . . . Their latest convenience is steam-heated sidewalks . . . when laying the steam-heating lines, engineers conceived the idea of placing the pipes under sidewalks . . . when winter comes, the heat will keep the walks free from ice.

College annex the avenue corridor and so control the Park Plaza was offered to Dr. Brown by an impersonator of Mr. Hiller.

A streamlined version of former "Bob" was offered with the assistance of a male chorus. The Victoria quartet presented the official bobbing of well known frosh in the form of five-line limericks, somewhat facetiously composed.

The Victoria Bob was begun by the janitor of the old college in Cobourg, who believed "every freshman class was the best ever, and deserved to be recognized as such." Hence the final frosh initiation has come to be called the "Bob".

said: "My party deplores the foreign policy of the aforesaid government chiefly for three reasons. The Munich agreement have already been violated so grossly that they are a joke. Secondly, Hitler's speech at Saarbrücken last Sunday, in which he practically dictated the internal composition of the British cabinet, renders England a second rate power. Thirdly, the handing over of Czechoslovakia to Germany means the inevitable handing over of millions and central Europeans who think that they ought to be allowed to think, act and pray as their consciences dictate, to Nazi ideological persecution."

The Hon. Sally MacDonald, leader of the opposition, declared: "Chamberlain has probably done as well as he could. He resorted to the most extraordinary diplomatic manoeuvres in an effort to secure at least a temporary peace and he more than succeeded."

and slush. . . . This idea is a practical one, and we believe that it could be used to advantage here at Varsity. . . . With this new convenience in winter, there is no longer any need for considering the idea of using transportation by dog-sled from Hart House to the Economics Building. . . .

DEAN LIONNA OF RUTGERS University recently designed a professor as "one who casts imitation pearls before real swine" . . . I SAY OLD MAN, THAT'S NOT PUKKA!

WHEN BUSINESS IS BAD, do not be downhearted. . . . consider the case of an ambitious photographer about the campus. . . . His brilliant idea was to tie himself about the different colleges, having foreseen himself with the date of the annual college hike, and offers in return for a guarantee of so many photos purchased, to bring along his trailer, make a fire, cook weiners, and even boil the tea, which revives them no end. . . . MORAL: YOU CAN'T KEEP A GOOD MAN DOWN. . . .

THE CAMPUS BEACON of Edinburg Junior College advises the incoming freshmen in no uncertain terms. The Beacon says. . . . To begin with never forget that you are just fish, and are not equal to the sophomores in any respect. . . . BUT HERE'S THE PAYOFF. . . . In the same issue of the paper, a freshman answered with this. . . . Sophomores kinda cramp my style, so I'll just ignore them. . . . After all, WHAT'S A SOPHOMORE ANYHOW BUT A WORNOUT FRESHMAN. . . .

is continually dealing with a living human being."

The speaker declared that producers in search of realistic drama had discovered that scene designers found it impossible to construct a "real" outdoors set. Consequently "drama had been driven indoors", and the stage degenerated with drawing room plays.

Sir Cedric commented on the change that the theatre has undergone in the last twenty-five years. A quarter of a century ago, the theatre had been reality. When one went to the theatre, one went to see the "real" bright light. Nowadays, people go to the theatre to escape from reality, Sir Cedric believes.

The eminent actor continued by saying that there was too much reality in the world today. "The theatre cannot be expected to compete with so gigantic a show as is being put on by Hitler and Mussolini". Thus the theatre, he pointed out, is an escape from such "theatricality" and should devote itself to the production of artistic works.

except for Issy, who alone gave a complete performance. But most important was the major error of the director who seemed to have missed the whole point of the play. It should have been like a "plant in the sun". But the play started and continued throughout with so much gag about that it gave the impression of a full grown plant before the sun could shine.

THOMPSON STRESSES NEED OF SINCERITY IN DRAMATIC ART

"Dramatics is not 'sissy stuff'." It demands hard work. Mr. Willard Thompson warned the Trinity Drama Club at its opening meeting yesterday. But he assured them that their work in drama would be remembered long after academic work and even professors have been forgotten.

He stressed sincerity as the essence of acting. He defended the theatre by stating that in the past two years the attendance at movies has dropped 50 per cent. It seems that people are becoming more interested in drama as an art, he said.

VICTORIA COLLEGE CAPTURES INTERFACULTY TRACK MEET

Students Endorse Sex Talks School Comes Second In Annual Track Meet

Unanimous Support Given To New Series

Nothing To Be Gossiped Over Says Speaker Regarding Lecture Series

TWO HUNDRED ATTEND

A unanimous vote by the students who attended Dr. J. D. Parks' lecture on "Youth and Marriage" yesterday proved conclusively that an elective series of lectures on marital problems confronting the youth of today is a good thing. Over two hundred male students crowded their way into the Music Room in Hart House to hear the S.C.M.-sponsored address signified their desire to study and learn the art of marrying.

Following the informal talk by Rev. Dr. Parks, the students were asked if they were in favour of a series of talks to be given once a week during the winter term at least. All those in favour of the course were asked to raise their hands. A very short pause followed, but in an instant nearly everyone in the room had his hand up.

This vote means that each week Dr. Parks will give to interested students a lecture dealing with some problem. "Nothing will be glossed over," he declared, describing the substance of the course. All aspects of the marriage problem would be treated. Physiological, and spiritual aspects would all be considered. Marriage as a social problem, and the historical background of marriages would also be discussed. Co-eds will not be allowed into the lectures. At least not at first.

McGill Considering Course
Montreal, Que., October 13, C.U.P.—McGill University has no such lectures as yet, but the need for them has long been recognized by many of our students. The McGill Daily intends to advocate a course on marriage given by the University. This new editorial policy will begin next week.

S.C.M. INAUGURATES NEW MONTHLY SERVICES

The Student Christian Movement of the University is inaugurating a series of monthly worship services to be held in Wyldlife Chapel. The first service will take place at 1:40 p.m.

The students will be addressed by Rev. W.H. Lockhart, S.C.M. Secretary of the University, and the service will be conducted by John Coleman, president of the University S.C.M.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Fort Francis: Due to a change in wind, new hazards have been created in the fire-stricken areas of the north-west country today. It is feared that the death toll which already stands at twenty, may be increased.

Toronto: Hepburn today ruled out the possibility that the King and Queen might be housed at Casa Loma. However the Ontario Government is prepared to place the finest accommodation available, if necessary, to engage a whole floor of the Royal York Hotel to meet the requirements of the Royal visitors.

Preparation For Marriage Is Important Says Parks In Interview

URGES UNIVERSITY COURSE

"I believe that the preparation for homemaking and married life is a most important subject," said Rev. J. D. Parks, in an interview with the Varsity yesterday afternoon. "You may go through college and yet never study the attitude necessary for a happy and harmonious married life."

Mr. Parks, minister at High Park United Church, who addressed men students at the S.C.M. noon meeting in Hart House yesterday on the subject of "Youth and Marriage," explained that the courses on marriage, which have become so popular in American Universities are included in the curricula of over two hundred colleges, were first introduced by Professor E. R. Groves in the University of North Carolina at the request of the students themselves.

The leadership of American colleges in this field is due, in Mr. Parks' opinion, to the increase of divorce and broken homes in the United States, and the desire of students to be prepared against such an occurrence in their own married life.

A course on preparation for marriage, if inaugurated in the University of Toronto, would be of great value to the students, in the opinion of Mr. Parks. "Separate classes should, of course, be held for men and women. As for the teacher, I don't think it matters greatly whether it is a man or woman," he concluded. "That would depend upon the lecturers available, and would be largely a matter of choosing those best prepared."

Pinafore Will Be New Vic Production

Because of the enthusiasm displayed at the first rehearsal for the Victoria Music Club's presentation of Gilbert and Sullivan's H.M.S. Pinafore, both director and members of the club are optimistic regarding the success of the production.

Dr. "Tommy" Crawford, who yesterday began his twelfth season as the Music Club's director, said that although principals are scarce, a large number of last year's chorus has returned, and he expects to find enough potential talent among the many freshers who were present, to provide a good cast.

The Music Club decided on H.M.S. Pinafore this year because the date of production has been advanced to January, and this opera is considered shorter and lighter than most Gilbert and Sullivan works. This opera, of a nautical nature, has what makes all Gilbert and Sullivan operas popular, namely the superb wit of the former combined with the appropriate music of the latter.

Rome: Benito Mussolini through his foreign office organ once again appealed today for a four-power pact as the only safeguard for peace. Only one thing can be done, it was stated, and that was to make peace between the dictators and the democracies—peace on the Munich pattern.

DRASTIC DANCES DEPLORED!

Out with the old, in with the new. Last year everyone was hopping and jumping strenuously in the Big Apple and Susie Q, but this year the leading dancing teachers of Toronto prophesy that dancers will glide along to the simpler, more graceful Lambeth Walk and Palais Glide.

The Palais Glide as described by Mr. Da Costa, Toronto dancing instructor, is not a glide at all. Really it is a series of hops. The dance he said was originated in England where it is receiving popular acclaim along with the Lambeth Walk. "The trend," he explained, "is towards a simpler dance in which a group can participate." Mr. Da Costa said that dance crazes run in cycles; a strenuous dancing period followed by a season of simpler, more facile dances.

It is the opinion of Miss Dagnar, who emphasizes correct deportment, that dances of the type of the Big Apple have their place in the dancing world for they have taken young people with them." However, she does not teach the Big Apple which she regards as "a little too crude."

That many romances have had their beginnings at dancing classes was affirmed by all those instructors who teach groups. Concrete evidence of this was supplied by Mr. Da Costa, who married one of his former pupils recently. Four pupils of Miss Dagnar have also taken the marital vows after meeting their respective partners at her classes.

The trend towards simpler dancing steps was described by Mr. Gordon Reece as quite natural, for as he pointed out the Big Apple is too difficult for the average dancer who therefore must turn toward a simple step.

These observers have found that the amount of pleasure which the student enjoys varies with his age. The gentleman of seventy-four will get more "kick" out of the instruction than the child of four, they observe.

LOCKHART CONDUCTS S.C.M. STUDY GROUPS

New Groups at Victoria Will Study Modern World Problems

AIM FOR HARMONY

The study group of the Vic S.C.M. under the leadership of Dr. Lockhart, head of the university S.C.M., will study "Christianity in the Modern World", a study on the relevancy of Christianity to the problems of our world. The group will use as their chief book: "The World Conference of Christian Youth."

This group held its opening meeting yesterday at Wymilwood. Dr. Lockhart suggested starting a correspondence with other groups all over the world to obtain various points of view. By study and discussion they hope "to join world thinkers and move in general harmony with youth." Dr. Lockhart (Continued on page 4)

FLYING CLUB TO SEE NEW SERIES OF FILMS

A series of films about the Imperial and Pan-American airways and the transcontinental services of the Bermuda and United Airlines will be shown at the opening meeting of the University Flying Club in the Music Room in Hart House tonight at eight.

Professor London will speak to the members on the advances of aviation during the last year with special reference to Canadian developments, according to Ernest Robertson, Flying Club president. Election of faculty representatives will take place.

VICTORIA PREPARES FOR CHARTER DAY

Egerton Ryerson's Petition Brought First Royal Charter

BRUCE WILL SPEAK

Possessor of the first Royal Charter ever granted in the British Empire to an educational institution under non-conformist control, Victoria College celebrates on November 4th, the 102nd anniversary of Charter Day.

In July, 1836, said Principal Brown, speaking of Charter Day Tradition, William IV, King of England, gave royal assent to the petition of Egerton Ryerson, and on October 12th, 1836, the Lieutenant-Governor affixed his signature to the Letters-patent, which founded Upper Canada Academy.

Originally a Methodist "seminary of learning" with 120 students, in 1841, Upper Canada Academy was granted degree-conferring powers, and became Victoria College, now one of the great Arts Colleges of the University of Toronto, with an enrolment of more than 850.

This year, for reasons of convenience, Victoria College has postponed Charter Day from October 12th until November 4th. His Excellency, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and Principal W. T. Brown will speak at the Charter Day exercises, which will take place in the College chapel.

Two Bands Will Play At Fall Informal

A dance which bids fair to enjoy great popularity is the first all-university informal. Tickets have been going like wildfire, and to date, over five hundred have been sold. This leaves but one hundred left for students.

The demand has been so great, and the prospects look so bright for a very successful affair, that the convenors have arranged for another band to cater to dancers. Don Armstrong will take over a bandstand in the Great Hall, while Canada's King of Swing will give out in the big Gymnasium.

Ticket sales will cease tonight at 6 p.m. and after that time no tickets will be released, either at the Hall Porters' or at the door of Hart House.

Brown Twins Account For Thirty-One of Victoria's Sixty-Eight Points

TWO RECORDS BROKEN

Sonnie Gold

Track fans at Varsity Stadium were treated to one of the finest brother acts seen here in a long time when Wallace and Harold Brown helped capture the Rowell Memorial Cup for Victoria College yesterday afternoon.

S.P.S. took the lead in the early part of the meet but later in the afternoon, with the results of the field events coming in, Vic gradually pulled ahead to win with a total of 68½ points against 42 for School.

Most instrumental in bringing about the victory were the Brown twins, accounting for 31 points between them; Wallace with three firsts for 15, Harold for 16 with a first, three seconds and a third. W. Brown shattered two records, his own in the Broad Jump with a leap of 25 feet 3¼ ins. And the Discus Throw with 132 feet 11 ins. toss, fully five feet more than the old mark. Brother Harold, while not breaking any records, proved himself to be the most versatile man on the track.

Perhaps the outstanding event of the day was the spectacular Half Mile won by Crichton, Canada's great middle distance runner. Crichton clipped almost two seconds off the old record with a run of 2 f. 58 in. The fast pace of this race told him, however, for, although coming in first ahead of Forrest, Crichton fell five seconds behind the mark he had set last year.

AVUKAH DRAWS UP SCHEDULE FOR YEAR

Social, Dramatic and Cultural Programme Planned For Coming Year

SPEAKERS INVITED

The Avukah Society, the only university organization of Jewish undergraduates, has drawn up an ambitious schedule of social, dramatic and cultural activities arranged for the current academic year. These plans will be further augmented at their first meeting called for the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 18, at the Women's Union.

Prominent speakers will address the group on subjects of current importance and cultural significance. These will be followed by an informal discussion on the evening's topic with questions answered by the speaker.

This year the meetings will be of two types. The general meet will discuss the club's various plans and projects, the evening to be closed with entertainment. The cultural evening, planned for Fridays, will present the speakers followed by the general discussion.

In affiliation with the S.C.M. dramatic group, the Society intends to increase its dramatic scope and at least one major dance is planned for the year. Social research on the vocations of Jewish college graduates is also high on the list of problems to be investigated by the groups; the statistical findings of which will form the basis for vocational advice for undergraduates.

International Illusions

When events of world-importance take place in spectacular manner, or follow each other with dramatic swiftness, as they did recently, there is little chance of any of us not being aware of what is occurring. Screeching newspaper headlines and blaring radios acquaint us with each successive development. Sometimes, however, news of equal or even greater importance occur in a much less sensational manner, but instead of triple-line streamers it is found in an obscure paragraph of a speech or in an out-of-the-way comment in the back pages of a newspaper. Such an event occurred during the past week-end.

Speaking at Saarbrücken last Sunday, Chancellor Hitler again told his people that the reason for their greatness was force. Amid this extolling of might, however, Hitler made a reference to Britain, the implications of which are of extreme importance. We reprint the paragraph.

"They (Chamberlain and Daladier) govern in countries whose internal construction makes it possible for them at any time to be supplanted by others who do not aim at peace. These others are there. In England it is merely necessary that instead of Chamberlain, a Duff-Cooper, an Eden, or a Churchill come into power. We know that the aim of these men would be to start war."

This speech came just a few days after a report that Chamberlain was considering the re-organization of his cabinet so that it would have a broader national basis, presumably by including at least one of the above-mentioned men. A logical interpretation of the speech therefore can easily be that found in a report taking up about two inches on the second front of Tuesday's Globe and Mail.

The diplomatic correspondent of the Manchester Guardian (Liberal) interpreted Chancellor Hitler's speech at Saarbrücken on Sunday as indicating the Fuehrer feels that Great Britain "is not merely competent enough and will have to get further scoldings."

"Hitler's speech is interpreted here (in London) as signifying that whatever changes there may be in the British Cabinet, he does not consider it desirable that (Winston) Churchill (Anthony) Eden and (Alfred) Duff-Cooper hold office in the future." The correspondent wrote.

The implications in Hitler's speech and the above report are so clear that little, if any comment, is needed. If Hitler can tell Britain who should and who should not be included in her Cabinet then he is unquestionably ruler of Europe and Britain has become a second-rate power in international affairs. Fantastic, you may say, and yet it is really so fantastic? About a year ago Anthony Eden was forced to resign from the British Cabinet because he refused to grant concessions to Mussolini and Hitler. Since that time the power of the Fascist nations has been growing continuously because of the policy of appeasement followed by the democracies. At one time during the Czechoslovakian affair Hitler was opposed by the greatest array of strength the democratic nations could possibly muster. Britain, France, Russia, and Czechoslovakia seemed to be willing to fight. Germany was hemmed in on both east and west. And yet, at the Munich conference the democracies backed down and Hitler got exactly what he wanted. As a result, there is now no natural frontier where Germany can be stopped on the west. Czechoslovakia has been destroyed as a military power. The countries of central Europe definitely have joined the fascist orbit. Russia has renounced her treaty with France. And the internal situation in France is precarious to say the least. In the few days since the Munich conference the entire balance of power in Europe has shifted in Hitler's favour. Is the possibility, then, of his dictating to England so fantastic?

There is a certain ironic tinge to the whole affair. In the past Britain dictated her policy to the countries of Europe by maintaining a balance of power among the European countries in such a manner that her voice was the deciding one. Now Hitler seems to have that power. Whether Britain can regain her lost position depends on whether or not she continues to give in to Hitler or opposes him. The situation is both fascinating and dangerous and developments which are bound to take place in the near future are worth watching closely.

Extra-Curricular Lectures

Supporting the principle that a university education should extend beyond the prescribed formal curriculum, the faculty of University College each year presents a series of lectures on cultural topics of general interest. This year the course is on modern English authors. Aldous Huxley, James Joyce, T. S. Eliot and other well-known figures will be dealt with, as well as younger writers who are still making their reputations such as Hugh MacDiarmid and Liam O'Flaherty. These authors are still living, and the work is of vital interest to all students of literature. Much of the material on the younger writers is not yet available on library shelves on in literary, periodicals, but represents special research on the part of the lecturers.

These series fulfill a definite need in supplementing the lectures on the academic curriculum, as many students who are intensely interested in cultural and literary topics are unable to study them formally. Graduates and outside visitors may also benefit by them. The faculty themselves, Principle Wallace points out, is glad of the opportunity to hear one another speak, and to lecture on topics in which they are particularly interested.

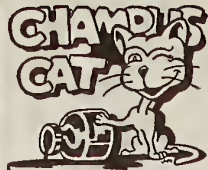

The first lecture, to-day, is Dr. Wallace speaking on Aldous Huxley, Room 8, University College, at 5 o'clock.

Record Pace

More than athletes were attempting to break records at yesterday's track meet it seems. Usually it is the custom to give a man who has just competed in a stiff race as long as possible to rest before running another, and especially is this so at Intercollegiate meets.

Yesterday Dave Crichton set a new record in the half mile; rated as one of the best, if not the best miler in Canada to-day, he was naturally keen about setting a new record in that event also. At the present time he holds the mile interfaculty record, but on various occasions has run the distance in ten or twelve seconds better time. His coach asked for some extra time for him to rest in between the events but was denied by the officials, consequently he failed to make as good a showing as would otherwise have been possible.

In all fairness we must admit that the officials have difficulty keeping a meet up to scratch, and a draggy track meet is only too common. However there were few fans to complain, and the athletes were only too willing to give Dave a good chance to set another record. In such a case, we feel that even track officials should stretch a point.

BRIG NANCY RETURNS FROM SUMMER CRUISE

MANTI MISSING!

Amid the mingled sounds of bagpipes, steamboat whistles, and the hoarse cries of the hooded dopplegangers, the Brig Nancy steamed slowly but majestically up the Don River, her giant turbines waving in the breeze, causing mingled shouts of horror and delight to rise from the eager natives who lined the banks.

Few of the jolly tars could forget the tragic incident of June 31, 1938, when that beloved scourge of the seas Capt. Wiregarters armed only with a knotted towel, perished, defending himself against a group of infuriated koala bears who extracted all his teeth and stoned him to death. His last words were perfectly foul. Requiescat in mare. All seven seas he saw, this man / A foul and lurid talker. / He handed in his tote-box card / And now has Davy Jones' larder! And where is Duke Manti, you ask ... (Ah, I see you have not forgotten him!) Well its like this. One hot summery night but a stone's throw away from Pitcairn Island he was carried off by two pygmies named Nordhoff and Hall.

In the meantime the mate, Moly Shyster, who is in real life associate editor of Berliner-Deutscher Beinauchworte-fuehrer took over the command of the Nancy and Wiregarters' gold-plated hunter and threw the log in the fire. Shyster's plans for the future are veiled and so are his ten wives, but speculations are rife that the Brig Nancy will be converted into a troopship by the government of Migraine. In the meantime the First Lord of the Admiralty and Shyster are dicker at the dock.

Dictated but not read.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA The Players' Guild

Those few who were able to arrive at any conclusion whatever after seeing "Transfiguration" must have felt that Life is indeed horrible.

The U.C. Players' Guild yesterday offered a condensed version of Ernst Toller's play which, unfortunately, does not lend itself to effective stage presentation.

As the plot was obscured in vague symbolism and there appeared to be little or no relation between scenes, the play degenerated into a confused battle between idealism and disillusionment. The outcome is still in doubt.

John Terrace in the leading role gave a sympathetic portrayal of a young soldier fighting for the glory of the Fatherland; he dies and returns to lead the masses out of slavery while a chorus unpleasantly about maggot and blood, and from here the audience is left far behind.

The Cast deserve congratulations for seizing upon the few lucid moments which the script provided and making them unforgettable.

The play was under the direction of Charles Walker, and is the first of a series to be presented at two-week intervals by the Players' Guild.

Back Campus Sports Review

The team that made it very interesting for the Victoria squad last year in the interfaculty rugby loop, namely the S.P.S. Jr.s, from all reports will again make it hot for all those aspiring to win the Mulock Cup, emblematic of supremacy in that department of interfaculty sport.

Last year the School squad was prevented from equalling the Scarlet and Gold outfit when they were defeated by the lowly U.C. team in a close 1-0 game. Had S.P.S. taken this game they would have been right in the contention, but as it turned out Vic went on to win the Mulock Cup.

The School team this year will very closely resemble that of last year, while the Vic squad will not have many of its former stalwarts. Foremost among the remnants from last year's team for S.P.S. will be Fugler, at the quarterback position, who was chosen on the 1937 all-star interfaculty team for that position. Other holdovers from last year's backfield are Barry, Munro, and Stirling, a fine trio of running backfielders. Slone will probably prove to be a tower of strength at the snapback position, while DePaul, Reynolds, Moore, and Warner will capably hold their ground along the wing-line. The worth of the newcomers has not yet been determined but there should be one or two good discoveries among them.

WOMEN'S TENNIS TITLE RETAINED BY CLAIRE WALSH

Ida Tipp Defeated by Veteran In Two Straight Sets

BOTH VICTORIA STUDENTS

Retaining the interfaculty singles title which has been hers since she came to Varsity four years ago, Claire Walsh seeded number one co-ed neither here, defeated Ida Tipp 6-2, 6-0, in the interfaculty tennis finals yesterday.

Both finalists are Victoria students, with Claire Walsh a veteran of tournament play. In the first set the favourite won three straight games. The fourth game was taken by Ida Tipp after a series of beautiful rallies. The tall blonde player added the next game to her efforts, but after this success, her more experienced opponent settled down to win the set with three games in a row. Many of the first set games were prolonged duce aces and the championship was given stiff competition.

At the beginning of the second set it was evident that Claire had decided on a stronger game, and her balls came harder and swifter. While there were long rallies in the second set, they were not as frequent as in the first one, and Ida appeared to have weakened. Her "pat ball" technique which had served her well in preliminary play, was disposed of efficiently by her crafty opponent. Claire had no difficulty taking six games in a row to win the second set and the match. The victory yesterday signified that individual honours were once again captured by Claire Walsh, and that Victoria again leads interfaculty competition.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Frank Shuster

THE BOUNCING BALL

Once every year, this space is devoted completely to the noble art of tennis, and we are given an opportunity once again of spouting our views and pet peeves on the game. First, let us take a glance at this year's senior squad. The team looks as good as ever with three out of four of last year's aggregation returning. As yet no interfaculty champion has been proclaimed due to the postponement of the finals between Bruce Hall and Bill Pigott until tomorrow. However it matters little who takes the championship as these two boys are sure bets for the singles berth on the senior squad.

Paul Snyder will also reclaim his position on the squad, and his form has improved so considerably that he will aid the team no end with his steady accurate play. Snyder surprised all and sundry by baffling it out with Pigott last week in the interfaculty tourney and he forced the big athlete from S.P.S. into five sets. Bill Small will probably step into the fourth slot due to his outstanding work in the tournament, and either Shorter of Ottawa, or Young may make the grade. Jack Tomlinson whose doubles work was outstanding last year is the only man to leave the squad, and with such veterans back as Pigott, Hall and Snyder, Coach Art Ham feels confident that the Blue team will walk off with the honours.

OUR OPPOSITION

The make-up of the opposing teams that will meet the Blue racquetters next week is still in a rather uncertain state. It seems that the other universities also have been having difficulty in getting their interfaculty tournaments run off so that they can select men worthy to represent their colours in the intercollegiate competition.

McGill has always provided the sternest competition, and it wasn't so long ago that they monopolized the championships. This was in the day of Bobby Murray, who has since then risen to the foremost position in Canadian tennis. Laird Watt also played intercollegiate tennis at that time, and these two boys alone were enough to make an opposing team cry "hoody ow!".

However since Pigott, one of the high ranking men in Ontario, and Bruce Hall, ranked tenth in Canada came into the picture the tide has gradually been turning in favour of the Blue boys, and they have now captured the tennis title two years in succession.

PASSING SHOTS . . .

McGill will have to start practically from scratch with only one veteran returning the vars. However this veteran is a formidable player who goes under the name of Pierre Dussanville, last year's captain of the squad. . . . Queen's squad is an unknown quantity at this moment. . . . Varsity intermediate golfers proved their superiority by scoring 24 points to edge out the U. of Western Ontario in the intercollegiate intermediate golf championships. . . . Jim Trow, Bill Belfry, Robin Harris, and Ralph Stewart took part in the contest for the Blues, and a fine job they made of it. . . . Good work, boys. . . . Another athletic fee privilege. . . . there is now in Hart House, in the golf room, a ping pong table. . . . you may take advantage of it if you care for that sort of thing. . . . Football Note. . . . Joe Turner, ace Queen's half, injured his leg yesterday afternoon in scrimmage. . . . However Coach Reeve expects that he will be fit to see action on Saturday against the Mustangs. . . .

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Mary Conlin

The finals in the interfaculty tennis meet are completed at last and as everyone expects Claire Walsh of Victoria is once again Varsity Champion. Playing interfaculty tennis for the last time Claire's ability throughout the play was never questioned. A fellow Victorian, Ida Tipp, was her opponent in the final round. The first set, in which the wily Claire was extended to a number of deuce games by her blonde opponent, featured some very fine rallies. However, the second set, was more one-sided as Claire gave greater depth to her drives, and the less experienced Ida was easily overcome.

Barbara Barnard, of McGill, who defeated Claire last year for the singles title in the intercollegiate play, will arrive in town tonight as one of the four members of the McGill team intent on recapturing singles honours for McGill.

The Queen's team, which captured highest points at the meet last year will be guests at St. Joseph's College and includes, Romola Girvin, Alma Cliff, Isabel Matheson, and Dora Tottenham.

A meeting of the Basketball club is being held this evening to arrange the season's schedule. From now on interest will be focused on the Freshies at all the colleges. Since graduation accounts for the loss of much valuable basketball material in all the faculties, the prospects at present are unexciting. However when those much-discussed Freshies turn out for practises the situation is bound to become interesting.

Queen's Faces Difficulties
Kingston, Ont., October 13, C.U.P.—The question of a course of lectures on marriage at Queen's was brought up by the Queen's Journal last year, and received a good deal of favourable comment for quite some time. However, the question was finally dropped in face of the difficulty of getting a capable man to handle such a course. Although the students are apparently greatly interested in anything of this kind, nothing has been brought up on the matter this year, as yet.

"Marriage is an art, and since it is an art we can all learn something about it," said Rev. J. D. Parks yesterday at the first S.C.M. noon-hour talk of the year. Taking this statement as a defense for suggesting a course on "Youth and Marriage" in the university curriculum, he urged that a comprehensive study of the subject be made by present-day youth in order to secure more happiness through life. Next week a men's study group, led by Rev. Mr. Parks, will be formed.

"Three questions present themselves to young people today," Rev. Mr. Parks continued. "What is my purpose in life, what occupation am I to take up, and ought I to marry?" The last question is a natural and vital one, but after seeing so many marriages break-up through various causes, he feels that it should be approached with more thought and care. "We are just on the threshold of understanding sex, and we must face it squarely and find out what it is all about."

Many marriages could be saved if people could learn to read about the problem and see themselves objectively in order to remedy any mistakes or defects in their personality. "There is a fundamental psychological and physiological difference between man and woman," said Rev. Mr. Parks, "and ignorance of this difference may wreck a marriage. We must prevent thoughts and attitudes of mind which may hinder a harmonious married life. It is possible to have the information, to learn the attitudes, and to study the art so that it will make a great difference in the kind of married life one will enjoy."

Art, Music and Drama

On Saturday evening in Hart House Theatre the Playwrights' Studio Group will open its season, presenting three new one-act plays and a curtain-raiser. The group, which is beginning its seventh year, devotes itself to writing and producing original Canadian drama, and to date has presented four full-length plays, forty one-act plays and six curtain-raisers in Hart House Theatre. Saturday's bill will be as follows: Cordell Flower, by Wilfred David Pilcher; a Russian folk-tale, Little Stupid, dramatized by Virginia Coyne Knight, with lyrics and incidental music by Mary B. Picot; and Family, a comedy drama by Rica Meean Farquharson. The curtain-raiser, based on a Chinese anecdote, is The Polite Parents of Pretty Toad, by Dora Smith Conover.

The first production of the Toronto Masquers this year is Down the Rain Pipe, Downing, a new full-length comedy play by Allen Nobleton of the Evening Telegram, to be presented in Margaret Eaton Hall on Thursday and Friday evenings this week.

The play is said to be well-written light comedy, based on the theme of the

Query on "Blind Dates" Draws Varied Response

Male Students Divided On Femmes Fear "Lemons" Less Than Stronger Sex
"Interesting"
MEDS DIVIDED

Although there was a wide range of opinion expressed on the campus yesterday, the general consensus among male undergraduates seems to be that blind dates are "pretty much all right." Numerous campus "big-names" seemed rather hesitant about committing themselves, whether because of lack of experience or fear of social ostracism it is hard to say.

"Blind dates are O.K. by me," said Bill Adams, III Trinity, "but count me out when it comes to arranging them. If they don't work out the dissatisfied party usually approaches you with the sarcastic query as to whether he or she really deserved that, and then you're lost another friend."

Two students from Knox who refused to reveal their names said that they had never had blind dates but that "it would be interesting." Ted Webb, I S.P.S., voiced the same opinion. "Blind dates are especially good for out-of-town students who don't know many people here, but it's best to know the person who is doing the arranging."

Purpose of Flying Club To Arouse University Interest in Aviation

To promote air-mindedness in the University was declared the purpose of the University of Toronto Flying Club at their open meeting last night in Hart House.

Professor T. Loudon, Honorary President of the Club, predicted a great future for aviation in Canada, and urged the members to take an active interest in flying.

Motion pictures of Pan-American, Imperial, and United Air Lines, were shown.

President Ernest Thompson also addressed the meeting, saying that during the year the club will meet every two weeks.

Initiation of Pharmacy Freshmen Is Concluded At Annual Banquet

Roll pills! Roll pills! Roll pills! Yellow, black and orange ties and little-boy caps were discarded forever last night by over a hundred Pharmacy freshmen who packed the oak room of the Union Station for the annual inductive banquet.

The climax to freshmen initiations was seen when Prof. W. C. MacAulay, member of the teaching staff of the Ontario College of Pharmacy for one year removed the tie and cap from Prof. F. N. Hughes, member of the faculty for only a week or two. As soon as Prof. Hughes was freed from the obligations of a "freshman" teacher by the action of "sophomore" Prof. MacAulay, second year pharmacists turned to first year pharmacists and repeated the ceremony exactly. The freshmen became sophomore. In the language of the students at the Gerrard Street branch of the University, they are juniors, and the second year students are seniors because there are only two years to the course.

The banquet last night was marked by more yelling and singing than the day. Head table diners, mostly members of the pharmacy faculty, responded to demand after demand by the students to stand up and take a bow.

A pianist banged out drinking songs to stimulate appetites. Oliva optima, pilulae Fabarum Fuscae, Indehiscent fructus, torrefactum vitulinae cum fomenta cataplasma and other rare pharmaceutical dishes were dined without a murmur. Wow.

Toasts—Dalton Joint, Austin Burch, Ed Harwood followed.

Hoping to "inculcate in the students a genuine allegiance to their college," Dean R. V. Hurst impressed on them the opportunities that were theirs upon graduation.

"Last year," he stated, "we virtually could not fill vacancies, men were so scarce!"

HUXLEY DECLARED 'CONSTRUCTIVE' MIND

Wallace Lauds English Writer In College Lecture

"One of the most stimulative, penetrating and constructive thinkers of our day," stated Professor Wallace, U.C., of Aldous Huxley in his lecture yesterday afternoon. The transition from his theory of life-ship to his humanistic doctrine as put forth in his latest book "Ends and Means" was due, as Huxley himself says to "the pointlessness of the lives of his friends," which could lead only to "cynical disillusionment and bitter unhappiness. Technical progress has merely provided civilization with more efficient means for going backwards."

Born in 1894, the grandson of Matthew Arnold, Huxley was brought up at a time when Wordsworth and Ruskin were exerting a great influence. An eye affliction in his early life increased his tendency towards a solitary, self-absorbed temperament which he regretted later.

He was educated at Eton and Oxford, and travelled widely, but avoided making "practical entanglements," priding himself on the fact that he possessed only a few books and a motor-car.

Among his novels are "Brave New World," a fantastic story, "shot through with deadly earnest." The story concerns the lives of human beings synthetically produced, in the world of 632 A.D. (after Ford) where all else has been sacrificed to happiness. edge.

Co-ed Beauties To Conduct Cheers

Out of S.P.S., "that woman-less country," will come a bevy of co-ed beauties to lead the cheers at Saturday's McGill-Varsity game. At half-time the engineers will lead out their choice for the ultimate in feminine cheer-leaders. Another stupendous feature will be the annual chariot race between S.P.S. and Meds. freshmen. Meds. won it last year but the "school" boys swear they're out for vengeance.

The "co-ed cheer leaders" will present a variety of costumes before the bleachers and the most outstanding example of feminine pulchritude will be chosen as Miss University of Toronto, 1938-9. G. P. Dewar, 2nd vice-president of the Engineering Society says, "Our cheer leaders are going to put some real zip into the game. We aim to please and our girls will be dressed to suit the taste of everybody." The traditional chariot race between the "hatchet-men" and the "ditch-diggers," promises to be a hot event. With about a dozen freshmen per chariot the boys will do the Ben Hur act twice the length of the field and the devil take the hindmost. The Meds. are confident of victory but there are bright smiles on the other side of the road too, so watch out Meds.

McGill Looms As Threat With Westman in Line-up

McGill, Confident of Victory, Base Hopes on Westman And Anton
Rowland and Somers to see Action on Blue's Crippled Backfield

MANY VETERANS ON TEAM

Montreal, Oct. 14.—With an enthusiastic crowd to cheer their onslaught on the Blue and White in Toronto the Red men entrained today for their game on Saturday which will decide the Intercollegiate leadership. McGill supporters feel that after a ten year drought they finally have had their prayers answered and have a potential championship outfit.

The game ought to be the season's best, as McGill at full strength are going to play in Varsity's playground against a team that has lost two veterans like Don Munford and Conboy McDonald and possibly Doug Turner who smacked McGill line-plays last year. Both teams won last Saturday's contests and are out to win again. Coach Andy Kerr feels he wins on Saturday, and remembering last year's score of 7 to 6, he has the old cup sitting comfortably up on the hill at Montreal.

Coach Kerr will depend on Herb Westman for his great offensive weapon. Westman fills that lack of punter to a "p." He is a consistent kicker averaging between fifty to sixty yards.

Will take Can Gray at his best, to keep Varsity from losing yards on exchange of kicks. Andy Anton, veteran player who simply tore up opponent's lines last year is back looking better both offensively and defensively. Around these two Kerr has built a football machine, seasoned, rich in experience and one that feels that it is this year or bust. Names of players like Ronnie Perowne, Prestie Robb, Ernie Rossiter, Eddie Tabah, Chuck Drury will be among the few veterans that make this year's Redmen "Yates Cup Conscious."

Last week McGill defeated the highly touted Mustangs in Montreal four to one, the score being composed of four singles, all kicked by Westman, and it is Coach Kerr's hope that tomorrow his boys will duplicate the feat.

RULES LAID DOWN FOR HART HOUSE

Governors Make Regulations For Proper Use of House

Harry Eichler

For the proper maintenance of Hart House, the gift of the Massey Foundation, which holds the chief extracurricular interests of the men's undergraduate body, various regulations have been laid down by the Board of Governors and these are impressed each year upon the freshmen.

The House is open from 8.00 a.m. until 11.00 p.m. every day of the week. On occasion, members may obtain permission from the Warden's office to introduce books in the magazines in the reading rooms are, under no circumstances, to be removed. Failure to abide by these regulations may result in the cancellation of the member's privileges. The athletic wing, which is under the jurisdiction of the Athletic Directorate, is open every day but Sunday until 6 p.m., and on Saturday closes at 5 p.m. Smoking in the athletic wing is strictly forbidden.

SECONDS SEND UP OWEN

by Alan Harvey
The shadow of a mighty McGill machine fell across the path that Varsity Beavers hope will lead them to the Intercollegiate championship as the Redmen entrained for Toronto and their engagement with the Blues this Saturday afternoon.

Herb Westman, McGill's outstanding kicking half, loomed to-day as the darkest part of that shadow. Ineligible the past two years, Westman returned last Saturday to boot his team to an impressive 4-1 victory over Western Mustangs. The addition of Westman boosts McGill out of the also-ran class and makes them a keen contender in this year's race.

Varsity, who were outscored on the season's series with McGill last year by a 13-12 count, awaited the arrival of the rampaging Redmen with some trepidation. The absence of Don Munford, battering backfielder, who underwent an appendectomy last week, and Jim (Cowboy) McDonald, recipient of an ankle fracture in the game with Queen's, was responsible for the misgiving.

But Doug Turner, out of the opening game with a knee ailment, turned up for practice this week to inject added (Continued on page 5)

Correspondence

THE EDITOR,
 Dear Sir,

In spite of your editorial of yesterday "Whither Pacifism", I am still inclined to agree with the Telegram. Some of us from time to time have rather carefully considered the question of war in the light of the Christian Faith, and yet have arrived at different conclusions from those you reach. And admitting the possibility of being quite wrong, I beg to disagree heartily with your remarks.

You speak of the idealism of Pacifism, and overlook the kind of idealism which sends a man, for no profit of his own, to defend an ideal in some other part of the world.

What does it matter if some of the greatest thinkers have been pacifists? The very protest against war is the seed of another conflict.

From the Christian point of view your remarks are entirely one sided. The Lord Jesus Christ plainly declared that He had come not to bring peace—but a sword. This same unique Figure took a scourge and used it with considerable violence on one occasion. The Christian faith began in conflict, is itself a war, and has at its chronological foundation Father Abraham, of whom it is said that as he returned from the slaughter of the kings with the spoils of war (being the first war recorded in Scripture), he was met by, and blessed by, the one who alone at that time and place was the representative of the Most High God. This man, this strange priest, was Melchisedek, which name according to the New Testament, means "King of Righteousness." As a prototype of the Lord Himself, he is declared to have been first of all King of Righteousness, and AFTER THAT King of Peace. Heb. 5, 1, 2.

If you lived in an ideally righteous world, you would be right. But if not, perhaps we should be careful not to set peace before righteousness, saying glibly, "Let us have peace at all costs."

The feeling of not a few is that the Mother Country has already sacrificed every righteous principle to obtain peace, and one wonders if it has been worth while.

We do not intend to minimise the horror of such things as you suggest in Paragraph 6, but we feel personally that the true ideal is not peace at all cost, but righteousness. Peace will follow.

Very sincerely,

ARTHEUR CUSTANCE.

Editor's Reply.

We are sorry that our correspondent concluded from the editorial "Whither Pacifism", that we were glibly stating a policy of "Peace at all costs." In fact, although we tried to show an appreciation of the pacifist's point of view, and the difficulty that there is in finding Christianity and force of arms compatible, the real conclusion that we reached was that the Telegram or no one else had the right to suggest that pacifists do not think. We are sorry to hear that you agree with the Tely.

Complete pacifism takes us beyond where we are willing to go. But we do admire the religious faith of the true pacifist. On the other hand, armed force does not seem compatible with Christianity, yet it seems to be contrary to principles of Christian manhood to refuse to fight for our faith and ideals, as well as for those for whom we should be willing to die to protect.

For us it is a paradox, and there are others who agree.

The letter quotes that Christ came bringing a sword, yet his whole life belies the literal interpretation of that statement. Regarding the incident where he is reputed to have used a scourge to drive out the money-changers, we are willing to accept the decision of the New Testament scholars who do not believe that he made any great display of violence. Any recent study of the New Testament will clarify this old idea, which seems to be the basis of biblical argument for the advocates of force.

Although it is stated that the Christian Church began in conflict, remember that for the first three centuries Christians were pacifists, and many martyrs died refusing to offer resistance. The Old Testament is quoted. If righteousness and justice had been sufficient to work out the salvation of the world would it have been necessary for a Saviour to come as a messenger of "Peace on Earth, Goodwill toward men."

One would be foolish who did not appreciate the ideals of those who were willing to make the supreme sacrifice, "in some other part of the world" for the sake of an ideal. And yet was not Saul an idealist on the road to Damascus to persecute the Christians?

We have every respect for the pacifist, but we are not ready to become a "passivist". And we have every respect for those who are willing to fight for things which are dearer than life itself. But we do not believe that the pacifist has the authority to state that a man cannot be Christian and not a pacifist, or the nationalist should have the authority to be the conscience or the court-martial for the pacifist.

Symphony Orchestra

Next Monday night in the Women's Union, the University Symphony Orchestra will hold its first rehearsal of the season. The orchestra, which is sponsored by the Students' Administrative Council, will give its annual concert in Convocation Hall some time after Christmas. This will probably be preceded by one or two concerts at other universities.

As is always the case with a college organization, many of last year's members have been graduated, leaving vacancies which must be filled by younger players. For anyone with serious musical ambitions, the orchestra affords a fine opportunity for gaining experience in ensemble playing, sight reading, and symphonic music generally. For the more casual music-lover, it provides a means of recreation, and of meeting other people with similar tastes. Any undergraduates who are considering joining should do so as soon as possible, as work is starting immediately.

Radio Programmes

Today the Varsity is inaugurating a radio column designed to inform undergraduate listeners of the best programmes of the day. These are selected by the A. M. and D. department of the paper in co-operation with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

The Varsity is grateful to the C.B.C. for its assistance in the formation of this column, and heartily endorses its policy of bringing the best of Canadian and foreign transmissions within the range of the Canadian listeners.

The concert was one of those dubious "all" ones. This time it was all opera. For two or three seasons we have felt that the Proms have featured too many mediocre soloists and too little orchestra. This was particularly true last night, when the assisting artists were Eileen Law, Sara Barkin, Nicholas Massue, Irving Levine, the Bach Choir, and the boys' choir from St. Thomas' Church. Ping Pong In Hart House

Sounds of shuffling feet and breathless panting coming from the boxing room, no longer need signify that someone is engaging in the gentlemanly art of fisticuffs. Ping Pong has taken over. The athletic fee has scored again. Miraculously enough, the athletic powers have squeezed enough money out of the $3 athletic fee to provide, among the many other privileges, Ping Pong facilities.

Two tables have been set up in the boxing room and bats and balls may be obtained in the athletic office. Enthusiasts may play at noon or in those periods when the room is not being used for its originally intended purpose.

It is possible that now that a place to play has been arranged available to all students, the much discussed intramural Ping Pong competition will materialize. This, however, depends on the enthusiasm displayed.

Would-be Ping Pongers are reminded that the table in the golf room is primarily intended for graduate students.

HOW TO WATCH FOOTBALL

Every fall thousands of fans flock to the various stadia throughout the country to watch football games. Football, complex and bewildering to watch, leaves too many of the fans bewildered and hazy about the spectacle they witnessed that Saturday afternoon. Many fans, males as well as females witness the game from week to week and year to year without really being able to appreciate it because of lack of condition . . . mental condition. The players spend three or four weeks getting into shape . . . but the poor fans go into a game without a practise. It is for this reason that we have attempted a series of articles, dealing merely with the fundamentals of football and how to watch it. (We get mixed up when we go into the more complicated parts ourselves.)

In football there are three ways of advancing the ball . . . we may call them Pushing . . . Forward Passing and Kicking. Pushing includes the line buck or plunge, end runs or reverse plays. The line buck or plunge is the safe play where one of the halves is either given the ball by the water-back or directly by the snap-back and he attempts to gain yardage through the line. These plays can only be successful if his team-mates in the line open up a hole (into this we will go later). End runs are the plays characteristic of Canadian football, in which the halves attempt to sweep around the end of their opponents line by passing it from one to another hoping to be able to get the last man in the clear. Reverse plays are the plays that depend mostly on the element of surprise, in beginning to run one way and reversing the run in the other direction catching your opponents (you hope) like Flat Foot Floozies.

Forward passing is rather a dangerous means of advancing the ball, but is invaluable as a threat and a scoring play. In this play the ends or halves are eligible to catch the ball over the line of scrimmage, thrown from five yards back of the line. This play is used to open up the defensive and to allow the line plunges to go and to draw the defensive team out of position. Kicking, the most spectacular of plays are of two sorts, the ordinary punt and the placement or drop kick in which the ball is supposed to go over the cross-bar and between the posts.

A team has three downs or three plays in which to gain ten yards. If they are successful they have another three plays to try it again. These plays may be any one of the above mentioned, and the usual repertoire of a team is about twenty plays. The scoring is simple with five points for carrying the ball across the opponents goal line and the opportunity to try for another point by either a placement or forward pass. A placement or field goal which we described above is worth three points. A punt which crosses the goal line and the opponents half is kept within his touch-line is worth one point. Lastly when the team with the ball is trapped behind their line we have a safety touch or two points.

VARSIITY INTERMEDIATES PLAY GUELPH TO-MORROW

Face Stiff Test in Meeting
With Powerful Aggies

BLUES IN FINE SHAPE

by Sam Lipin

While Varsity seniors are entertaining the Redmen, their younger brethren, the Intermediates, will journey to Guelph to battle the powerful Aggriculturists, in an endeavour to wipe out the 7-4 defeat at the hands of Western last Saturday.

To date the powerful O.A.C. squad has performed strongly. Their 27-5 whitewashing of the touted McMaster aggregation told an impressive story and Bryers coach of Varsity's Intermediates, is taking no chances. All week the Intermediates have been drilling hard and the team is in good shape and eager for the fray. Ralph Sweet and Phil Isbister will look after the punting duty and Roy McIntyre and B. Shiffman will again give the line that stone-wall effect.

From every point of view it looks as though the game is going to be a hard struggle; O.A.C. out to avenge the defeat handed them by Varsity in the last game of the previous year and the Blues to avenge their defeat of last week, necessary if Toronto is to remain in the running. Hodgetts, Dunford, Jarvis, Bailey, and Murray, who all-starred in last week's game are prepared with new plays and additional practices to show O.A.C. something new. And the scrimmages against the seniors haven't softened up the team to any extent.

AROUND THE TRACK

A week this afternoon the Varsity Track Team will defend their intercollegiate title which they won last year from McGill against Western, Queen's, McGill and McMaster. Queen's have developed a real team this year and for the first time the battle will be a three cornered one between the three with Western collecting a few points through its former schoolboy stars and their Olympian Johnny Learring.

The Brown Twins back at Varsity after a year's absence will carry the chief burden along with Gordon McHenry, intercollegiate sprint champion. Wallace Brown is the favourite in the discus, broad jump and possibly the shot put. Harold will be second string to McHenry in the hundred and perhaps the two twenty if he foregoes the javelin. He will, of course, compete in the broad jump which he won at the British Empire Games but after the sprints he is not expected to win. These men should score about thirty-four points.

Trussler, intercollegiate champion, and Dales interfaculty champion, Varsity's "Heavenly Twins" are a double barreled threat in the pole vault. Their only opposition is Paul of Queen's. Both are graduating this year and are out to win. Their only slip up was two years ago but they took first and third last year being split by Love of McGill who will not compete this year. Bajanjary second string in the discus and shot put rounds out our list of sure high point winners.

The rest of the team are questionable place winners and will have to work hard. Delaney and Kaylor are better than two minute men in the half but Bill Fritz of Queen's is bound to win and Ferris of London and McGill's runners will be in there also.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By MARG CONLIN

After all her fine efforts to place on the intercollegiate tennis team, Ida Tipp has been declared ineligible to play because of complications which arose in regard to her academic standing. Through no fault of her own, Ida was under the impression that she was eligible for intercollegiate play, but after a check up it was discovered that her academic standing had disqualified her as one of the team members. We are very sorry that Ida was not informed of the rulings which affected her until after she had won a berth on the team but these things just happen and no one is to blame.

Anne McDonald of U.C. who placed on the team by virtue of being in the semi-finals, and who lost aforementioned place to a challenger, Betty Fife, will replace Ida. Anne has all the ability required for this position. Her showing during the inter-faculty meet impressed us particularly.

From Western comes the news that their team will arrive tonight and the players in order of seeded positions are, N. McCormick, Janie Breakspear, who will play in the singles matches and Betty Patterson and Jean McNally, Western's hopes for the doubles-title.

Challenges at Queen's provided one upset there as here. Elizabeth Bonnam will be the fourth member of their team instead of Dora Tottenham whose name was sent down on the original card.

Play today begins at 9.30 at the Toronto Tennis courts and don't forget that the finals are tomorrow on the famous St. Hilda's courts.

If you haven't made up a foursome yet for the golf tournament out at Mississauga on Monday you had better do so now. For further information get in touch with Helen Scott of U.C. Play starts at 9.30.

ST. MIKE'S SWIMMERS ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Double Blue aquatic ambitions materialized last night by way of an organization meeting of the St. Michael's College Swimming club for the cultivation of both exhibition swimmers and water-poloists in Inter-faculty competition.

An enthusiastic "school" of merman elected James Shutte II, President; Thomas Kirby II, Business Manager; and Joseph Bennett III, Sec'y-Treas. St. Mike's first assault on the Eckardt Trophy last season, which was repulsed by neighboring Victoria in the group finals, and plans of entering a team in the Inter-faculty swim meet, have stirred up hopes for another successful tank season.

Back Campus
Sports Review

The St. Michael's rugby team this year will be vastly different from the one that were Mulock Cup finalists last year. An entirely new personnel with the exception of two holdovers will be sporting double blue colours in the coming grid season.

The two biggest gaps to be filled are located in the quarter and kicking departments. Frank Dougherty, kicker, passer and plunger deluxe and "Cherub" Sullivan fighting little quarter-back will be lost to the team due to graduation. Incidentally Varsity's senior basketball team also will regret the departure of these two stalwarts.

In addition, Stumpbauser, plunging member of St. Mike's back field last year, will not be available. Chick Mahoney and Fred Minahan have returned but are dubious about turning out. However, Chuck Barry and Reilly, two of the few leftovers are again offering their services and around these men St. Mike's line will be built. To date of the new men Larry O'Brien, Joe Gurnow, Kelvin, Junior Maley, Pete Higgins and O'Flaherty look promising.

Father McGabey, coach of the Irish team, asked about the team's chances this year said he could not tell how his team would shape up and will not be able to do so for several days.

orchestra should not merely be a background to some frowsy singer. It is several weeks since a complete symphony was played at a Prom.

The tremendous crowd had a very deadening effect on the tone of the orchestra and singers, and this ruined most of the evening musically. Climates simply did not come. When the horn sprang out to play off-stage in the Siegfried Rhine-Journey, he sounded much louder than the orchestra, due to the added resonance of the cement corridors.

Space limitations prevent a detailed discussion of the excessively long program, but it can be said that Barkin and Levine sang well, but the other two—particularly Massue—were terrible, to say the least. Levine's Torador Song was splendidly robust, and in his encore, the Valga Boat Song, the orchestral accompaniment was superb.

The orchestra played the Allegro Overture atrociously, for them, but the three Wagner numbers were much better. The two choirs held their own.

Richard Crooks

Last night, as Reginald Stewart waved the last of his Promenade concerts to a close, Richard Crooks formally opened the winter season of concerts at Eaton Auditorium. Although we happen to be partial to basses, we must admit that Mr. Crooks did a very creditable job.

Of course, he was blessed with an outstanding accompanist. Never in our brief career have we heard anyone accompany anyone else so ably as Mr. Frederick Schaubert accompanied Mr. Crooks last night. The acoustics at the Auditorium, also, gave Crooks the advantage over such tenors as Alt-house and Melton, who have appeared recently with the Prom.

But Richard Crooks himself deserves a large helping of credit and acclaim. He displayed a versatility, a facility, a technique, and a sense of the stage which are lacking in most serious singers. And his voice is admittedly one of the best—for a tenor.

The programme was well chosen. It started with Handel and Bach and ended with a setting to music of Scott's Pibroch of Donuil Dhu which Mr. Crooks sang from manuscript. Sound an Alarm from Handel's Judas Macabre was exceptionally well sung.

With the exception of Richard Strauss's Zurichgung, which was sung brilliantly, Mr. Crooks' Schubert and Strauss group was competently rather than excitingly done.

As is to be expected, the highlight of the programme was the group of operatic arias. Frederic's Lament, an exciting excerpt from Cilea's little-known L'Arlesiana, was the only aria included on the programme. But among the encores was La Reve from Monnau an aria without which no concert by Richard Crooks would be complete. E lucevan le stelle from La Traviata was the Puccini riddle which all opera-lovers and pseudo-lovers have learned to expect from this artist.

Pibroch of Donuil Dhu by a certain Mr. Gilbert about whom Mr. Crooks

A summer in swing—mostly Shaw.

As the problems of the European Crisis, of registration and enrolment, and of Varsity's probable football future are now in the advance stages of solution it is perhaps time to turn to more important things and take stock of what has happened in the swing world, locally and otherwise, during the recent summer recess.

Adjacent dance resort proprietors were more than good to Torontonians this summer. The Brant Inn started it off with Red Norvo, Chick Webb and Benny Goodman; the Padua Royale replied with two stands by Artie Shaw (one a four nighter) and another by Claude Hopkins. The season was climaxed by the Exhibition extravaganza featuring Goodman and Dorsey and concluded last week by Paul Whiteman.

Perhaps the most interesting evening of them all was the first stand Shaw played at the Palais. I mention the first because the orchestra had changed somewhat in the month that intervened. The second time here Artie had lost Maxie Kaminsky—which was sad, for Maxie is perhaps the most typical example of the Chicago trumpet style in the business and his work fitted in perfectly with Shaw's really solid boogie woogie jazz.

While on the subject of Shaw's style, it would be well to pass judgment on the Artie Shaw-Benny Goodman controversy. Some people seem to think the two players or orchestras sound alike and try to compare and evaluate them on that basis. And so the more "advanced" and learned patrons of swing say, "Shaw is the world's best clarinetist" whereas those who get their swing out of the Pictorial Review and Life say, "Benny Goodman is it." Actually the whole argument is futile because Shaw plays a very primitive jazz with the music based on an insistent rhythm phrase and a simple melodic lick—in short it is an individualized version of the genuine Mead Lux Lewis boogie woogie. Goodman on the other hand constructs solos of long phrases blended into an elaborate melodic pattern played legato. Benny has an amazing instrumental technique and an enormous imagination, but is several steps more removed from the old river boat jazz than Shaw. The writer has never heard either of these musicians employ a moth eaten riff. In that special way then Goodman and Shaw owe musical debts to no one, least of all each other.

Artie, without a doubt, is now finally on his way. He has risen more rapidly than any other white band during the past 18 months. I believe the "Down Beat" swing popularity poll has taken him from tenth to third place. He has everything that comes his way and it is hoped that a major night spot will come his way this winter.

did not bother to give any information—and there are so many Gilberts writing music nowadays—was a stirring and fitting setting to Scott's poem, although the bagpipe effect was a little obvious.

And may we reiterate, that we have never heard so competent an accompanist as Mr. Schaubert.

Line-up of McGill Players

Courtesy of the McGill Daily

LOU RUSCHIN: Captain this year, fifth year. Medical student. Star inside wing, gritty player, lots of fight and tough. Comes from the United States.

ALEC HAMILTON: Plays at flying wing; kicked for McGill last year, throws forward passes; a good, heady, steady player, always keeps going and general all-round field generalship, was quarter before Perowne. Third year Engineering.

PERRY FOSTER: Half-back; first year with Seniors, may not be carried all year, very good kicker, star with Freshmen last year, may be used to replace Westman. First year Engineering.

BOB KEEFER: Saw action at end of last year, taking McConnell's place as brilliant runner, plays full-back, is powerful man, in third year Commerce.

PRESTIE ROBB: All-star snap-back; good secondary defence man, in last year Medicine.

RUSS MERFIELD: Steady catching half for McGill for several years. A good runner, good player, hard worker. First Year Law.

RONNIE PEROWNE: Pepper-box quarter, inspires all McGill attacks, infuses considerable spirit; a tricky player. Last year Commerce.

JIMMY HALL: Last year's star outside wing, a deadly tackler, and generally a very good all-round end. In Grad School.

GOVERNMENT WIN DEBATE
AT PARLIAMENT MEETING

ANDY ANTON: In fourth year Commerce; last year all-star; playing better this year on offence and defence; one of the humorous fellows on the team; plays middle wing.

CHUCK DRURY: From R.M.C., first year McGill, in fourth year Engineering; was Cadet star, now a very fine end.

KENNY WILSON: Another outstanding end, with McGill for several years, third year Medicine.

HERB WESTMAN: Outstanding kicker, responsible for reviving McGill hopes this year; stayed out of football last year; doing steady distance this year; married a few weeks ago.

EDDIE TABAH: Short stocky inside wing, hard-working, out with bad back last year, played 2 years ago; first year Med.

CHUCK SMITH: Third year Science; usually a middle wing, recently converted to outside, but coming back to middle.

MURRAY TELFORD: One of biggest and heaviest men on team, a good middle wing, consistent plunger.

ERNIE ROSSITER: General utility man on backfield and snap; in fourth year Commerce.

HOWIE BARTRAM: Big middle wing, a good man.

Averting a defeat which would have meant dissolution of his government, Rt. Hon. Al Rose last night led his party to victory in the U.C. Parliamentary debate. "Resolved that this House deplores the foreign policy of the Jaime Berlin government."

Two successive defeats retire a government, according to U.C. Parliamentary rules, and last week, the Opposition, led by Hon. Sally MacDonald, defeated the government motion. Last night government speakers upheld the motion before the House, and on a straight party split, were victorious by a vote of 26 to 12.

Opening the debate, Prime Minister Rose outlined briefly the events leading up to the European crisis, and indicated the stand of his government on the situation. Hon. Sally MacDonald defended the policy of the British government, and held that peace had been secured without dishonor. The vigorous debate which followed, featured the maiden addresses of several new members, on both sides of the House. Welcoming the new members, Rt. Hon. George Stoddart, Speaker for the House, gave a short speech on Parliamentary procedure, for their guidance.

'BLIND DATE' QUERY HAS WIDE RESPONSE

Regarding duds, he said, "The law of averages says you must get a good blind date once in awhile. If you have the gambling instinct blind dates are a good thing and provide lots of possibilities." Two Medical students who preferred to remain nameless were heartily in favor of blind dates, but their companion struck a sour note. "Never yet have I had a blind date that turned out well," he said. Tom Jarvis, II U.C., however, has had better luck than this woe-begone Med student. "I think blind dates are great," he raved. "I always seem to land a knockout."

Bolin McKay, IV U.C., was of the same opinion as many others in that blind dates are a grand institution, especially for out-of-town boys. One student urged an immediate revival of the Date Bureau which thrived last year. H. E. L. McLaughlin, IV Law was not too keen on the subject for he had two terrible experiences with blind dates last year, but he is still in favor of the idea provided he has better luck.

strength to the wingline division. Warren Stevens has brought up Owen from the intermediates to bolster the weakened backfield.

Lou Somers, who showed up well against Queen's last week, will get his first real chance to show his wares. Somers is one of the fastest running halves in the Intercollegiate loop and should fill the gap left by the injury to McDonald. Charlie Prince is another backfield tackling brigade a few anxious moments. Cam Gray and Ken McQuarrie, mainstays of the half-line for several years, are also ready for action.

Bee Rowland, R.M.C.'s gift to the U. of T., will do most of the plunging for the Blues in place of Don Mumford. Rowland will also share the kicking duties with Cam Gray, and Varsity fans who saw Rowland perform against Queen's are confident that the big blond is capable of matching hoists with Westman.

Despite the loss of McDonald and Mumford, Varsity supporters are certain that the Blues will make it two straight against the Kerr-coached Redmen. The backfield, they contend, is at least as strong as the McGill quartet of Westman, Merifield, Hamilton and Keefe, while it is felt that the Blues have a marked edge along the wingline.

INSTALL LOUDSPEAKERS TO AID CHEERLEADERS

Both the cheerleaders and the cheering section will be aided Saturday afternoon by the installation of a loud speaking system for the Varsity-McGill clash.

Last year due to many complaints from the stands that they could not hear the cheerleader's announcements, a public address system was tried and proved to very successful, and so will be repeated this season.

The system includes two large speakers which are placed in the field and directed towards the stands, and a microphone. It is rumoured that the cheerleaders are holding practices to decide who is going to do the announcing.

Redmen Down Blues 10-1 to Take Intercollegiate Lead

Many Notables Honored At 1938 Convocation

Lady Tweedsmuir Expresses Hope for Future in Address

LAPORTE PRESENT

Before a setting of rich academic pageantry and an enthusiastic audience, Her Excellency, Lady Tweedsmuir, headed a distinguished group of men and women in receiving honorary degrees from the University of Toronto at its special convocation last Friday, and thus for the first time, the wife of a Governor-General of Canada became an alumna of our university.

In honouring Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon, High Commissioner for India in Great Britain, who was wearing a colourful purple turban in place of the customary mortar-board, Dr. Cofy said that "the university is greeting India's future with a tribute to the future of a Governor-General of Canada because an alumna of our university."

This clever and colourful figure later spoke briefly in Persian, Urdu, Arabic and English, declaring that "the youth of our age needs particular attention if he is to be saved from the future of a Governor-General of Canada because an alumna of our university."

Cheers broke out as Lady Tweedsmuir began her address. "This is the greatest thrill of my life," she said. She referred to the recent weeks of anxiety in Europe and stated that we saw a reflection of history with good and bad omen. "I hope the omen of the future are good," she fervently continued.

She briefly touched on English was in history, referring to "the human side," not the military side, and concluding with a tribute to the leaders who gave us such a history.

Sir Wm. Mulock conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws on Mr. Laporte in French. Later the French Canadian statesman spoke in English and stated that he was proud to join "the great intellectual family of the Anglo-Canadian centre of learning, the University of Toronto."

He called upon the youth of the world, especially university students, to strive to uphold the democratic ideals established by our forefathers.

"Culture is the best method we can use to overcome class hatred and international antagonisms," was the opinion of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada.

He further stated that the university students of today must be the torch-bearers of tolerance and unity, especially here in Canada where sectionalism has often threatened the internal peace of the country.

The speaker emphasized the fact that it is in universities that men have the

CHARIOTEERS CHURN TURF

They're off. The cry rose from the crowd as the chariot representing Meds and S.P.S. respectively, raced away towards the north end of Varsity Stadium on Saturday afternoon.

The sixteen men pulling the S.P.S. chariot took the lead at the drop of the hat, but had not widened the gap as the two vehicles neared the goal posts. Having safely rounded the turn the snorting steeds broke for the south end where the wreath awaited the victor.

With their manes flying out behind them the charioteers urged their man-power on to even greater speed. But the S.P.S. team were too fleet of foot for their medical rivals, and retained their small lead.

As they neared the finishing line one of the Meds men stumbled, fell, for

INTERMEDIATE BOYS BOW TO GUELPH

Intercepted Passes Give Edge to O.A.C. Squad at Home

Varsity intermediate football team suffered one of the greatest trouncings of its career when it was defeated by O.A.C. by a score of 36 to 22 Saturday afternoon at Guelph.

For about three quarters of the game the Blues, although on the short end of the score, were doing most of the pushing. Six plays on a series of forward pass plays and intercepted forward passes O.A.C. began to tally for one major count after another.

The first score took place after five minutes of play. Smith and Follwell of the Aggies unleashed that forward passing attack for which Varsity was practically defenceless and marched down the field from their own end for a converted touchdown. For the next thirty-five minutes the Blues held the edge on the play, keeping the Redmen on the defensive. Three or four times the losers were in a position to score, only to be stopped cold by the Redmen, and half-time the score was still 6-0 for O.A.C.

At the opening of the third quarter Varsity let the offensive again. In the first few minutes Bell recovered a loose ball on O.A.C.'s 24-yard line and Sweet roused to make the score 6-1. The ball kept moving from one end of the field to the other. At the eleven minute mark Sweet started a play that brought the ball to Aggie's 44 yard line. The next play resulted in another major score when Smith intercepted a pass and ran sixty yards for a touch which he converted. A desperate Varsity team began pressing again but the only other score of the period was a single by Sweet. At three quarter time the count was 12 to 2.

In the fourth quarter O.A.C. showed what they have been picked to win the championship.

Four Show From Follies Will Be Featured At Frosh Party

Two orchestras, sweet and swing, and a show dress from the University College Follies will feature the annual U.C. freshman party to be held in the Women's Union on Wednesday night.

"A member of the first year is impressionable," says the committee. "Therefore he must be impressed. As a first year man is a social animal, he must be impressed with the right type of social diversification."

As well as the floor show and the two orchestras the freshmen will be treated to enjoy positively delicious refreshments.

The patrons of the dance will be Principal and Mrs. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. McArdle, Mr. and Mrs. B. Ferguson and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Plumpton.

At a moment it looked as if the heavy wheel of the chariot would pass over his body but luckily the accident was averted and the chariot passed on to finish closely behind the S.P.S. entry.

The victors were acclaimed by eight beautiful "Go-eds" cheer leaders selected from the male element of S.P.S., who clattered onto the winning chariot.

Following the snatching display, the competitors began their march around the field. As they were passing in review, in front of the covered stands along the remarks between the victors and the vanquished and in a moment both teams were involved in a struggle which surpassed in ferocity the preceding race.

The fray, which was without any fatalities, lasted only several minutes and ended in a draw as spectators drew the fighters off.

O.A.C. SOCCERITES DEFEATED HERE

Intermediates and Seniors Both Victorious Over Guelph

The Varsity soccer teams showed their brother rugby players how to repel a red horde invasion on Saturday by handing the O.A.C. a convincing 4-1 defeat in the senior division, and by tying the Aggies 1-1 in the intermediate.

Faced by hard-working Frankie Silks, the senior squad completely dominated the play throughout. Said Mr. Silks took a neat pass from Rutherford to place his team one up in the first half. Jack Mullett and Alfie Dodd put the Toronto squad far ahead by netting two pretty goals, the latter being on a rebound from Muller's hard shot. Once again Silks went through for his second, and Toronto's fourth point. The nearest play of the day came when Fletcher of Guelph concluded the scoring by getting his team's only goal on a solo effort from centre.

As Manager Carlton of the O.A.C. said after the game, "the Toronto team is one of the nicest college teams I ever saw"—a tribute not only to the players, but to Coach Slade. The combinations were clicking every time and George Powell and "Jose" Muehan, fullbacks, presented an air-tight defence. Don Kelley, in goal for Guelph, played an all-round good game, being kept plenty busy.

The intermediate struggle was a tit-for-tat tussle with no decision after 10 minutes overtime. Dick McDonald put the Blues ahead in the first few minutes with a rather catchy counter that looked big for most of the game until Don Hendricks tied it up for good. In the extra frame, O.A.C. missed what looked like a sure thing but Toronto also missed the boat on a penalty shot. Leaving the score on-kill, Herrington at inside right, tried hard all the way for the locals, aided and abetted by dependable Jack Johnson and Captain Art Menies.

WOMEN VANQUISH RED RACQUET GIRLS

New St. Hilda's Courts Scene of Two-Day Tourney

By Marg Conlin
Playing under ideal weather conditions, Varsity and McGill fought it out for the intercollegiate tennis title on Saturday morning at the new St. Hilda's courts, with the Blue and White capturing both titles and thereby the meet, in a thrilling climax to 2 days.

The doubles final in which the Varsity team of Anne Macdonald and Marj Mosbaugh was matched against McGill's team of Anna Denton and Isabel Cation, was outstanding for suspense and excitement. The singles final between Varsity's Claire Walsh and the defending champion Barbara Barnard, lacked the uncertainty and tension of the previous match, as Miss Walsh led the attack throughout.

Named as the "Mark horse" of last year's meet when she defeated Claire in a startling upset, Miss Barnard was his physical training, period the preparation of research workers as the most important. In justifying this statement he stressed how much science helps society materially increase knowledge and satisfies a mental human craving. Other purposes for studying M. and P. were for teachers, training of the mind and culture.

SYNGE SPEAKS TO M. AND P. SOCIETY

Effect of Pure Sciences in Social World is Stressed

The first meeting of the year of the M. and P. Society was held Friday in the McLennan Laboratory. A short account of the history of the society was given and it was learned that the society is one of the oldest of its kind in North America, being founded on January the twenty-seventh, 1882.

Dr. Syngé of the Applied Mathematics Department was the guest speaker and addressed the society on "Mathematics and Physics in the Social World". He stated that science, in its purer form, is something akin to religion. During the Middle Ages religion was governed by superstition; now science has delved into truths, something never before questioned. Dr. Syngé, in listing the purposes of education in M. and P., placed the preparation of research workers as the most important. In justifying this statement he stressed how much science helps society materially increase knowledge and satisfies a mental human craving. Other purposes for studying M. and P. were for teachers, training of the mind and culture.

INDIAN CIVILIZATION IS TOPIC OF SPEECH

Noted Indian Statesman Lauds British Foreign Policy and Influence

"There is no civilization in the world older than the civilization of India," declared Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon, speaking to a large audience at Convocation Hall, Friday evening. The Indian statesman and man of letters who received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws (honoris causa) from the University of Toronto Friday afternoon, came to Canada with the express object of bringing his own people and Canadians closer together.

Three cities recently uncovered by Sir John Marshall showed a cultured mode of living that extended from the Punjab to Egypt, 3000 B.C., he stated. Chinese civilization is sometimes considered the most ancient but research shows glass and other commodities introduced there by Indians. Buddhism which no longer exists in India, was also carried by Indian monks to China.

Although the British came only eighty years ago, Malik Sir Firoz Khan pointed out that in that time they have created, by gradual extension of privilege, a self-governing country. India is already working with fully elected houses and responsible ministers. Its efficient educational system is also based on the British.

But British influence is strong in India because the majority are willing to co-operate. "It is the small minority like everywhere else which makes the greatest noise and usually gets away with it." Today princes support British foreign policy wholeheartedly and are more British than British colonialism.

Malik Sir Firoz Khan Noon concluded his lecture with lantern slides of the architecture of India which established its position on inner caves to be 250,000 years old.

Niosi Supplies Swing Music At University Informal In Hart House

With four orchestras beating out all types of dance music the first All-University informal took place in Hart House last Friday evening.

Bert Niosi, Canada's King of Swing, playing in the gymnasium, provided many well-received novelty numbers and the major part of the evening crowd continued to throng the gym throughout the evening. With Don Armstrong playing in the Great Hall; Fred Evis in the reading room, and Bob Shuttleworth in the east common room, jitters and dancers found plenty of amusement.

The senior team will consist of Hall, Pigott, Snyder, Small and Shorter.

FAIR FEMMES FOR FOLLIES

It is true that there is an elephant in the room at the U.C. Follies, isn't it? Is it true that he will walk across the stage conning his beard? We can not be sure.

The show will be divided into two acts, all of which will be extremely varied in its appeal. Satire will play a large part and will be directed at various aspects of the university.

The committee added a final important word. Patrons at the show will be searched at the door for tomatoes and other such garden products, for there are determined that nothing shall mar the stupendous, colossal performance of the U.C. Follies of 1938.

Westman's Brilliance is Fatal to Varsity's Air Attack in Clash

SOMERS STARS

By Sam Lipin

Sweeping everything before them, the triumphant McGill football team took a firm grip on the group leadership by humbling the powerful Varsity Blues by a 10-7 count at Varsity Stadium, Saturday afternoon. Before a capacity crowd the Blue team fought heroically to stem the irresistible Red tide. Kicking, plunging, passing, the Blues strove to outplay the Redmen to no avail. The invincible McGill squad, led by Westman, Keefe, McFarland, and Peronne, proved their superiority by their steady playing, their strong offensive and impregnable defence.

McGill opened the game with a driving attack. After an exchange of kicks, McQuarrie fumbled a catch and McGill recovered. Held to five yards on two successive plunges, Westman kicked and McQuarrie was roused to give McGill a one-point lead after three minutes play. McQuarrie returned to Keefe and Westman, interchanging passes to place McGill within scoring distance again. From Varsity's 28-yard line, Westman added another point to make the score at the end of eight minutes two up for McGill. With one minute left in the first quarter a Gray Somers forward plus a brilliant run by Somers enabled the Blues to rouse Merfield on Gray's kick.

In the second quarter McGill scored another point when McQuarrie was roused on another of Westman's long hoists. A completed pass from Prince to Straken brought Varsity to the McGill 24-yard line, but two incomplete

HALL TRIUMPHANT IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Pigott Loses McEachern Cup to Steadier Court Artist

Bruce Hall, young Victoria student, clinaxed a week of fine play by capturing the McEachern Cup in tennis ship and forcing Bill Pigott to relinquish his strangehold on the McEachern Cup. Hall played excellent tennis to outplay and outscore his rival to the tune of 7-5, 2-6, 1-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Both boys played good tennis but at the end of the third set Pigott's erratic tendencies gave him a better of him and he faded in the closing stages. In the second and third set, the big S.P.S. student found himself, and he all but blasted Hall, but the accurate Hall, continuing his steady play, finally took the advantage because of Pigott's errors.

However, Pigott received some satisfaction from the day's events, and he combined with Paul Snyder to defeat Shorter and Haig to capture the intercollegiate doubles title. The scores were 6-2, 6-0, 4-6, 6-4. The two senior men experienced little difficulty in outplaying their opponents, and although they faded temporarily in the third set, they recovered quickly to run out the match.

The senior team will consist of Hall, Pigott, Snyder, Small and Shorter.

Guest Editors

Less than a year ago the Canadian University Press was organized by a group of far-sighted college editors from papers throughout the country. One of the purposes of the C.U.P. was to unify college journalism and to abolish sectionalism.

To carry out the plan of acquainting editors with co-workers in the C.U.P., an exchange system was inaugurated last winter. Toronto, Kingston, Montreal and other eastern cities were linked by a firm bond when the heads of The Varsity, the Queen's Journal and the McGill Daily journeyed from campus to campus. Success of this unique idea paved the way for what may now become an annual feature of the C.U.P.

Today's guest of The Varsity is grateful for the opportunity to extend to students at the University of Toronto congratulations on the fine standard of their newspaper, and looks forward to next Thursday evening when the editor of The Varsity will visit McGill as guest editor of the McGill Daily.

Accuracy

That accuracy is a prime obligation of those who would enjoy freedom of opinion, has been a theme constantly stressed by Sir Edward Beatty, Chancellor of McGill University. Sir Edward Beatty's remarks have been justly notable for their good sense and straightforwardness. We may be wrong, but we venture the opinion that nothing is perhaps more disliked by him than irresponsible and inaccurate statements.

It is appropriate for a man of such outstanding and recognized merit to remind students occasionally of the necessity of truthfulness and correctness in the opinions they may express. For it must be admitted that youth is impulsive and more apt to be misled by empty phrases and appeals to passion than its elders.

But if youth is sometimes amenable to the irrational, it does not follow that when it has attained manhood its opinions are always tempered by a "sober second thought". When older men, holding responsible positions in public life, make statements which are unparalleled for inaccuracy and the complete absence of truth, there is cause for grave concern.

Due discount will always be made for youthful enthusiasm. But there is no such reason why any allowance should be made for error in the remarks of mature men who are expected to consider things dispassionately and carefully. When older men deliver public addresses, their remarks will be taken at face value. Even though these statements may be inaccurate, they will still be believed by a considerable number of persons who cannot be informed of the truth.

We have, for example, the accusations levelled by Frank O'Hara, Michigan insurance broker, that communism has invaded the campuses at McGill and the University of Toronto. Obviously O'Hara is not acquainted with conditions that exist in Canadian universities, yet his address was quoted in newspapers from coast to coast. While many readers probably realized that O'Hara was inaccurate, others accepted his remarks as authoritative.

Fortunately, ridiculous statements, exemplified by the address of the Mid-Western insurance man, are not made every day. Nevertheless, there is the tendency among onlookers outside the university to arrive at wholly unwarranted conclusions concerning opinions held by students.

We ask for but one thing—that such persons express their beliefs only after a careful examination of university life.

Added Attraction

The picturesque qualities of a rugby match on a fine October afternoon were not affected by the unspectacular scoring. Two bands, six cheerleaders, a chariot race and pseudo-burlesque show combined to make the traditional Varsity versus McGill game a colourful occasion. Although the game was the main point of interest, these extraneous attractions assured the capacity crowd their full value.

First there were the two bands. Their joint demonstrations before and after the game presented a colourful pageant, and the choice of numbers was not too conservative. The band continues to play an important part in producing that atmosphere peculiar to a college rugby game.

At half time music gave way to drama, as the annual Meds-S.P.S. chariot race stirred up the dust and diverted the crowd from their peanuts and cigarettes. Drama gave way to burlesque when four Schoolmen, clad in costumes which were certainly not traditional, gave their interpretations of the co-ed cheerleader.

The Varsity-McGill rugby game has always been an important event in the college year. But it has expanded far beyond the grim muddy struggles of early provincial days. Band music, colourful uniforms, and a display of local talent, combine with the match itself to provide a complete afternoon's entertainment.

Yellow Journalism

A sample of one of the most diabolically clever types of journalistic misrepresentation seen for years appeared the other morning in the "National" newspaper. (And we don't mean the Winnipeg Free Press.)

It involved the group-picture of three members of a delegation of 250 citizens who gathered at the City Hall in protest against the opening of hockey rinks and other park facilities on Sundays. This picture was not representative of the average group of adults gathered to protest.

Here was a master-piece of propaganda, used as news, but biased in such a way as to make editorial comment unnecessary. An insidious selection of photographic material perpetrated on three innocent and well-meaning citizens with no attempt to imply news value, has no place in a Canadian newspaper.

Art, Music and Drama

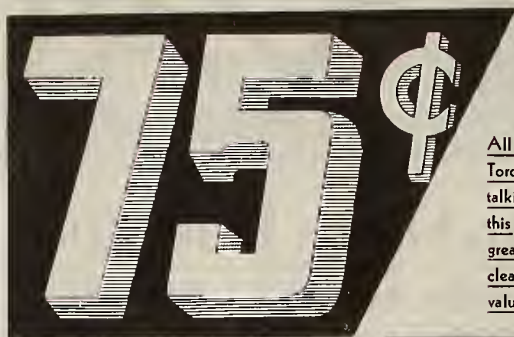

One of the most interesting films of the year, Prison sans Barreaux was the French production at the Hollywood Theatre on Saturday morning. In it we again find evidence that the French are producing some of the finest films in the world.

The psychological study of life in a girls' reformatory school offers a conflict between the old and the new, the old represented by cruel, tyrannical wardens, the new by a humanitarian superintendent ably played by Annie Ducaux. Mile. Ducaux in this part is as angelic as the wardens are diabolical, the contrast seeming somewhat too sharply drawn. Noteworthy is her aging and loss of beauty serving to explain the alienation of the feelings of her fiancée the doctor and in the end she really belongs to the place.

Corinne Luchaire, heralded as the find of the picture, does an excellent incorrigible made over by the kindness of the superintendent. However, in spite of marked character development her love for the doctor seemed so immature and of such school-girlish quality that one wonders if this merited the sacrifice made for it.

It is regrettable that a better copy of the picture had not been shown as this had obviously received wholesale cutting.

ARTS COURSE HIT HARD

Disaster struck at Hart House yesterday when the billiards room was completely destroyed by a fire of unknown origin. Red Cross workers spent the day going through the ruins and reported that no bodies were to be found. The rescue party, however, discovered the charred remains of 36 slides, rules and 174 copies of assorted textbooks.

According to the special investigator sent down by the Fire Department the fire is supposed to have started when one of the natives of the billiards room accidentally kicked over the gasoline stove on which he was cooking his supper. The flame is said to have caught on his neighbours' tents and a roaring holocaust to have ensued.

Relief Committees on the campus have been organized and a special tag day in aid of the victims is planned. In the meantime the survivors are being housed in the Hart House Tower and the University Library, which will be unoccupied until next May.

Since most of the beds in the pool room were destroyed, it is feared that many of the stricken will have to sleep in the library chairs until the committee raises enough money. When informed of this deplorable condition the Head Librarian is said to have laughed heartlessly. . . .

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

NO CAUSE FOR CRYING

At first glance, it would appear that Varsity's hopes for the Yates Cup received a serious setback when McGill handed the football team their first defeat. From our viewpoint, however, Varsity are still the team to capture the championship. Saturday's game proved two things. McGill possess a mighty hoover and a good wingline. Varsity possess a fast, fighting and hardworking machine, and when it gets the type of kicking that either Gray, Rowland or Prince at their best are capable of giving, it will be mighty close to an unbeatable squad.

The silver lining to the Varsity cloud of defeat was the knowledge that a player had been found, who will be able to fill the gap left by "Bucko" MacDonald's broken ankle. Playing in the starting line-up for the first time in two years Les Somers put in a bang-up game on the half line. His running and pass receiving gave the crowd a lot to yell about. After two years of grumbling the Harvard Collegiate alumni present finally went home satisfied that their favourite had been given a break, and had come through successfully. With McQuarrie and Somers on the Blue backfield the rival ends are going to have innumerable headaches as the season progresses. Up on the front wingline Cam MacLachlan also started for the first time and along with the ever powerful Frankie Sirdevan and Bill Schwenger, they kept the Red plunges in check except for an occasional sortie by Anton. The wingline is looking stronger every time out, and what is more important, their performance Saturday was more consistent than against Queen's or Balmy Beach.

The Blue passing attack was nothing to go into raves about. The plays were quick-striking and deceptive, but the McGill line was rushing Gray and Prince and preventing them from leading the Blue receivers, and as a result several passes were intercepted.

We are not trying to take any credit from the McGill team for their victory. On the day's play they clearly deserved it. Their backfield made only one mistake all day, when they allowed Varsity to knock the ball out of their grasp on the kick-off following the McGill touch. The wingline was strong enough to hold the Blue team in the pinches. And they used their greatest threat to the utmost advantage, Herbie Westman's kicking.

Nevertheless, recognizing their power and realizing that both Varsity and Western have defeated Queen's we want to go on the books as thinking that the Tricolour will give the Redmen their first setback in five starts. Queen's have Jack Brown, who will at least come close to holding his own with Herbie Westman and their wingline should turn the battle in their favour. Will Varsity beat Western? It will be close, fast and exciting, but extra wingpower should also decide this game and in the Blues' favour.

INVINCIBLE SOCCERITES

The intercollegiate soccer squads continued to remain unbeaten when the seniors defeated O.A.C. 4-1, the intermediates tied 1-1. Soccer has been raised to a first division sport and very justifiably so. It seems very unfortunate that the attendance should be so poor at their games. Perhaps, if the senior soccer games were played as curtain openers to senior football exhibitions, they might get the support and appreciation they deserve. In England 100,000 people view an English Cup final, yet in Canada a mere handful turn out to witness even the best of exhibitions. We at University of Toronto get less than 100 spectators to support those who fight so nobly for the Blue and White.

passes cost the Blues 10 yards and the opportunity to kick a placement. Despite Somers' brilliant running, the half ended without further scoring.

The third quarter went scoreless but not without seeing a fiercely battling Blue team on the verge of scoring. The fourth quarter saw McGill opening up a little more of their reserve power. Smashing line drives by Anton put Westman in position to kick another point. This was followed by another single from Westman's boot, making it McGill 5, Varsity 1.

After an exchange of kicks, Perowen went around the end and ran 37 yards to Varsity's two-yard line, enabling Telford to go over for an unconverted major. McGill 10, Varsity 1. The desperately fighting Blues recovered fumble on McGill's 24-yard line and Gray forwarded a pass over the line to Shuklen and then converted it giving the Blues 6 points. With one minute to go Westman kicked almost to Varsity's deadball line, but a brilliant run-out by Somers prevented the extra point. The final score, McGill 10, Varsity 7.

The following are the statistics:
Yards made from scrimmage:
Varsity 184; McGill 201.
Yards made running back kicks:
Varsity 126; McGill 162.
Yards made passing:
Varsity (5 complete of 17) 68.
McGill (1 complete of 3) 7.
Passes intercepted:
Varsity 0; McGill 2.

Yards lost for penalties:
Varsity 20; McGill 45.
Kicks, from line of scrimmage:
In 18 kicks, Gray, Rowland each averaged 36 yards.

In 24 kicks Westman averaged 46 yds. Apart from kicking, then, the teams were fairly evenly matched. In the exchange of kicks McGill made over 200 yards more than Varsity.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Marg. Coulis

While their brother collegians were being humbled by the big bad Redmen from McGill on Saturday, Varsity coeds were celebrating a double win over the McGill netters in the finals of the women's intercollegiate tennis meet.

Decisively avenging her defeat last year at the hands of Barbara Barnard of McGill, Varsity's Claire Walsh crushed the latter on Saturday in masterly fashion. In her valdictory performance on the picturesque and highly satisfactory St. Hilda's courts, Claire achieved once more the title which she had held for two years prior to last year's upset. Claire has contributed much to tennis at Varsity and is an ideal champion. Everyone will be delighted to know of her success, especially those who worked with her in planning the details of the meet here.

On Friday McGill required only one win to cinch the title, while Varsity required two wins for group leadership. It was not generally conceded that Varsity could take both finals, but we had the trump card in our famous doubles team. You must have heard of Marj Mosbaugh and Anne McDonald, who modestly swept through all the doubles preliminaries to the finals. Anne, who was switched around no end before she finally was assured a place on the Toronto team, played her best tennis on Saturday. Marj Mosbaugh, "the old left hander" from Meds, directed their attack with all the crafty skill required to break down the defenses of the powerful McGill team.

Only one incident marred the goodwill of the meet. Late Friday afternoon two of the singles semi-finalists were overtaken by darkness in the middle of their match. This was unavoidable since both players had taken too much time for their rest period between the second and third sets. Misunderstanding among the well-meaning but amateurish officials had caused this slip-up. In fact it was all a series of minor mistakes. When it was suggested that the match be postponed until morning, one faction was unwilling to stop half-way, so the match proceeded. And as you have guessed, night finally set in with a vengeance, so the players could do nothing but stop. Next morning the whole set had to be re-played, and it all seemed just a little unnecessary. That, ladies, is the story in a shell-hole.

Joan McMassey of St. Hilda's deserves a few bouquets for her quietly efficient managing of the Toronto team.

SPEED SEEDING, HARVESTING, THRESHING

In a field of heavy, lodged grain, that old-time binder often couldn't stand the extra strains and shocks. Some vital part had to give way under the constant buffeting. A horse-and-luggy ride of many miles to town for a new part was serious, with the crop waiting, dead ripe, at home.

Today implement makers are utilizing the extra strength, toughness and wear resistance of Nickel Steel and Nickel Cast Iron to eliminate breakages. Today's power-driven implements operate at greater speeds and handle heavier jobs faster. But breakdowns are less frequent because of Nickel Alloys.

The 12,000 employees in Canada's Nickel industry spend a goodly share of their $20,000,000 payroll in food—the product of our farms. The farmer, in return, benefits from the Nickel he purchases in the iron and steel of his farm machinery. The ever-broadening demand for Canadian Nickel for peace-time industry the world over benefits every Canadian.

Claire Wallace Reviews "The Varsity" Over CFRB

Outline of Student Newspaper Activity Given in Broadcast

LEACOCK ANECDOTES TOLD

The past history and present work of The Varsity occupied the greater part of Claire Wallace's broadcast last night, over Station CFRB.

Miss Wallace mentioned the famous men who had worked on the paper during the early days, among them Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Stephen Leacock, B. K. Sandwell, editor of The Saturday Night, and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson.

The history of the student strike in 1895 in which The Varsity played an important part was dealt with in the broadcast.

How the paper is produced, from the dealing out of the assignments to the distribution in the morning to the common rooms, was described. The wire service of the Canadian University Press which distributes hot news to the university newspapers across Canada was also mentioned.

Anecdotes of the early days of The Varsity were related, among them that of a poem submitted by W. L. MacKenzie King, which Editor Stephen Leacock rejected. Many years later Mr. Leacock recalled the incident, laughing at his act of refusing the poem of a man who later became Prime Minister.

An editorial by B. K. Sandwell, editor of the Saturday Night, upon the subject of bicycle riding was commented upon, since the editorial was incapable of being understood by those looking through the back files.

Miss Wallace also traced the rise of the paper from a weekly sheet supported by a five-cent charge to the present daily edition, supported by the Students' Administrative Council.

HART HOUSE PERIODICALS

Current periodicals subscribed to by the Library Committee of Hart House are available for bidding to undergraduate members up to six p.m. on Wednesday, October 26, at the Warden's office in Hart House.

The periodicals may be obtained by the winning bidders on the arrival of the next issue each week or month, and must be paid for at the Warden's office within two days of notification of the winners.

In case of a tie the two highest bidders will be asked to rebid at a price above their original bid. Winning bidders may obtain their magazines from Mr. W. B. Wood, Curator of the Library, in Room B, on Wednesday of each week between 1.30 and 2.05 p.m.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Chicago, Oct. 17: Dr. Eduard Benes, former president of Czechoslovakia, has accepted an invitation to become a visiting professor at the University of Chicago. It is expected that he will lecture on democratic institutions.

Budapest, Oct. 17: Germany has promised support to Hungary in her demands for cession of Czechoslovak territory, in return for increased national and cultural rights to some 800,000 German settlers in Hungary.

Montreal, Oct. 17: Premier Duplessis in opposing the St. Lawrence waterways project, branded it neither justifiable nor economic, and declared it impossible for the Federal Government to go ahead with the project without the consent of Ontario and Quebec.

Men of School Negotiate For Tops in Swing Bands

The men of S.P.S. and their fair friends may have to go without food when midnight rolls around at the annual School dance, but they will be served the most tempting dish of "swing" that money can buy. That was the promise made yesterday by Paul Anderson, president of the Engineering Society.

It was revealed that negotiations are under way to obtain the best "big name" American band which the society can afford. For this reason the money ordinarily spent on refreshments will be added to the large sum already earmarked for bringing swing at its best to the Toronto campus.

The dance this year will be known as the School Formal, and not as the School At-Home as in former years. As its name implies, it will be a formal dance to provide the best in entertainment for local undergraduates. The Formal is merely a new and much-improved At-Home, officials explained, and they hope to make it "the biggest display on the campus".

Plans are still rather indefinite regarding the affair, which is to take place on January 20th, but according to Jack McArthur, in charge of arrangements, this much is certain. "If we cannot obtain the best American band we can afford, we won't have any at all. It's either the best from across the border or else the old At-Home with a Canadian orchestra," he said.

In the past few years the music at the School At-Home has been provided by Canadian bands except for one or two occasions when U.S. orchestras were imported. However, none of the importations proved to be first-raters, and the aim of the executive this year is to provide the "tops".

Viking Relics Indicate Only Norse Occupation

Bone Injury Will Force Jarvis Out Of Next Game

Fate dealt Varsity championship football aspirations another stunning blow when an X-ray disclosed yesterday that a small bone in Ted Jarvis's hand had been broken in last Saturday's game.

Ted will probably be unable to participate in Saturday's game with Western and his loss will be sorely felt. Ted has starred on the Blue and White line-up for the past three years and played brilliantly before that for Balmy Beach and Vaughan Road Collegiate. Ted will probably be back in harness before the season is over. The Blues certainly need him.

Recent Ontario Findings Are not Uncommon, Says Dr. Taylor

HISTORY UNCHANGED

That the discovery of Viking relics in the Lake Superior district was nothing new was the opinion of Dr. Griffith Taylor, Professor of Geography, when questioned yesterday about the matter. The relics of Vikings, indicating that these people had lived in Canada, were discovered only recently in Northern Ontario, and were hailed as an important discovery.

Dr. Taylor pointed out that the Vikings are not important in the racial development of North America, since they left no real descendants, but that the discovery was important in that it aided students in discovering the extent of Norse penetration into North America.

"In any case," said Professor Taylor, "the movements of the Vikings have no bearing on the theory of racial evolution developed in my books, since the theory deals only with the migration of great masses of people."

Among other Viking discoveries on this continent are traces of Viking blood among Eskimos and a certain tribe of Indians, and the discovery of a stone bearing Norse inscriptions in Minnesota.

Western University Confers Degree of Doctor of Laws on Governor-General

By Leslie A. Wheable
(CUP Correspondent)

London, Oct. 15.—"For seventy years we have had dominion from sea to sea; let us fulfil the rest of the prophecy and extend our Dominion from the St. Lawrence and the 49th parallel to the Arctic Ocean," Lord Tweedsmuir declared in an address delivered at the Diamond Jubilee Convocation of the University of Western Ontario, Saturday morning. His Excellency was admitted to the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at the Convocation, part of the ceremonies commemorating the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of the university.

"More and more, I feel that my business as Governor-General is to interest Canadians in Canada," Lord Tweedsmuir said. He contrasted Canada's pacific expansion with the European turmoil and war of the past century.

Engineers Plan Date Bureau

S.P.S. is to have a date bureau. No longer need lonely engineers sit at home fingering slide rules while down in their hearts they dream of beautiful damsels, and long for romance. But with the advent of a Toke Oike date bureau the coming year holds promise for the fulfillment of all hopes.

It seems that numbers of the lads from School encounter difficulties in providing themselves with partners on occasion, and especially at a loss are the bashful men-of-the-green-tie. Now, however, life is to be made happy for these would-be Romeros. It is unnecessary to state, say co-eds, that such an institution would have their full co-operation.

The bureau will operate in much the same manner as last year's university date bureau. The boy who wants a companion for any of the School's social (Continued on page 4)

STUDENT DISCUSSES GERMAN SITUATION

COLONIES DEMANDED

"The German people live on rice bread, margarine and saccharine," said J. Orr, IV S.P.S. student, who has recently returned from Germany, "and yet there are sugar factories everywhere. The ordinary workers are fed on a diet of propaganda."

Foreigners are usually unmolested in Germany but an excellent spy system is in use to watch any move which might prove suspicious. Any places of even slight military importance are "verboten".

Every post office and public building is plastered with posters demanding the return of German colonies which, according to German officials, are of greater value than the allied war debt. The people individually are decent, honest citizens, but in military groups they become wild, demanding increased German territory.

The small cars which are to be the property of every citizen are to be paid for out of the householder's small income and given to him when he has completed the payments, over periods of from one to twenty years.

"A foreigner," continued Mr. Orr, "could live comfortably in Germany for a dollar and a quarter a day. A letter of credit bought in England can prevent the possible confiscation of extra marks by the government."

Blind Dates Found Fascinating By Intercollegiate Tennis Stars

In a previous issue of The Varsity she disappeared into the club house. A few minutes later she emerged, naturally clad in long white flannels. Needless to say she added considerably to the scenic beauty of the courts.

"The men at Varsity can and do dance well, but they are not up to much intellectually," a McMaster tennis star stated. But she did agree to the reporter's word that intellect does not play an important part when one is at a dance.

A Queen's player seemed surprised to know that her escort really attended the University of Toronto. "I thought that Hart House was for men. My escort did not know one room from the other and I spent my evening directing him from room to room—and he wasn't tight either," she added laughingly.

During the tennis matches the girls on the various teams intermingled and some fast friendships were formed. One young McGill miss found the chilly Toronto breezes not to her liking and

Principal Congratulates McGill Team on Football Victory

ANNUAL BANQUET HELD

One of the greatest problems confronting the university is the integration of the social sciences, Lewis W. Douglas, Principal of McGill University, stressed before a meeting of McGill graduates here on Saturday night.

"Perhaps, indeed, in a certain sense, it is more important that they be coordinated than the physical disciplines," he declared.

Some two hundred members of the Toronto branch of the McGill Graduates' Society heard Dr. Douglas when they gathered for their annual banquet-meeting in the Royal York Hotel.

During the course of his remarks, the McGill head congratulated members of the football team on their victory over Varsity, and further declared: "Those on the opposite side should not be neglected—they too played a gentleman's game."

FIRST REHEARSAL OF SYMPHONY GROUP

Opening Meeting at Union Auditorium for Local Musicians

Enthusiasm was the keynote of the first rehearsal of the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra held last night in the Women's Union. The orchestra, which has almost doubled its membership, and now contains representatives from nearly every faculty, was present in full force.

Conductor Brock McElheran outlined the year's activities, which it is hoped will include out-of-town performances, perhaps at Hamilton and Guelph, as well as the accustomed annual concert in Convocation Hall. Haydn's symphony, some Bach Chorales, and ballet music from "Rossini" are among the proposed selections, and the orchestra has also promised a Strauss waltz.

PARKS DELIVERS SECOND LECTURE

At a well-attended lecture yesterday in the debates room the Rev. J. D. Parks continued the second of his series of lectures on modern sex problems. Mr. Parks sketched briefly the marriage customs of other civilizations, showing that monogamy is the most natural of human relationships, polygamy and polyandry only being practiced when wars or other disasters caused unequal division of the sexes.

The sex problem has been treated at various times with fear, awe, and, in the case of some pagan religions, worship. The apostle Paul's attitude towards women is held largely responsible for the early criticism of the church. Christ in his teachings in regard to women did not hold with the ascetic viewpoint, said the speaker.

In concluding this lecture he remarked that a little information often lifts a weight off young shoulders and enables us to fit the problem into our lives to make them finer and better.

It's Worth Trying

Members of the committee for the all-university dance last Friday night must have had a big thrill when they found what a great success the party was. Almost seventeen hundred students and grads got together for the first party of the college year, and endorsed the innovation in such a way that it will definitely be a permanent feature. The masquerade ball is now a thing of the past, and the all-university something which should become one of the biggest social functions of the rugby season.

Unfortunately the McGill fans did not arrive until late in the evening and knowing beforehand the lateness of the hour at which they would arrive, did not arrange to have tickets held. A number did appear at the door of the House, and on promising one of the members of the staff that they would give two good hearty cheers for Old McGill they were ushered in. The cheers were forthcoming, and a lot of colour was added for the pleasure of the jitter-bugs who were enjoying things more than ever in the small hours of the morning.

The idea of light refreshments in the tuck shop was a splendid one, and worked out better than the monotonous, wait-your-turn-for-supper system used for many of the more expensive dances.

We do not propose to suggest to the house committee what they should do regarding dances, but there is a definite place for another such dance before the fall season is over. From our conversations with members of other camp, we know that they are keen about a party at Hart House, and consider it a place hard to surpass.

Why not try an experiment with a dance after a rugby game? It may be too late to arrange for such a function this year, because of the scrip and alumni dances in the down-town hotels, but without a doubt there are many students who are unable to cope with taxis, formal wear, and other superfluities involved with such parties, who would be very happy about an inexpensive Saturday night in Hart House.

We would like to see what would happen if another party were organized for Saturday, Nov. 12th, after the Queen's-Varsity rugby game. The two teams should be invited, and Queen's asked to give advance publicity and allotted tickets. When we go to Queen's we don't have to look up dances down-town, but we can enjoy them right on the campus.

Why Don't We Care?

(Submitted)

The recent landing of a large Japanese force, at Bias Bay, quite close to Hongkong, and the exchange of "warnings" between the Tokyo Foreign Office and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British ambassador to Japan, have again drawn attention to the war in the Far East.

This war has now been in progress for fifteen months, and its ruthless character is only too apparent. Yet the barbarities inflicted upon the civilian population cause little emotional reaction among us.

Is it because of geographical distance? For suffering near at hand makes an immediate appeal to us. Was there ever a time when agencies to ameliorate hard conditions of life were more general than at the present time?

Some decades ago Gladstone aroused England to indignant protest against the massacre of Armenians by "Abdul the Damned". While the Near East was, geographically, closer to England than China is to us, yet the mechanical inventions of the last half-century have so annihilated space that for practical purposes China is nearer us today than Armenia was then to Britain. News reels and the efficiency of modern journalism have, in fact, brought all parts of the world to our doors.

Is it this very fact which explains the dulling of our sensitiveness to what is happening across the Pacific? Probably after a certain amount of shock the emotional nature builds, in self-defence, an immunity-callus. The enterprise of journalists has so widened the range of knowledge of everyday events, that the number of tragedies—and it is largely with these that journalism concerns itself—brought to our notice has increased correspondingly; until it comes about that the emotional reaction that would otherwise occur to one or a few of them, is no longer evident.

Or is it because a mood of fatalism has settled upon us? That we feel that in any case we cannot do anything about it, that the initiative in directing world-currents has passed from us who have been trying to play safe to those who were willing to accept risks: to the adventurous Hitler, Mussolini and the Island Empire?

Or is it that we really are afraid? That like a house-builder in a riot in his street we are keeping discreetly indoors in hope that the trouble will pass without affecting us? For it is a well-known fact that Great Britain, Canada and the United States have the power of bringing this war to an almost immediate close, by shutting off certain supplies which are absolutely necessary to Japan's prosecution of the war and which she can obtain nowhere else. Are we afraid that if we took action in the international sphere, corresponding to what we would do under similar conditions in our local neighbourhoods, we might expose ourselves to hostile notice?

Quacrens, U.C. 503.

Re Correspondence

We invite your contributions for the correspondence column of this paper, and if your letters are in good taste we will be glad to publish them, especially if they offer constructive criticism of our publication. So far this year, the letters received have been much too long, and for that reason we have been unable to print them in the regular column, without abridging, which we feel would be unfair to the writer.

No letter will be printed unless the writer signs his name, but this will be withheld if requested.

What a Life

In producing What a Life, the comedy by Clifford Goldsmith, which opened last night at the Royal, George Abbott has made a departure from his usual style which is almost startling. An attempt, such as has been made in advance comment, to compare this play with Brother Rat cannot be a happy one. Both plays, it is true, can be described as insane farces, but in the case of What a Life the insanity is not intrinsic; it is the result of the point of view from which the author chooses to regard a story which at times comes close to being tragedy. Similarly the characters are not lifted from the comic-strips, they are caricatures, or distortions of real people.

These remarks are really much too profound to apply to a show which is nothing of the kind, but what we are trying to say is that there are undercurrents if you can stop laughing long enough to notice them—no slight qualification. The scene is laid entirely in the Principal's office of an American high school, and the plot is concerned with the complications which beset the life of one of the more unpredictable students therein. George Abbott fans will not be surprised to learn that the identity of Marius, the date of the fall of Rome, the theft of some band instruments and numerous other matters all help to render increasingly improbable Henry Aldrich's attendance at a certain dance, and his continued attendance at school. Of course there are several fascinating side-plots as well.

Eddie Bracken as Henry Aldrich, over-acts in the traditional Broadway farce manner, which always seems like a good idea at the time, and Connie Nickerson does a more restrained but equally effective piece of work as Barbara Pearson, the youthful lady in the case. A lot of efficiently-portrayed teachers and students who keep passing through for one

WHITEWASHES INVADE TUCK SHOP; STEAL ALL LONG STRAWS! (Please note: This definitely is not a $250,000 Quiz Picture.)

Those malicious midnight marauders, the fifty-nine Green-Eyed-Whitewashes, are down to their old tricks again! Two nights ago they sauntered forth from their eerie hangout in the Hart House Tower, and since their usual nightly victim, Prof. Twotoes McGurk, had a late leave, they were forced to find some other amusement. Consequently, they invaded the Tuck Shop at Hart House and stole all the extra-long drinking straws, leaving behind them only a limited number of short ones. The catastrophic significance of this dastardly crime was realized yesterday when students were discovered to drink from ten-inch Pepsi-Cola bottles with nine-inch straws. By noon-hour the usually complacent Tuck-Shop was in an uproar of fanatical frenzy. One hundred and eighteen of the Tuck-Shop clique had lost complete sets of front teeth by trying to guzzle the last inch of pop with a straw which wouldn't reach to the bottom of the bottle. Prof. McGurk, realizing that he was indirectly responsible for the disappearance of the long straws, attempted to solve the difficulty by suggesting to the students that they drink their Pepsi-Colas without straws, by the "open-your-face-and-pour-it-in" method, but the idea was hissed scornfully by the Tuck-Shoppers, whose table manners would never permit such atrocities of etiquette.

Meanwhile, the more serious side of the incident was investigated. "Why did the Green-Eyed Whitewashes want the long straws?", everyone was asking. Some said that they were stealing the longer straws in the hope of more easily breaking a camel's back, but the absence of Camels (as well as Luckies) around the campus squelched that theory. Straw-votes, straw-hates and strawberry-shortcake were other reasons suggested. Prof. Twotoes McGurk was asked to contact the Green-Eyed-Whitewashes and find the real reason for their gruesome crime. However, the Whitewashes suspected Sherlocktoes McHolmes, and tortured him by tickling both his toes with nice fluffy "velvet arbor aevs".

Moral: It's a long straw that has no returning.

VICTORIA WRITERS PLAN NEW LITERARY PROGRAM

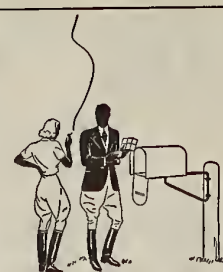

Group to Have Supper Meeting Tonight—Dr. MacLean Guest Critic

The Writer's Group of Victoria College, convened by Miss Rosemarie Schawlow, will hold its opening meeting in the form of a supper party, Tuesday, October 18, from 5 to 8 o'clock in Wymilwood. This meeting will take the form of a contribution meeting. Dr. Kenneth MacLean, recently appointed to the permanent staff in English at Victoria has been secured as guest critic.

Dr. MacLean was graduated from Yale in 1930 and took his Ph.D. degree from the same university three years later. He has lectured there on English literature of the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries, on Shakespeare and on the philosophical thought in eighteenth century England. Dr. MacLean is known also through his book "John Locke and English Literature of the Eighteenth Century", which was received favourably in both America and England.

At the meeting plans for the year's program will be discussed and a suitable time for the regular fortnightly meeting will be arranged. Although this group is a part of the Victoria Women's Literary Society it was opened to the men of the college last year and this arrangement will be continued.

The group was formed two years ago to meet the needs of those students actually writing. It has carried on a series of discussions on the technicalities of writing, prose or verse, and on pertinent aspects of modern literature.

TRACK STARS JOIN IN TITLE QUEST

Strong Varsity Team Favoured to Win Intermediate Cinder Tourney

FROSH IMPRESS

The intermediate team travels to London on Wednesday to compete against Western, McMaster and O.A.C. The following were selected: Prodick, Smith, Cass, Orr, Hutton, Simson, Despard, Piper, Martin, Wishart, Shand, Louti, Marshall, Ishister, Hogg, Esson, Moore, Brown and Bailey. Some of these men have not turned out since the interfaculty meet, because they thought they had not been chosen. Hec Phillips would like to see this afternoon any of the above who have not been out.

This team is a favourite to recapture the title for the third time in four years and which was won last year by O.A.C., who overwhelmed their opposition. Four men are returning from last year's squad, Cass, Hutton, Smith and Louti. Cass qualified to compete in the hurdles last year but competed in the broad jump instead. This year he is expected to score two easy triumphs in the hurdles, supported by Hutton in the lovs. Thirteen men are competing for the first time, along with Wishart and Piper. Both are former senior and intermediate runners. Wishart competed on the senior team in 1935 and on the intermediates in 1936. Piper was on the intermediates in 1935, placing second in the half, and competed last year in the senior three mile.

Prodick and Bailey are outstanding among the freshmen and are favoured in the sprints and the shot put and discus. Prodick's chief opposition will be Smith of O.A.C., last year's champion. Orr will back up Cass in the high hurdles to give us a one-two. Hec Phillips expects that this team will win easily and perhaps score the hundred points that O.A.C. did last year.

Marian Walker Wins Golf Meet

University College Co-Eds Lead
Tournament at Mississauga Club

ADA MCKENZIE PRESENT

Led by an expert freshee, University College co-eds captured the interfaculty Golf Trophy at the annual meet held at the Mississauga Club yesterday.

About thirty-six girls spent the day out by the Credit River at one of Toronto's most noted courses. For those not accustomed to its narrow fairways, the Mississauga was no easy course to play, and many of the best found it too difficult. Ranking favourites, Marion Walker, U.C., and Marj Mosbaugh, Meds, captured the low gross and the C.L.G.U. net prizes respectively. Marion turned in an 85, the best score of the day, while in the handicap feature Marj Mosbaugh and Gladys Eedestone of U.C. were tied with 74 each; in the resulting draw, Marj took the honours. The Kicker Handicap was won by Mary Harding with a 71, the prize for approaching west to Sidney Jones of St. Hilda's. Another Meds student, E. Prouse, took the putting title with an excellent display.

Phil. Poyntz of U.C. was awarded the prize for the longest aggregate drives, while the longest single drive was made by Marg Donalson. Bev Fleming of U.C. won the sealed hole. The prizes for all events were presented by Miss Ada McKenzie, who congratulated the winners and encouraged them to continue interfaculty competition.

Beginners Invited To Boxing Classes

This week marks the beginning of the special classes in boxing, wrestling, gymnastics, fencing, track, rowing and ju-jitsu.

The latter sport proved especially popular last year, and there is every reason to believe such popularity will be duplicated this year. However, the number of participants is again limited to 25 in order to ensure thorough instruction. All interested should be out for the first class starting at 3.30 P.M. credits are given to those who join.

With the departure of last year's instructor, Matsumoto, to Japan, and with the graduation of George Donaldson, manager of the movement since its inception, the duties of instructor fall upon the capable shoulders of Art Menzies, IV. Vic. Art went to New York this summer where he tried and passed his Black Belt, which makes him a fully qualified ju-jitsu instructor.

The classes will be held three days per week—Tuesday and Thursday at 3.30 and Saturday at 11.30. For any further information, see Mr. McCutcheon at the Intramural Office.

OVER THE NET

In the first scheduled volleyball game of the year, Jr. U.C. defeated Jr. Vic in two out of three games. After getting off to a very shaky start, Jr. U.C. came from far behind to win the first game with a score of 15-13. In the second game, Jr. Vic went way out in the lead and stayed there, winning easily, 15-8. Then in the final game Jr. U.C. began to click, with the "set-ups" doing their jobs and the "spikes" slamming the ball over for placements. With Kates serving, Jr. U.C. ran the score to 8-0 before Victoria got the ball. Though Jr. Vic came back to make it close, the issue was never in doubt, and Jr. U.C. ran the game out 15-12.

Willinsky, Gould and Kates played well for Jr. U.C., while Gillespie and Fallis upheld Vic's end.
Jr. U.C.: Willinsky, Gould, Kates, Epstein, Dubin, Rankin, Gerby.
Jr. Vic: Gillespie, Fallis, Huffman, Nicholson, Annis.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Sam Lipin

CHEERING AND NOT CHEERING

Cheering is a good thing. It helps the morale of the team and aids no end in bolstering up flagging spirits. And so we wish to chide the Varsity cheering section for the rather poor sportsmanship which enables it to shout lustily as long as the home team is going places but which makes it look glum and hopeless when the team isn't doing so well. Come on you rooters, the team needs you most when it's losing. Don't plan on going to Western unless you intend to cheer—win or lose. Yea Varsity!

IN THIS WEATHER—SWIMMING IS THE THING

But the Blue nators will go on splashing about throughout the whole winter. And tomorrow night the Varsity water polo team makes its debut in a league opening tilt with Central Y.M.C.A. at Hart House. The provincial league, this year, embraces six teams, Varsity, Central and Broadview Y.M.C.A.'s, Y.M.H.A., Hamilton, and the High Park Swimming Club. Varsity has all its games crowded into the period between tomorrow and Dec. 4, thus finishing their playing season in the provincial league before the McGill-Varsity game on Dec. 10 (or possibly Queen's-Varsity). And for those men who would like to make the intercollegiate team or some interfaculty team, but are short on experience, or for that matter know nothing whatever about the game, but would like to learn, for them Mr. Winterburn is holding special classes in the fundamentals of water polo, every Tuesday and Thursday from 3-4. And the Junior Interfaculty Swimming Meet is tentatively set for Tuesday, November 22.

THE NOBLE ART OF SELF-DEFENCE

No, you're wrong. Not boxing but ju-jitsu. Under the expert guidance of Art Menzies, the only white man in Eastern Canada holding the coveted black belt, emblematic of unexcelled supremacy in bone-breaking holds and grips, classes will begin today and continue every Tuesday and Thursday from 3.30 to 5, and on Saturdays from 11.30 to 1. There is only room for 25 in the class and as some of last year's class are expected back, newcomers are urged to sign the list posted opposite the athletic office as soon as possible.

Girls anxious to be well protected in case of emergency are advised to urge their escorts to join the class immediately.

INTERFACULTY RUGBY

Yesterday's 2-all tie between St. Mike's and Sr. S.P.S. gives us a good idea who will be a big threat to Victoria's lease on the Mulock Cup. And today's game should tell us even more—Vic vs. Jr. S.P.S. on the back campus at 4.15.

This year we hope to see injuries in the intramural series reduced to a minimum. The number of accidents has been rather high and we hope that the coaches of the various teams will see to it that no players enter a game without all the equipment necessary to fully insure the men against ordinary risks. Of course in a game like rugby certain mishaps are bound to occur but these will, we hope, be small in number.

And we're sorry to see that Victoria has already lost a promising player in the person of Dick Stewart, who suffered a broken leg in last Saturday's practice.

FATE FROWNS ON BLUES AGAIN

Fortune dealt another blow to Varsity championship football hopes when it was found that Ted Jarvis, seasoned ace in many games, had suffered a broken hand in last Saturday's game, and will be out of the Western game next Saturday.

Tough luck Ted—we're sorry!

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Marg Conlin

Unfortunately the most important part of the recent tennis tournament, namely the various standings of the five competing universities, had to be omitted from the score sheets in yesterday's issue, so they are being run today, rather belatedly, but they are still interesting when you consider that Varsity led the meet by an eight-point margin over the nearest contender.

Marj Mosbaugh, after cleaning up in the doubles final on Saturday as a tennis great, sauntered out to the golf tournament yesterday where she took the prize for low net on her day's round. The various scores are printed elsewhere in this issue. Young Marian Walker, a freshee at U.C., lived up to advance reports by capturing the title for low gross. Sidney Jones won the approaching competition and countless other people had a marvellous day in the Great Outdoors.

U.C. OARSMEN—

Practice at Argonaut Rowing Club tonight, 5.30 p.m. Yerec, Francis, Waldon and others to be on band.

VIC RUGBY—

The following men will dress for game today: Fleming, Bowles, MacLaughlin, Irwin, Quetin, MacRae, Thompson, Deacon, Jolliffe, Shultis, Best, Lipin, Johnston, Gibbs, Trickey, Raney, McPherson, Jeffries, Ellison, Pollard.

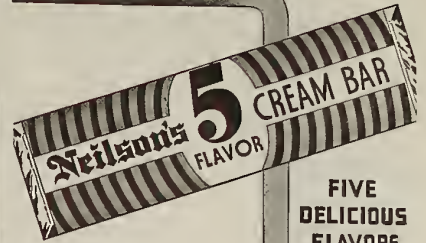

U.C. RUGBY—

The following and any others who have not yet turned out, turn out for practice from now on. All others please hand in their uniforms at 4 p.m. tomorrow in the locker room. Pinkus, Essery, Clavir, Cutler, Hignell, MacDiarmid, Murray, Fowler, McLean, Karry, Singer, Mallion, Stewart, Harris, Moore, Foulds, MacLaughlin, Laidlaw, Ferguson, Bowlen, Goodman, Morley, Tedingham, Smith, Gibson, Willinsky.

We hear that the Basketball Club is about to be launched on one of its largest seasons. Thirteen clubs have entered the league, necessitating the formation of another group for inter-faculty competition. A delay has resulted, because with the exception of St. Mike's and Victoria, the teams all practice on the same floor up at the O.C.E. gym and so far a satisfactory practise schedule has not been obtained.

Of all things, we hear that there are some co-eds on the campus yearning for a rifle range. Up at Mac Hall in Guelph it seems to be quite the thing, and some of the crop here from there are bent on starting a women's rifle club at Varsity. It will be fun to see them in action, probably not as picturesque as the St. Hilda's girls on their archery range, but they will be striking at any rate.

Up at Victoria the co-eds form an appreciative gallery every day as Bruce Hall takes on the local netters. If this weather continues well be having another tennis tournament. We hope—not.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

reason and another add materially to the entertainment value of this distinctly unconventional comedy.

Herbert Cowan

Studio Group

For the most part the one-act plays presented by the Playwrights' Studio Group Saturday evening in Hart House Theatre were mediocre and unconvincing. The notable exception was the completely genuine Family by Rita McLean Farquharson. The witty dialogue was handled with a casual air by a smooth group of players. The group almost clicked again in a dramatization of a Russian folk tale, Little Shyrd, a Cinderella-like fairy story which was amazingly interesting until the last scene. Here the plot became too fantastic and the players seemed to realize they were in a very foolish position. The drama, Cordell Flower, was pointless and unreal in spite of its familiar Muskoka setting. Throughout the plays the simple scenery was cleverly and effectively placed while the lighting and costumes were adequate.

Mardy Blackhall.

Trinity Dramatics

An experiment in interpretation is being undertaken by the Trinity Dramatic Society at their meeting on Tuesday at 4.30, when two versions of the same one-act play will be presented. Using the same set and different casts, the two directors have prepared separate renditions, their purpose being to stimulate their audience into constructive comment.

This departure in the scope of campus dramas results from a suggestion that a play should be re-acted by the original cast after it has heard the audience's criticism. The problems of preparation involved in such a scheme, combined with a desire to activate more than a few people, brought about this compromise. Its effect will be the introduction of the workshop atmosphere into the playhouse, an event beneficial to both.

The introduction of controversy into a usually passive audience not only stimulates their critical faculties but also creates an active interest in the atre. This dual end is being pursued by the Trinity society both through its choice of play and through its workshop study of dramaturgy, the ultimate end being a university-wide concern with dramatics.

Toronto Masquers

Down the Reinhold, Darling, was the name, substance and, we presume, the fate, of the Toronto Masquers' first production of the season Thursday in the Margaret Eaton Hall. It is very difficult to condemn any light farce-comedy that was obviously enjoyed somewhat by an extremely tolerant audience, and indeed Mr. Noblston's effort is better than some we have seen; but we feel that it was only saved from worse than mediocrity by skilful direction and one or two excellent performances. Mr. Stenrad Bennett has made the most of his material, and William Bissell and, in the last act, Freda Lloyd showed good work.

Perhaps, though, the fault is to be found mainly with the audience, for whose amusement, in lieu of enlightenment, such plays are given. True enjoyment in the theatre comes only from stimulation. The audience last night was composed mainly of "dear old souls" and best friends. Seeds of thought would have been sown in vain. The whole audience should have been transported bodily to see Shadow and Substance at the Royal Alex. (adv.). The mental stimulation would have scared the pants off them—and a good thing too.

Malloney's Gallery

The landscapes of Tom Stone are on view in the Malloney Art Galleries until the 21st of October.

One can see in the oils of Tom Stone that he is extremely sensitive to the mark of the distinctive seasons on the Canadian scene. Practically all of the canvases are concerned with winter or fall landscapes with the winter ones in the majority.

Stone seems to be fascinated with the effect of snow on a landscape and has developed a technique of representing it that is full and satisfactory. He is at his best when painting stark pines against ice-blue winter skies.

Colour is the main concern of this artist, that is, he is more successful with colour than with composition. One or two of his smaller canvases appear to be cluttered up, but he never fails to get the atmosphere across to the spectator.

MAINTAINS HARVEST OF SOULS REAPED IN WAR-TORN CHINA

"The months of strife in China are resulting in the reaping of a harvest by the Church after fifty years of sowing," said Dr. Robert MacClure, M.B., M.D., F.R.C.S. (Edin.), Field Director of the International Red Cross, in the Northern War Zone, addressing the S.V.M. in the School of Missions on Sunday morning.

"All sorts of school and other church buildings are transformed for emergency hospitals and refugee accommodation," he amplified, regarding the institutional aspect. "One of our hospitals with normally 30 beds accommodated 350 wounded. Only by taking advantage of the situation and forgetting old sanctities can the Church fulfil her destiny."

"Personnel is the second crop. Even some '3C' material has proved encouraging. Orderlies and nurses dismissed for insubordination or inefficiency have come back to do difficult jobs. Bill Djang, former football star of Knox '24, is running a 'bomb-proof' hospital. Although the buildings have been bombed, shelled, and flooded the staff have carried on without missing a day. The head of the Chinese Red Cross is Bob Lin, who went overseas from Edinburgh, and was the only Chinese in the British army to rise to major from the ranks. The 'last train' left one town on February 18th, but still the Mission Hospital is carrying on."

TRINITY DRAMATICS

The next meeting will be held today, 4.30, in Cartwright Hall. Two productions of the same one-act play directed by Bob Allen and John Barnes. Come and criticize.

tury and a half. July 14, 1789, in Paris saw the storming of the Bastille. The same day, Alexander Mackenzie reached the Arctic. Since then, European and Canadian history have continued to present a striking contrast—one has been a tale of war, the other a tale of peace. The Governor-General stated that Canada cannot exclude herself from the world. She must have an international as well as a national policy. However, her concern is less with the old world than with the new. Canadians should extend the frontiers of thought and the boundaries of knowledge, and at the same time extend the physical frontier. His Excellency pointed to the Mackenzie region north of Lake Athabasca as an example of the extension of the Canadian frontier. The area suitable for growing crops is being pushed farther north and great mineral deposits of radium and gold are being opened up. Every year Canada's frontier is being extended. There are difficult problems which must be solved and can only be solved by toil and clared that the Canadian youth of to-sacrifice, but Lord Tweedsmuir declared would prove worthy of their great heritage and would make the most of the great future of Canada.

Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University, who also received a degree of Doctor of Laws, brought greetings from sister institutions on the occasion of Western's sixtieth anniversary.

ENGLISH RUGGER TEAM DEFEAT TORONTO IRISH

Opening Match of Season Victory for Visitors

The English rugger team opened their season on Saturday by defeating the Toronto Irish 13 to 0, and in so doing they issued a warning to the intercollegiate teams.

The Varsity team presented a well-balanced team with a fast and clever three-quarter line and a fighting scrum. McClatchie played a splendid game at fullback, hoofing the ball in fine fashion. Danny Coughlin, coach of the Toronto team, was the spearhead of the Irish attack.

Spohn opened the scoring for the winners with a touchdown from a three-quarter run in the first half. Hee McKinnon converted. Reid added another major score before the half was over. McKinnon again converted. Pullen counted the third try for the Blues when he dribbled the ball over the Irish line.

Erstwhile Dean of Victoria College Devoting Time to Radio Work

WRITES OWN SCRIPT

By A. C. Forrest

"No, I didn't work on The Varsity in my undergraduate days, but I regret the opportunity I missed to learn the newspaper business," grinned Walter Bowles, ace radio news commentator for the Toronto Daily Star, in his CBL studio last night. "Now, right in the midst of newspaper work, I feel like a fledgling sprouting his first feathers."

"Excuse me a minute, till I get my coat on," he said, fresh from his evening broadcast, but apparently glad to talk about his Varsity days. He was ready a moment later, pipe in hand, to tell us anything we wanted to know, and before long was even admitting that he used to be a member of the famous Victoria College Glee Club which toured England in 1914, after his graduation from the modern course.

ENCOURAGE CULTURAL ART

By Arthur J. Benson

(Staff writer, The Varsity)

New York, Oct. 18.—The other night we saw "... one third of a nation." During an epoch which will be remembered for the suppression of intellectual liberty throughout the world we saw a government-supported enterprise present a biting, accurate, and artistic portrayal of the distressing housing conditions in America. A political system was paying for criticism!

In Canada one has heard conflicting reports and various opinions concerning the WPA Federal Theatre Project. The trend has generally been, however, in a direction which implied (Continued on page 4)

SUNDAY MUSICALES BEGIN NEW SEASON

Hart House Quartet to Play at Opening Concert of Annual Series

SIXTEENTH YEAR

On Sunday evening next in the Great Hall the Hart House string quartet will start the first of the annual series of concerts. Eight of these concerts have been held every year for the past sixteen years.

The idea of Sunday evening musicales originated with Mr. J. Campbell-McInnis and the warden, J. B. Bickerton. They felt that there was a definite need for good music on Sunday evenings at a time that would not conflict with other engagements. This type of concert had been held for years at Oxford University in England and was first started in Canada at the University of Alberta.

The first concert was held on Sunday, November 12, 1922. On this occasion the leader was Mr. J. Campbell-McInnis, with a chorus. Included among the artists on that momentous premiere were Sir Reginald Stewart and Colin McPhee.

Mr. J. Campbell-McInnis has done a great deal for music at Hart House. We also owe a debt of gratitude to the Toronto musicians, who have given us unsparringly of their services on the understanding that their audience should be composed almost entirely of undergraduates of the university.

Freshies Feature Follies At First Freshman Frolic

Freshmen of University College will be treated to their annual party tonight when the Women's Union will throw its doors open for the festive occasion. A touch of democratic impartiality will be lent by the presence of two orchestras, one sweet and one swing. Why does one go to this dance? There are about one hundred reasons, fifty blond and fifty brunette.

Chief attraction of the evening will be the informal floor show presented by Messrs. Weingarten, Daly, Rooke, and Shuster, who will do a few sketches. Also featured will be Kip Kaplansky playing the song hits of the New and Greater U.C. Follies. The four Follies producers are reported as having said, "We can hardly wait to trip the light fantastic!"

Charles Goldhamer will review his work now on the walls of the Art Gallery in Hart House at 1.30 p.m. today. All members of Hart House are invited to attend.

Rhodes Scholarship

The 1938 election will be held early in December. Applications must be in before November 10th. Scholars elected this year will enter Oxford in October 1939. A Rhodes Scholarship is worth £400 a year for two years with an option of a third. Scholars may follow any course of studies they choose. Rhodes Scholars are chosen without written examination on the basis of their school and college records. An essay may be required.

A candidate to be eligible must— (a) Be a male citizen of Canada and unmarried. (b) Be between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five. (c) Have completed at least his sophomore year in college.

Candidates may apply either for the province in which they have their ordinary private domicile, home or residence, or for any province in which they may have received at least two years of their college education before applying.

The qualities which will be considered in making the selection are: (1) Literary and scholastic ability and attainments. (2) Qualities of manhood, truth, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindness, unselfishness and fellowship. (3) Exhibition of moral force of character and of instincts to lead and to take an interest in his fellows. (4) Physical vigor as shown by interest in outdoor sports or in other ways.

Further information and application blanks may be obtained from the provincial secretary, Mr. E. W. Ireland, Room 1000, 372 Bay Street, Toronto, or from Mr. D. R. Michener, general secretary for Canada, 372 Bay Street, Toronto, Ontario.

First Scarlet and Gold To Take Place Saturday

The first of three Scarlet and Gold dances will take place at Wymilwood on Saturday, November 26, at 8 p.m. Music will be supplied by Fred Evis. These informal dances are put on by the Victoria College Union each year, and are found to be especially popular with the freshies and grads. Accommodation is limited to eighty couples, and already sixty tickets have been sold.

ARNOLD WILL ADDRESS GERMAN CLUB OPENING

A talk on "Reminiscences of Prague" by Dr. Arnold, will be a special feature of the first meeting of the University German Club, to take place next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Women's Union.

Other attractions will include the first personal appearance of Professor Quizz on the campus, and the ever-popular Schmitzbank. Dancing and German refreshments will conclude the meeting.

Conditions in Palestine Deplored by Gelber At Avukah Society

"Although it is gratifying for us to keep in mind the contrast in civil liberties between some of the European countries and our own, we should not forget the plight of the Jews in Eastern Europe," said Marvin Gelber, B.A., at the opening meeting of the Avukah Society last night.

Mr. Gelber, who is a graduate of this university's department of Political Science and Economics, is the founder of the Avukah Society at the University of Toronto, and has been interested in its development throughout the nine years of its existence. He recently visited England and Palestine and talked with a great many persons in both countries.

Regarding present conditions in Palestine, Mr. Gelber said, "The situation is disheartening, but we must not forget that the greatest support for the Jewish experiment in Palestine can be found among the members of the British House of Commons."

Mr. Gelber then went on to point out that the extreme precariousness of the present situation cannot diminish the importance of one fact, that there (Continued on page 4)

Joblin Heads Study Group On Christian Fellowship

The study group on "Towards a World Christian Fellowship" met at Victoria to organize with the Rev. Kingsley Joblin. The meeting was extremely informal and very brief. It was decided that the group would meet at luncheons to be held Mondays in Wymilwood between one and two o'clock. Don Ray is to be the group secretary.

Varsity Team Leading In Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament

Montreal, Que., Oct. 18 (C.U.P.)—The University of Toronto tennis team practically clinched the intercollegiate title here, when it split points with the University of Montreal team in today's matches. The score is now Varsity 15, U. of M. 11, McGill & Queen's 0. All that the Toronto netters have to do is score in one more match and the championship will rest in Toronto for the coming year.

Bruce Hall and Pigott play off for the singles championship Wednesday, and the McGill-Varsity doubles will take place at the same time. Hall and Bill Small, both Victoria College men, teamed together, and defeated both the U. of M. and the Queen's teams, while the Pigott-Snyder team lost one and won one. The match will be wound up when Varsity's number 5 man plays a Queen's man.

Varsity vs. McGill singles: Hall beat Desaulles 6-3, 6-1; Pigott beat Richer 8-6, 3-6, 8-6; McMartin beat Small 6-3, 6-8, 7-5; Shoulster beat Mum 7-5, 6-2; Snyder beat Salaman 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

Doubles: Hall-Small beat Gagnon-Daoust, U. of M., 9-7, 6-2; Dussault-Derome beat Pigott-Snyder 8-6, 8-10, 9-7; Pigott-Snyder beat Mable-Thompson, Queen's 6-3, 6-4; Hall-Small beat Benson-Bailey.

All members of Hart House interested in the above please meet Mr. Gordon Webber, new Director of Art Activities, in the Art Gallery at Hart House at 7.30 p.m. tonight.

Survey Shows Majority Opposed to Increased Armaments for Canada

MADILL APPROVES

The majority of students approached strongly opposed the plan for Canadian military expansion made recently by the Rev. Dr. Inkster, for they felt that it would benefit neither the race nor individual, nor would it remedy the unemployment situation sufficiently to make it worth while.

A recent editorial in a Toronto newspaper that if Canada put her unemployed men into military units she would be creating a strong race, building up their moral and mental qualifications and lessening the tension of unemployment. It added that young men would be restrained from indulging in the frivolities of dance halls and "tawdry movies" in favour of the training.

Regarding a strong race being built up, Prof. C. W. W. Hart stated that while strong bodies might be built up by military training such an accomplishment could hardly benefit the race as a whole or safeguard the next generation's health.

Bill Graham, if S.P.S., said that as for dance hall and theatres they were what the patrons made them and that much beneficial enjoyment would be lost if these places were abolished.

FOREIGN POLICY IS TOPIC OF DEBATE

The Hart House Debating Society will hold its first meeting of the season on Wednesday the twenty-sixth at eight o'clock. The subject to be discussed is "Resolved that this House has confidence in Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy." Speaker of the House will be R. G. Allen, and the debaters will be C. G. Sanderson of the Medical Faculty and J. A. Seed of Trinity opposing P. Gorman of St. Michael's and F. N. A. Rowell of Victoria. Dr. R. C. Wallace, Principal of Queen's University, will be present as the Honorable Visitor.

Debates have been held regularly in Hart House since January 31, 1924. At these various debates have been present many notable speakers and visitors. Prime Minister W. L. Maclean King was a speaker on February 4, 1927. On the third of March the same year Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Leader of the Opposition, was present as a speaker. Hon. G. Howard Ferguson was a visitor at the debate on November 30, 1927. In 1932 Hon. George S. Henry and J. S. Woodworth, M.P., attended debates. Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, and Hon. H. H. Stevens were visitors in February and in November, respectively. (Continued on page 4)

ST. JOSEPH'S HOLDS COMMUNION BREAKFAST

At St. Joseph's College on Sunday, October 16, was held the first meeting of the Blessed Virgin Sodality. Mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. McCorkell of St. Michael's College.

Following the Communion breakfast a meeting was held at which Miss Anita Martin, III, presided. During the meeting the presidents of the various activities outlined their programs for the academic year. The meeting was closed by the presentation of miraculous medals to the students, the gift of St. Bernard, Dean of St. Joseph's College.

Whither Toleration

A war-weary world once dared to hope that international fraternity might be achieved, and hailed the formation of the League of Nations. Nazi persecution of the Jews and other minority groups put a final end to such hopes, and made it apparent that barbarism is far from extinct. The religious policy of the same party has destroyed another of our cherished illusions of progress.

We of the twentieth century have always prided ourselves on the fact that we have achieved religious toleration. From pulpit, lecture platform and periodical we are assured that men no longer murder each other over matters of religious doctrine, that nations could never again engage in long and bloody wars to decide questions of religious allegiance. We speak of Erastian politics as a thing of the past.

Yet events transpired in Vienna only last week which indicate a throwback to the excesses of the seventeenth century. Cardinal Innitzer preached a plain-spoken Nazi sermon in St. Stephen's Cathedral, exhorting 10,000 worshippers to "give outward testimony" of their faith. When "outward testimony" took the form of Catholic demonstrations, the Nazis struck back. They stormed and looted the arch-episcopal palace and made a bonfire in front of the Cathedral, burning a crucifix, a painting of the Virgin Mary, and a portrait of the Cardinal. A priest and the Cardinal himself were injured in the struggle. Catholic services in Vienna will hereafter be held only under strict Nazi supervision.

This incident is only one in a long series resulting from the Nazi policy of religious suppression. Twentieth century toleration becomes an empty phrase as men continue to exploit religion for purposes of state, and matters of creed and doctrine become controversial issues because of their political implications. It can be safely assumed that Hitler cares little whether his subjects worship the sun or the moon as long as they bow to his will; but to further his own purposes he will call upon them to renounce their most sacred principles. He employs all the tactics of the seventeenth century zealots, with none of their sincerity. Barbarism is as alive as ever in the world today. We may admire the heroism of the martyrs of the Inquisition, but we are in no position to condemn the age that witnessed their destruction.

Betrayed From Within

Since the advent of the Hitler regime much has been heard from Germany of the "stab in the back" theory. The Nazis claim that the German armies were not defeated on the battle-field in the last war but were "sold out" by a "Communist" revolution at home. Whatever be the truth of the above claim, it is now becoming evident that the historian of the future will have a much more crafty and insidious "stab in the back" to talk about when he discusses the period of the 1930's. The way Democracy has been sold out by the men who have been picked to protect it will unquestionably go on record as the greatest betrayal in history.

To go over in detail about events from 1931 to the present year is unnecessary. In quick review we may ask—Why didn't Britain co-operate with the United States in stopping the Japanese invasion of Manchuria? Why were sanctions against Italy continually delayed when it was obvious that Italy could not carry on any war without obtaining oil supplies from so-called democratic countries? Why did the United States invoke the neutrality act during the Ethiopian affair and yet fail to put it into force during the present Japanese invasion of China—in both cases injuring the causes with which the people of the United States were sympathizing. Why has the preposterous situation in regard to the Spanish non-intervention pact been allowed to continue? Why has the Spanish struggle been depicted as a struggle between Communism and Fascism, instead of a Fascist revolt against a popularly-elected government? Why, when a strong boycott-Japan movement was coming to the fore in Britain last year, did the British government intimate that the growth of such a movement would cause it embarrassment?

Now there comes a typical revelation of this decade, of double-crossing by men who, chosen to govern and protect democratic countries, seem to be spending all their efforts to strengthen the Fascist ideal which is determined to destroy democracy. One of the leaders of the French right-wing party was accused of and admitted receiving a letter of thanks from Hitler for his efforts on Germany's behalf during the last crisis. It is on this right-wing party that Daladier is going to rely to govern France as a democracy.

The superior economic strength of the democracies gives them the whip hand over the totalitarian states. Both Germany and Italy are in need of British money. The Japanese invasion of China could be stopped immediately if Britain, France and the United States would boycott Japanese goods. Yet every clash between fascist and democratic ideologies in the past decade has resulted in a victory for the totalitarian states. The cause is not the strength of the dictator countries, or some inherent weakness in the democratic form of government, but a continual betrayal of democracy by the men to whom its protection has been entrusted.

Art, Music and Drama

Trinity Dramatics

The Trinity Dramatic Society presented two differently cast and directed versions of the same one-act play yesterday as an experiment to demonstrate differences in acting and directing. John Barnes directed the first version and Bob Allen the second.

The most important outcome of the experiment was the fact that the differences of the individual performances of the respective actors or rather actresses, overshadowed the influence of the directors so that it was difficult to estimate the effect of the directors on the plays. This effect should have been more noticeable, and barring the changes in cutting and general placement of the actors, it was practically negligible.

Apart from a little movement at the beginning of the play, Barnes' version lacked action. Allen's, on the other hand, had a good deal of action, but it was spoiled by the melodramatic stamping about of the mother, and in some cases it was superfluous.

Both plays lacked verve. The reason for this was the unreal way in which the mothers especially reacted to the various situations. The directors must have failed to get the actors sufficiently into the spirit of their roles.

The best individual performance was that of Ann Armour, the "Primrose" of the first version. It was mature and sympathetic.

The mother-daughter heart to heart scene was the most satisfactory basis on which to compare the two versions. Thanks to Ann Armour the first one was credible, while the perfunctory manner in which the mother and daughter of the second play went into that scene was very artificial.

Hart House Art Gallery

The Current exhibition in Hart House Art Gallery is the water colours and drawings of Charles Goldhamer.

Mr. Goldhamer is said to be interested in the objective recording of the things he sees rather than in the impressionistic interpretation of them. This can be easily verified by an examination of his work.

His lines are beautiful, and he has a facility of applying water colours that is smooth and effortless. His work is precise and flowing, although one feels that he has not to struggle very hard and that things come too easily for him.

People who like juvenile stars should not miss seeing Toronto's own Bobby Breen and Irene Dare in "Breaking the Ice" at Shea's this week. Bobby Breen sings BREAKING A few lilting tunes in a THE ICE double-talking Menno-nite locale and turns in a good performance as a son of a widowed Mennonite. The plot, often missing in Breen's pictures, is good and brings in the old timer, Dolores Costello, and the ever-chuckling Charles Ruggles. However, what made the picture was the introduction of a new girl called Irene Dare, who should give Sonja Henie plenty of competition on the skates. Irene Dare, world's youngest figure skater, age five, went through all the routine that we've ever seen in the movies with charm and grace. Bobby Breen's singing and Dare's skating makes movies your best entertainment. "City Streets", featuring Leo Carrillo and Edith Fellows completes this program. B.M.S.

Speaking about the coming year, he said he thought that the singing had been excellent and prophesied a good year for the club. Because he is new he has not as yet singled out individuals with particular talent.

Forty-seven people turned out, about twice as many as last year. Lambert said that everyone should just sing and not think about tone. They tried some old English ditties including No John, No John, No John, No, and also Liebestraum. Mr. Lambert was satisfied that the girls got into the spirit of the songs, and that a good time was had by all.

MACLEAN URGES UNITY IN POETRY

"The greatest poetry and fiction reflects the tragedy and sorrow of the world," Dr. Kenneth MacLean told the members of the Victoria Writers' Group at its opening meeting last night. He emphasized the importance of unity in art and deplored the fact that there is so little unity in modern poetry, and said that the unity of poetry depends on the philosophy of the poet. He suggested that the work of the early nineteenth century writers gained its unity from the fact that they lived in an era which had the unified philosophy of a unified world.

In speaking of poetic forms Dr. MacLean said that association has much to do with how a poetic form is accepted. Experimenting in the older forms, such as the sonnet, in an attempt to adopt them to modern or heavier themes, is a good sign. However, the writer must always remember the associations which will unconsciously govern any reader who has become accustomed to these forms in expression of a certain definite mood.

On those dull days when the world's at its worst, don't perch hunched up like a discouraged rooster. Indulge yourself in vocal calisthenics with an appreciative audience. Hie for the nearest telephone and call the folks. It will cheer up both them and you.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Charles Dubin

TOUGH GOING AHEAD!

Saturday afternoon at London, Varsity Blues and Western Mustangs will face each other in one of those crucial games to which people look forward in every sport. Tied for second place in the Intercollegiate Rugby Union, both teams are out to win in order to stay in the coveted play-off berth, and a loss to either team will be a blow to their championship aspirations.

That Varsity is in for a rough afternoon is readily acknowledged. On paper, the purple and white outfit is possibly the strongest in the league, and only seemed to hit their true stride in the second half of their game against Queen's, when with a thrilling forward passing attack led by Clem Faust and Lyn Thompson, they erased an early Tricolour lead, and went on to win by the score of 10-7. On the backfield Western has a bevy of stars, that can compare favourably with any in the league. Clem Faust, who played last year a forward passing combination hard to beat, and together with Kennedy, who shares the kicking duties with Thompson, Farmer (of basketball fame), and Hurley, who calls the signals, makes up a formidable secondary. In Roy Kent, playing at end, Bill Storch has a real find. Roy played with Sarnia Imperials and had to pass two special exams to be eligible for play; he will line up for the first time with Western on Saturday. They say this boy is plenty good.

On the other hand, Varsity have been far from getting the breaks. The loss of three such stellar players as Don Mumford, "Bucko" Macdonald, and now Ted Jarvis is a blow which few teams can easily stand. But Varsity still have a strong team, with a shifty backfield and a powerful wingline, and are far from being counted out. But it's going to be mighty close!

ONE CHAMPIONSHIP AHEAD

With so much emphasis being put on the senior rugby race, we perhaps fail to realize that there is plenty of activity in other fields of sport. In fact, Varsity has already one intercollegiate championship to her credit, and is in the midst of seeking several others. In London, the intermediate tennis team made up of Ross Campbell, Al Phillips, Charlie Segram, Nash and Young, defeated teams from Western, O.A.C. and McMaster, to repeat last year's triumph and win the intermediate intercollegiate championship. The senior tennis team is playing in Montreal, and after the first day of the round-robin tournament were two points ahead of McGill. All the Varsity netters sweep to victory in the first round with the exception of Small, who was beaten by Gagnon of the University of Montreal. If the boys keep it up, Varsity will reign supreme in both senior and intermediate tennis.

AND MEBBE MORE?

Up at the stadium there is plenty of activity with Hec Philips putting his track teams through their paces, in preparation for the two intercollegiate meets this week. This afternoon in London (most everything seems to be happening in London these days), the intermediates, with a strong team, will seek to recapture the intermediate championship which O.A.C. took from them last year. In the meantime, the seniors are preparing for their trip to Montreal, for the intercollegiate track meet this Saturday. Leading the senior team will be McHenry, last year's winner of the one hundred, two-hundred and four-hundred yard dashes; Trussler, pole vaulting champion, and the Brown brothers, who represented Canada in the British Empire games. Varsity's leading opposition will be Queen's, who have the best balanced team of all. Leading the Queen's contingent, is Bill Fritz, Canada's outstanding quarter-miler, who trained under Hec Philips with West End Y. Courtright, British Empire javelin champion, is also on the Queen's squad and these two boys will be hard to stop. With the loss of Larry O'Connor and Dave Crichton, Varsity is going to be hard pressed to win this title.

Back Campus Sports Review

By Sid Roebuck

U.C. RUGBY

For the first time in many moons, University College has become inter-faculty rugby conscious. This year, unlike many previous anni, U.C. seems to have entered a real contender in the house league rugby wars, and under the talented coaching of Charlie Box should make it tough for all comers.

The team is composed of husky freshmen built around a bevy of high class veterans. Ken Stewart is back on the half line and seems to be faster than ever. The speed merchant of the half line appears to be a chap by the name of Munroe Murray, who ran amuck in U.C.'s exhibition tilt with Dents. Ed Goodman, Bill Bowles and Harry Moore are all experienced men, having spent some time with the Varsity teams. If Ned Cutler turns out to be anything like his brother Wes, the red and white should have one of the best ends in inter-faculty rugby. Morton Pinkus and Jack Willinsky, former stars with Harbord Collegiate, are out with the squad.

JUNIOR S.P.S.

The Jr. S.P.S. rugby squad delivered a striking setback to last year's inter-faculty football champs, when they smothered the high and mighty Vic gang on the back campus yesterday by a 13-0 count.

From start to finish the engineers looked the better of the two teams on the field and the score is a true indication of the play. After keeping the scarlet and gold squad locked in their own end of the garden for most of the first quarter, it was with two minutes to go in that canto that S.P.S. scored their first touch on a forward pass, Kilpatrick to Barry. The second quarter was similar to the preceding one, although the yellow and blue were only able to garner one point. The score at the end of half time, Jr. S.P.S. 6, Vic 0.

In the second half Vic fought much harder but to no avail. Successful bucks turned out heartbreaking when one or other of the scarlet and gold fumbled. In the last quarter S.P.S. recovered a Vic fumble on the losers' 15 yard line. On the very next play "Bummer" Stirling hit the line for twenty to score the engineers' second touch. Fugel converted to put School up by twelve. Scoring ended when Fugel hoofed a fiftyyard punt for a rouge. Final score Jr. S.P.S. 13, Vic 0.

Jr. S.P.S.: Sivane, Baker, Vincent, Reynolds, Warner, Banes, Fugel, Kilpatrick, Barry, Lanbe, Stirling, Smith, Reeves, Allen, Graham, Campbell. Vic: Fleming, Bowles, MacLachlan, MacRea, Thompson, Best, Shults, Raney, Macpherson, Ellison, Pollard, Jeffries, Monroe, Irwin, Trickey, Quinton, Deacon, Lipin, Johnston, Gibbs.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Marg, Conlin

There is a pause this week in co-ed sporting circles, now that the tennis and golf championships have been decided. People are still tearing around signing lists for swimming, badminton and basketball. Organized practices should begin next week, but right now the only mass activity is knit-one-purl-two.

The Lillian Massey pool in the Household Science Building will be available next week for Varsity mensual, and if you aspire to inter-faculty honours after Christmas, now is the time to start training.

Wonder what became of the poor co-ed whose escort stood her up on Saturday at the game? The "stand-up" to which we are referring is the gal who climbed to the top of the brick wall surrounding the stadium in the middle of the game, apparently intent on making an inconspicuous exit. The other couple with whom she performed the feat of scaling the wall, slid down on the other side, followed by her heroine's escort. At this point she lost her nerve and refused to proceed further. The other three, after coaxing her to jump and all in vain, finally went on their merry way without her. We must go up and see if she is still there.

Western's lone co-ed cheerleader was much admired on Saturday for her re-

Still rankling from the loss sustained in the chariot race last Saturday, the Meds, with determination gleaming from their eyes, decisively defeated
S.P.S. in a junior volleyball encounter at Hart House yesterday. They won two consecutive games to emerge victorious from the best two of three set.

Playing with six-men teams, which speeds up the play, the Meds declared their more or less friendly enemies by scores of fifteen to six and fifteen to four.

In each game S.P.S. took the first point and kept the play fairly close in the early stages. With the score six to five for S.P.S. in the opening struggle the Meds settled down and won the next ten points to capture their initial victory.

In the second game the superiority of the Meds was even more evident and they had no trouble defeating their hard-playing but less skilful rivals.
Both teams showed promise, but the serving of both was erratic, especially that of S.P.S. who at one time failed to get the ball over the net on three successive serves.

strainedly-effective cheer-leading. Her success in getting the mass approval of the crowd was nothing short of miraculous. Dressed in the white Western pull-over, white swing skirt, socks and sneakers, her behaviour and appearance impressed everyone. Once more the powers that be at Western have used super strategy in introducing something new and different.

Martin Pleased With Boxing Prospects

From all appearances the likelihood of Varsity's intercollegiate boxing and wrestling teams capturing their third straight title looks bright indeed. According to Chesty Martin the boxers and grapplers have squads which are as strong if not stronger than the ones last year—and surely Chesty does not talk jidly for the championship teams practically remain intact for the coming season.

The 118-pound boxing division will again be taken care of by Tom Dillon. Champ Parker of the 135-pound class will be available to defend his laurels, as will Jock Pigott of S.P.S., the mighty 165-pounder. Also Ted de Wolfe and Charley Burke, who represented Varsity in the 145 and 155-pound sections respectively, at the Kingston finals last year, will be back. In addition Howell, who fought two years ago, will turn out to sport Varsity colours.

With the exception of "Whitey" Lathrop, intercollegiate heavyweight wrestling champ de luxe, who will be lost to the school this year due to graduation, all of the grunt and groan artists who did so well last winter have returned. These include Oscar Brunet, 118 pounder; New Reef, 125 pounder; Robertson at 135, and the inimitable Bill Schweenger of senior rugby fame. To bolster an already powerful outfit Phoenix, who last year won the intercollegiate 175 title for O.A.C., will be ready for action. Also MacKenzie, ineligible last year, will campaign for Varsity this season.

As was the case last year the leather pushers will have expert tutelage. Dr. Leslie W. Black will again act as honorary coach and Mel Glinna, international pugilist, as assistant. The wrestlers will have capable management in the person of Cliff Chilcott.

VARSITY AND CENTRAL Y MEET IN WATERPOLO GAME

Tonight at eight o'clock the Varsity water polo team play their initial game of the season. At eight o'clock the team will meet Central Y in Hart House in the first game to be played in the newly formed provincial water polo league.

New York Theatre Shows Social Abuses

that this first wholesale attempt on the part of a government to foster dramatic art and give employment to its adherents has been a laughable, dismal failure.

Not only does it run the risk of regenerating the arts, one is assured, but the people in its employ are nothing but second-rate actors, writers, and technicians. Besides being an extravagant waste of public funds, it is a breeding place of "un-Americanism".

To the malice and absurdity of these rumours we can confidently attest.

This fifth Living Newspaper derives its title from President Roosevelt's second inaugural address, in which he declared that he found "... one third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clad and ill-nourished." Based on accurate social research (files may be examined at the Project's library) it presents a grim account of the slum problem, using New York as an example. Yet with this "unpoetic" foundation it succeeds in being artistically exhilarating, grim in tragedy, rich in humour, aesthetic as well as intellectual.

The production comprises nearly every conceivable type of technique—lantern slides, moving pictures, the newly rediscovered "bare-stage" method, the impersonal voice of a narrator over a P.A. system and traditional realism surpassed in its superb scenic representation of a four-story tenement. The acting, too, varies in mood and mode, from accurate dramatic portrayal through satire to burlesque, all homogeneously fused to a dramatic perfection—this with a company of more than 150 persons.

But beyond this artistic triumph, we are struck dumb with the fact that the play did not pull its punches, aimed at the "powers that be". As for "un-Americanism", that die-hard synonym for socialism, its presence was not evident—unless love of humanity and intelligent thought for its well-being are attributes of socialism alone.

Nor is "... one third of a nation ..." which has been playing to packed houses since the middle of January, the only creditable WPA dramatic product. This third year of the Federal Theatre has given us three major New York hits, including Prologue to Glory, the season's only four-act play. Past successes include Power, Dr. Faustus, Murder in the Cathedral, Triple A Plowed Under, and the Negro Macbeth.

In addition the WPA has maintained the Caravan Theatre, which tours the public parks, a Gilbert and Sullivan opera company, and a three-ring circus which has been playing for two and one-half years. Moreover, it has carried the theatre "to the people", prices for "... one third of a nation ..." for example, ranging from 25c to 83c.

The Federal Theatre Project has thus performed Herculean tasks. Not only has it given encouragement to thousands of impoverished artists, introduced new techniques to the American stage, injected new blood into the theatre, and contributed successfully to American culture, but it has given the world the heartening and beautiful spectacle of a country not afraid to officially recognize its own defects.

STUDENTS OPPOSED TO MILITARIZATION

were better places to build up peoples' bodies than military camps and cited examples in the Czechoslovakian fresh air camps which are not militaristic.

John Sirvan, II S.P.S., felt that, on the whole, the plan was a very good one, particularly regarding unemployment. F. Baugh and H. Mole, also of S.P.S., didn't see how moral life could be improved by army training and society.

One co-ed who would not give her name, said that civilian men were as preferable as militarists.

Betty Wright, I Trinity, does not approve of war or anything which might lead to war and thought there were better ways than army life of instilling desirable qualities into men. Lieut.-Col. H. H. Madill, commanding officer of the C.O.T.C., said, "I heartily agree with Dr. Inkster and feel that military training of the type now given is quite beneficial."

He explained that training for military work in its highly mechanized form requires at least high school grading, and that this education is supplemented where soldiers have not been sufficiently educated. This, added to their military training, would be beneficial.

CHANG WILL DISCUSS CHINESE SITUATION

"The fate of China is the destiny of the world," says H. Y. Chang, of Shantung and Emmanuel College, who is speaking on "China Today" in the S.C.M. noon-hour series in Hart House Music Room at 1.30 today.

"To understand the war we must first examine the cultural background of this ancient people," maintains this graduate of Cheelo University and Nanking Theological Seminary, and Associate Editor of the Christian Farmer. "The conflict is having and will continue to have important consequences not only in the Far East, but also in the wider international field. The outcome of this strife which sometimes seems so remote is of vital importance and interest to us all."

GLEE CLUB PLANS PUBLIC APPEARANCE

Assiduous practice has been the order of the day for about one hundred members of the Hart House Glee Club who are preparing for their first engagement of the year. This engagement will be at a banquet at the Royal York Hotel on Monday, Oct. 24.

On the whole, the members feel that the year ahead looks promising for the 1938-1939 edition of this organization. While more male tenors could be used, the rest of the club has attained its full complement.

Warden Bickersteth is reported to have expressed his approval when the final rehearsal was held yesterday and the club went through the full repertoire that it has acquired in an amazingly short time.

FORMERLY WARDEN, BOWLES NOW ON RADIO

all Toronto radio fans, was once the Warden of Hart House, and, through the early war years, before he was accepted by the army, was acting Dean of Burwash Hall.

Referring to the days of his deanship in Victoria College, we asked Mr. Bowles if North House was the "tough" house then. Smiling rather non-committally, but suggesting a lot, he replied that they weren't tough, but were "pretty lively". "Of course, I knew them better in North House, and that makes a difference. I had my rooms in North House."

As Dean, he had a great deal to do with the soldiers, as the Burwash residence was gradually changed from a student residence to a barracks. In 1917 he was accepted by the army, and had the peculiar experience of sitting at the high table as Dean one day, and being dressed in khaki the next day, "stinging" back to his fellow-privates at the table below.

After the war, he worked in Ottawa for a time, and then became the Warden of Hart House for the first two years after it was opened. "I gave the two hardest years of my life to that work," he said, and it wasn't hard to see that he cherished a great love for "The House", which he endeavoured to make a real place for the students. "I got to know The Varsity pretty well in those days, just before it became a daily; everybody just used to wait until it came out."

Since then he has been engaged in teaching, then publishing, writing, acting, and for the past few years he has devoted his whole time to radio broadcasting. At one time he planned to enter the ministry of the Methodist Church, and in our opinion, the church lost a very pleasing preacher.

"I have taken no course in voice culture, although in my singing and dramatic work I received considerable training which is necessary for proper radio work. Broadcasting, and especially news broadcasting, is fascinating, but there is a nervous strain attached to it all the time. During the period of international tension a few weeks ago, we were continually at high tension. A Star man was in the studio with ear-phones on, continually pounding out the flashes on a typewriter, and we stood by to flash them over the air whenever we got a minute's opening."

Mr. Bowles always writes his own script for his nightly 6.15 broadcast over CBL, and this takes him a considerable part of every afternoon. Regular radio listeners will recognize his voice on other programs, but his broadcasting for The Star, necessitating readiness to give extra time when special newscasts are required constitutes the main part of his work. One of the main parts of this work is to be a keen student of world affairs so that news which is "hot" may be spotted immediately, and constructive comment made.

are four hundred thousand Jews, mostly refugees from totalitarian states, who are living decently and in self-respect in Palestine. "Even if Palestine is partitioned or cantonized, these four hundred thousand Jews are in Palestine to stay," he said.

During his talk, Mr. Gelber traced the history of the Toronto branch of the Avukah Society, and recalled the time when it was a small study group which was restricted to men students only. He observed to the chairman that in view of the enthusiastic group in attendance, he was willing to admit his own mistake in insisting upon the exclusiveness of the society.

TORONTO TENNIS TEAM TAKES THREE TITLES

Freshman Party Stormed By Many Crashers U.C. Freshmen Frolic Despite Interruptions

Front Door of Union Broken by Horde of Fraternity Men

POLICEMAN TRAMPLED

Special to The Varsity

U.C. freshmen and freshies broke it down last night to the music of Norm Phenister upstairs and downstairs in the Women's Union.

Among the other things broken down was the front door of the Union when a crowd of thirty male students allegedly from a local fraternity attempted a coup d'etat on the reception committee. It is said by witnesses that the Women's Union has never been visited by such a large number of uninvited guests. It was believed that a record had been set.

Fate in the form of a campus policeman interceded on behalf of the committee, but was immediately thrown to the ground by the rushing horde of Greek letter boys who completed the job by making a doormat of his brass-buttoned doublet.

Two vicious attacks were made early in the evening. The first at about 9.30 and another one a little later on. All (Continued on page 4)

U.C. PARLIAMENT TO DISCUSS FEUD

Hepburn-King Disagreement Is Subject of Debate

THIRD SESSION

The third session of the U.C. Parliamentary Club will be held in the Junior Common Room today at 4.10 p.m. The resolution will be: Resolved that this House deplores the Hepburn-King feud as a danger to Confederation. The speaker, Sir G. W. Stoddart, K.C.B.S., will preside.

In an interview the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. Albert Rose, said: "We trust that the fine turnout of freshmen and members of the W.U.A. will continue. As for the resolution, the government hopes to show that this feud is typical of the sectional grabbing of power by provincial politicians."

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Berlin, Oct. 19: Chancellor Hitler bestowed upon Col. Charles A. Lindbergh the service cross of the Order of the German Eagle as token of German esteem. The bestowal of the cross, created to honour distinguished foreigners, followed the attacks of the Russian press on Lindbergh for the opinions he is supposed to have expressed regarding the German and Russian air fleets.

Jerusalem, Oct. 19: Order was restored in the old city of Jerusalem as 1,000 Coldstream Guards marched into the city. The troops were met by a strong fusillade of rebel fire but, after a few hours of fighting the Arabs were subdued.

GRAYDON TO ADDRESS MAC-CARTIER CLUB

Prominent Member of Parliament is Guest Speaker at Luncheon

Gordon Graydon, M.P., will be the guest speaker of the Macdonald-Cartier Club at their luncheon meeting today at one o'clock in the Graduate Dining Room of Hart House.

Mr. Graydon, speaking at the club's initial meeting, is a graduate of the class of 2T1, University of Toronto, and one of the youngest members of the House of Commons. He is the Conservative candidate for Peel County. He was president for two years of the Junior Conservative Association of the Province of Ontario and was selected by the Right Honourable R. B. Bennett as English-speaking secretary to the National Convention which met in July last.

According to George Stoddart, president of the club, he is regarded as one of the most brilliant of the younger members, and promises to be an excellent choice for the opening meeting.

BLUE INTERMEDIATES TO MEET McMASTER

It is do or die this Saturday afternoon for the Blue intermediates as they engage the McMaster twelve at Varsity Stadium in the curtain-raiser to the Argo-Oswawa clash.

As neither the Blue Boys nor the Hamilton team have been able to hit the win column in two previous starts, a defeat this Saturday spells virtual elimination from the play-off picture. The team that wins will have to be counted on in the play-off contention, so Saturday's game should prove to be a thriller from start to finish, with both teams out after the two points. The Bryers-coached Beavers are still smarting from the consecutive defeats handed them by Western and O.A.C. They were outlucked rather than outplayed in both tilts, the loss at the hands of the Londoners coming as the result of a blocked kick with two minutes left to full-time. Varsity had dominated play during the first part of the game.

Co-eds Would Forego Corsage If Extra Dance Threatened

So the Varsity co-eds agree with the co-eds of Ohio Wesleyan College. When it comes to choosing between a corsage or an extra dance, co-eds of both universities are of the same opinion. Both college groups make the practical choice of an invitation to one more dance rather than the romantic thrill of receiving a corsage. That the practice of sending corsages should be stopped was revealed to be the opinion of most of the eds who were questioned on the subject by The Varsity yesterday. They admitted that the convention had its good points, but they felt that these were outweighed in importance by many disadvantages.

When, however, a formal occasion arises, the sweet young things like to indulge their feminine fancy in this knightly custom. They agree that at formal dances, the thing should be done properly, and of course, a corsage is an effective touch. "You get a thrill out of it," said one Vic Soph.

Dorothy Ellis, I.U.C., expressed the opinion of many in saying that most boys give corsages because of convention. Other girls spoke sympathetically, realizing that, were this custom abolished, the boys would still have enough expense in entertainment and transportation.

An unusual aspect to the question was brought to light by a Vic Soph—that Toronto boys are more generous in giving corsages than the resident eds. Perhaps the good home-cooking induces a more amiable nature.

The costly orchid, of course, is a decided Varsity preference; roses and gardenias run an even second in popularity. One blue Soph was fond of (Continued on page 4)

SOCIOLOGY CLUB HEARS URWICK

New Students Welcomed at Wymilwood by Professor

Professor Urwick welcomed the new students to the Sociology Club at their meeting at Wymilwood yesterday afternoon with the statement that University of Toronto graduates have a better and more valuable grounding than any other sociology graduates on this continent today.

He warned the new students that they could expect an almost perpendicular rise in their fourth year. "While the first two years are very general," he said, "the final year contains a great deal of sociology." Statistics from last year show that in the third year of the course there were no firsts or seconds, while in the fourth year there were no thirds.

S.P.S. BUREAU UNOFFICIAL

The proposed Toike Oike Date Bureau was given official attention yesterday when P. C. Anderson, president of the Engineering Society, told The Varsity that, provided the Engineering Society was in favour, a date bureau might be organized.

Visibly surprised yesterday when he read the headline "ENGINEERS PLAN DATE BUREAU" in The Varsity, Anderson said, "If the Toike Oike wishes to sponsor a date bureau it must be endorsed by the Engineering Society. The Society has no connection with this Toike Oike enterprise, but will probably give its consent if the issue comes to a head."

Spicy news regarding the Toike Oike's steps toward a date bureau was disclosed yesterday by two Toike Oike writers who preferred for safety's sake, to have their names unrecorded. They claimed that the bureau was not completely formulated and that they were startled to see the plan "out of the bag." "We wanted the date bureau principally as a publicity stunt for increasing Toike Oike production," they said. "We had not hoped for publicity so soon, and now we find the plan getting out of control."

"You see," they continued, "if the plan fails, the proposed O.C. dates will be after our heads. Early in the fall we stood in the U.C. rotunda for the first two days, picking the best girls and obtaining their consent and willingness to assist in the S.P.S. bureau. If the plan fails—good night!"

Ken Cooke, I.S.P.S., deplored the fact that the custom was ever started. After dress-suits, tickets, taxis, etc., have been paid for, a corsage is the straw that breaks the student. He hinted that women had invented the idea and should be dealt with accordingly.

This comment was endorsed by Barry Coutts, II.U.C., who claimed that woman's vanity was responsible. "I firmly oppose this practice, but it is like tipping—you can't do anything about it," he said.

All who were questioned admitted that they did send corsages. Ormie Weir, I.Vic, held that it was merely a fine gesture on the part of the man, and that corsages contributed a great deal to the atmosphere of formal dances. But in view of the fact that some corsages are better than others and that some men do not send them at all, he concluded that it would avoid hurting the feelings of many co-eds if the reason for comparison were eliminated.

Will Scarlett, I.S.P.S., said that his feelings about sending a corsage depended on the degree of affection he felt toward his partner. Since there are so few formal dances, he maintained that the added expense of corsages is negligible.

ATMOSPHERE QUIET AT S.P.S. ELECTIONS

In a quieter atmosphere than the spring general elections, S.P.S. yesterday went calmly about the business of choosing candidates in the annual by-elections. The choice of an executive for 4T2 was the main issue, but 4T1 and 3T9 elected a secretary and president respectively. The successful candidates:

4T2: Pres., G. Huddleston; vice-pres., J. Clark; sec.-treas., G. Lee; athletic rep., J. W. Bell.
4T1: Sec.-treas., W. Brown.
3T9: Pres., C. D. Dick.

PEACE FOR WORLD IF CHINA WINS WAR

Mr. Chang Talks of Sino-Jap Struggle in S.C.M. Address

"If China wins the war, it will mean peace for the world, but if China loses the war, it will mean that the world will be filled with militarism," declared Mr. Chang in a talk sponsored by the S.C.M. in the Music Room of Hart House yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Chang explained that if the Japanese are successful, the war-like spirit of the present Japanese government will be felt throughout the world. If the Chinese win, he continued, a new philosophy will appear. It will be composed of the old Chinese philosophy and Christianity. China will be a democracy patterned after Christian socialism.

"Students in China are optimistic despite the fact that guerrilla fighting has now become the Chinese method of fighting. All Chinese students have a likeness for joining the army, but the government feels that their man-power is not needed at present. The government feels that the students will be more needed in serving their country after the Japanese have been driven out," declared Mr. Chang.

Correction

An incorrect date was given in yesterday's Varsity for the first Scarlet and Gold dance at Victoria College. The first dance will take place in Wymilwood next Saturday, October 22, at 8 p.m. The second will be held Saturday, November 26.

FREE LANCE CLUB IS REORGANIZED

Because college girls are not so shy as they once were, because the separate colleges are now rallying on what it began, because it has cultivated its usefulness and is glad of it, the Free Lance Club is giving up all claims of being a powerful organization on the campus and is concentrating its efforts on being a friendly one.

Organized in 1922 by Dr. Edith Gordon, the club has always striven to provide an extra-curricular activity for girls who were not able to participate in such organizations as the Music Club, the Drama Club, and so on. It was formed to cater to the needs of those who felt themselves left out of college life because they were carrying their way. Dr. Gordon mentioned that Cornell University was founded with the idea in mind that students might work their way through college.

M. ASSIE ADDRESSES FRENCH CLUB TONIGHT

Heard on the campus—"Even if you can not speak French like Danielle Darrieux, you will have a swell time." Tonight is a big night at the French Club. M. Assie is to give a talk on Brittany as his contribution to a long and attractive program. A comedy, Le Retour de Marquis, and a sing-song featuring folk songs will fill out the evening.

For its annual dramatic production, the club will present La Gramme, by Labiche, and a one-act play.

Blues Triumph in Singles, Doubles and Team Titles—Pigott Beats Hall

SHORTER ALSO WINS

Montreal, October 19: Varsity made a clean sweep of the senior intercollegiate tennis tourney here today, winning the team, singles and doubles titles. The final team standing at the conclusion of play today showed University of Toronto in front with eighteen points, Montreal second with thirteen, and McGill next in line with eight. Queen's failed to score a single point.

Flashing a brilliant brand of tennis, Bill Pigott defeated his schoolmate, Bruce Hall in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, to capture the singles title for the Blues netters. Hall also teamed up with Bill Small to outstroke Derron and Dussault of the University of Montreal 6-3, 6-3, for the doubles crown.

In the remaining matches Hall and Small paired up against McMartin and Marm of McGill. The Toronto team lost one set in taking the match 6-2, 6-8, 6-2. Bill Pigott and Paul Snyder dropped the first set in their match against Dussaults and Richer of the University of Montreal and went on to win 3-6, 7-5, 6-3. In the singles Shorter won his engagement 6-2, 6-3, from Bailey of Queen's.

Hart House Library Boasts Peerage Chair

Unnoticed by most members of Hart House, one of the specially designed chairs used by the peerage at the Coronation of King George VI now stands in the Hart House Library.

The chair, covered with blue plush and gold braid, with the Royal insignia woven into the fabric, stands by the book display case, just inside the entrance to the library. Any who wish to pass time in the library, seated in royal dignity, will find that the chair is securely clamped to the book display case. Unlike the comfortable leather chairs, where the weary student may sprawl and read, the Coronation chair is for display only.

Vincent Massey, the founder of Hart House, secured one of the chairs through a friend and presented it to Hart House.

SECONO MEETING HELD BY S.A.C.C. COMMITTEE

The second meeting of the Students' Administrative Council for the year 1938-1939 was held in the Women's Council Room yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, with the President, Mr. Rankin, in the chair.

A temporary Committee on Student Service was appointed as follows: Mr. E. P. Hartford, Commissioner, Miss Frances Carlisle, Mr. Charles Box, Professor S. N. F. Chant, Mr. E. A. Macdonald and Miss A. E. M. Parkes. Also appointed were Miss Betty Kirk, Trinity IV, as Women's Editor of The Varsity and Miss Betty Gardner, Victoria II, as Women's News Editor.

The request of the Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity to act as Guest Editor of the McGill Daily for the issue of Friday, October 21, was approved.

C.U.P. Features

The executive of the Canadian University Press which met in Kingston a few weeks ago, formulated plans whereby the National news and wire service might extend its work to bring special features to all the sister members of the C.U.P. Since then it has arranged that Ross Munroe, Parliament Hill correspondent for the Canadian Press, will contribute weekly articles of news and comment from Ottawa.

These articles, the first of which will appear in tomorrow's Varsity as well as on the pages of fourteen other Canadian University papers, are written by Mr. Munroe in Ottawa, forwarded to the C.U.P. secretary at Queen's University, and from there copies are relayed throughout Canada.

Ross Munroe, news editor of The Varsity three years ago, has been very successful in his work with the Canadian Press, with whom he has been since graduation in 1936. At the present time he is considered the most eminent journalist to have left the staff of the Toronto undergraduate newspaper during the past several years. The Varsity is proud to be able to print these articles and is grateful to both Mr. Munroe and the C.U.P. for this special feature which it is hoped will continue throughout the year.

Tonight, as another C.U.P. feature, the editor of The Varsity will have the privilege of editing the McGill Daily, which is the oldest daily University paper in Canada. The McGill paper has much the same set-up as has The Varsity but is a larger sheet, and is printed by one of the down-town papers.

Matter of Taste

It is a matter of opinion where it is good taste for girls to smoke. Questions asked by one of the down-town papers last summer received answers to the effect that girls had the right to smoke on the street as well as men, but most cultured people believe that smoking on the street by girls is not "just the thing to do".

But girls carrying lighted cigarettes on a dance floor are an absolute menace. Last Friday night in Hart House, a girl dancing with closed eyes, rested her hand on her partner's shoulders, while she held a lighted cigarette between her fingers. Unfortunately the girl moved her hand, and the cigarette came in contact with the delicate material of another girl's gown. In an instant a small burn had appeared, and a small flame sprang up.

The girl's escort had the presence of mind to crush the flame immediately, but on the whole it was a rather serious little mishap, and irreparable damage had been done. Most girls don't smoke while dancing, and those who do should realize that they are behaving in an unconventional manner.

In Hart House there are many convenient receptacles for cigarette butts, and burned matches. They are not conducive to good dancing if deposited on the floor, nor is the swimming pool the best place for them to be thrown. In bringing up a matter like this, it is not suggested that these faults are prevalent among Hart House dancers, but there are a few exceptions to mar every party.

It's Too Smokey

Due to the indiscriminate burning of leaves on the campus there has been a constant and objectionable atmosphere hanging over the university during the past few days. This is concentrated around Victoria College and along the pathway from the McMaster Building to Trinity College. It spreads from these points.

Naturally there are a great number of fallen leaves at this time of year and something has to be done about them. The custom is to rake them into large piles, set fire to them and leave them to smoulder.

Surely, in a university as large as ours, there must be some facility available whereby the leaves could be transported elsewhere without too much trouble or expense and burned in an incinerator, or something serving the same purpose, and equipped with a sufficiently high chimney to carry off this smoke.

Sixty Cents Per Head

One source states that exports from Canada to Japan have increased at the rate of six million dollars per annum, since the commencement of hostilities between Japan and China. Among those exports are materials which if withheld would make it almost impossible for the Japs to carry on their armed aggression. But when Canadians are getting paid at the rate of sixty cents per person per year, for the blood of Chinese babies, and Chinese university students, it cannot be expected to cease exporting war materials. After all, Chinese people are a long way from us, and we are not our brother's keeper.

It might be interesting to note who among the prominent citizens of Canada are among the shareholders of the companies which lead in exports to Japan. Perhaps they are getting paid more than sixty cents per year, and for them Chinese blood comes a little higher.

One of the greatest advantages of the athletic fee is the privilege of attending the Argonaut home games when the Blue team is out of town. The reason that students have this privilege is twofold. In the first place the fee admits students to all intermediate games, which are played before the Argonauts. And through the courtesy of the Argonaut Club the students are allowed to remain. However, the Argonaut officials have the privilege of closing the gate at two o'clock, and students who come with their registration cards after that time will find that it will be necessary to pay for admittance.

One seldom thinks of a band leader as a student of literature, but the exception is found in Artie Shaw. This young musician, who has recently risen to fame and fortune, did not always aspire to the job of waving the baton. In fact, a few years ago he stopped his already far-advanced musical career in order to try his hand at writing a book.

Unfortunately Mr. Shaw was not as adept at twisting phrases of English as he is at improvising phrases upon his clarinet, commonly called a "licorice stick". So it was back to the music business for Mr. Shaw, who, it is quite evident, does not regret this return to his native fold.

Art, Music and Drama

Because both musicians and auditors find it pleasant and beneficial to rest briefly from their respective activities in the course of a concert, and because the broadcasting of complete public concerts has become such a normal thing, the radio networks have now an unsurpassed opportunity to disseminate new ideas and authentic information about music.

And so, with one notable exception, we have a host of "intermission commentators" drivelling sentimentalities about Music and Great Composers, or telling anecdotes about musicians which have been discredited for years. (This disease is one which afflicts certain symphonic program notes as well.) Or in some quarters a certain amount of self-congratulation on the part of the network finds favour. In any case an intelligent use of intermission time is very infrequent.

The notable exception, of course, is Deems Taylor, who speaks on the New York Philharmonic programs broadcast by Columbia. This year's series of broadcasts starts next Sunday, and even without the excellent orchestra Mr. Taylor's sane and refreshing ideas on musical matters would make the program worth listening to. The worth of these ideas is proved by the fact that many of them, expressed during the last two years, have been assembled in a fascinating book called Of Men and Music, and they have stood the test of print. Mr. Taylor's thoughts on modern music are particularly illuminating, and we feel that the book has received far too little attention.

Home ye Arctic Owl
Was Driven from Chys
Hyndom and Finally Slaine

THE ARGUMENT

I
It fell about the Shrovetide,
The weather it was foul,
When I took my gun and a Chelsea bun
To hunt for the Arctic Owl.

II
The Arctic Owl is a beast of prey
Who feeds on the Mangrove root,
He gives himself airs and does watch repairs

While stamping the time with his foot.

III
They seek his hide for carpets
They seek his Uncle Bill,
They seek the ants from his brother's pants
And the sound of the Whipoorwill.

IV
He has a reputation
For criminal breaches of taste,
He runs through the town and smears his bald crown
With red ink and anchovy paste.

V
He spits his teeth into your face
It leaves you quite amazed,
His molars are made of Japanese Jade
And the balls of his optics are glazed.

VI
An Arctic Owl once passed by here
With an escort of British Dragons,
He was cheered by the throng as he strutted along
With his beads and his coloured balloons.

VII
You must be armed with a Chelsea Bun
To trap this nimble beast,
You stalk him at night with a twenty-watt light
Or a fifteen watt at least.

VIII
I once surprised an Arctic Owl
Perusing an essay by Steele,
He questioned my skill at preparing a grill
And arranging a budgeted meal.

THE CHASE

IX
Into the region of snows I went
To slay the Arctic Owl,
I found him at home reclining a poem
Disguised in a black abbot's cowl.

X
"Avast ye Arctic Owl," I cried,
"I've scotched ye in your lair",
But quite as a flash he broke into a rash
And rode off on his dappled gray mare.

XI
I chased him over the mountains
I chased him over the plains
I fired at him twice with a handful of mice
And severed his grip on the reins.

XII
We closed in mortal combat
The fur flew thick and fast
But thanks to my skill with halberd and bill,
The days of this monster are past.

Soccer, Football Games Played In Muddy Fields

Trinity Gridders Defeat Meds
Soccer Tilt Ends In Tie

HUSSEY STARS

Mud larks came into their own yesterday afternoon in interfaculty sport. Trinity gridders proved themselves superior in the muddy going to Junior Meds, defeating the Medicals 3-1 after a bitter struggle. Slogging through the slush at Trinity Field, the Red and Black team piled up their point total on singles by Henry Hussey. Three times the Trinity men crashed the Doctors' back formation to put the ball within range of the goal-line, and three times Hussey came through.

The Medicals scored their lone point in the third quarter, and again it was a blocked kick that was responsible for the score. Both teams played hard, smashing football in a bitterly-fought game, with Trinity steadier than the Meds team.

Trinity: Kimber, Partridge, Lindsay, Wormith, Hutt, Cranfield, Lowndes, Wright, Galloway, Dunlop, Walker, McAdam, Whitlaw, Alby, Hussey, Harris, Fee, Snyder.

Jr. Meds: Mottram, Riggs, Park, Biggs, Jolly, Hair, Jamieson, White, Dixon, Anglin, Cody, McLean, Moffat, Arthurs, Fyfe, Newman, Benson, Corcoran, Boyd, Campbell.

In the soccer division, Dents and Pharmacy battled to a 1-1 overtime draw on the rain-soaked front campus. In the first half Pharmacy appeared much stronger than Dents, who were playing without reserves, and shot into the lead after fifteen minutes of play, (Continued on page 4)

Speaking of SPORT

By Bernie Shiffman

THREE JEERS FOR THE SPECTATORS

Back campus football has started all over again—crowds once again swarm the side-lines and give vocal support to their faculties with cries like "Robber!" Kill the referee. . . . Get a rule book and well you know. . . . It is about this example of cheering on the colleges to victory that we find fault. The most difficult thing in the world is to referee in interfaculty sports. In the first place the players are not as well acquainted with the rules as they might be and make many more infractions of the rules than in the other leagues and if the game has to be called correctly and it will there is much penalizing and yard losing. In the big league penalties are looked upon as bad breaks but soon as it happens in the interfaculty group it becomes a robbery and a chisel—instead of hindering and booing at the referees who have their hands full watching the twenty-four players, the crowds at these games should assist by keeping well off the side-lines and cheering the players of their own faculty—and by the way we wouldn't be at all surprised if Trinity, Jr. S.P.S. and Sr. S.P.S. are left at the end of the regular season to fight it out for the "Mulock Cup".

Note—This can be revised at any time.

PING PONG . . . A POEM

As I sat there nearly napping
Suddenly there came a tapping
As if someone gently smashing
A ping pong ball . . . and in Hart House too.

Which only goes to prove that the athletic fee is still your best entertainment. Now, to an already lengthy and imposing list of athletic benefits enjoyed under the fee, is added America's most popular indoor sport, table tennis. This sport which is as fast as its mother, lawn tennis, is now taking firm hold in the University. In all the faculties and all the residences there are tables and everyone plays or just doesn't count. Now these tables have been set up, one in the Golf Room and two in the Boxing Room, and Phil in the Pool Room is being kept in the Athletic Office he would soon have the answer. Every day, more and more people are taking advantage of this sport (attendance yesterday 100). All you have to do to get the complete set of bats, balls and net is to apply at the Athletic Office and sign your name. It is also necessary to check out when you are through using the equipment. In order to have the opportunity of playing ping pong, everyone should co-operate with the office in bringing in the bats, etc., when through with their game.

BASKETBALL, FOOTBALL, SWIMMING IN THE TANK

It looked for a while as if six-man football was going to make its place on the Varsity campus. A couple of teams had started practising and a game was in the progress of developing when phut! it all went bang. Any team that has been formed or is in the process of being formed can get advice and games if they will apply at the Intramural Athletic Office.

Six-man football will never take the place of the regular football, but for a change, for enjoyment both of spectator and participant can hardly be approached by other games. It is wider open . . . full of scoring opportunities. . . . It is fast . . . and more spectacular because of the necessity of wider open plays. Three halves, two ends and a centre is the entire team make-up, with every man having to be able to tackle, run and catch.

Players wear running shoes and complete uniform . . . in fact it is almost like basketball on an eighty yard field. There is also the added advantage of low cost in equipping a team which would allow smaller universities and especially faculties to be able to equip fully and well, a team.

If any one is interested in forming or playing for a six-man football team can drop a line to The Varsity office and perhaps we can have one fling at the game before it is discarded for another year.

AROUND THE TRACK

with Fred Rowell

On a mud-soaked track two inches deep, Varsity's well-balanced team failed to regain the intermediate championship laurels. They were handicapped by the absence of their shot putters, LeBister and Bailey, but even with their assistance they could not have prevented the exceptionally strong Guelph team from winning. Cass and Hogg were outstanding on the Blue team. Both came very close to making the first team this year and on the intermediate team they won their team's only victories. Cass won both the hurdles and Hogg won the high jump after a jump-off.

Every man on the team either reached the final or placed in his event. Piper came from behind to take second in the half, and Moore and Loutit were second in the discus and three mile respectively. Prodrick was our second high jumper with thirds in the sprints and broad jump. Marshall had tough luck in the discus, fouling a winning throw, but came back to take fourth in the shot put and javelin. He is one of our most promising men for next year.

Doug Hutton ran his best race for Varsity when he took third in the low hurdles and with Orr fourth in the high, scored the most points in the hurdles along with Cass that we have ever scored.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Mary Conlin

S.O.S. from the Baseball Club. Lack of competition may be responsible for the untimely demise of this club, unless Vic juniors can muster a team, the "league" will consist of Vic seniors and St. Mike's only. This is the first year that Victoria have not entered two teams and aside from the competition angle, it will be a major calamity if the club folds up because the baseball players who are counting on getting Athletic Guards for baseball must have 3 years as team members. Naturally most of the girls are in Pass and just going into their third years. Here's hoping that Vic juniors can round up a team—there is a lot at stake.

U.C. are entering 3 teams, Freshman, Junior and Senior, in the basketball league. St. Hilda's have two entries, Victoria three and St. Mike's one. Meds also have one, as have the School of Nursing. U.C. have asked Joyce Tenenbaum, one of their stars last year, to coach one of their teams, and we hear St. Mike's are planning another entry, so many good players have turned out to practise that a junior team may be formed.

We had a few enquiries yesterday about what plans had been made for the bowling league. There was much enthusiasm for this sport last year, the championship being won by Ruth Puhlow, Vic '40. By tomorrow, perhaps, we hope to tell you all about this year's plans.

It was suggested last night to us, that if benches were provided at interfaculty football games on the back campus, there would be lots more fair rooters on hand. This is a thought.

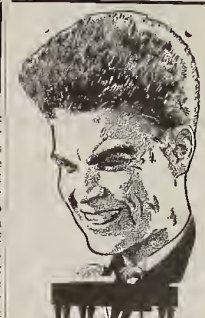

OVER THE NET

Sr. Meds showed mid-season form when they defeated Sr. U.C. 15-8, 9-15, 15-7, in yesterday's volleyball tilt in the upper Hart House gymnasium. Although meeting stubborn opposition from the strong U.C. team, the Doctors demonstrated the all-round ability which had brought them four championships in the last five years.

The screws kept changing from one end of the court to the other without many points being scored in the first part of the game. The score stood 6-11 when gradually Meds began to draw ahead as Cash and Wise began putting them away on the set-ups. The final score of the first game, 15-8.

Practically a new team of Surgeons entered the second encounter, the second team just about as good as the first. However, Charlesworth kept spiking consistently for College on passes from Ross. The score stood 12-4 before the winners' first team re-entered the game, but the best it could do was make the final count 15-9 for the Red and White.

In the final game Meds set up a perfect defence with Emmett, Wise and Cash effective in the front line. U.C. stiffened its play, with Charlesworth and McGregor playing their usual steady game. However, the team play of the Black and Red proved too much for U.C. and Meds soon emerged with a 15-7 win.

VARSITY SOCCER SQUAD JOURNEY TO BUFFALO

Today Varsity's powerful and unbeaten soccer squad journey across the line to Buffalo, where they meet State Teachers' College at Buffalo. The American team has built up the reputation of being one of the strongest machines in the State, and if the Blue boys defeat the Teachers it will stamp them as one of the best soccer squads to be collected at Toronto.

The fixture in Buffalo is being played by the senior team. On Friday, however, both the seniors and intermediates play in Hamilton where they meet McMaster for the first time this season. Victories by Toronto will give them firm possession of the lead in both their leagues, and as McMaster have already been defeated, the Varsity aggregations will rule as favourites in both games.

Varsity do not regard this game as a breather, however, for they realize that Hamilton are always dangerous, especially on their home grounds. This is the final game of the first half of the league schedule and Muchan, Sills, Honeyman and company are not inclined to see their intact record broken.

The dance in the upper part of the Union was interrupted during the evening, when the representative of campus law climbed to the band stand to issue a stern warning to the dancers.

"If any one is found," he said in a striking statement, "who looks as if he crashed the party, he will be locked up."

Cheers broke out as the blue and white gendarme left the stage after his short presentation.

McGill had held a stranglehold on the senior crown, but with the departure two years ago of Bob Murray, number one ranking player in Canada, the McGill monopoly was snapped by the rising young Toronto stars, Bill Pigott and Bruce Hall.

Pigott's slashing straight set win over Bruce Hall came as a distinct surprise. In the intercollegiate tournament played here, Hall defeated Pigott in the five-set final for the McEachern Cup 7-5, 2-6, 1-6, 6-2, and 6-3.

The custom "should, definitely be abolished," was the opinion of Mary Carter, I Vic. Some few others agreed with her that it was a mere convention, a useless expense. Most Varsity girls, however, clinging to it as a gesture of consideration. Perhaps they think something wistfully of the romantic Victorian age!

Political Implications Seen in Royal Visit

Foreign Policy and Leadership in Government may be Affected

By Ross Munro
CUP Correspondent.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—The proposed visit of the King and Queen to Canada next summer will have far-reaching political implications which will influence foreign policy and possibly government leadership.

Apart from spectacular receptions planned for Their Majesties and the loyal enthusiasm that will be engendered, it is believed by many well-informed observers here, that the occasion of the tour will provide an opportunity for close advisors of the British government to determine at first hand the exact attitude of the Canadian government concerning Empire relations which became a little obscure during the European crisis.

Considerable criticism has been directed at Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his cabinet colleagues for not assuring Britain that the Dominion fully supported the Chamberlain policy. The prime minister's cautious attitude displayed throughout the crisis and his determination that Parliament must decide the issue of peace and war, has been generally accepted in the capital as sound.

But there are indications that during the visit of the monarch the position of Canada in the Empire—particularly military—will be the subject of many secret parleys. It has been suggested

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Hong Kong, Oct. 20: Chinese citizens in Canton tonight prepared hastily for a melee with Japanese troops within the South China metropolis. People of the city are fervently digging trenches and building up barricades as means of defence for the anticipated attack.

New Orleans, Oct. 20: National Eucharistic Congress was concluded today with one of the greatest religious festivals in the city's history. Eighty thousand Roman Catholics took part in the parade.

Naples, Oct. 20: 10,000 Italian legionnaires returned to their native soil today after spending a year and a half of service in the Spanish Civil War.

ART CLASSES FORMED BY MR. GORDON WEBBER

As a result of the excellent turn-out in the Art Gallery of Hart House on Wednesday evening Mr. Gordon Webber, the new Director of the Art Activities, has decided to form two groups—one for those men particularly interested in drawing and painting, which will meet in the Arts and Crafts Room each Monday between 7.30 p.m. and 9.30 p.m., and the other for those interested in the arts and crafts, which will meet in the Arts and Crafts Room each Monday between 7.30 p.m. and 9.30 p.m.

Members of Hart House can still join either one or both of these groups and those who desire to do so are asked to be present next week either on Monday or Wednesday in accordance with their preference. The fee is three dollars and not only includes both groups but also all the materials used.

History of Liam O'Flaherty Traced by Professor McKay

"Of all the authors in the present time, Liam O'Flaherty is the only one who has lived and worked in Canada, and is therefore more deserving of our kindly attention," said Professor W. A. McKay yesterday at the regular Thursday afternoon lecture in University College on well known authors.

"Irish literature," continued Professor McKay, "is the literature of a materially defeated people seeking compensation in the glorious past for its defeats."

"The new literature since Ireland regained her independence differs entirely from that of the old. It has changed from literary fantasy to contemporary realism. It has behind it a real Irish life, master of its own destiny, determined to make its own way politically and socially in the European world."

"Liam O'Flaherty," explained Professor McKay, "is the son of an Irish peasant. He came to Canada after graduating from college, and obtained a job in a canning factory in Eastern Ontario, which he gave up a short time later because, as he said himself, he was too lazy to work. He then came to Toronto but left almost immediately because, he said, it was as empty as a desert for anyone seeking food for a hungry mind."

"After working at various jobs in the United States, some for a few weeks, some for a few days," continued the professor, "he returned to England and with the help of Edward Garnett started in to write seriously. He produced many short stories, nine novels, four books of personal impressions, and a Tourist Guide to Ireland."

"O'Flaherty's most memorable writings are those that deal with the barren life of Irish peasants. He is best known as a novelist. His novels, modelled on the Russian style, lack the brilliance of his short stories in which his finest work is found. His chief merit," concluded Professor McKay, "lies in his mastery of language, particularly in his fiction and short stories."

C.C.F. STUDY GROUP PRAISES ROOSEVELT

Professor Underhill Advises Canadians to Study Roosevelt's Methods

Canadians may well study the Roosevelt administration, was the opinion expressed by Professor Underhill at the C.C.F. Study Group yesterday.

He compared the policies of the Canadian Liberal administration, elected in 1935, and the Democratic administration across the border, elected in 1933, in regard to the problems of unemployment. He stated his belief that the Canadian government has adopted a purely laissez-faire attitude. It ignored the advice of the Trade Commission, which advocated a large-scale housing program, doing nothing to assist the wheat situation, and not even interfere where provincial governments curtailed the personal liberty of citizens.

On the other hand, Roosevelt's government accepted its responsibility towards the badly-housed or exploited labourer, the farmer, the unemployed, and the inhabitants of the South.

VICTORIA AND TRINITY WIN SOCCER TUSSELS

Two interesting soccer struggles were run off on the front campus yesterday when Vic whitewashed S.P.S. 4-0, and Trinity eked out a victory over Knox 1-0.

Pressing hard all the way, Vic played a good brand of soccer to defeat School who were handicapped, having only ten men on the team. After 15 minutes of the first half had elapsed, Ian McLeod broke through a cordon of engineers to put the scarlet and gold one up. Jerry Stone scored on a solo ally and Ross Cummings took Zurbige's pass to make it 3-0. About two minutes later Ross Cummings completed the total, netting on a pass from McLeod, to put last year's champs away out in front.

The Knox-Trinity game was exciting from start to finish as the close score would indicate. Both teams missed golden opportunities to go out in front in the first half, which ended with no score either way. A corner kick by Francis Hill ended the game 1-0 for the Anglians.

Injury Riddled Blues Set Out for Western

GRAYDON LAUDS UNSELFISHNESS

Conservative Club Speaker Illustrates Art of Government

"Reward should not be sought when a person decides to take part in the government of a country," declared Gordon Graydon, the youngest member of the House of Commons in Ottawa, who gave to the Macdonald-Carrier Club, the student Conservative organization in the University of Toronto, an illustration of the art of government, yesterday.

"Solidified national Canadian feeling can result only from unselfishness," said the Peel County member, "and when persons seeking gain enter the government, then unity is endangered."

"Instead of seeing what Canada can do for them," he continued, "people should consider what can be done with Canada."

Referring to an occasion when he was asked the value of a university degree to a young man seeking a name in the political world, Graydon showed that it was almost useless if the student believed that it alone was the secret of success.

"Forget the parchment and the accompanying sentiment," he declared, "and start on a level with everyone else. Only when a graduate realizes that he is actually no better than anyone else, then unity is endangered."

LOUOUD REGATTA FINALS TO TAKE PLACE TODAY

Yesterday afternoon saw the elimination heat of the Loudon rowing regatta run off at the Argo rowing course.

The first race was close with Victoria beating Wyldifly by the small margin of eight feet, while Dents ended up in third place. This race was rip and tuck all the way with Victoria putting on a last minute spurt to pull away from the threatening Theologians. In the second race School finished first with Meds and University College ending up in third place.

The finals in the Loudon regatta will be held today at the Argo Rowing Club.

NEW TUCK SHOP MURAL DEPICTS CAMPUS LIFE

The most recent addition to the campus-famed Hart House Tuck Shop is a striking new mural which hangs on the East wall of the centre room. The mural was done by members of the Arts and Crafts group of last year under the direction of Carl Schneider and was first exhibited at the Undergraduate Exhibition in Hart House last season. Nearly every student activity taking place in Hart House is depicted, including the Athletic Union, Debates Club, Billiard Room, Great Hall, Library, Glee Club, Art Group, and Camera Club. The new mural presents a favourable contrast with the individual murals in the West room.

The latter present a more varied survey of college life, a School freshman, physics, chemistry, anatomy, graduation, and a Varsity reporter with an extra joint in his right arm. Mr. W. R. Cowan of the Controller's Office, says that the new mural will be properly framed and that more will be forthcoming from the recently organized Arts and Crafts group.

Winner of Tomorrow's Game Gains Possession of Second Place

Still smarting from last Saturday's defeat at the hands of McGill, the University of Toronto football squad leave today to meet Western Ontario Mustangs. The winner of tomorrow's game in London will take sole possession of second place and if Queen's defeat McGill will go into a first place tie with the Redmen.

Toronto's opponents tomorrow were the early season favourites for the Yates Cup. Their initial league game, however, found them on the short end of a 4-1 score against McGill, and their stock took a sudden downward slump. Last Saturday, with a great form reversal, they showed their pre-season style and defeated Queen's 10-7, and the press reports declared them to be exceedingly powerful, especially in the second half.

Coach Bill Storten's team this year, as is usually the case, are noted for a fleet backfield with a flashy open attack. Their wriggle in the two games played so far have turned in only ordinary efforts but they are not by any means a source of great weakness.

The Mustang half-line which has drawn so much favourable comment, sports such great backs as Lynn Thompson of last year's Beches, and Clem Faust of Hamilton Tigers. Then they have some of their last year's veterans such as Kennedy and Farmer. Off last year's line men like Olyphant, MacLachlan and Willis should be predominant tomorrow.

To offset this offensive Toronto will call on the forward passing of Cam Gray, the runner of Ken McQuarrie and Lou Sommers, and the plugging of Pete Rowland and Dave Owen. As potent as this array sounds it is the Blue wriggle that should swing the balance in favour of Varsity. For the Toronto rank corps, sparred by Frank Sirdevan and Bill Schwenger is looking good.

FOREIGN POLICY TO BE DEBATED

Confidence in Chamberlain's Position will be Assailed in Hart House

The first Hart House debate of the academic year 1938-39 will be held in the debates room, Hart House, on Wednesday, October 26th, at 8 p.m., when Varsity's orators will discuss the subject: "This House Has Confidence in Mr. Chamberlain's Foreign Policy". The House will be honoured by the presence of Dr. R. C. Wallace, principal of Queen's University, who has consented to speak at the conclusion of the regular debate.

Of the main speakers of the evening, C. G. Sanderson of the Faculty of Medicine will speak first; P. Gorman of St. Michael's College, will speak second; J. A. Seed of Trinity College, will speak third, and F. N. A. Rowell, of Victoria College, will speak fourth, after which the House will be thrown open to discussion.

When questioned as to the outcome of the debate, Pat Gorman was confident that the House would support the negative side and protest against Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy. "I feel," he said, "that Mr. Chamberlain has merely postponed rather than averted

Sense and Symbols

Logic, the last outpost of the rationalists, has been invaded by the insidious forces of symbolism. This method of interpretation, which aims at penetrating beyond the sensory aspects of the subject and conveying the meaning of its inner principle, has been exploited in all fields of art, music, and drama. It invades a new territory with the inauguration of the science of semantics.

Semantics, as propounded in Mr. I. A. Richards' text, "The Meaning of Meaning," is the science which explored the significance of words and metaphors. Its exponents propose to start a new method of thinking which will enable people to understand each other more fully. They claim that thinking should consist in a logical examination of the meaning of words. "Intelligence in its highest form," states Mr. Richards, "is ability to ferret out the meaning of old words in new settings." Training is necessary before one can reason by this method. It involves answering such questions as: Is love, 1. a rainbow, 2. the morning star, 3. the evening star, 4. a miracle which shines around the cradle of a babe. Is a motor car, 1. a bag of potatoes, 2. a hollyhock, 3. a flying cloud, 4. the sound of the sea. Mr. Richards believes metaphors are the root of thinking, and that no metaphor is absurd if there is a specific and intelligible link between the things compared. He recalls a Harvard professor who Christened his ancient Ford Thais, (after the heroine of Anatole France's story), because "she had been possessed of many".

Like surrealist art, this new method of thinking is an intriguing novelty, and has infinite possibilities. For the artist it opens up new and fertile fields, and persons whose minds operate through symbols will continue to think metaphorically in any case. But should the layman consciously attempt such picturesque logic, the danger exists that it would get out of control and result in hopeless confusion. Metaphorical thinking is a process which the individual will discover for himself if he has an affinity for it. It is not a process to be adopted as a general rule.

Too Much Work

Every year some nine hundred undergraduates of this university are forced to earn money if they are to continue their university careers.

It may be argued with reason that hardships make for self-reliance and individual initiative. For many this is doubtless true; but in extreme cases, when individuals are required to meet their entire living expenses and tuition fees, this ennobling influence defeats itself.

Individual initiative turns to cunning, and a vicious pragmatism is instilled by circumstance in the mind of any student so stubborn as to persist entirely on his own.

If his path has always been strewn with obstacles it is unlikely that his academic record is distinguished enough to warrant many scholarships. The brilliant exception does not deny the presence of many who are better qualified to benefit from an unpimped university training than some who now enjoy that opportunity.

Moreover, the scholarships, bursaries and loans now available for an individual—even at this university, whose generous funds for the purpose are unique in Canada—are scarcely adequate to finance in themselves a full year of unhampered study. Yet surely this should be the function of any scholarship that is not merely a token of esteem.

It is true that the Students' Administrative Council enables hundreds of students to continue at university who, without such assistance, would have been forced to drop out for lack of the price of an examination fee and the food and shelter required to keep alive. The value of the services now performed by the Council is inestimable, but the need for that service, whose most effective feature is a highly efficient employment bureau, arises from a lack of bursaries and scholarships, despite the fact that we rank first in Canada on that score.

We insist that if any person has shown himself to be worthy of a university education, he should be enabled to derive the maximum benefits from such an education and, further, that the nausea and fatigue of unskilled labour are not among those benefits.

Plea For Diplomacy

According to orthodox criteria of human nature, gruff candour is a quality of the righteous man, while subtle diplomacy pertains to the villain. Such standards are far from applicable in everyday social intercourse.

Frankness is a virtue much to be desired, but in point of fact there is also much to be said for smoothness. The man who speaks everybody fair is at least putting some effort into his social relations. It is much easier to be brusque than to be tactful. Whatever the motivation, easy pleasantries make for more gracious living.

Terseness is the language of efficiency. If each day is to be regarded as a solo performance on the part of the individual, a task to be executed as speedily and competently as possible, the outspoken man has the right tactics. But if living is to be an art, then a certain amount of artistry must be permitted. Conversation and manners should no more be judged by standards of efficiency and logic than should music and painting. Like the arts, they should be a medium for lifting us above the eternal struggle for food and clothing. They should be an avenue of escape from the more fundamental processes of birth, development, and death, the endless and unprogressive cycle which has been likened to the life of the honey bee.

Smoothness and diplomacy may render social relations more complicated, but they could never make them duller.

Art, Music and Drama

Josef Lhevinne

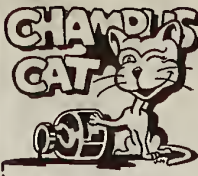

Last night at Eaton Auditorium, Josef Lhevinne once more showed us that great pianism does not depend on false dramatics, but that music played with composure and dignity is quite as striking.

The program opened with a series of compositions by Chopin and although at the beginning Lhevinne somewhat lost himself in intricate technique, to the detriment of the essential tonal quality, for the most part he maintained his flawless efficiency without the loss of that indefinable quality which represents inspiration in music.

The Sonata in B minor was notable throughout for fine blending of tone and correct shading of volume; but the first two movements were somewhat coldly rendered. The Largo, that peculiar bit of musical chess, and the clear loveliness of the Presto non tanto were played with greater warmth.

One always feels that Lhevinne is controlling the music rather than that the music is controlling him. He never seems to lose the mastery of his theme. This was especially notable in Chopin's Impromptu in F Sharp, the Mazurka which followed was a refreshing bit of melody, played smoothly and yet with verve.

Little lady in the dance
Is it choice or is it chance

Is it coma, is it trance,
Think you so your charm to enhance Affecting thus this crazy stance
While you circle, whirl and prance
In your partner's arms?

Little lady, lurching by,
Head thus lowered, arms raised high
Neck thrust forward, closed each eye
Mouth that breathes an endless sigh
Twisted shoulders, spine awry—
As I pass behind you, I
Fail to see your charms.

I wanna know:—

the war, and therefore we have no reason to be confident of his foreign policy."

Jack Seed of Trinity College, who with Graham Sanderson, will uphold the affirmative side, was for the most part non-committal, but he opined that the world was "in a fortuitous course of atoms". "The game of international politics is a case of who has the best poker face, as one country arms until the other steps in and arms correspondingly. The crux of the question, apparently, is the degree of aggressiveness of the Chamberlain government." Seed concluded.

HOW TO WATCH FOOTBALL

In our last article we were cut off, due to lack of space, just when we started talking about watching the game and it must have been pretty dull reading. However, we will go ahead with our idea and give you what we think is the way to enjoy watching a football game. First, one must know what down it is . . . position of the ball in the field . . . time to go and score. Then it must be remembered that the playing field is theoretically divided into three sections, for plays which may be used. From your own goal line to about your 35 yard line, only the safest plays calling for a minimum of ball handling are used. From the offensive team's 35 yard line to their opponent's 35 is the area in which end runs and wide bucks are used. In the last area to the defending team's goal line, tricky plays used, to bewilder the opponents, are pulled. Thus a spectator in order to watch a game correctly should be ready for the play, speculating so that he can watch not the ball but the players who have to do the proper blocking and running so that the play will be executed successfully.

There has always been a doubt in the minds of novice spectators on what the players on a football team do. Some just seem to line up and fall down but remember they also serve who merely stand and fake. It is for this reason that some members of the senior football team have co-operated in putting down on paper their own particular function on the team (Stevens, here's the answer to your riddle). In today's column we have the positions of quarter-back and half-back described, and we wish to thank those responsible for writing them for their co-operation.

I PLAY QUARTER BACK

A quarter back is essentially an offensive player. True enough, he has to act defensively too, but in this, his duties are the same as a half-back. The best motto for a quarter-back is to "Keep Thinking". (Ed. note: Motto for line-men, "Forget to think".) All the time on the field he should be thinking over his plays and which plays are working well—such plays aren't. In time out various players should tell the quarter back any weakness in the opponents' defence that they have observed in play. But this must not be told in a huddle—in a huddle the only person to talk is the quarter back.

The first period should be spent in feeling the opponents out. Find out if the outsiders are charging or fading with the play; if the secondary is coming in fast and attempting to guess plays; are any of the defensive players out of their orthodox positions? At every opportunity the quarter back should watch the opponents' defence and see if any man is playing out of position . . . and if he is, the quarter back should have a play on the tip of his tongue for it. Once the opponents' defensive system is figured out then the quarter back should start a planned attack. He should be thinking one or two plays ahead . . . should mix them up . . . figure what they are expecting and then do something else. And always remember "when in doubt kick". When the team gets within scoring territory (within the opponents' 35 yard line), plays should be run quickly. Several good plays should be saved for this opportunity. Try and keep the team in the centre of the field so that you can use both plays to the left and to the right. Playing safe with a lead and gambling when behind.

I PLAY HALF BACK

A half back must not only be fast on his feet but must know how to shift, cross-step and pivot. That is, speed is essential but is of little use unless it is used in combination with a shifty stride. Running through a broken field will usually gain more yards than attempting to run around a group of players unless the set-up is such as to leave one part of the field wide open. In carrying the ball it is of first importance and must be firmly secured before attempting to run. When starting up the field the ball carrier should waste as little time as possible in choosing his course because shifting back and forth in a small area only gives the opposition added time to come in for the tackle.

In plays from scrimmage a half back must make his plays as unobtrusive as possible if he is carrying the ball. While if he is not carrying it he must try and give the impression that he has it hidden in his arms. He should always run his faked plays with all the speed and punch that he would if he were actually in the play. From a defensive standpoint a half back should be a hard, sure tackler because only too often he is called upon to stop the opposition when he is the only man available. When playing secondary defence he must work in combination with the outside wing. If the outside wing plays a charging game the half back is responsible for the second man on the opposition's end runs. If the wing plays a drifting game then the back must take the first man. On line plunges he must cover the wide end of the line, making certain he is not taken out of position by a wide floating fake. In a forward pass defense, the secondary half covers the territory from the line of scrimmage to about ten yards back on the side of the line which he is playing.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Wm Flanagan

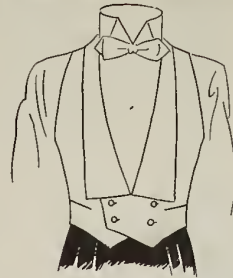

Before all thoughts of tennis are gone with the wind we would like to congratulate Joan Griffiths, St. Hilda's, for the efficient manner in which she handled the refereeing task at the recent tennis meet. Joan refereed all semi-final and final matches without so much as a miscall. We can see a female Dwight Davis in the offing.

It has been suggested that next year the intercollegiate tennis meet be in the third week of October instead of the second week as it was this year. Considering the fact that, when Varsity's doubles team of Marj. Mosbaugh and Anne MacDonald stepped on the courts for their first round match they were playing together for the first time, practice included, this would seem a wise move.

The University tennis committee wishes to publicly thank the Deans of St. Joseph's, St. Hilda's, Victoria and University Colleges, for putting up the tennis teams last week-end. Their co-operation was marvellous and we only hope it did not put them to too great inconvenience.

The swimming meet is to be held at Queen's this year. There is some mixup, however, because of the large size of their tent, plus a lack of swimming officials. They may have to hold another meet at the same time as the intercollegiate for which officials would be brought from outside cities. However, this will all be straightened out in due course.

Basketball enthusiasts are encountering no little difficulty in arranging for their various practices. The latest word is that some teams may be obliged to practice between the ungodly hours of nine and ten. This would be most inconvenient for most of the girls and, incidentally, it forms another link in our argument for a women's Hart House.

POLITICAL IMPLICATIONS SEEN IN ROYAL VISIT

that high British government officials are somewhat perturbed over the apparent coolness of Canada to any commitment on even the Empire issue.
It is notable that the national defence department is assisting the state and external affairs departments in drawing up plans for the trip and aiding in the arrangements.

One of Canada's best-known educationalists of a decade and a half ago, who has risen to one of the most influential positions in the government service, will direct the plans for the visit. He is Dr. O. D. Skelton, under-secretary of state for external affairs, former professor of political science and dean of the faculty of arts at Queen's University. Since 1925 he has handled all important foreign relations matters for both Conservative and Liberal governments and will play an important, if anonymous, part in the behind-the-scenes discussions incident on the June sojourn of the King and Queen in this country.

It is taken for granted here now that the federal election will not be held until next fall due to the royal visit. The government appears to feel that nothing should be allowed to interfere with the complete success of the tour. A personal element also enters into the situation. Mr. Mackenzie King will be the first prime minister ever to play host to the King and Queen in Canada and it is only human vanity that he should wish to be able to enjoy that honour without first going through a difficult and acrimonious general election. These, of course, are only a few considerations, but they all point to an election after the royal party has left the country.

There are many influential persons here who believe the visit will be the crowning touch to the prime minister's long public career extending back 30 years. In some circles the belief is expressed that Mr. Mackenzie King might resign as prime minister and Liberal leader after the King and Queen's visit and retire to private life or remains in the Commons as an elder statesman.

It would be a fitting climax for a career which saw him become prime minister three times and lead the Liberal party since 1919. His health has been indifferent for several months and if a strong successor is assured the possibility is not entirely remote that Mr. Mackenzie King might step down. Political observers, interested in problems of national unity, affirm that the royal visit will have a definite influence in aiding the movement for solidarity within Canada, and will contribute in no small way to silencing the voices of dissension heard in certain provinces.

It is understood federal officials are watching particularly the reaction of Premier Hepburn of Ontario, to the plans being made for the reception of the monarch. Mr. Hepburn's indifference displayed when President Roosevelt came to Canada last August, caused some misgiving here and with the feud between Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Hepburn accumulating fire with every exchange of correspondence, the relationship between Queen's Park and Parliament Hill is not exactly amicable even when considerations such as the royal visit arise.

Most Worthy Sophomores, Hail!

This morning, about three o'clock, the freshies of Whitney Hall were rooted out of bed by their "most worthy sophomores". Much to the surprise of the freshettes, the sophs marched into their rooms, rudely awakened them, yanked them out of bed, blind-folded them and marched them through all the nooks and crannies of the Hall. Then began the formidable part of the initiation.

Flour-paste was used in plenty, smeared on their faces, molasses and confetti completed the make-up. "Fish-eyes", pepper, salt, crumbs, gelatin, macaroni and other groceries were used. Nail-polish and lipstick were slapped on. Then began the skits, or rather, "tomfoolery" acts. All the freshies were lined up and put through their tricks. Some had to scramble like an egg, others imitated animals and perform other mental and physical tasks.

When the freshies were on their last legs, the sophs gave a party to redeem the favour of the freshettes. By this hour, it was time for "bed" so the freshies trooped off to recuperate and compare notes. For many years this night-marauding will stand out as their most uncomfortable experience. But, such is the life of a freshette.

AROUND THE TRACK

Determined to avenge the defeat handed the intermediate track team in London on Wednesday, the Varsity senior track team packed up its cleats yesterday and headed for McGill and the senior intercollegiate track meet to be held at McGill this afternoon. With Dave Crichton, star sprinter, and Larry O'Connor, champion hurdler, missing from the line-up, the team is hardly as strong as the outfit that captured the intercollegiate crown last year. However, Coach Hec Phillips is counting on Gordon McHenry, crack short distance runner, to garner valuable points for the Blue and White. Phillips also has the Brown twins, Harold and Wallace, Measford's gift to the track team, to offset the challenge of a powerful Queen's team. The Kingston squad has a potent point gainer in Courtwright, British Empire champion javelin thrower and discus heaver.

The following are the men picked for the senior team: 100 yds. McHenry, H. Brown; 220 yds. McHenry, Laidlaw; 440 yds. McHenry, Coons, Delaney; 880 yds. Delaney, Kaylor; 1 mile, Watts, Thompson; 3 mile, Forrester, Hogg; high hurdles, Rowell, Armstrong; low hurdles, Armstrong, Rowell; broad jump, H. and W. Brown; shot put and discus, W. Brown, B. Jurney; javelin, H. Brown, Sproule, Trussler; pole vault, J. W. Dales, Trussler; high jump, Brett, and J. O. Dales.

one else, does the degree become valuable to him."

"Education," he continued, "should be used in a sacrificial manner by those in the government service. It should be used to aid the people of the country or no benefits will result."

Several illuminating anecdotes were related to the meeting. Graydon drew attention to the wit of Chief Justice Lapointe, and the acumen of the Conservative leader, R. B. Bennett, who he believed, was the dominating influence of the House.

ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

It was in the Debussy that Lhevinne surpassed himself. No one but Debussy has ever produced quite the same sensitive harmonies as in the Cloches a travers les feuilles; and Lhevinne did them ample justice. In the Poissons d'or he showed superb mastery of interpretation. La Soiree dans Grenada, although rushed in spots was particularly lovely. And in the Fenz d'orifice the Russian showed his amazing control.

The program ended with Liszt. Lhevinne demonstrated his undoubted versatility by playing first the sensitive Debussy and then the more virile Liszt with equal skill. The Gnomengruen was notable for fineness of texture and in La Campanella he again showed his phenomenal control. And if the program opened somewhat coldly, it certainly ended in a blaze of colour, the three encores being in tastefully striking contrast to what had preceded.

EUROPE IS FOUND EXCITED, NERVOUS

Former Hart House Secretary Tells of Trip Through Europe in Crisis

Mr. J. R. Johnston, one-time secretary of Hart House, and now serving the Canadian Student Bureau, maintained by the Rhodes and Massey Foundations, has been back in Canada for only four days, having just returned from extensive travel through the old country.

At the time of the French general mobilization, Mr. Johnston was returning to London through Paris from the Italian border. His train made repeated stops, picking up bewildered reserves going to join their battalions. Though the general atmosphere was tense with excitement, the morale and response of the people were admirable. Mr. Johnston found the station partings "pitiful beyond description".

The atmosphere in London, though dejected, he found to be less pessimistic and resigned than that of Paris. He was amazed at the rapidity with which sand-bag defences, trenches and underground hideouts were devised. The French he found to be poorly equipped with gas-masks; they had to purchase them whereas all of London had been masked by the government.

The great universities of Oxford and Cambridge postponed their openings to leave the student body free for any emergency.

"The Canadian people, being three thousand miles removed, could not possibly realize nor feel the anxiety of the British people," said Mr. Johnston.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Vienna: Cardinal Innitzer replied to attacks by the Nazi press in a statement read in all Vienna churches. He denied charges made by the Reich that he used inciting terms against the Nazis.

Canton: The main business district of this south China city was destroyed by fire today, allegedly set by Chinese troops. The International Settlement was not damaged.

London: Former President Benes of Czechoslovakia arrived here today and planned to take a long rest before coming to Chicago to lecture at the university. Dr. Benes said his health had been undermined by the strain of the recent crisis.

IMPORTANCE OF FAITH BIBLE CLASS SUBJECT

The manifestation of Christ's glory in his transfiguration, the importance of faith, and the reasons for which a child is given as an example for Christians, were the subjects discussed by Dr. Gordon at her Bible Class yesterday.

Dr. Gordon stated that Christ's conversation with Elias and Moses about His own death symbolized the fact that he came as the fulfilment of the Law and the Prophets. She went on to say in regard to the healing of the boy with a "deaf and dumb spirit", that it was faith which made that miracle possible, and that a simple child-like trust in God is still the great essential of a Christian life.

Thompson's Booting Edges Out Blue Team by Very Narrow Score

GAME IS KICKING DUEL

By Alan Harvey

Three towering wind-driven punts, propelled by the trusty right foot of Lyn Thompson, former Balmy Beach star, hoisted Western Mustangs into the temporary security of a second place berth behind the undefeated McGill Redmen, and skidded a gallant Varsity team into near oblivion in third place, this blustery Saturday afternoon. Cam Gray, taking over the booting duties from Bee Rowland, answered Thompson's challenge only twice, and the Blues, battling to the final whistle with a futile barrage of forward passes, were decisively by a slim, heart-breaking 3-2 margin.

A chill, spanking wind sweeping from the north-west across the J. W. Little Memorial Stadium, aided Thompson in his three important kicks, and changed the course of the game from a wide-open, spectacular ball-game into a closely-contested kicking duel. Twice the Western half, doing all the booting in the absence of Jack Kennedy, stood on his own forty, discarded his white helmet and boomed a prodigious punt well over the Varsity line. In the third quarter, as the wind momentarily shifted, he lofted a bounding touch in goal from his own fifty. In the final analysis, it was Thompson's tremendous booting that turned the tide in favour of the London team, and offset a slight Varsity advantage in territorial play.

In defeat the Blues fought the game fight and were far from outplayed by the Stornen satellites. The Stevens held their own on the score-sheet in the first half. Cam Gray's second quarter deadline shot duplicating (Continued on page 4)

SCHOOL FLAG RUSH TO TEST FRESHMEN

Ripe Eggs and Elderly Fruit Will Figure in Soph-Fresh Embroglio

The annual flag rush between the freshmen and the sophomores of S.P.S. will take place next Friday afternoon. The usual ripe eggs and fruit and clouds of soot are expected to lend colour to the event.

The freshmen will line up at one end of the Trinity campus, dressed in potato sacks, while the sophomores will line up at the other end. A revolver-shot will be the signal for a rush for the possession of a flag placed in the centre of the field, and each team will attempt to carry it over their opponents' line. A second shot will end the contest.

In the evening the fresh will meet the sophs at Hart House. They will have their attendance marked and receive a pin signifying that they are considered fit to receive all the privileges of S.P.S. on equal footing with the second year men.

A. T. Lambie, athletic representative of the second year, pointed out that the ceremony is supposed to instill School spirit into the freshmen. He added, "To date numerous 'upplings' have partly instilled this spirit. S.P.S. water faucets have greatly increased their output in the past few weeks. Any freshman can verify this."

Excitement Caused at London By Gay Bands, Stern Police

Colour and constables were most prominent at the Varsity-Western game in Little Stadium last Saturday afternoon.

Interest and excitement ran through the Varsity stands with the appearance of two large members of the constabulary accompanied by an usher. They paused for only a moment, then marched up the steps and, after a brief scuffle, they marched down again, each with a firm grip on the arm of an unfortunate ed, and accompanied by loud boing of the crowd. Fourteen of his cohorts followed the grim procession out of the stadium. Five minutes later the same 15 eds filed back to their seats, each with a broad grin on his face. When questioned, they admitted having had a little trouble about the payment of an admission to see the game, but that everything had been settled satisfactorily.

Both the purple and white band of Western and Varsity's blue and white clad bandmen presented colourful and accurate manoeuvres preceding the game and during the half-time intermission. Varsity and Western were both well represented at the successful Congratulation Dance which took place in Convocation Hall on Saturday night. The Lambeth Walk proved to be just as popular at Western as it is here.

The Blue and White supporters left for Toronto by train and car at various times Sunday all hoping to get revenge at the return game here next Saturday.

Arts and Crafts Meeting Mr. Gordon Webster will meet all interested members of Hart House in the Arts and Crafts Room in Hart House between 7.30 and 9.30 tonight.

INTEREST IN ART INCREASES HERE

Sale of Tuck Shop Prints Reveals Canadian Artists in Demand

"There appears to be an ever-growing interest in Canadian art among students of the University," said W. R. Cowan, Assistant Controller of Hart House, commenting on the cash-and-carry art gallery which was established in the Hart House Tuck Shop three years ago.

Discussing the prints which the Tuck Shop sells, Mr. Cowan said that by far the greatest demand was in the field of Canadian art. Many of Tom Thompson's works are always popular. J. E. H. MacDonald's "Solomon Lands" and Clarence Gagnon's "Laurentine Village" rate high in the estimation of the students. Lisner and Jackson also, are always in continual demand. The prints are supplied to the undergraduates through the National Art Gallery at Ottawa.

Provider of 'Woman's Touch' Admits Great Hall Task Easy

That woman's touch in the Great Hall is being provided this year by Miss Muriel E. Ransom, who was appointed supervisor at the beginning of the fall term. When interviewed, the new supervisor said that the masculine appetite was easy to satisfy. "It is really no trouble preparing meals for men," she added.

The policy of the new supervisor, who brought the meal-ticket plan to the Great Hall this year, is to give the college student food of the highest nutritional value at the lowest possible cost. "We have a wonderfully-equipped kitchen and a well-trained staff, and it is easy to fulfill our prime purpose, that of serving the best food we can," said Miss Ransom.

Graduating from Victoria College after taking a course in Household Economics, Miss Ransom spent one summer as dietitian at Bigwin Inn, followed by seven months as dietitian in the Montreal General Hospital. For the past two and one half years she has been employed by Eaton's, where she had charge of the Men's Grill.

JUNIORS PROVIDE ONLY RUGBY WIN

Little Blue Squad Redeem Bad Week-end by 9-0 Win at Western

University of Toronto juniors redeemed an otherwise gloomy week-end for Varsity rugby representatives, defeating the Western Ponies right in London by a 9-0 score. The game was played on the upper campus of the University of Western Ontario as a prelude to the Varsity-Western senior clash at Little Stadium.

Shortened to permit players to attend the senior game, the contest was marred by a driving wind which made good football impossible. Jack Plaxton, much-ballyhooped forward passer of the local outfit, failed to throw a single pass. Instead, the game resolved itself into a kicking duel, with the Blues having an edge on the Purples in this department.

Despite frequent fumbles on line plays, Varsity picked up two points in the first quarter on rouges. Early in the second quarter Don Grosskurth, Varsity backfield star, reeled off ten yards on an end sweep for an easy major. Paisley added the extra point via placement. A single point later in the game completed the scoring.

SUSPECT ARRESTED AFTER COAT THEFT

Caretaker at Mining Building Pursues Man Leaving with Coat

Notified by students Thursday afternoon that an outsider had just left the Mining Building with a coat over his arm, Mr. Arthur Clarke, caretaker, pursued the suspect along College Street and captured Harold Armstrong, 43, the alleged thief.

Armstrong, an unemployed homeless war veteran, spent the night in the city jail and will be tried at 10 a.m. today on a charge of theft.

The chase led through the front door and out the back of the Hygiene Building, in which Armstrong paused to don the coat, said Mr. Clarke. He was overtaken before he reached University Avenue.

"He gave no trouble," said Mr. Clarke. "I just escorted him back to the Mining Building where we caught the police." Chief Constable Robert D'Arcy of the University of Toronto police force was first to arrive, and placed Armstrong under arrest.

Before police arrived, Jack E. Harley, II S.P.S., appeared at the office to report loss of a blue coat. However, the coat allegedly taken by Armstrong did not belong to him. It is reported that numerous thefts have occurred on the campus recently.

Later in the day L. V. Lichty, II S.P.S., claimed the recovered coat from police as belonging to him.

S.P.S. CHARIOTEERS WILL SHARE DUCAT

Only One Ticket to School Dinner is Awarded to Sixteen

"We'll stick it on the end of a long fork and hold it over somebody's back fence to them. Then we'll run," said G. P. Dewar, when questioned about the fate of the one ticket to the School Dinner which is to be given to the sixteen charioteers who vanquished the Meds between halves at the Varsity-McGill game last Saturday.

This plan of distribution was regarded with consternation by the freshmen who pulled in the race. Only one ticket?

The sixteen charioteers rallied, however, and divided into two factions when it came to deciding what should happen to that ticket. One faction was in favour of the orthodox methods around the School. Fight! The other group was of a more sedate nature.

"Now take me, for instance," said Chuck Proctor, "I'd rather eat dice or try my luck in a poker game."

Doug Allen, a first year non-combatant drifted by. The puzzled charioteers sought his advice. What should he do about that ticket? Doug said "Give it to Miss Toronto," and drifted on.

Only Two-Point Margin Gives Toronto Victory Over Run- ners from McGill

NEW RECORDS SET

By Fred Rowell

Friday afternoon the Varsity senior track team successfully defended its intercollegiate title when they dimmed a thrilling meet by defeating the McGill relay team by two yards. The Varsity relay team, composed of Delaney, H. Brown, Laidlaw and McHenry, came through to give Toronto the championship with the score of 56 points to McGill's 54.

The summaries were as follows:
100-yard dash: G. McHenry, Varsity, won; H. Brown, Varsity, second; W. Fritz, Queen's, third; N. Patterson, Western, fourth. Time, 1.6.
220-yard dash: W. Fritz, Queen's, won; G. McHenry, Varsity, second; T. Falls, McGill, third; N. Patterson, Western, fourth. Time, 2.2.
440-yard run: W. Fritz, Queen's, won; V. Mason, McGill, second; L. Flemming, Western, third; L. Delaney, Varsity, fourth. Time, 1.59.

1600-yard run: L. Cooke, McGill, won; G. Cowan, McGill, second; W. Fritz, third; Thompson, Varsity, fourth. Time, 4.30.6 (equals record).

Three miles: C. Frankton, McGill, won; W. Hogg, Varsity, second; A. Forrest, Varsity, third; T. Todd, McGill, fourth. Time, 15.39.6.

220-yard low hurdles: J. Loaring, Western, won; D. Armstrong, Varsity, second; H. Bryant, McGill, third; R. Scott, Queen's, fourth. Time, 25.5.

ANNOUNCES POLICY OF UNDERGRADUATE

New Editor of University College Publication Contemplates No Radical Change

No radical changes in the policy of the Undergraduate, official publication of University College, are contemplated by Harry Tattersall, the new editor of the magazine.

"What we plan to do this year," said Tattersall, "is to out-Jarvis Jarvis." "A bigger and better" issue; but not bigger. The magazine will be approximately the same size, although we expect to have more cuts. We hope to improve the style, but we do not want the Undergraduate to become highbrow. We want it to be of interest to everyone in the college. In fact, our criteria for acceptance and rejection will be style and interest."

There will be two issues of the magazine this year, the editor announced. The deadline for the first issue will be Nov. 10. "We hope to have this issue ready for distribution by the first of December," he said. "We intend to continue the previous policy of giving several cash prizes in each department. These awards will be announced in the second issue."

The Spanish Omelette

Time heals all wounds. The Munich conference is blissfully forgotten, but now the Spanish problem, featuring Signor Mussolini, comes to the fore. It is reported that the Duce, is willing to withdraw Italian troops from Spain, and thus bring the Anglo-Italian pact into force. We are told, furthermore, that Mussolini, either because he is in need of British money or because he wishes to contribute to world peace, is retesting from Spain.

All this sounds very fine and above-board, but "The Week" tells a very different story. "The Week" is the British publication which caused quite a stir about three weeks ago, with what we may term "the Lady Astor-Lindbergh Luncheon faux-pas", and which had all its charges confirmed at the end of last week when Charles Lindbergh was decorated with the service cross of the "Order of the German Eagle", an award created to honour distinguished foreigners who have deserved well of the German Reich. This is what "The Week" has to say about the Mediterranean situation:

"The real position, little of which has of course found its way into the British press, can be set down as follows: (1) The Rome talks between Count Ciano and Lord Perth have come to a speedy, complete—though possibly only temporary—deadlock. This deadlock has resulted from

- the intransigent attitude adopted by Count Ciano;
- the British insistence that, unless the Italian demands can be dressed up and disguised so as, at least, to appear "conciliatory", there will be very little chance of Parliament ratifying the Anglo-Italian Pact; and
- Ciano's refusal to allow these demands to be disguised.

The roots of the trouble go back to Munich.

The Four-Power meeting was, it will be recalled, arranged by Mussolini acting as intermediary between Mr. Chamberlain and Hitler, and Mussolini has ever since that time expected the British to do something for him in return.

Moreover, although Mussolini did all the arranging, he, in fact, got nothing out of that meeting, except, perhaps, the knowledge that, with the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia, Italy's sphere of influence in South-Eastern Europe would become less stable than ever.

Consequently there has been general agreement in Rome with the thesis advanced by the Duce immediately on his return that "in order to keep the axis balanced" he must, at all costs, score the next big diplomatic victory for the axis-Powers.

"And this is precisely what he and Count Ciano are at the moment attempting to do."

"Consequently, relying on the assurance given by Mr. Chamberlain at Munich that he was eager to operate the Anglo-Italian pact without delay, the Italians have, once the talks were started, followed a policy of progressively pushing up their price."

"According to well-informed sources in both Rome and London, Count Ciano has made it perfectly clear that Italy insists that

- only those troops which are due in any case for withdrawal—wounded, sick and disabled—shall be withdrawn;
 - these shall be considered by Britain as sufficient to justify the ratification of the April agreement—the theory of the "token withdrawal";
 - the specialist services and especially the Italian aviation shall remain in Spain until a "settlement";
 - there shall be complete freedom for Italy to "maintain" the specialist services until a "settlement" is reached: i.e. to continue to supply Franco with war materials, airplanes, tanks, etc.;
 - there shall be a joint Anglo-French assurance that there shall be no trade of any kind between French ports and ports in Republican territory; and
 - any "settlement" shall include the recognition of Italy's right to retain the Balearics.
- (Italian pilots serving in Spain are withdrawn and replaced every three months. The idea being to give "active service" training to as many men as possible. No pilots will, therefore, be included among those 10,000 men who, having been in Spain for 18 months without a break, are now, according to the insurgents, to be withdrawn.)

"The British objection to these demands is based not so much on dislike of the demands in themselves—although the idea of recognizing the Italian occupation of the Balearic islands is none too palatable—but the idea of having to make them public."

Mussolini, however, demands that the terms be made public at once, in order that he might show the Italian people that Hitler is not winning all the Fascist victories, and also to stir up the enthusiasm for the Spanish war, since of late, there have been complaints in Italy in regard to the non-success of Italian interference in the Spanish Peninsula.

By last Thursday, reports were emanating from London, that early ratification of the Anglo-Italian pact was very possible. It will be interesting to watch how closely the official news in regard to the settlement, which will be forthcoming in the near future, will follow the above statements, which, it is evident, are forming the basis of negotiations. It is becoming increasingly evident that when Chamberlain called his policy one of appeasement he certainly meant it. David Low, leading British cartoonist, recently made a despairing remark to the effect that it is getting harder and harder to satirize realities that persist in being more sardonically distorted than the most malicious pen could make them. That statement is, without a doubt, the clearest analysis made by anyone of the present international situation.

An Opportunity

(Submitted)

The Greeks considered a man was uneducated until he had acquired a knowledge of rhetoric. The art of persuasion, they claimed, embraced a knowledge of all the arts and sciences, and was a necessary accomplishment of every good citizen. Today ability to speak is equally essential. It is an asset in any vocation, and a necessity in many.

One of the most entertaining and instructive forms of public speaking is debating, which requires clear thinking and effective expression. The Hart House Debates provide an excellent opportunity for men of this university to gain experience in this valuable art. Supplementing the formal academic courses, they give everybody a chance to make use of knowledge accumulated. A mind well stocked with knowledge is as useless as a book lying unused on a shelf unless it unburdens itself in some form of expression. The late Dr. Eliot of Harvard has said: "Without having learned to speak effectively, and read intelligently, I have often doubted the worthwhileness of college education."

The Hart House Debates follow parliamentary procedure. Beside the four main speeches, comment from the floor is encouraged. This demands quick thinking and facile expression. No better occasion can be found on this campus for an education in logic, rhetoric, and verbal combat, than the Hart House Debates.

Art, Music and Drama

Hart House Quartet

Over the week-end the Hart House String Quartet was heard twice in Hart House, on Saturday night in the first of its subscription concerts in the Theatre, and at the Sunday Evening Concert in the Great Hall. The following remarks may be taken to apply to both programs, the second of which was a repetition of two items from the first.

No ill effects have resulted from the change at the second violin desk; in fact Adolphe Koldosky seems to be a singularly happy choice for the position. His playing is excellent in itself and forms a satisfying complement to that of the others, so that the Quartet retains all of its astounding homogeneity of style—a style that seems to us to be best described as aristocratic. Certainly it is ideally suited to the mask of debonair and charming grace under which are concealed the subtleties of Mozart, whose Quartet in D Major opened the program. The mask remains, but the Hart House players make it very transparent. After the Mozart came Ravel's Quartet in F Major, equally subtle, but in a very different way. This is subjective, intellectual music of incredible rhythmic and tonal complexity, and the mental and emotional strain involved in such studied performances as it received must have been intense. There are many passages of great beauty and some of great ugliness, but they are all great music.

A better foil for these two works could hardly have been found than Schumann's Quartet in A Major, not played Sunday night (except the Scherzo as an encore). This is pure romanticism, written with the substantial dignity characteristic of Schumann, and after the scorching impressionism of Ravel it was impossible not to be impressed by the peace and assurance of mind that its music reflects.

Herbert Cowan

Berlin, Oct. 20: Capitalism was dealt a death blow here today as the German government completed a set of economic agreements with Balkan and Central European countries. From now on it will be unnecessary for Germany to pay them for natural resources. Instead they will get credits. In reply to Yugoslavian peasants who want to know if they can eat the credits, Chancellor Hitler told them they would have to subsist on a diet of leguminous vegetables. "It is peas for our time," he shouted. He forecast that the German fleet of pick-pocket battleships would soon bear a ratio of 3-to-1 to the Swiss navy.

Praha, Oct. 20: Dr. Eduard Benes, the smartest little statesman in Europe, was still smarting today. He told reporters that Russia was the only country that could save the capitalists. At least they have state capitalism there, he claimed. Dr. Benes said: "I thought I was jumping on the band wagon, but there was a German band on it too. Ach du lieber Augustine." Moscow, Oct. 20: The Soviet will be going to co-operate with the democracies, Dictator Stalin said today. "Those Nazis can't do this to us. Now all our gold mines will be worthless, since Hitler can buy everything he needs by giving other people credits. It's cockeyed. From now on we are going to write the Russian language in Capital letters only. And we will have no more purges. We are through washing our Lenin in public."

The Whirling Dervish.

let's go places

Three slightly mad gentlemen return this week to the Imperial Theatre to present the latest in their screwball offerings. The title of the IMPERIAL opus is "Room Service", MARX, and the three slightly BROTHERS mad gentlemen are none other than the Brothers Marx.

These fans who come to see a typical Marxian performance are in for a rude shock. Instead of insane situations, and the usual gag chatter, we find a situation comedy played with definite sincerity, although this does not mean that the players are completely submerged in their roles. Groucho plays a shoe-string producer who tries to keep his cast of twenty-one actors at a hotel, without paying the bill, until he can find a backer for his show.

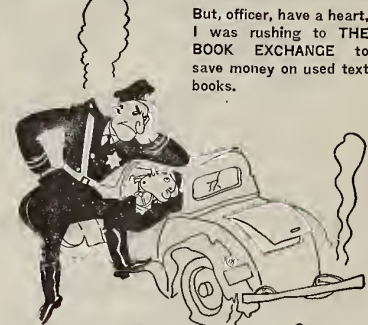

As far as the picture goes, it is a good one, well-paced, and humorous. All the supporting cast are taken direct from the New York stage production, and every member puts in a splendid performance. The situation is good, and dialogue is excellent, but we repeat, it is not a Marx Brothers show.—F.S.

Old-time melodrama in modern settings punctuated with comedy is the fare offered in both features at Shea's this week. In "Sky Giant", SHEA'S Pals Richard Dix and DOUBLE CHESTER Morris take to the air in an attempt to complete the Arctic link for the newly-formed Trans-World Airlines. Some good airplane shots and some interesting information on airline operations.

The second feature sees Paul Kelly parading through a sequence of ghost parties, haunted houses, double murders and secret passages, etc., as "Scoop" Hanlon, ace reporter out to solve the mystery of "The Missing Guest". He does. Constance Moore provides the love interest.

Best line comes when the lights go out at a party in the haunted house: "My Gawd, I kissed my own wife." —L.N.S.

"Too Hot to Handle", starring Clarke Gable and Myrna Loy lives up to all expectations in providing thrills and spills. Romantic souls, however, may be slightly disappointed (Clark only kisses Myrna once). Gable is the hot-footed cameraman, caring for nothing but wars, wrecks, and catastrophes, until the fair Miss Loy captures his heart. Even then Gable remains the cameraman, but everybody is happy because the newsreel business gets under Myrna Loy's skin too.

Even officer O'Malley will let him get away with that one. He knows how important it is for the Student to take advantage of the Used text book bargains at,

VARSITY SECONDS FACE ELIMINATION BY THIRD DEFEAT

McMaster Aggregation Triumph Over Intermediates by 12-0 Count

McADAM STARS

Varsity's intermediate rugby team suffered its third straight setback and virtual elimination when the McMaster twelve whitewashed them by a 12-0 score at Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon. The big factor in McMaster's win was stocky "Lefty" Ken McAdam, who paid off with two beautiful field goals and two singles. He not only kicked well but plunged and passed for many long gains.

The Men from Hamilton kept forcing the play and finally got a break when Ibbister kicked poorly out of bounds on his own 27. A McAdam to Duncan pass moved the sticks to the 15-yard mark and after 2 bucks Hilton moved back and drop-kicked the ball between the up-rights. Later McMaster capitalized on a Varsity fumble and Duncan proceeded to boot a single. The half ended with the score McMaster 5, Varsity 0.

Again in the last half the visitors dominated proceedings. By virtue of some valuable yard gaining plunges and two pretty 20 yard tosses, McMaster marched deep into the homesters' end, and then it was a simple matter for McAdam to kick his first field goal from placement. His second came in the final quarter when McMaster recovered Hodggets' fumble. The winners final point resulted when McAdam's attempted placement went wide of its mark and rolled to the deadline.

VARSITY SOCCER TEAMS CONTINUE WINNING WAYS

Varsity soccer teams continued their winning ways this week, taking two contests and battling to a draw in the other. On a choppy field at Buffalo, Captain Jack Convey notched the Blues' only counter to earn a 1-1 stalemate.

The seniors and the intermediates then journeyed to Hamilton and kalsomined the McMaster outfits 2-0 and 4-0 respectively. Mullett and Fraser accounted for the tallies in the seniors' victory, while Small got two and Herington one in the intermediate match.

Speaking OF SPORT

FOOTBALL FOOT-NOTES

It's the old, old story of the underdogs coming through that makes football autumn's main attraction—quite. It takes a while for us on Monday morning to read the results over for the umpteenth time and realize the significance of them. . . . For instance, this week we read Peterborough 3, Sarnia 2, and it made no impression on my mind (it looked too much like the Varsity score). But today a slight implication of what it meant dawned on us. Why that machine, perfect in motion, hitting on all cylinders, no-draft, etc., had been defeated, Sarnia had been held scoreless for three quarters and allowed to score only two singles in the last quarter. Bummer Stirling had two kicks blocked and the Orfins went on to win 3 to 2 . . . making O.R.F.U. a four-cornered group. . . . White in Montreal, Beches had most of the play but Nationals had most of the points, winning 4 to 3, when a last-minute Balm drive netted only one point on an attempted placement. . . .

Coming closer to home we saw what we considered one of the best football games to be played in Eastern Canada when Ottawa Rough Riders tackled Argos. Everybody who didn't leave town was at the game so if we are still a little bewildered by the result you can understand why. A placement that hit the crossbar, a placement, a steam roller plunging and finally a last minute (correction, four minute) pass that went twenty and was run fifty-five for a major score, finished off the favourite Ottawa squad. (Ed. note: Finished me too.)

THE MCGILL-WESTERN GROUP

For the first time in the history of intercollegiate football there was an anxious and sincere desire on the part of Varsity students that Brooklyn . . . pardon me, I mean Queen's, win their Saturday's contest. When the score showed Queen's leading McGill 3-0 a cheer went up from the Varsity stands, thus breaking the last evidence of a "play-off rivalry". But McGill went on, continuing their winning streak, taking Queen's 17 to 5, thus being so far ahead in the race you can't even reach them. Which only means that for the first time in many a moon Reeve can mean . . . and really mean it.

But Stevens hasn't got anything to be happy about either. First injuries took their toll so that Steve has been seriously studying the six-man football rules with the idea of entering a team in the Six Leaguers. Next McGill wakes up and pushes Varsity around because she has one leg to stand on and another to kick with. Saturday was the finish when Western defeated Varsity 3 to 2. Excuses there are none—reason for the defeat—Lyn Thompson kicked three long kicks that went for points—one went 65 yards—another 60 yards, the final went for another 60, and Varsity just didn't have the candid cameraman's fever . . . did you know?

From all descriptions the game was close and hard . . . nothing spectacular. It was a clean, fast game, and as usual another Varsity player was injured, this time it was Ken McQuarrie. Varsity gave all it had . . . and lost . . . but we're not counting them out yet. We expect a lot from you yet, Big Blue Team . . . at least three straight.

SENIOR MED SQUAD HUMBLE ENGINEERS

In their first intercollegiate rugby game of the season, the Senior Meds gridders defeated St. S.P.S. by a 20-0 score on the back campus Friday afternoon. The Schoolmen had previously held St. Mike's to a 2-2 deadlock.

Meds opened the scoring after two minutes of play had elapsed. On this occasion Paul McGoez tossed a 40 yard pass from midfield to George Lindsay, who dashed the remaining ten yards over the goal line, for a major score which went unconverted. McKone plunged for the second touchdown after a Clinckett to McNeil pass had put the Meds in scoring position. This touch was converted by Clinckett.

The last five-point-er of the half, and the game, was scored on another pass by Clinckett, this time to McKone. In addition Clinckett hoofed for two singles and was in general a headache to the Schoolmen. Thus the score at half-time was 18-0. In the second half the two Meds points came as the result of a safety touch. S.P.S. failed to take advantage of their only real scoring opportunity of the day when they had the ball on the Meds 2-yard line but failed to take it across in three tries.

LOUDON REGATTA ENTRIES ARE DOUBLE THIS YEAR

Entries in the annual rowing regatta were doubled this year when the boys took to the water at the Argus Club yesterday. Sixteen men entered the singles and 24 in the doubles to bring the total to 40.

The School crew of Bill Bryce, John McGraw, Ralph Waite and Doug Johnson nosed out the Meds crew in the final event for the "four", after winning both their heat and the semi-final in fine fashion. Victoria College won their heat over Wydlife and Deuts and placed second to S.P.S. in the semi-final, but were unable to place in the final. Don Blackley of University College defeated Don Angus of S.P.S. in the tuck singles. Earl Sigston of Wy-

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Marg. Conlin

Chalk this up to feminine ingenuity.

Down at Queen's the co-eds take turns selling 'mums to the football fans, in order to raise funds for the construction of a Women's Union. While Varsity, still in hopes of an Athletic Building for its co-eds, solves the problem temporarily by taking over the parking lots around the Stadium every Saturday. Members of the Women's Athletic Society take turns collecting quarters which all go to the future construction of our equivalent to Hart House. At Western, where a Women's Union is on the way, the gals sell wieners and coffee during intermission as their contribution to a great undertaking.

Rumour hath it that Western's personable co-ed cheer leader was the winner of the local beauty contest in her home town this year. She will be here next Saturday. Of course local fans are growing accustomed to this super attraction idea. What with Argos having "Miss Toronto" to lead their band and stuff.

The seniors may have lost on Saturday, but for various reasons we would like to point out the merits of the juniors, who blanked the junior Western team to the tune of 9-0.

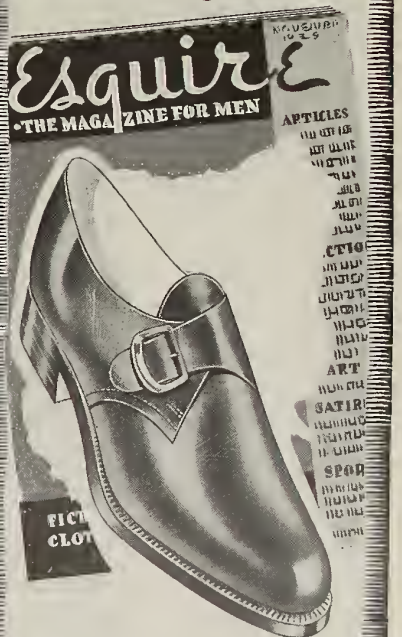

We hope to see final arrangements completed today for the intercollegiate basketball schedule. It is a little early to be picking winners, but U.C. may be counted upon to offer some strong opposition to St. Mike's, the defending champions, who lost heavily through graduation.

Life took the middleweight singles with Morris Murphy placing second, while in the open competition, Jim Kelly of St. Mike's was first, Doug Johnson of U.C. second, and Jim Brown of U.C. third.

Thompson's earlier effort. During the final thirty minutes, and particularly in the fourth frame, Varsity enjoyed a distinct edge in the play, but Thompson's trenchant thrusts dispelled the gain and shot the London lads into a 3-1 lead. Then Varsity buckled down to a frenzied offensive, feature of the thrill-packed fourth quarter finale. Three times the Toronto team moved the sticks in their irresistible march up the field. The intense drive was spearheaded by Bee Rowland, who picked up better than half of the yardage total. The berserk charge halted on the Western twenty-five as the Mustang line stiffened, and Hurley was forced to concede a single on Gray's kick, making the score 3-2 for Western.

Shortly thereafter Cam Gray recovered his own kick at the home team's fifty, and the Blues seemed all set for another goalward assault. However, the gallant Rowland fumbled on a line play, with the ubiquitous Hurley recovering to put Western out of danger. Thompson's long boots held the locals safe to the end. In the final few moments Gray rained a futile flurry of passes in an effort to level the count, but the cease fire sounded with the ball on the Blues' side of midfield.

Highlight of a bitter scrap was Varsity's furious offensive in the ebbing moments of the first half. Events leading up to this pay-off possibility were swift and dramatic in sequence. Cam MacLachlan, Varsity's forgotten man, came out of a tangle of players with the precious pigskin after a fumble on the Western twenty-five yard mark. Varsity lined up quickly and Gray looped a long pass with touchdown written all over it. The pass missed. Then Gray's try for the all-important placement was blocked. Lou Somers scooped up the loose ball and sprinted to the London five-yard strip. It was that close to a touchdown. Time for one play. Scott gambled for five points and Gray fired another potential touchdown pass, the ball grazing the receiver's fingertips. The sustained cheering of the 5,500 fans in attendance broke into a shrill crescendo of approval as the half-time whistle blew, and a dangerous Varsity attack was repelled.

Owing to the weather conditions which prevailed, the contest resembled the old-time, two-bucks-and-a-kick style of football, with sixteen forward passes the only token of the modern razzle-dazzle technique. It was a tough struggle all the way, with the final result always in doubt. Three times the Blues attempted placements in pay-dirt territory, and each time the ball went wide of the posts or fell short.

Varsity: Prince, Gray, McQuarrie, Somers, Scott, McMillan, Schweitzer, Meen, Sirdevan, MacLachlan, Beattie, Shukin; subs: Rowland, Owen, Isbister, Beatty, Holden, Jarvis, Rogin.

DRESS IN P.T. CLASSES WILL BE STANDARDIZED

The university colours have been introduced into the Hart House gymnasium classes for the first time this year with the popularizing of the blue and white jerseys and the blue shorts, for gymnasium wear.

In former years individuality was allowed in the choice of P.T. outfits, but this year the Tuck Shop, co-operating with the Athletic Association, is sponsoring an entirely new outfit. This outfit is composed of a short-sleeved jersey of white cotton with blue trim and dark blue shorts with elastic top. The Athletic Association made the choice of colours and material for the outfit. The reason given by one of the instructors for the change is to do away with the conglomeration of P.T. outfits

GONE IS THE AGE OF BREAKDOWNS

NICKEL ALLOYS GIVE GREATER STRENGTH

1905—John MacDougall's "horseless carriage" is in trouble again. First time he drove it he stripped the gears. Last week the steering equipment gave way.

Something was always going wrong with those early automobiles. Even ten years ago a car driven at top speed for six to eight hours was a liability from then on.

Today with smoother roads, softer tires, easier spring suspension and Nickel Alloy Steels that are highly resistant to shock and wear, those early troubles have been largely eliminated. This is the era of Nickel Alloys, and in the development of Nickel Alloy Steels that are strong, tough and resistant to rust, wear and breakage, the automotive industry has led the way. Your car is stronger, safer, lighter—and gives more miles to the gallon—because of Nickel.

More Canadian Nickel is used in the building of cars, trucks and buses than for any other purpose. The increased use of Nickel is a good thing for Canada. At present 12,000 Canadians earn $20,000,000 a year in the production of Nickel.

So remember—Nickel gives strength and safety to your car. Nickel helps make Canada prosperous.

TRINITY PRESENTS AUTUMN ISSUE OF COLLEGE REVIEW

Magazine Restored as Medium for Exchange of Student Opinion

R. G. ALLEN IS EDITOR

By Norman J. Altstetter

In aiming at a restoration to its role "as a medium for the interchange of opinion and as a digest of the life of the College", the Trinity University Review has with some reservations succeeded.

The well-balanced contents of the magazine embody the social, political and cultural aspects of the world today as well as material chiefly pertinent to students of Trinity College. In an editorial entitled Apraxia the Review, the editor, R. G. Allen, sets forth clearly the recommendations of the Sub-Committee which he says are all "worthy of adoption" but which can not be immediately fulfilled.

In his article Is There Hope for World Peace, J. N. Emerson gives an adequate presentation of the idea that education is a means of eradicating "national and racial aversions" but unfortunately disposes of the practical side of the question.

The fiction department, which could well be enlarged in favour of a curtailment of the poetry, includes two stories written in styles which are radically different to each other. The Disciple, which deserves the greater merit of the two, is in a prose which has a definite rhythmic quality. It arouses the imagination in a way which (Continued on page 4)

JOURNALIST TO ADDRESS MASSEY HALL AUDIENCE

Columbia News Commentator to Speak on Current Events

Hans von Kaltenborn, news commentator for the Columbia Broadcasting System, will attempt to teach his audience how to understand current news in his talk at Massey Hall on November 10.

Mr. Kaltenborn, a German baron in his own right, has been a journalist for thirty-five years, and has spent several years on the radio, commenting on world affairs. During the recent crisis over Czechoslovakia, he was on duty night and day in the broadcasting studio, and slept in an improvised bed in the studio.

Officials of the League of Nations Society, who are sponsoring Mr. Kaltenborn's appearance here, point out that he was the first man to broadcast war news from the front, with bombs for sound effects, and that he has interviewed nearly every important figure in the modern world.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

London, Oct. 24: It is reported from authoritative sources that the Duke of Devonshire, now Dominions under-secretary, will likely be offered a cabinet post, filling the vacancy left by the death of Lord Stanley.

Shanghai, Oct. 25: Japanese invaders have advanced to within twenty miles of Hankow, and the provisional Chinese capital is expected to fall at any moment.

Budapest, Oct. 24: Hungary reduced her territorial demands in Czechoslovakia today by about thirty per cent, in a compromise proposal submitted to the Prague government.

DENIES MARRIAGE IS A STATIC STATE

Parks Advocates Pre-Marital Information as
"Brightener"

ANSWERS QUESTIONS

Continuing his series of talks in the Debates Room, Hart House, on "Youth and Marriage," Rev. J. D. Parks yesterday discussed the modern approach to marriage.

Mr. Parks told an audience of about 150 students that marriage now is studied much more analytically and scientifically than formerly because we look at our experiences more objectively. Information, the speaker continued, never makes marriage dull, but rather brightens it. Mr. Parks deplored the idea of marriage as either a "happy" or "unhappy" venture. He declared that it was not a static state but a very important social relationship in which those concerned had to meet changing situations and crises of many kinds.

Interest in Mr. Parks' groups was evinced by the students' questions. At the beginning of the talk Mr. Parks answered the frequently-asked problem, "Why does the church regard Paul's writings as inspired when it disagrees with his views on marriage so strongly?" "It is quite true that the church regards Paul's writings as inspired, but Paul was not always inspired. When Paul expressed his views on marriage he was certainly not inspired but quite wrong," the speaker explained.

Society Declared Subject

CHARGES BRITAIN WEAK

By Lloyd Haines

That the Nazi Fascists are gangsters, the embodiment of the very lowest elements in human nature, was the opinion expressed by Mr. Wilson Woodside, well-known Canadian commentator on international affairs, in an exclusive interview with The Varsity yesterday.

"Germany is morally rotten, but she may remain intact for a generation or two," he says.

Society has played into the hands of ruthless, unprincipled forces whose policy is to create disorder, disseminate evil, disorganize and confuse social equilibrium and then smash through with a mailed fist.

The democracies have jeopardized their very existence with their conviction in the utter futility of war. This weakness has given the dictators their crushing advantage. "If Britain surrenders one more position she is lost," claims Mr. Woodside.

He points out a whole cause of liberty and Christian ethics in the (Continued on page 4)

TRINITY COLLEGE DANCE TAKES PLACE THURSDAY

Old Boys' and Athletic Dances to be Combined
Again

Following the successful experiment of last year, Trinity College will again hold only one fall dance, which replaces the Old Boys' and the Athletic dances of former years. The dance known as the Old Boys'-Athletic's gambol is this year being held on Thursday night, Oct. 27, in Trinity College.

The college will be uniquely gilded with a decorative scheme derived from the combined efforts of John Barnes, the creative Hart House artist, Art Pritchard and Henry Hussey. One of the many features of the embellishments will be cartoons of prominent old boys and athletes of Trinity.

Don Armstrong and his orchestra will provide music soothing both to jitter-shivers and Lambeth debauches.

Tickets will be left on sale at the Porter's Lodge in Trinity until Wednesday afternoon

Molarman Turns Vagabond Hitch-Hikes Through Mexico

One day on the road, a stop in the mental hospital at Dearborn, Michigan, eight days more and then . . . Mexico City. That was the itinerary of P. R. Molarman, who wanted to go in for law, but, because he stayed so long in Mexico, was too late to enter an application for anything but Dentistry.

Disappointed when the cattle boat he was to sail on remained on this side of the Atlantic, he remembered the exploits of the Toll brothers and set out for Mexico early last July. After only one day of hitch-hiking, he got a job driving a car, and so he continued as far as Oklahoma City in the company of a Ford which was also escaping from Dearborn. From Oklahoma to Texas was the next jump, and then Mexico.

Customs officials at the border proposed him his first lift on Mexican soil by stopping American tourists and practically demanding a ride for him. After reaching the capital, he went on as far as the road went . . . but when it petered out and there was the choice of turning back or riding further on burros, P. R. turned back, and kept on coming back . . . through Arizona, California, British Columbia, the prairies, and thence home.

In all, the trip took about two months . . . from early July until mid-September. A great deal of that time was spent in Mexico which, according to all his reports, is a fine place to be. Contrast seems to be the feature that struck him most . . . contrast in races, in languages, in customs. Spanish is, of course, the predominant tongue, but a surprising amount of German is spoken. Many of the people are very poor . . . will carry loads of as much as two hundred pounds for miles for only a few cents profit, but then living is cheap, and . . . on the whole it's a pretty grand place, and this Dentistry student intends to go back when he graduates . . . provided the government will let him. If everyone who has once been there wants to go back . . . well it's a good advertisement for the country.

DEBATERS PREPARE FOR OPENING TILT

The first Hart House debate of the year is to be held Wednesday, Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. in the Debates Room. The subject is, "Resolved that this House has confidence in Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy." All members of Hart House are invited to participate by speaking from the floor. Any who wish to take advantage of this opportunity of obtaining practice in speaking, or who wish to express their views on the subject, are asked to leave their names at the Varden's Office in Hart House, on the day of the debate. In order to be eligible for election to the debates committee for next year, it is necessary that a candidate speak from the floor at least three times in two years, or twice in one year.

EXPLAINS PRINCIPLES OF ELECTRIC ORGAN

Engineers Hear Williamson, New Instrument Played by Paul Berg

Mr. G. W. Williamson of the Robert Simpson Company, who was introduced by P. C. Anderson, president, explained the basic principles of the Hammond electric organ, at a meeting of the Engineering Society yesterday.

He told the society that as yet perfection has not been reached in a musical instrument—that no instrument has been invented which is not affected by time, temperature, and humidity, and does not require tuning. However, he told them, the Hammond Electric Organ has eliminated the requirements of tuning, and the dangers of climatic changes. It is estimated that 253,000,000 different tones can be produced on this organ.

Mr. Paul J. Berg was present as assistant at the console. He demonstrated a few novel effects including the music of chimes, the viroharp, various wood instruments, and the marimba. After that, Mr. Berg answered a number of questions from the student body and played a few requests. He concluded the demonstration by playing Rubenstein's Kammermusik Overture, specially arranged for the electric organ, and featuring the brasses, flute, strings and organ.

J. C. Anderson expressed to Mr. Williamson and to Mr. Berg the thanks of the students, and Mr. Williamson replied. The meeting was brought to an end with a rousing Tolke Oike.

Schoolman Breaks Nose In Soph-Fresh "Tap" Clash

One broken nose and much torn clothing was the result of a clash between the S.P.S. soph-fresh on Friday afternoon. It all started when the second year men attempted to give the freshmen a sample of the traditional "tap" consisting of holding the luckless victim under a water faucet.

Lloyd Holt, II Chemistry student, was caught in a maelstrom which culminated in a broken nose for the unfortunate soph. Holt was given treatment by Dr. Harris and sent to the Western Hospital. His condition is not regarded as serious.

ACTS AT NEWMAN CLUB CLASSICAL AND LOWBROW

Sunday night Newman Club held a strictly amateur night featuring such local talent as the campus had to offer. A packed room gave vocal testimony to the ability of the performers. Featuring the worst, the committee in charge of arrangements decided to frisk the audience on its way in but relented and instead had the master of ceremonies threaten to invoke the riot act if pot-shots were taken at the performers.

The acts ranged from very classical to very lowbrow with Bob Handforth playing Debussy's Claire de la Lune as an example of the former, to "Butch" and "Spik" presenting a black-out (with Warden Lawes' consent) about prison life at Sing Sing to qualify for the second classification.

Returned League Delegate Lauds German Program of Physical Education

DECLARES HITLER REALIST

By Gladys Kippen

It is one thing to know what is wrong with other people and ourselves; it is another thing to know the answer. Mrs. Nellie McClung knows both. In Toronto on a brief visit during her lecture tour across Canada as returned delegate from the League of Nations, Mrs. McClung graciously received The Varsity during a busy Saturday morning.

"Of course physical activity appeals to German young people," she said briskly, when asked what the Germans had that we haven't. "Imagine yourself over there after Versailles, with starving children all about you, and bits of your country dropped like plums into the laps of the victors."

"Hitler came along to those people with a god they could understand—a national god that made them hold up their heads again. They admired the smart boy of the town getting back at his fellows who had snubbed him. This is all real to them . . . and until English youth and Canadian youth will see that their god appeals to every bit of physical energy they possess . . ." The telephone rang (it was about 9:10 a.m.) and Mrs. McClung's voice carried her positive, radiant personality over the wires to a friend.

"When we kill enmity instead of the enemy, we'll get results," she continued, with hardly a pause, as she returned to her desk "That's why Chamberlain's wire to Hitler marked a new era in diplomacy. Do you know that within twenty-four hours after the Munich conference he had released Lutheran churchmen from jail, not as part of the pact, but out of courtesy? And in France they are talking of a permanent home for England's prime minister; (Continued on page 4)

Registration List Includes Student Nurses from Abroad

This year at the University School of Nursing there are 84 girls taking post-graduate work. These girls come from all over the world, including France, Portugal, Panama, Venezuela, and New Zealand. Registration of undergraduates is supposed to be limited to thirty, but actual enrollment is allowed to exceed that number.

Hence the girls attending the School may be seen entering their dining-room a great many more times a day than do the girls of Whitney Hall. This does not mean that the women in white have gargantuan appetites, but merely that the School of Nursing, which was founded in 1933, has been boasting a steadily increasing registration list, so that the lecture rooms are overcrowded.

The course given at the School of Nursing is thirty-eight months in length, so that students entering in the September of their first year, graduate in November, three years later. These embryo nurses live in their own school residences. They have an eight-hour day, except on Saturdays, when they are granted a free afternoon.

During their three years at the school, they receive a combined training for hospital nurse and public health nurse, and at graduation, the girls are presented with a double diploma.

For Freshmen Only

Many disappointments are in store for the high school grad who aims at a University education, for unfortunately high school principals think a great deal more about getting their proteges through matriculation examinations with high marks, than they do about preparing them for their life after graduation.

By Christmas time a high percentage will have become disillusioned and will realize that they are not prepared for a University education. One of the great forces for happiness or disappointment in a University career is the personal religion of the undergraduate, although this often is ignored by the average professor.

Many a student passes through a veritable hell during his first three months of college, and occasionally one loses all his religious ideals, faiths, and beliefs, and quits. More often, however, he refuses to battle it out, and lets things slide, to his own personal loss. Coming often from a secluded background where more stress is put upon religion, and practical Christianity, than upon doctrine, history and science, he finds that his old theories are exploded before the historical, scientific and philosophical knowledge of men who should know what they are talking about. And there are some professors who know a lot about books and theory, but haven't very much experience with life. Occasionally one of these will take a sort of fiendish pleasure in disturbing the theological notions of a freshman, and saying things which he knows make him writhe within.

So often fundamentals are confused with early beliefs, and development in scientific and critical thought is associated with loss of faith. With a little sympathetic understanding, the freshman is able to delve into the mysteries of knowledge, and a new religious life will be opened up for him. It is not a matter of losing the old religion, with its valued association with home and parents, but it is a case of adding to and reinforcing the fundamental religious beliefs nurtured from childhood.

In every college there is at least one professor, who together with his knowledge of the subject which he teaches, has a sympathetic understanding of human nature. He realizes that it is not always the greatest theologian who has the most religion. He knows that oftentimes the most uneducated person with the slimmest framework of theology, will still have a keen insight into the basic principles of life and religion. They do not hang out a sign on the office doors, but experience has proved to the student, that there he may go with his problem, and find more help than may be obtained in a dozen average lecture courses in Philosophy of Religion.

Re Interviews

Today The Varsity is proud to be able to carry an interview with Nellie McClung, well-known Canadian novelist. It has been the purpose of the editorial staff to have more interviews this year than formerly, for it is believed that this is a very important part of newspaper work, and is valuable experience for the reporter. By giving bylines for the reporter, there is more opportunity to develop and use an individual style.

An interview with Wilson Woodside will also appear in this issue, and both these stories have been sent out to the Canadian University Press.

The fact that two prominent people who have just returned from the storm-centre in Europe have such radically different ideas concerning international politics, should be somewhat revealing to students who have found such varied opinion on the campus. It is our policy to present the news in as unbiased a way as possible and in our editorials try and be fair to both sides.

Hart House Songsters

(Submitted)

Next Sunday evening begins the first in this year's series of Sunday evening Songsters.

The Music Committee of Hart House feels that an even greater number of the members of Hart House should become familiar with the Songsters. On several occasions men of senior years have expressed their regret to the Warden at not having known of the Songsters earlier, and hence a special effort is being made to make them known to the men of the first and second years.

The Songsters are held on those Sunday evenings on which a Sunday Evening Concert does not occur. They take place in the Music Room of Hart House, beginning at 8.45 p.m. and lasting to 10 p.m.

The Songsters arose fifteen years ago from a group of men coming together and singing songs for no other reason than that they liked it. In those days Mr. C. E. Higginbotham, now Assistant to the Bursar, and Mr. W. H. M. Laughlin, an undergraduate in the Faculty of Engineering, were the moving spirits. As time went on, there was a desire to put these musical evenings on a more permanent basis, and to find a suitable title for them. An invitation was extended to Mr. J. Campbell-McInnis to conduct the whole series during the year, and the name Songster was decided upon. Much credit is due to Mr. Higginbotham and others for the pioneer work they did and the House has a great debt to Mr. Campbell-McInnis, who has been director of the Songsters for the last ten years. He will continue to lead the Songsters this year.

There is no part singing at the Songsters, and no vocal attainments or knowledge of music are required in order to participate; all that is necessary is a desire to sing. The Songsters are designed for the entertainment of the students by making them familiar with a wide variety of good songs.

Songs of all kinds—folk songs and national songs of England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Germany and French Canada; selections from light opera, sea shanties, negro spirituals, and many other songs go to make up a very large repertoire. The atmosphere is essentially informal; smoking is permitted as usual. The room is in darkness; the words and music are thrown on two screens in the middle of the room, and accompaniment is supplied by two pianos. At the first Songster those attending are guests of the Warden for light refreshments afterwards; at subsequent Songsters a small charge is made for those desiring refreshments.

The Songsters play an extremely important part in the musical life of Hart House. It is believed that they are quite unique on this continent, and the Music Committee urges all members of Hart House to take advantage of the opportunity offered them.

Art, Music and Drama

Mordkin Ballet

Mikhail Mordkin brought a remarkably well-trained and well-mounted troupe of dancers to Massey Hall last Friday and Saturday to present ballet in both new and classical styles.

The most interesting of the three ballets done on Friday was Trepak, music by Tcherenpine and choreography by Mordkin. The scenario, if we may use the term, is an involved one with many religious and psychological implications; the music, which might almost have been written by Stravinsky, is little more than a rhythmic pattern, but even so it has many virtually unplayable passages which the orchestra negotiated with surprising skill.

The other works were a new version by Mordkin of Tchaikowsky's Le Lac des Cygnes, and Voices of Spring, by Johann Strauss, story and choreography by Mordkin. In the former, the most classic

BRIG NANCY SAILS ON STRANGE QUEST

Capt. Wiregarters Reveals All to Members of Press

ANACONDA STEEL STEADY

In a special interview Capt. Wiregarters revealed the destination of the Brig Nancy in its strange quest. "We sail tomorrow to hunt the Hooded Doppelganger," he cried.

In the meantime, Bo'sun Moly Shyster walked around the fo'c'sle supervising the loading of the cargo. Five hundred files have been bought with which the gallant sea dog and his crew intend to round the horn. Long Gon, the stout first mate of the trim little craft, scanned the horizon from the nincompoop deck, while the aged Wiregarters shinnied up the mainmast to look for eggs in the crow's nest. The old skipper revealed that Tasmania was the destination and that the crew were armed to defend themselves from the attacks of the Tasmanians.

A lull took place in the proceedings when the Captain and crew were arrested by the police after they had weighed the anchor and found it two pounds short. . . .

WOMEN WRITERS HEAR GUEST SPEAKER TODAY

Professor Berney will be the guest speaker at the Women's Press Club today when he will speak to the members on "Proletarian Literature". Although the Press Club announced a meeting last week, it was cancelled because of the inability of the guest speaker to be present. Today, after Professor Berney's talk, elections for a treasurer will take place.

The club president, Marg Burnette, U.C. '39, is very anxious to meet any freshies who aspire to membership in the Women's Press Club. Some co-eds have been under the impression that this club is restricted to membership by invitation only. The executive wishes to announce that any co-eds interested in writing are welcomed at the meetings. The club has alternate "work" meetings at which any of the efforts contributed by the members anonymously are criticized by a guest critic, and speaker meetings at which guest speakers address the members on subjects of interest to budding authors and newspaper women.

SCHOOL SCORE WIN IN CLOSE BATTLE

University College Show Talent in Initial Appearance Yesterday

FUGLER AND REUBEN STAR

The School Juniors continued their winning ways by conquering a stubborn squad from U.C. 2-1. It marked the first appearance of the University College team this fall, and in defeat they still showed plenty of promise. On the other hand, the engineers certainly did not win on sheer luck.

Play ranged up and down the field for most of the game with S.P.S. missing a touch by the smallest of margins in the very first minute of play when the pigskin eluded Barry's outstretched hands.

It was in the second quarter that booter Bowlen from U.C. got a single from the 30 yard line. A minute later School crashed through to ruin a kick, but half time found the score still U.C. 1, S.P.S. 0.

Both teams were afflicted with a bad case of the fumbles in the third quarter, but after settling down to business the energetic engineers went from one end of the field to the other on the strength of some powerful punting by Fugler.

In the last quarter, Ron Fugler's toe was responsible for a single and with only a minute to go, Charlie Reuben recovered on the U.C. 20 yard line after Fugler had kicked from midfield. From there it was a cinch for another single, this one being a game-winner. U.C.: Karry, Murray, McLean, Mallon, Essery, Clavir, Harris, Foulds, Moore, Ferguson, Culler, Goodman, Stewart, Wilinsky, Bownel, MacDiarmid, Singer, Pinkus, Nagel, and McLaughlin.

INJURY TO KEEFER MARS MCGILL WIN

Redmen Lose Placement Kicker for Rest of Season

Special to The Varsity
Montreal—McGill's triumph over Queen's Saturday did not go unmarked. Keef, hefty placement kicker for the Redmen, suffered a serious injury which will probably keep him out for the rest of the season.

One of the features of Saturday's game was the speed of the Redmen, who outstepped the Kingstonian runners whenever they would get away. Although Queen's drew first blood with a placement after a fumbled kick in the first few minutes, after the first quarter there was little doubt of the superiority of the Marcyellers.

On several occasions Queen's were in a splendid position for a major score, but McGill were always able to rally in the pinches, and the strong line drove the Tricolor back to a position where no more than a single score could be made.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

FLASH! FLASH!

In a very commendable effort to widen its sphere of influence on the Canadian college student and the public in general, the Canadian University Press initiated a public address system at Montreal and Toronto last Saturday, where efforts were made to give the crowds attending the games a running account of the intercollegiate fixtures being played at London and Montreal.

The Varsity reporter in the London press box sent a running comment of the Western-Varsity game to Toronto and Montreal. For the wires coming to Toronto a Varsity reporter was stationed in the press box where a special telephone had been installed and he telephoned them to the person who was announcing over the loudspeakers on the grandstand roof. At McGill the Varsity editor, who was at Montreal as visiting editor of the McGill Daily, received the wires, rebashed them and passed them to the McGill editor, who announced the play at opportune times during the Queen's-McGill tussle. The Varsity editor also sent reports on the Queen's-McGill game to Toronto at half, three-quarter and game time.

According to all accounts the attempt in Montreal was very successful. The running comment was enjoyed and helped the crowd keep ahead of anything that the score board could tell them. Nor did the announcements interfere with the spectators' enjoyment of the game at hand as they were announced during lulls in the play.

Unfortunately the same can not be said for the attempts in Toronto. The address system itself was not tuned correctly and the comments that the C.U.P. gave to Mr. Wright, the announcer, had to give precedence naturally to his sponsor's announcements. As a result the C.U.P. flashes were generally given just as the band struck up an air and were drowned out. An account was also given at half-time, and with all due respect to Mr. Wright his voice cannot be expected to draw the same attention as the beautiful Dione Perkins, the Argo band's drum-major. Then again there were very few halls in the Argo-Ottawa game for announcements.

However, it was a beginning and a step in the right direction. Perhaps, later on this season or next year The Varsity may be able to take over the public address system and better results obtained. It is to be hoped that the C.U.P. continue their efforts and enlarge their sphere of activity, there is definitely a place for them in Canadian college life.

WE LAG BEHIND!

The effort that The Varsity made to try and obtain support for feminine cheer leaders and drum-majors came to a rather inglorious end for lack of public support. Queen's now have two girl cheer-leaders and the move has been decidedly successful. Then again the Argo band that is not nearly of the calibre of the U. of T.'s, manage to attract a great deal more attention. It may be a strange way to obtain appreciation for Col. Slater's music-men but nevertheless we think that it would undoubtedly be successful and would add a great deal of colour to have a feminine as well as a male drum-major. For our own part we can't see what possible objections can be raised. It is the general practice in the States and a highly successful one. They have even gone so far as to establish a school for the girl drum majors (no Mr. Laski, you can not be teacher)!

Correspondence

Dear Editor:

The threatened dissolution of the Date Bureau has prompted me to make a suggestion. The Date Bureau's chief function was, I believe, to bring together students of both sexes who were lonely, or who wished to acquire new friends. Its chief disadvantage lay in the fact that a student might be forced to spend a dull evening with a completely unsuitable person. Would it not be possible for the Date Bureau to adopt a new policy? Why couldn't it, for example, sponsor a series of monthly dances to which anyone could buy a ticket, the sole condition being that each student (boy or girl) had to come alone? Here with the aid of numerous "Paul Joneses" everyone would have a chance to enlarge his (or her) circle of acquaintances. The committee in charge could set a ticket price sufficient to cover the expenses involved and perhaps regulate the sale of tickets in such a way that there would be no marked predominance of either sex, thus disposing of the question of wallflowers, either male or female.

If the "crashing" success of the first year dance is any proof, surely this type of dance would be eagerly welcomed here. Moreover it would give the students of all years and colleges an opportunity of becoming acquainted—instead of moving as they do now within a certain restricted little circle of friends. Hoping I may arouse some of the other students to express themselves on this subject, I am, sincerely yours,
A Social Reformer.

To the Editor of The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Will you allow me to make a plea for maintenance of a long-established tradition. Applaud for fine musical performance. (Continued on page 4)

BIG LEAGUE COACHES

When the teams representing the intercollegiate rugby league wanted to get some good coaching this year, they turned around and grabbed off a few of the stars in "Big Time". The result is that four of the highest rating footballers, hailing from two of the greatest rugby squads in Canada, are now sending their boys through their paces and donating their talented knowledge to a group of grand rugby prospects.

The Argonaut Rowing Club is well represented with such men as Frankie and Annis Skulus and Earl Selkirk. From the Balmby Beach Club we find Charlie Box, who before his acquisition by the Balmby gang spent several years with a winner. Annis is a great person to know and has been giving his everything in his quest for producing a winner.

The Senior Meds have been receiving the talented coaching of Earl Selkirk, star backfielder with the Argos. The Meds team are using a variation of the double blue plays, but the defense is almost the same as that of the said club. When asked about what he thinks of coaching an intercollegiate team, he said: "I like it a great deal, and when we get into the showers after the Argo practice, we get a lot of ribbing from Annis, who claims that his team is the best, but wait till we meet him."

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Marg Conlin

Now that most of the women's residences have installed table tennis apparatus the co-eds are beginning to feel the competitive urge in this sport. It won't be long before an intercollegiate competition gets under way judging by present indications. The latest table tennis club was organized at St. Joseph's this week, and from all appearances this sport is about to replace the daily pharmacy lecture. Heaven forbid.

Many of last year's sporting girls are now passing the time up at O.C.E. Joy Brownlee of Victoria and intercollegiate basketball fame, is specializing in P.T. with Dorothy McCarron, also a former Vic student. The latter gave an outstanding exhibition of gymnastics at the O.C.E. gym the other night. Her swimming ability is also cause for much admiration.

Joy has found time to take over the coaching of the intermediate team at Victoria this year, and with her knowledge, plus some fine talent on hand, Vic are expected to offer fine competition. Joyce Tenenbaum of last year's intercollegiate basketball team, is coaching Vic seniors. Other "lights" of the class of '38 such as Mary Davidson, intercollegiate swimming champion last year, and Gerry Ryan of the intercollegiate basketball team are specializing in the P.T. course at the College of Education.

From Western, Beth McGill and Lorna Brown, former intercollegiate basketball stars, are here, as are Marg Hubbard and Ruth Matthews, who were in town last winter starring for the senior McMaster team.

This array of talent going to waste in the competitive sense at O.C.E. is very sad to consider. Of course the girls may feel that they have enough to do what with keeping up with their classes, etc., but we would like to see some of these greats together in the intercollegiate competition. Even a few teams from O.C.E. would offer fine competition to the best teams around undergraduate circles at Varsity.

EXTRA SWIMMING CLASS TO BE HELD THURSDAYS

According to Mr. Winterburne, swimming instructor in Hart House, further arrangements have been made so that an extra intermediate swimming class will be held each Thursday at 11 o'clock.

Five swimming classes a week have already been arranged for, explained Mr. Winterburne, but fifty applicants had to be turned away due to insufficient accommodation. This additional period on Thursdays will accommodate 25 students. Applications must be made to the swimming instructor.

Gust of Wind Causes Traffic Tie-up

Hat stops traffic on Bloor Street. Motorists would like to know who was the pretty little co-ed whose hat was carried away by the wind in front of Diana's at noon yesterday, and rolled merrily off down the street toward Avenue Road, stopping no less than two buses, and half a dozen cars.

The young lady in question looked frantically about for a hero, who appeared in the form of a messenger boy on a bicycle, who circled in and out amongst the autos and rescued it from under one.

THE NEW VARSITY "MUM"

FOR COLOUR AT THE GAME

Little Grey Flower Shoppe, the creators of the "Varsity Corsage" now present the "Varsity Mum".

Soooooo . . . to make sure that Varsity wins wear a huge, perfect mum, with Varsity colours.

It will make the game twice as gay and exciting—and there's nothing like gorgeous mums to up the standing of young swains with fair damsels.

A beautiful specimen costs from 25c up.

Get her a "VARSITY CORSAGE" for the dance after the game.

the other fiction contribution Brief Epitaph, comes nowhere near equaling. The latter is a slightly over-written though entertaining whimsicality of a brief love affair.

Of the verse, Steps to Dejection by Gordon Cox, is the only one worthy of mention. It is composed of five sections of free verse of which the opening two far outdo the remainder in imaginative qualities.

In a Dramatic Society notice the editor, R. G. Allen, ably expresses the appreciation of the students of drama-turgy for the recent acquisition of Cartwright Hall for the presentation of their drama efforts. Other college news includes Personals and Letters to the Editor, all of which unfortunately deal with the same subject.

With a well-balanced content and a good standard of material the editors of the Trinity University Review have succeeded in producing a magazine which succeeds in accomplishing its aims.

even a Rue de Chamberlain." To the query, "What about Canada's responsibility, and our own?" she replied, "National responsibility doesn't mean much unless we are responsible for ourselves." She pointed out that resentment at home, among friends, on campus, against other races cramps our style as a national influence.

"Take our government relief system..." She continued, "You can put new clothes on a man and money in his pocket, but until you change his adjustment to society, you will never get at the cause of the slump problem."

To the question, "But where do we come in?" she replied enthusiastically, "I can see that the more knowledge students acquire, the more they see what ought to be, and the more they are disgusted with what is. Mobilization of trained thinking is the greatest weapon we've got towards moral re-arrangement. Words and thoughts are powerful things." Mrs. McClung believes youth would substitute constructive for destructive thinking, if they would try to give a boost to every conversation they held, they could change the way of Canadian thinking in one year.

of the three ballets, an attempt has been made to associate the story symbolically with the romance of the composer and Nadejda von Meck. The latter is a colourfully staged synthesis of Strauss waltzes, lasting over half an hour. Oddly enough we still like Strauss—but not for a week or two please.

Among the featured dancers were Patricia Bowman and, in a limited way, Mordkin himself, but the whole troupe did its work with amazing efficiency. If we could remember the technical terms for some of the tricks of dancing used we would comment in more detail. The conductor of the phenomenally good orchestra was Mois Zlatin.

Hollywood Theatre

J'aime Toutes les Femmes, the French movie at the Hollywood Saturday morning, turned out to be a rather amusing musical comedy which had Jan Kiepura working overtime in a dual role.

The scene from Rigoletto was well portrayed with, of course, the usual comedy relief running through it because the movie-magazine knows his audience are morose and would be bored with a straight rendition of an opera scene. However, the arias from this opera are excellently sung and well recorded. Interestingly also from a technical angle was the duct he sang with "lui-meme".

I wish that the director had not felt it necessary to make all his extras stand around in awe whenever Kiepura opens his mouth to sing. Particularly is this noticeable when the tenor is in ferris wheel serenading Mlle. Darius with a love song while thousands of onlookers stare speechlessly.

Danielle Oarriex shows herself as an excellent comedienne and was one of the high spots of the picture.

Although Mr. Kiepura's acting was not as convincing as his singing and Danielle was not as glamorous as Hollywood has made her, still the picture was enjoyable enough.

Toronto Art Gallery

The loan exhibit of Paintings of Women now on view at the Art Gallery of Toronto displays within limitations that the directors acknowledge the varied relationships between European patrons and painters during the last four centuries.

The striking contrast between the meticulous detail of Bartol Bruyn's Lady of the Vase and the colorful Marchesa Casati by Augustus John with its expressive summary and loose technique is apparent. The Renoir and the Degas, the latter not seeming to get much help from its frame, represent the modern French school. Laura Knight's Tights and Turlin is perhaps the most familiar of the English group.

This collection displays in a most pleasing manner the highlights in the history of western art since the Middle Ages. This is not by any means a simple progress, but most of the main trends are represented.

MUST BE SUPREME BEY DECLARES S.C.M. SPEAKER

Since there must be a watchmaker behind the intricate mechanism of a watch, then assuredly there must be a Supreme Being behind the universe, said Mrs. Cragg, addressing a meeting of the University College S.C.M. Friday. Centering around the topic "Belief in God apart from Christian Belief", the discussion brought in the Oeism Theism and Pantheism theory of belief. The meeting, held in the library of the Women's Union, concluded with an informal discussion on what moderns think of God.

THE LAMBETH WALK is here to stay judging from its popularity at last week's U.C. First Year Oance. . . . also, the dance has swept across every campus in the Dominion and in the States . . . now we do not sit ourselves up as a critic on the modern dance form but we feel a few well-chosen words on this craze would not be out of place. . . . Some dancers claim that this new dance is tops because of its mild, smooth quality, but we do not see the point . . . what able-bodied dancer would forego the opportunity of leaping into the air, and shouting "PRAISE ALLAH, WIGGLE, WIGGLE, WIGGLE. . . all the Walk consists of is strutting about the floor like a peacock, and then slapping knees (your own of course) . . . the only worthwhile thing about this dance is the poking of your right thumb into the eye of the dancer behind you . . . that is a good thing . . . the Daily Texan offers several variations to the dance which should improve it. . . . They advise that in the middle of the dance, you substitute the Chamberlain Break . . . you turn to the right, and then take three steps backward on the dead run . . . also they suggest you might try the Hitler Heel or the Czech Kickback . . . ILL STICK TO THE OLO FASHIONED WALTZ. . . .

VERILY, IT WAS A SMOY DAY in the life of a Tulane University linesman, and here is the story. . . . After sitting on the bench all the game, a young boy, among the rooters who swarmed on the field, roared and asked, "May I have your autograph, mister?" . . . Before the saddened linesman could reply, the little fan took a second look at the player's uniform and yelled "Aw I don't want your autograph. You didn't even get in the game . . . your uniform's clean" . . . It is reported that the linesman hung himself on the cross-bar of the goal-posts. . . .

IN THE DAILY TEXAN, we see a little story to the effect that women tennis players are not allowed to wear halters. . . . This is outrageous both to the editorial board of that worthy paper and myself . . . in this modern day and age, women have a right to wear as much harness as they wish. . . . In fact, some of them would look very charming in heavy veils. . . .

THE UPPER TREND seems to be quite the thing in hair-dress these days . . . and the McGill Daily asserts that this craze produces in at least one male the general landscape effect for a drive for Be Kind to Birds Week. . . . The editor of the Wampus, Southern California's humour magazine, says that it's nothing new, but that "scrub women have been doing it for years". . . . THAT'LL HOLD YOU GIRLS.

nize the Canadian Student Assembly of which he was then elected secretary.

He will base his address on his experiences as the Assembly's representative to the International Student Delegation to China organized by an international conference of the World Student Association at Paris in 1937. The delegation was composed of Bernard Floud, B.A., Oxon, representing the Student Committee of the British Youth Assembly; Molly Yard, organizing secretary of the American Student Union, representing the United States Peace Committee; James Klogmann, B.A., Cantab, representing the World Student Association; and Grant Lathe, M.Sc., McGill, representing the Canadian Student Assembly. Their purpose was "to convey to the Chinese people the active solidarity of students throughout the world, and at the same time make a thorough investigation of the present situation in China with a view to making widely known the results of this investigation."

In April, 1938, Dr. Lathe left for China where, as guests of the Chinese government, the four students were afforded many special privileges. They were shown the former Soviet district in North-West China, the methods of guerrilla warfare, the refugee camps, the hospitals, and they were enthusiastically welcomed by youth organizations, trade unions, cultural societies, press associations and missions. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his wife granted them an interview.

In his undergraduate days, Grant Lathe combined campus activity with scholarship standing, gaining his master's degree in biochemistry while taking medicine. He is well known and respected by many on the local campus.

ance is, indeed, an old custom. But applause between movements of a single work is one of those things which for cultural reasons, are "not done". Now applause is very necessary in order that the audience may respond in appreciation. But we of the American continent—particularly as influenced by the radio—are appreciating applause-crazy! Instead of appreciating spiritual continuity in music, we want our concerts to be heterogeneous medleys. With special reference to the Hart House Musicals, might I urge my fellow-students to respect a time-worn custom?

WOODSIDE DUBS NAZIS GANGSTERS

world today as depending on this one question: "Will the democracies see their peril in time to grapple with it?" Their vitality has been undermined by their greater ease and security. The fight has largely gone out of them. "They need to wake up to the fact that freedom is worth fighting for," he says.

The Nyan Conference is, in Mr. Woodside's opinion, the only positive action taken by Britain in seven years. How clear it was! A solid front against the trouble-makers, and the grievance disappeared as if by magic.

The situation now is infinitely more dangerous than it was a very few years ago. Italy was so weak that she would have wilted at a frown from London. Now she dominates the Mediterranean. "She shouldn't," asserts Mr. Woodside. "Italy is a weak country."

The Anglo-German Naval Pact gave Germany the chance she was looking for. It installed Britain with a sufficient sense of security to allow the Fatherland a head-start in armament. Now Germany dominates central Europe. "And her next step will be in the Ukraine," is Mr. Woodside's prophecy.

Now, if ever, democracy needs a champion, a leader to rouse it from its lethargy and fire it with enthusiasm. Germany still fears Great Britain, by whose might she once was crushed. She shudders at the thought of the United States with her infinite resources. "Germany's might is much over-rated," says Mr. Woodside. "But Russia is a practical war-maker, a Sparta. She is not a country with an army, but an army with a country."

An international police force, a Vigilant Society of free nations, possibly the League of Nations revived under a new name, to check these Fascist forces of disintegration all over the world, is what, in Mr. Woodside's opinion, must save the cause of freedom, if it is to be saved at all.

For Britain, a war postponed may be a war averted. She holds to her age-old policy of detachment from the vortex of Europe. She sees even now a faint hope that Hitler may destroy himself, as Napoleon did, on Russia. "What Lindbergh said about the Russian air-fleet is only too true," affirms Mr. Woodside. "Russia is terribly disorganized. But she will fight. Anyone will fight an aggressor." This, coming from a man who carried a couple of hundred undeveloped photographs out of Russia in his back pocket, cannot be otherwise than authentic.

Mr. Woodside shared the narrow quarters of a storm trooper during the Nazi revolution, moved about freely in Berlin during Hitler's election campaign and broke unexpectedly into world news when he sampled true German hospitality for refusing the Nazi salute. On this occasion he took leave of a certain Munich hotel much in the manner of "the daring young man", his baggage flying with him.

Comments Are Varied On Freshmen Editorial

Most Students Preferred to Remain Mute on Question Raised in Last Edition

MAJORITY AGREE

Most freshmen, when questioned yesterday about the editorial "For Freshmen Only" were non-committal, the majority confessing that it was an involved question about which they would prefer to remain silent.

Of those who expressed opinions the majority agreed with the editorial, with the one qualification that they had not had really enough time to decide for themselves whether the methods of their professors were or were not correct.

Some, however, had definite opinions. One U.C. man, who would not allow his name to be used, claimed that some of the statements made by professors in the first year have the tendency to challenge the orthodox statements made in churches and thus inspire students to think about the matter for themselves.

Miss Joane Foster, I Vic, felt that "anyone with real convictions would not have had them upset in this short time. I can see, however, that my ideas may soon be modified by the life around the college."

Don Bothwell, I Vic, who may at some time enter theology, had very definite opinions on the subject. "No one could possibly be influenced in one month. The professors make every effort to avoid references that might cause anyone's ideas to be laughed at." When asked if he had met any professor with whom he could discuss the subject, he admitted that there was one to whom he felt he could talk with greatest candour on religion and personal philosophy.

Another young fresher who wished to remain modestly anonymous said, "A person who has spent no time in thinking..."

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

New York, Oct. 26: Karl Steinko, captain of the burning liner Deutschland, reported by radio late last night that the fire was under control. This message came after the master of the ship had frantically appealed for help. The extent of damage of the medium sized liner was not known as first reports came in, but plans had gone ahead to take off the 591 passengers and crew of 400.

Ottawa, Oct. 25: His Majesty King George VI will sit as King of Canada at a full Privy Council meeting after the monarch makes his proposed visit to Canada next summer. It was also disclosed here that the King will travel to Callander to visit the Dismal Swamp in his role as guardian.

Edmonton, Oct. 26: Premier Albert Hart made public an announcement that a special session of the Alberta Legislature will be called November 15 mainly to deal with the Turner Valley gas and petroleum situation. Following approval by the cabinet the Order-in-Council providing for the session, was signed by the premier and it is expected that it will be signed by Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Bowen at a later date.

Quebec, Oct. 26: The Court of King's Bench is scheduled to hear this afternoon the opening discussions of the validity of the province's Padlock Law. F. X. Lessard, carpenter of Quebec City, who openly claims himself to be a staunch Communist, will go on trial for violating the Act Representing Communist Propaganda, which is in other words, the Padlock Law.

Mr. Gordon Webber will meet interested members of Hart House in the Art Gallery between 7.30 and 9.30 p.m. tonight.

DR. SILCOX REVEALS CITY OF TOMORROW

Pointed Out the Growing Tendency of Decentralization in Modern World

CULTURE OR BUSINESS

That the city of tomorrow will be built with a cultural rather than a business motif, and that industries will be centered in small communities in the future, was the opinion expressed by Dr. Silcox, secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada, to the Victoria S.C.M. Urban Problems group at Wymilwood last night. Speaking on "The History of the Development of the Municipality", Dr. Silcox discussed the problem of the movement toward decentralization and asked the group: "Are we to control decentralization or is it to control us?"

Tracing the development of the municipality he contrasted the ancient with the modern city, reminding the group that the former was originally created as a walled-in fortification, of prime importance in case of military emergency. However, with the latter the opposite is true—in the European crisis occurred several weeks ago, he said, there was advanced in England immediately a plan to evacuate one million and a half people from London, which would inevitably be the target for enemy guns.

Speaking of the growth of urban centres in Ontario, Dr. Silcox expanded upon the statement that all modern cities are founded near reserves of water power, and become centres of transportation. Above all, he declared, the problems of the municipality centre around this movement towards decentralization which is taking place almost imperceptibly. Transportation, taxation, (Continued on page 4)

Founder of Physical Theatre Course To Describe Value of Bodily Poise

Lorna Sheard, founder of the Physical Theatre Course of the Montreal Repertory Theatre School, will address students of the university who are concerned with the theatre, in Cartwright Hall on November 1.

Mrs. Sheard's talk will be concerned with the cultivation of bodily poise as a requisite of successful acting on the stage. Her theory of "Body Sculpturing" as it is called is based on the methods of the late Constantin Stanislavsky, who said: "An actor, like an infant, must learn everything from the beginning, to look, to walk, to talk and so on. We all know how to do these things in ordinary life, but unfortunately, the vast majority of us do them badly."

The long delayed first meeting of the Spanish-Italian Club will take place tomorrow night in the Women's Union at eight o'clock. Prince Colonna, Toronto vice-consul, will address the members. The address will be followed by a social evening.

The likelihood of a rumba and tango session is expected to attract the Latin students from their Don Orville and Dantes in large numbers. All romance language students are invited.

He stressed the commendable work being carried on by students of Chinese universities and the Red Cross units composed of high school students.

This Ed Enjoys Privacy While Attending Lectures

The only student in fourth year architecture, is the enviable position held by Blake Tedman, of Toronto.

Tedman attends all his classes as the sole student present. This, he laughingly agreed, is a doubtful advantage as he can not afford to incur a professor's wrath by skipping a lecture. However, he modified this by saying that he gets full value out of all his lectures, and finds the professors very agreeable, considering they must prepare all their lectures for one student.

He takes his problems in company with fifth year, as a mutual advantage to the professors and himself. Fifth year, he claims, gives him an awful "razzing," but he bears up well under the strain.

Among the many unique positions held by Tedman is that of the entire fourth year architecture executive. He is, in addition, always first in his class, while having the poorest marks in his right.

ENGLISH STUDENT DEFENDS PREMIER

Girl Writes of Complete Confidence of Her People, in England's Premier

SUPPORT PEACE POLICY

The British people still have implicit confidence in Mr. Chamberlain and his foreign policy, according to a letter written by a second year history student in Manchester University, to a member of The Varsity staff. At the same time they resent the stand-offishness of Canada and the United States, and feel that criticism from the American continent is not justified.

Extracts from the letter written on the day the Munich agreement was made and received on Oct. 20th, are printed below:

"Thank God, things look better this week-end and I can write to you in confidence that I'll probably live to hear from you again, and not in the absolute certainty of approaching destruction for all of us here, which we had last week at this time."

"First then, let me assure you that everyone of us here has complete and absolute confidence in Mr. Chamberlain, and that we trust implicitly in his judgment and power to do the best thing for this country and for all of us."

"Oh, make no mistake about it, you people in the States and Canada, who say 'England is afraid.' She supports Chamberlain because his is a peace policy," the spirit of England is still there, and it has been apparent in these last weeks of awful tension. There is no fear in the hearts of the young lads (Continued on page 4)

Principal Wallace Inaugurates Series of S.C.M. Lectures This Afternoon

LEADING EDUCATIONALIST

Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's, who is visiting the University today, will speak in Hart House at noon in the popular S.C.M. series. He inaugurates a series of these addresses on the subject "Why the Church?" and will be followed next week by Mr. Kenneth Wilson, feature writer of the "Financial Post". Principal Wallace will discuss the question from the point of view of a University President.

Formerly President of the University of Alberta, Dr. Wallace is well known as one of Canada's leading educationalists. He is at present serving as a member of the Royal Commission on Cancer. During the past four years, Principal Wallace has been Chairman of the Student Christian Movement of Canada and hence comes as one who has a very vital concern for the religious life of the Canadian universities.

PRESENT STUDENT PLAY AT VIC S.C.M. MEETING

"Red Bread and Some Crust", an original play by George Garty, II Vic, satirizing the charges of Communism recently hurled against the Victoria College Student Christian Movement, was presented at the annual S.C.M. Open House in Victoria College last night.

One of the Russian characters in the skit "Red Bread and Some Crust", reveals the news that "Hitler is an Irishman whose real name is Richard Murphy—yes and his mother was Irish stew—but they call him Dick Tater for short."

Mr. R. G. Riddell, a member of the history department of the University and chairman of the executive committee of the S.C.M. for Canada, addressed the students on the international scope of the movement.

STARTS AT 8 O'CLOCK

Dr. R. C. Wallace, principal of Queen's University, will add his name to the long list of notable visitors, when the Hart House Debating Society holds its first meeting of the season tonight at eight o'clock. The subject, "Resolved that this House has confidence in Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy", will be discussed by C. G. Sanderson of the Medical Faculty and J. A. Steel of Trinity, opposed by P. Gorman of St. Michael's and F. N. A. Rowell of Victoria.

"Chamberlain is sincere," said Sanderson, "and is attempting to rectify the obvious mistakes which the Versailles Treaty introduced."

"The policy of the Conservative government since 1931, culminating in Chamberlain's behaviour towards Czechoslovakia," said Mr. Rowell, "has destroyed for the present, any attempt at solving international disputes by peaceful methods."

"The world situation today, presents leaders of all nations with a terrible dilemma," stated Mr. Steel, "but history will show whether or not Chamberlain made the right decision. I must say that his all-but-superhuman efforts in behalf of peace, should command the respect of all."

"The influence of Russia in the crisis just passed," said Mr. Gorman, "was probably the most vital factor in determining Britain's policy."

Professor McCurdy of U.C.'s department of Philosophy feels that the policy of Chamberlain is successful enough for the achievement of his goal, but this (Continued on page 4)

PRESS CLUB HEAR PROFESSOR BERNEY

"Proletarian Literature" was the Subject Discussed by the Speaker

Professor Berney spoke yesterday to the members of the Women's Press Club on the subject of "Proletarian Literature". Like the Oogopogo there is a great deal of talk about proletarian literature but nobody knows whether it really exists. It is usually concerned with class struggle but should not be identified with either communistic or with socialistic literature.

What is usually spoken of as proletarian literature is for the most part written by men who have never had any real experience of working-class conditions, for example, the English trial of Auden Spender and Day-Lewis who yet have a great intellectual understanding of and sympathy with the problems of the wage-worker. Members of the proletariat who have become famous as literary men are not considered as proletarian writers. In this respect, Professor Berney named D. H. Lawrence and Ezra Pound, whom he called the "most aesthetic aesthete of our generation."

The proletarian artist today, if he is a Marxist, is faced with the problem of choosing between his art and his politics. Many writers combine the two and become radical reporters, which is still a sad compromise for many who might have become great artists. The dangers of this "reportage" lie mostly in a tendency to over-emotionalism, because of its emotional rather than intellectual approach to the problem of class struggle. A radical newspaperman can present facts with a frank partiality in place of the hypocritical impartiality so often present in ordinary newspapers.

Everybody Sing

There isn't an undergraduate on the campus who doesn't know how to give the "Toronto, Toronto, Toronto Varsity" . . . with vim and vigour, at least we hope there isn't, and it is a thrilling experience to hear the old yell go up at football stadium, dance hall, or cafe table. Everybody almost, who has spent any time around the Toronto campus has a greater sentimental feeling for Varsity than would be admitted, and it seems the longer spent here, the greater becomes the love for University and all its tangible and intangible associations.

But despite the way we can proudly give our yell, the singing of the "Blue and White" song, which is one of the finest on the continent, sometimes falls a little short. When we get to the chorus we all smile, gather ourselves together and let it go, a thing which only strengthens the conviction of the listener that we do not know the verses of the song the way we should.

It should be almost part of the religion of the undergraduate to be able to do full justice to the Alma Mater, when called upon to sing our college song. Let's all take five minutes off and learn it so that we will never need to be embarrassed again, when called upon to sing it in public.

Eulogy on the Date Bureau

Four years ago an enthusiastic Varsity editor introduced a date bureau to the campus of the University of Toronto. The innovation went over with a bang (if having most of the undergraduates on the campus discussing it between lectures and over luncheons, is any indication), and The Varsity found that it had the best bunch of stories found for a long time.

The Date Bureau hit every paper in the country, and similar ideas were adopted on various campuses. For four years it continued, and different date bureau operators, all of whom were unknown on the campus (except to The Varsity staff and their friends) gave it considerable campus publicity. Each year, after the first two seasons, saw a decrease in applicants as the novelty wore off, and with the exception of the occasional mass application when half a dozen boys wanted partners for a party, it did very little business during the past year. Occasionally a letter, praising the bureau came to us, and at least one married couple over their romance to a blind date arranged by a former feature editor.

However the bureau has filled its purpose and no longer is it "hot" news for The Varsity, so this year the system has not been revived. Letters still come to the office, asking for its renewal, although the downtown papers have carried stories to the effect that it died a natural death. One chap phoned in to have a date arranged, and hoped that it would get functioning in a hurry, as he didn't have any time to waste.

Despite the fact that social life is not neglected on the campus, and the presence of many clubs where freshmen and strangers may make friends, there may be still room for a society to arrange dates. But the bureau is usually used by students who apply as a prank, and do not need any assistance in finding friends of the opposite sex. Class parties, and clubs which have an hour's dancing after a meeting fill the same need, although perhaps not in so fascinating a way.

The date bureau is therefore dead and buried, and unless student opinion is such that it warrants its revival, it will be left buried until some opportunist in the future takes it on his shoulders to organize a new one.

How Far Can Taxation Go?

Due to the increasing use of cigarettes, it is reported, cigarette smokers contribute something like $30,000,000 a year to the coffers of the federal exchequer.

It is stated that 6.8 billions of cigarettes were consumed in the fiscal year which ended March 31, which is an increase of one billion over the year previous. This tremendous expansion dates back to the Great War, the year previous to which only one billion cigarettes were consumed in Canada. By 1930 the consumption had increased to five billions annually, only to slump to 3.7 billions in 1933 when the depression was at its worst. This increase is attributed by the trade to the female sex who are smoking more than ever before and who all favour cigarettes. Moreover, the cigarette is a short, convenient smoke as compared to the pipe or cigar.

It has been asked how far taxation can go, obviously implying that the luxury tax on cigarettes is out of order. The answer is that cigarettes, being a decided luxury, might even be taxed twice as much to provide funds for the federal government, if it should be found necessary. At least this would be better than taxing further the basic necessities of life.

In order to express a more delicate or largely subconscious life, it is necessary to have control of an unusually responsive, and excellently prepared vocal and physical apparatus. That is why an actor of our type is obliged to work so much more than others, both on his inner equipment, which creates the life of the part, and also, on his outer physical apparatus, which should reproduce the results of the creative work of his emotions with precision.

—Constantin Stanislavsky.

Art, Music and Drama

Toronto Symphony

A greatly improved Toronto Symphony Orchestra gave its first concert of the season last night at Massey Hall before a capacity crowd, most of whom crawled past us after the concert started. Harold Bauer, world-famous pianist, was the guest artist, and as usual Sir Ernest MacMillan conducted.

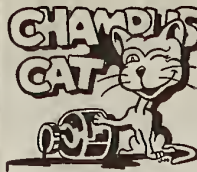

The most sensational improvement in the orchestra is in the wind section. There are two notable imports, H. Gomberg, formerly first oboe with the Washington Symphony, made his debut with the T.S.O. last night, as did Hugo Burghauer, who until recently was the first bassoon with the Vienna Philharmonic. Burghauer was the president of the Philharmonic Society before he came to this country. The orchestra badly needed strengthening in these two departments, and the improvement is terrific.

Mozart's Jupiter Symphony was played with great vitality and zip. The quieter passages were handled with considerable grace, although a very slight tendency to raggedness marred a few places. The last movement was packed with energy, but it was definitely smudgy here and there. The timpani were frequently behind the rest of the boys in this and also in the other works during the evening.

It is a pity that lack of space makes it necessary to deal hurriedly with Harold Bauer's performance of Beethoven's Emperor Concerto. It was simply magnificent. Bauer not only has the musicianship of a Toscanini, but also the technique of a Rachmaninoff. One of his greatest gifts is a rare command of volume. One moment he was playing in a limpid murmur, the next in a good, full, singing tone, and then in a gigantic roar. The way he smacks out an occasional bass octave is breath-taking. Yet he never uses dynamic effect simply for its own sake. There is always a good reason for everything he does. It was a great privilege to hear him—one which will always be remembered.

The program also included fine performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture, No. Three, and Smetana's The Bartered Bride.

'Tis better to have tried.

I tried a lightsome triolet
(The only rhyme is violet)
I tried a sonnet, epic, ode,
Produced an overwhelming load
Of most unhappy verse.

A scene in Hart House captured me
Its hushfulness enraptured me.
So inexpressible a sight
I saw, it filled me with delight,
But not with words, (Oh, curse.)

The Reading Room from one-fifteen
To two p.m. is filled, I woen,
With men whose air of "Nunc Dimittis"
Suggests that what for them most fit is Fills up a slow-drawn hearse.

Like Shakespeare's plowman all fordone
With heavy task, or foolish one Who's exchanged his midday coffee
For a Potent cup of mandragora
(The metre's getting worse.)

They lie in most unlvely heaps
And each one as he fitful sleeps
Presents a picture that should be A theme for Hogarth, or could be Described alone in Erse.

Now since I do not know the tongue
The saga must remain unsung—
If you scorn my garrulity
Please don't assert that you could be
In any way more terse.
(Not that it matters two hoots to me, but I'm just telling you.)

Man seems to be at times wholly at a loss to consistently advance his own economic interests, and on account of quite contrary circumstances. We have recent years observed that by reason of a perfectly commendable ambition to utilize available lands he has pressed his agricultural activities too far in that he has ploughed under the open prairies in the western provinces and states, and then discovered to his embarrassment that the upturned soil was being blown away, transported in great clouds to areas where it was not actually needed. Apparently it was learned when almost too late, or late enough to cause an untold amount of economic loss and inconvenience, these grass lands should have been left for grazing purposes.

On the other hand, at the opposite side of the earth, a precisely opposite state of affairs prevails, where the grazing principle has been overdone. There the grazing industry was not due to economic but to religious zeal. It is estimated that India has a cattle population of more than two hundred millions, almost one-third of the world bovine production. The cattle interests do not serve substantially the purpose of providing beef, but subserviently essentially sacred ends. In India, where the cow is unerringly an object of worship, there is the lowest average milk yield and milk consumption per capita in the world. It is said there are six head of cattle (including water buffaloes)

DENTISTRY vs. JR. MEDS

Junior Meds suffered their second straight setback on the back campus yesterday, losing to Dentistry gridgers 6-0.

A long accurate pass thrown by Joe Kulyk in the second half accounted for the Dentistry major. Parrot took the ball at the Meds' twenty yard line and raced the remaining distance for a well-earned touch. A fifty-yard run by Coleman Nelsky put the Dental squad in position for the try.

The other point scored by Dentistry came in the second quarter. The Garnet and Blue got possession on their opponents' twenty-five yard line following a bad snap on Meds' third down. An attempted placement went for a single point.

Nelsky and Parrot earned star rating for the winners, while Bill Hair and Jolly went well for Junior Meds.

SCHOOL DEFEATS UNIVERSITY COLLEGE IN SOCCER TILT

University College bowed to S.P.S. last night in a very exciting soccer game on the front campus. When the final whistle blew the score was 1-0 in favour of School.

The boys in red and white put up a fine battle and although the play was a bit one-sided it was not until the second half that the only goal of the game was scored. The winning point came off the toe of McMullen, who put in a brilliant performance for S.P.S.

Knox, in goal for U.C., also turned in a good game.

D.C.E. TRIUMPHANT AS ST. MIKE'S TIRE IN SECOND HALF

Led by White, who dented the net four times, O.C.E. beat St. Mike's in a hard fought game 9-3.

The first half, though erratic, was closely contested and ended in a 3-3 deadlock. The third stanza O.C.E. hit their stride, scoring four quick goals. The final stanza found both teams tiring rapidly, however, the greater experience of the O.C.E. team enabled them to hang in two more corners in short order. White, and Aitchison turned in stellar performances for the teachers, while Hector and Callahan starred for the Fighting Irish. Both Silvester and Glenn turned in creditable performances in the nets.

St. Mike's: Silvester, Callahan, Cassidy, Gendron, Doyle, Hector, McLean, Winnipeg, Fitzpatrick, Coates.

IMPRESSIONS OF PRAGUE GIVEN AT GERMAN CLUB

At the opening meeting of the German Club last evening Dr. R. K. Arnold of Victoria College spoke on his impressions of Prague during his student days at the university there.

The meeting was opened by the singing of German songs, among which was the famous "Schimmlerbank". At the close of the evening, refreshments were served, followed by dancing.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Sam Lipin

SOCCERITES ARE TOPS

Congratulations to the soccer team and its coach, Ted Slade. Undeclared to date and suffering only one tie game, with Buffalo State Teacher's College, a championship American outfit, soccer remains the only major intercollegiate sport in which the University of Toronto heads the group. Much of this success, is no doubt due to Coach Slade, who beside his teaching duties at a local Technical Institute, also devotes time to coaching the British Consols soccer squad, one of the most powerful and successful teams in Canada. This Saturday the Blue soccerites meet Western here and next week play against the powerful and aggressive O.A.C. aggregation at Guelph. And if the team keeps going as well as in the past, at least Toronto will have one major championship in hand.

ANOTHER CUP, IF YOU PLEASE

At present the bigger universities in Eastern Canada are engaged in various sporting activities and these activities will extend on through the winter and spring. Next year, by looking through the athletic handbook (supplied and distributed by the Athletic Directorate) anyone can see the various championships won by each university. And thereby hangs a thought. Interest in intramural athletics and championships has been considerably heightened by competition for the T. A. Reed Trophy, the trophy awarded to the faculty gaining the highest aggregate of points, the points being awarded according to teams entered, games and groups won, and championships gained. Now, Mr. Reed, we feel sure, now that it has been brought to his notice, will feel the necessity and might even himself be happy to donate a similar cup for intercollegiate competition. Of course, the system of scoring would be difficult to work out. McMaster, Western and Queen's might find it difficult to compete with the bigger centres of learning such as Varsity and McGill if a suitable plan was not evolved. Happily, however, Toronto could offer a solution to this problem in the person of Mr. McCutcheon, a genius at figures, as the now perfected intramural set-up clearly demonstrates. Mr. McCutcheon, with his wealth of experience, would, we feel sure, squeeze in some extra time, and be only too glad to work out some satisfactory scoring system.

And if Mr. Reed feels reluctant about donating another cup, perhaps some other gentleman with a philanthropic heart will donate one.

The W. Stevens Cup sounds good.

But seriously, don't you think it's a good idea?

THE REED TROPHY

Speaking of cups, it looks as though Victoria are making a terrific bid for the Reed Trophy this year. Always well up in the running the boys in the Scarlet and Gold have already tucked away a good number of titles this year and last Monday night, when the Vic lacrosse team trimmed last year's championship S.P.S. lacrosse team 6-5, well, it looks as though they are really out for blood.

While we're at it we may as well mention some of the ways in which the faculties can score points in the race for the trophy:

1. By entering a team.
2. By seeing that the team plays its games.
3. By winning their section and winning championships.
4. By having men from their respective faculties make intercollegiate teams.

Pre-Season Leaf Game To Be Played In Aid of Kiwanis Club

ARCHITECTURAL LECTURE GIVEN IN MUSEUM SERIES

One of the series of special lecture courses being given at the Museum entitled "The Modern House", commenced yesterday afternoon with an illustrated lecture on "Modernized Georgian in Canada" by Professor H. H. Madill.

"Georgian style," he said, "does not conflict with new ideas, nor has this architecture of the 18th century been relegated to that period. In simple contemporary architecture we see clearly the influence of modern design, the use of new materials and the new use of old materials."

The dominant characteristic of Georgian architecture is the general planness of the facades. The structures are arranged logically and symmetrically, the entrance being the focal point for ornamentation. The influence of Georgian simplicity today forms a contrast to existing classical styles.

The best modern architectural layout provides as many rooms as possible with sunlight. Professor Madill admitted that you cannot compete with nature, but that you can link together the

PROFESSOR THOMSON AT CLASSICAL CLUB

Talks About Ancient Civilization of the Aegean Sea

LECTURE ILLUSTRATED

In an illustrated lecture to the Trinity Classical Club, Professor Thomson of the museum staff, gave a very vivid picture of the ancient civilizations of the Aegean Sea. His emphasis on war has its modern counterpart in the extensive fortifications being undertaken by the Turkish government. How strict the supervision is shown by their providing a very vigilant military escort for a tourist party visiting the ruins of Troy.

Relations between Greece and Turkey are quite friendly, however, due chiefly to the absence of any friction between the countries over the problem of minorities. The wisdom of the somewhat callous procedure after the war, whereby the Greeks in Turkey were sent to Greece, and vice versa, is amply proven by the present friendliness. Trade between the countries is on the increase.

The Kemal Pasha's economic reforms have met with a remarkable success, considering the backward state of the country, even though the frequently-met ancient ox-carts and camel trains would indicate the contrary to the superficial western observer.

Indoor and outdoor living spaces to a great extent by the use of numerous large windows. Canadian climatic conditions, however, are not as suitable for such structures as are countries like England, Germany or Palestine.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Frances Barbour

Time marches on and brings with it one of the most popular of indoor sports—basketball. U.C. started out with their first freshe practice at the O.C.E. gym on Monday night. Although the quality was promising the quantity was somewhat lacking, much to the disappointment of Joe Rea, who is to coach first year basketball. This is Joe's first year of coaching and it is hoped that there will be enough enthusiasm shown to assure her of a successful season. How about a little spirit, freshies!

Erna Lang, who so successfully coached last year's freshies, has this year moved up with the juniors. Last year's freshies—now juniors—are fairly well intact and their possibilities again look pretty good. Last night's turn-out included Bobby MacDonald, Helen Gurney, Kay Bryans and Peggy McLaren. The next practice will be on Thursday night from eight to nine at O.C.E. gym.

The senior team has a new coach in Gladys Heintz, who was captain of last year's Queen's intercollegiate team. She is attending O.C.E. and should prove a welcome addition to the team.

This year V.C. in addition to its freshe and junior teams of last year, is also entering a senior team. Coaching duties will be assumed by Joyce Tenenbaum and Joy Brownley. If their standing of last year can be taken as any criterion their possibilities cannot be winked at.

St. Hilda's is entering two teams but will be handicapped by the loss of Joan McMaster who will be unable to play due to a heart condition. Nevertheless they look good.

St. Mike's, it is rumoured, are putting in two teams instead of their usual one, and have already had an exhibition game with St. Joseph's. Physiotherapy, Meds and Nursing School are each entering one team. Marj Moshaugh, of golf and tennis fame, will be playing for Meds and should help make her team dangerous.

From all reports, competition looks keen and the perspective looks bright!

for every ten human inhabitants. Since beef industry is expressly repugnant to Hindus this bovine situation contributes enormously to India's poverty.

Thus we find ourselves confronted with this geographical anomaly; in certain Occidental areas the cow has been displaced by the plough, and, conversely, in Oriental regions the plough has never superseded the cow; the former predicament being caused by man's misguided enterprise, the latter by his religious prejudices, and both instances reacting definitely to his economic and social disadvantage.

He pointed out that the question to keep in mind is whether the proposal to decentralize is valid or not. He suggested that a return to the land is being witnessed, as is exemplified by the movement to large estates in Bayview by those who can afford to do so.

one or more of his family. Japan has singled out the universities for their almost daily bombing raids for here, they realize, is the nucleus of China's war spirit. Although forced to migrate south and begin afresh the students carry on and have instigated a mass educational plan whereby everyone from the child to illiterate labourers are educated in the needs of their country. This is done by a division of work which includes medical attention, scientific agricultural help to the farmer and teaching in the schools.

Dr. Lathe illustrated his talk with moving pictures and slides which brought home the vivid realization of war in all the horror of mangled bodies and destruction. The amazing courage and cool-headed sanity with which the Chinese people are meeting this national crisis is truly magnificent.

goal, he believes, is not in the best interests of real democracy. "Witness," he points out, "the relegation of Czechoslovakia to the waiting room of the conference that decided her fate and the total exclusion of the vitally interested U.S.S.R."

In the opinion of Professor V. F. Coe, of the Department of Economics, who takes a stand contrary to the motion, the Chamberlain policy will only "increase the appetite of the aggressor nations and . . . reduce the power of the democratic nations." The two most undesirable aspects of this policy, according to Mr. Coe, is that Germany is thereby given a free hand in middle Europe and that the secret diplomacy involved undermines imperial prestige and relations.

That one might approve of this policy Professor E. A. Havlock of Victoria's Classics Department, concedes, but he stresses the deplorable and blind policy which preceded it and made it necessary.

property, and the disruption of the studies and sleep of the freshman just when it was important to get off to a good start. "The initiation raises a barrier between sophs and frosh, especially when one loses his temper," they said. The senselessness of the rules forcing the freshmen to use only the lower doors of the buildings and keeping their ties hanging out was deplored.

It was stated that one very good reason could be stated for the former, namely that in case of fire it would avoid a crush at any one door since the freshmen would all throng to the lower doors and leave the upper ones free for senior members. As for keeping ties out because of their resulting dislike of keeping ties out, the psychological effect of this would, well you know.

other national parks, and on to California with its Redwoods Highway, Hollywood and other points of interest. Travelling through Rocky Mountain National Park, the highest mountain of the range was seen rising to a height of 12,133 feet. Devil Tower, Wyoming, a natural skyscraper, is a national monument of 12,000 feet.

Views of Wyoming's relief of bygone years, the rodeo, were followed by glimpses of South Dakota and its buffalo reserves. Arizona's famous Grand Canyon with its constantly changing scenic effects caused by atmospheric conditions made possible interesting photography. After travelling through the Petrified Forest, the great South-west desert, the Mission Inn with its famous collection of 800 bells was reached. The palatial homes of Beverly Hills in one of which lives Charlie McCarthy were contrasted with the speaker termed "unsuccesful attempts at modern apartment architecture." California is not a place of constant sunshine. Daily fog spoils afternoon swimming.

The camera then moved to Yellowstone Park where "Old Faithful" never fails to erupt for the tourists. "This is where the rainbow ends."

In explaining the S.C.M. as an international organization, he referred to the banning of the S.C.M. in Germany by the Nazi government and to the appeal which the movement is making for the Chinese student relief fund. Concluding, he said, "I hope the world-wide opportunity which the S.C.M. presents will bring a constant stream of life into your work in this college."

A scavenger hunt which sent the students scurrying after such articles as bird feathers, blueberries and worms, ended the evening's program.

who have been hastily recalled to air force barracks and anti-aircraft units, and all the men and women of all ages who have been swarming around the A.R.P. centre, ready to do whatever they could. Father is Chief Air Raid Warden for this district, and our house has been besieged this week with volunteers ready to turn their hand to anything in which they could be of some use.

"Imagine yourself, here in the middle of all this war—imagine yourself in Mr. Chamberlain's place, responsible for the lives of 45 million people in our land. You simply could not with any Christian honesty, plunge this country into the middle of the horror and destruction of a modern war, for the sake of five million Czechs in the centre of Europe about whom we in this country know nothing.

"We feel most bitter towards America because of the attitude they have adopted towards us. If America had stepped in 2 months ago and said firmly that they would be on our side in the event of any unprovoked aggression in Europe, there would never have been this mess-up. Moreover, Roosevelt was careful to hold this trade agreement between the United Kingdom and the U.S.A. until he found how things were going in Europe and when he found they were going badly, he carefully deferred it so as not to have even any commercial obligations towards us. In short, the Americans sit back in their securit yand criticize. I'd just like to plant some of them here and see what they would have done about it. I suppose they expect us to go in and settle everybody's disputes, and shed our own blood to stop the Spaniards from squabbling and the Chinese and Japanese from scrapping."

"It seems to be the general opinion in your parts to be disgusted with Chamberlain. Well, of course, none of us like to see a democracy—such as we was—being mutilated for the sake of a totalitarian state; none of us like to see capitulation to a dictator, but from the point of view of Czechoslovakia itself, think of the alternatives. The first is that Hitler should have been allowed to annex the whole country by force—without any interference from France and Great Britain, and then there would have been an outcry against us for abandoning a fellow democracy. The other is that nothing should have been done to attempt to settle the dispute, that on Hitler's marching into Czechoslovakia, England and France should have gone to her aid, a world war would have broken out and Czechoslovakia would have been completely destroyed, since it would have been the centre of the war zone. As a student of history I must express a view which will probably shock you. It seems quite logical to me that Germany should possess the whole of central Europe. She is the great central European power just as England is the great western European power and European history shows plainly that Europe has always been ing out their own ideas on life should not be at university. When coming here they can expect a shock. The students' philosophy while open to change should have sufficient foundation to stand the questions of a few unbelievers.

Tom Dennison, also of 1 Vic, found that the professors were very careful to avoid treading on other people's toes and even went out of their way to point out that any references they made were for historical not anti-religious purposes.

The general opinions of the freshman classes of St. Michaels and St. Joseph's Colleges was that they were in a unique position here at Varsity. They expressed hearty approval of the system employed in this university, whereby they are permitted the experience of heterogeneous social contact in the university together with homogeneous training in the federated colleges. This system does away with much of the buffeting they would undergo in other universities.

Edith McGovern, 1 St. Joseph's, found what she expected, because she has always been in close association with the university, matriculating at St. Joseph's Convent. Bob Dwyer, 1 St. Mike's, said, "Contact with fellows of your own age tends to develop you. It's a question of getting along with your society or having everyone disregard you. It's good experience." Frank Golding finds that the professors at Varsity are just as anxious about getting you through exams as high school teachers were, disregarding the question of "after college—what?"

Helen McKenna, 1 St. Joe's, isn't disillusioned. She finds, however, that it is a sensible thing to match wits with professors. Jerry Anarella, 1 St. Mike's, received his training in a separate school and feels that Toronto is just a continuation of the schooling he received there, save for the broader outlook he obtains from associating with nearly eight thousand other students.

most settled when Germany has been supreme in central Europe. She is a huge warlike force all cooped up there in the middle of Europe, and is always restless and uneasy when her power there is restricted. But then comes the awful possibility of Hitler spreading his brute rule over all that area. And thus one goes round in circles!

"But anyhow, the agreement was made tonight, Chamberlain has returned in triumph to London, and we must hope for the best."

Canadian Newspaperman Sees University as Place to Study Humanity Rather Than Get Degree

By Norman J. Altstetter

"We have handed over our universities to intellectual Fascists or Fascists of the intellect," smiled Gregory Clark, one of Canada's leading newspapermen and humorists in an exclusive interview with The Varsity Tuesday. It was impossible to know whether this little man with the characteristic grey sideburns which his cartoonist-partner Jim Friese has made famous, was serious or not. Perhaps he was referring to the "intellectual Fascists" who gave him a "double first" as he laughingly calls the two years he spent in first year at University College.

"I hope that some day," said Greg Clark, "a young man will be able to go to university without taking a degree. It should be a place where a man can study humanity without having to jump hurdles or leap through circus hoops all a day."

Reminiscing on his college days this unique newspaperman who has never lost faith in human nature, recalled that

TRINITY GRID STARS WILL MEET ALUMNI

Graduates Expect to Give Undergraduate Team a Stiff Battle in This Year's Observation of Annual Fracas

This afternoon will again find the Old Boys of Trinity College vying with the present edition of the rugby team in their annual Old Boys' Game. The grads of former years expect to field a strong team and give this year's team a stern battle.

After the game a dinner will be served in Trinity House at which the Old Boys will be the guests of the undergraduates. The speakers of the evening will be The Provost, Mr. D. R. S. Owen, '36, and Mr. J. L. Stewart, '33.

Following the dinner will be the Old Boys' Athletics' Dance held in Trinity College. Dancing will begin about 9 p.m. and will continue until 2 a.m. Music will be supplied by Don Armstrong and his orchestra while refreshments will bring the evening to a conclusion.

Irked By Practical Joke Professor Sees Varsity Becoming Mad House

Stepping into his car in front of the Physics Building recently, a professor stepped on the starter and was greeted with a shrill siren which after an effective crescendo culminated in a loud explosion.

The unfortunate professor stepped from the car and lifted the bonnet to investigate. Attracted by the noise, three engineers wandered over in time to hear the prof. say, "Must be a gas leak somewhere."

The engineers pointed out a scare bomb must have been used, as the wires were visible.

To which the prof. replied, "This place grows more like an insane asylum every day."

DR. CODY ADVOCATES UNIVERSITY GRANT; MAYOR OAY CRITICAL

Provincial Cabinet in Complete Agreement with the Request of the President for 'Material Assistance'

President H. J. Cody thinks that by "way of a gesture of appreciation, and in view of the benefits accruing to the city of Toronto, through the University of Toronto, the city should give the university a 'little annual grant of, say, $100,000.'"

He estimates "very conservatively" that by virtue of the location of the university in Toronto, the city benefits annually by $4,500,000. Others have estimated that the revenue coming into Toronto through the university is something over five million dollars.

Commenting on an editorial which appeared recently in the London Free Press, Dr. Cody yesterday said it was quite correct that the city did not contribute anything toward the maintenance of the university.

Members of the provincial cabinet interviewed last night, were in wholehearted agreement with the suggestion of the president of the University of Toronto that the city of Toronto should make an annual contribution to the support of the university. Every one of the ministers who could be located expressed the belief that in view of the tremendous benefits accruing to the city through the university being located here, some sort of financial support should be accorded it. These included Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, minister of education, and Hon. H. C. Nixon, provincial secretary.

VISITORS' DAY

On Sunday next, 30th October, Hart House will be open for inspection by the general public between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. It is requested that no one enter the House after 4 p.m. This arrangement has been made by the Board of Stewards and the Committees of Hart House. Members of the various committees will be present to welcome those who wish to see the House. Once a year in October, Hart House—which is usually only open to guests introduced by members—invites the general public to visit the building.

Mr. J. L. Richardson, the University's carillon, will give a special program between 4 and 5 p.m. on the carillon in the Soldiers' Tower.

Principal of Queen's Outlines Main Responsibilities of Church in Noon Hour Address to S.C.M.

In a brief talk to members of the Student Christian Movement on the subject "Why the Church?", Principal R. C. Wallace of Queen's University yesterday outlined the three main responsibilities of the Christian Church.

"While there may be differences of opinion," said Principal Wallace, "I personally believe that the church's chief function is to deepen eternal values; to interpret them for succeeding generations in the light of present-day thought; to stimulate and direct spiritual effort."

Principal Wallace declared that he was aware of the growing tendency to ignore the church, and that many cultured people were apparently able to get along quite well without it. Speaking as a layman, however, he felt that com-

COLLEGE PARLIAMENT DISCUSSES MARRIAGE

Retiring Government will Support Education Before Marriage at Session This Afternoon

The fourth session of the U.C. Parliament will be held in the Junior Common Room at 4 p.m. today when the subject will be debated: "Resolved that marriage does not require to be taught." All members of the W.U.A., as full-fledged members of the House, are urged to attend.

The Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. Al Rose, whose government will be succeeded after this session by that of the present opposition, is basing his case on the fact that marriage is such a complicated phenomenon that it just can't be taught, whether in universities or not, in any adequate manner. "The period of adjustment may require as long as a year or more," said the Prime Minister. The Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. Sally Macdonald claimed, however, that only by proper teaching can the difficult problems of marriage be understood and that proper understanding is the only basis of happy marriage.

HART HOUSE HECKLES

Rose: The fact remains that Mr. Chamberlain's policy made it possible for the last speaker to be alive and here tonight—but was it worth it?

Tattersall: The Versailles cancer should have been cured long ago, but Mr. Chamberlain was the surgeon who began by operating on only one limb of this body.

Voice: The patient died.

Voice: How much would you give Germany?

McGillikuddy: Everything as slowly as possible.

Maynard: We are practically totally ignorant of conditions.

Voice: I like to hear you speak conservatively.

Gorman: Hitler had no more moral right to Sudetenland than he has to Chicago, which has a million Germans in its population.

Voice: That's next week.

MACMILLAN TO PLAY AT FRIDAY CONCERT

Symphony Conductor will Give Concert with Elie Spivak at Hart House

Sir Ernest MacMillan, Dean of the Faculty of Music and conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, will give a piano recital assisted by Elie Spivak, concert master of the same orchestra, tomorrow afternoon in the Music Room in Hart House.

Having made public appearances from the age of nine, Sir Ernest was awarded a fellowship in the Royal College of Organists when he was seventeen and the degree of Bachelor of Music at Oxford the next year. Following this he spent four years at the University of Toronto as a student in Modern History.

During the war Sir Ernest was interned at Ruhleben Camp in Germany. However, he made good use of his musical talents and education and much of the time was spent in the organization of musical shows, recitals and concerts. During this period he composed a choral and orchestral setting for Swinburne's "England," which won for him the degree of Doctor of Music from Oxford in 1918.

For the past twelve years he has been Principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and has conducted the Toronto Symphony Orchestra since 1931.

Tomorrow, Sir Ernest and Mr. Spivak will play two Sonatas written for violin and piano by Bach.

BRITAIN AND STATES EDUCATING BY RADIO

Dean Shelby of University of Texas Makes Study of Various Broadcast Experiments

From the Daily Texan

A study of radio education in Great Britain and the United States was made this summer by T. H. Shelby, dean of the Division of Extension of the University, under a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Dean Shelby spent three weeks visiting American institutions recognized as leaders in radio education, several days at the United States offices of Education in Washington, D.C., two weeks in the New York offices of the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, and a month in England and Scotland studying the educational program of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

He found that the University of Iowa, the University of Wisconsin, and Ohio State University are broadcasting educational programs over their own radio stations. Two types of programs are given, those for use in public schools and those intended for adult education.

In Chicago, Dean Shelby noted the use of forums in adult education broadcasts. The forums are conducted by faculty members from the three universities sponsoring the programs.

First Hart House Debate Defeats Pro-Chamberlain Motion by Vote of 69-60 Despite Wallace's Support

Dr. R. C. Wallace, principal of Queen's University, was present as Honorary Visitor last evening at the first Hart House debate of the year, when the motion, "Resolved that this House has confidence in Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy," was narrowly defeated. Sixty-nine votes were cast for the opposition, led by P. Gorman of St. Michael's, and F. N. A. Rowell of Victoria, while sixty members of the House voted for the motion, which was supported by C. G. Sanderson of Medicine and J. A. Seed of Trinity. R. G. Allen, Speaker of the House, presided.

Speaking at the end of the meeting, Dr. Wallace said, "When all things are considered, I feel that Mr. Chamberlain's policy was justified. Mr. Hitler was not likely to be bluffing as had been suggested. Few statesmen through the ages have more clearly defined their policies than did Hitler."

"If Hitler went through with his intentions, Mr. Chamberlain was faced with the greatest responsibility a statesman can have, that of committing his people to war. As Mr. Chamberlain himself said, 'It is not our business to fight any country because of its particular form of government unless that government. They either had essays due short. C. G. Sanderson in the opening speech stressed the nearness to war in which Europe found itself so recently and outlined the horrors of a conflict today, (Continued on page 4)

JOHNSTON TO DIRECT PLAY FOR VICTORIA

Three-Act Goldsmith Play Is Piece Chosen for Victoria Dramatic Society Presentation

The Victoria Dramatic Society's three-act play this year will be Oliver Goldsmith's "The Good-Natured Man". George Johnston, who did the directing of last year's "Michael and Mary", has been re-engaged for this year's production.

At the society's open meeting on October 6, Director Johnston commented upon the play to a gathering of nearly one hundred and fifty students. He considers the play, a comedy, to be on a par with Goldsmith's more widely known "She Stoops to Conquer". An indication that the play has real value is its revival this year by at least one well-known London company. Dr. Robinson was played on the fact that "The Good-Natured Man" belongs to a definite period, that of the early eighteenth century, and so will be done in costume. This will be the first time in many years that the society has presented a costume play. Director Johnston believes that a great deal of interest and value will be derived from the creation of the correct atmosphere of the period.

At the open meeting Principal Brown, and the Honorary President, Dr. Robinson, gave short addresses in which they stressed the value of dramatics to the undergraduate. President John Hilton introduced the executive, which consists of Associate President Betty Gray, Vice-President Dick Stewart, Business Manager Jim Kane, Associate Bus. Mgr. Isabel Routy, Secretary Betty Cunningham, and Treasurer Jack Sheldrick. Entertainment was provided by Leigh Ferguson and Iris Matthews, stars of last year's production, who are lost to the society this year through graduation.

Words and Actions

The vote at last night's Hart House Debate clearly demonstrates the divergence of opinion among students in regard to the Foreign Policy of the Chamberlain Government. The fact that a majority voted against the policy of appeasement will probably not cause much loss of sleep in London, but it is nevertheless significant that in student circles in Canada the policy is not endorsed.

Principal Wallace of Queen's University, the guest speaker gave what are unquestionably the most lucid and clear-cut arguments which can possibly be advanced in support of the Chamberlain policy. He pointed out that what Chamberlain had to decide was whether we should fight countries for no other reason except that we don't like their form of government, and that, in this regard, he decided that it was not worth fighting unless the other country tried to enforce that government on us. Chamberlain, therefore, adopted the only realistic policy in the world today—that of settling the issue independent of the form of government of the countries concerned. "People of countries whose type of government differs from ours, whether fascist or communist, can't be kept at arms length in international dealings," he pointed out. Therefore the wisest course was a conference that avoided a war which would not ultimately have accomplished anything for the future and would have resulted in a tremendous loss of human lives.

In regard to the charge that Hitler was bluffing, Principal Wallace showed that in the past Hitler had stuck to his policy, and that it is part of a wider policy previously outlined (presumably in Mein Kampf) to which Hitler had closely adhered to that time. Furthermore, as a dictator Hitler could not afford to back down and risk losing face. Chamberlain, therefore, had to believe that Hitler was in earnest. He had the choice, therefore, of committing his people to war over an issue which he did not believe was strong enough. Furthermore, it is believed that the strength of the British and French forces was not as great as they would want it to be in case of a general conflict, especially in regard to aerial warfare.

In regard to Russia, Principal Wallace stated that since she was as directly concerned as Britain or France, if not more so, as the German drive is supposedly towards the Ukraine, she should have sat in on the conference in her own right. The fact that she didn't, seems to indicate that she wasn't prepared to back her demands by force. The speaker concluded that the common people of all the countries concerned thanked God that war was averted.

In regard to the future, however, Principal Wallace admitted that the power of Germany was strengthened by the Munich Conference, and that of Britain and France weakened. His other arguments, also, despite their sincerity, present the very loopholes which have subjected the Chamberlain policy to criticism and which resulted in its being voted down at last night's debate.

The reference to the fact that Hitler was not bluffing but was following the policy outlined in "Mein Kampf" is, if carried to its logical conclusion, an argument against Chamberlain. In that book

Hitler outlines as one of his aims the humbling of the British Empire, and any action by a British Prime Minister which enables him to grow stronger and thus be able to achieve this aim is hardly to be commended.

The argument that we should confer with people no matter what their form of government is certainly a valid one. But the Chamberlain policy is to confer with the Fascist powers and to freeze out Russia. The avowed purpose of the four-power pact is to eliminate Russia from European affairs. Viewed in this light the argument is a wasted one.

The reason for Principal Wallace's contention that Russia could have sat in on the conference had she wanted to, must be laid to the door of his idealism. Certainly practical observers, whether their views are rightist or leftist will agree that there was small chance of Russia being admitted to the Munich gathering.

The condemnation of the Chamberlain policy is not a condemnation of the British people nor a sign of the growth of anti-British feeling in Canada. It is, however, completely and wholeheartedly a condemnation of a group in Britain who have placed what they supposed were their own interests, before the interests of the British nation.

Petty Grievances

(Submitted)

In the face of international crises the humble problems of student life seem trifling in extreme. But minor difficulties have a way of persisting: such is the case of twelve o'clock starvation. This condition, being physical, might well be dismissed in an institution of higher learning with the comment, "man does not live by bread alone." But the fact remains that all save the supermen suffer from pangs of hunger between twelve and one o'clock.

For generations men have been accustomed to a hearty repast at noon. Four or more hours have usually elapsed since any food has been consumed. Gastronomic contractions take place which are definitely detrimental to sustained mental effort. What appreciation of literature can be evinced, what mathematical problem can be solved, what intricate dissection can be accomplished, when complete concentration is impeded by this minor physical disturbance?

With no desire to dynamite that structure which represents the established order of things we would like to suggest that the official lunch hour be changed from one o'clock to twelve. Most students have only one or two lectures in the afternoon, and the division of working hours seems unbalanced when this is contrasted with the four lectures in the morning. If the problem of twelve starvation could be thus disposed of, mid-day lectures would assume a more pleasant aspect for both professor and student.

Organ Recitals

A series of six Tuesday afternoon organ recitals is to be given in Convocation Hall by Professor Healey Willan, organist for the University. There will be three before Christmas and three after, at two-week intervals.

The first recital on November 1 will be devoted to works of the English school; the second and fifth will feature the great organ works of Bach. Details of the opening recital will be announced later this week. Professor Willan has been asked to repeat the program of a concert he gave here three years ago, consisting of works based on the Tonus Perigunus, a chant supposed to have been sung by the Israelites as they crossed the Red Sea in their exodus from Egypt. In this concert, which will be given after Christmas, Professor Willan will be assisted by George Lambert, baritone, and the choir of the Church of St. Mary Magdalen.

U.C. Players' Guild

With a performance of Chekov's "The Helpless Woman", at the Women's Union yesterday, the U.C. Players' Guild, yielding to the inevitable, reverted to comedy, and succeeded in being amusing.

The play as a whole rather lacked the verve that such comedy demands—but this fault was due mainly to the relative inexperience of several of the cast. Not being completely at ease on the stage, they tended to underplay rather than overplay their parts, which was unfortunate, as Chekov's strong point in comedy is high preposterousness. Such magnificent opportunities to let yourself go should not be missed—on the stage at least.

ANACONDA STILL STEADY

London: Sleepy and nervous attaches yesterday waited patiently for the results of the Hart House Debate. When they came early this morning, the rumour spread that Hart House disapproval means nothing less than an early election. After the results had been announced over the wireless the Canadian High Commissioner was stoned by a man named Otto Spitzbube. Rumours are rife that the Prime Minister intends chartering a plane and flying the Atlantic to have a conference with the debates committee.

Moscow: On receiving the news, the Kremlin sent felicitation to the Victoria College Communists.

Berlin: Hitler received the news and called an emergency meeting of the Rotary Club. Agents in Sarla have been warned to keep a sharp lookout.

Rome: Mussolini paid no attention to the news and continued writing his editorial against Margaret Sanger. . . . wiregarters . . .

RADIO EDUCATION
PICKS UP ABROAD

In Cleveland, Ohio, he studied the experimental work done by the public schools of the city in radio education. For five years the Cleveland schools have used broadcast programs in the elementary grades for such subjects as spelling, music, history, geography, and nature study. Local commercial stations have been used for the broadcasts; but, beginning this fall, the public school system will operate its own short wave station to send programs to city schools.

In comparing radio education in Great Britain and the United States, Dean Shelby considered the differences in operation of the two broadcasting systems. Whereas in the United States radio is supported by advertising, no advertising is allowed in Great Britain. The radio in England, he found, is under the control of the British Broadcasting Corporation, which is a non-profit, government monopoly. Stations are owned and controlled by the corporation.

Joan Lailey carried the main part well, if a little too helplessly at times. Perhaps more direction would have given her performance more strength. The two directors of the play, Frank Wynne and Bud Mine, themselves seasoned comedians, managed to provide the best characterizations—to the detriment, doubtless, of the other members of the cast. It's a difficult business, directing a play and acting in it at the same time—although Orson Welles does it quite successfully, I'm told.

The moral of the play being that the Guild should stick to comedy for afternoon performances. They do it better, and if the audience prefers it. Besides, it's less strenuous. John Terrace.

TORONTONENSIS REPRESENTATIVES

There will be a meeting of the Torontonensis representatives on Thursday, October 27, at 5 p.m. at the University College Women's Union. Tea will be served at 4.30 p.m. Representatives are expected to bring information as to the number of students in their graduating class; and also be prepared to sign "space contracts" for space in Parts II and III of Torontonensis (re. club and year executives, and athletic teams).

PHARMACY DEFEATED BY SCHOOL STICKMEN

The S.P.S. III lacrosse team continued along the road to success by outscoring a stubborn Pharmacy team 11-9 yesterday in the new gym in Hart House.

The game was wide open and close all the way. S.P.S. pulled out in front in the first quarter by netting three goals to the druggists' one. Pharmacy opened wide in the second session, and before the engineers realized anything, were leading 4-3. From there on S.P.S. tore in on the druggists' goal time and again and dented the net eight times to Pharmacy's five.

Bags of S.P.S. was the best man on the floor, scoring four times, while his sidekick, Wheaton, bulged the net three. Jones of Pharmacy played well, getting three tallies.

S.P.S. III: Magor, Starr, Smith, Wheaton, Robinson, McGrath, Cornish, Beggs, Jones.

Pharmacy: Seager, Forsyth, Snodgrass, Jones, Baggis, Merritt, Dustin, Frey, Harding, Hogan.

OVER THE NET

SR. S.P.S. vs. SR. VIC

SR. S.P.S. volleyball sextet sent a trying crowd of Scarlet and Gold spikers to defeat yesterday in the upper gym of Hart House by the scores of 15-12, 15-8.

As the score would indicate, the first game was close with Sr. Vic putting up a great tussle, although they played with one man short.

In the second game the blue and gold pulled away from the very start and coasted home with a win.

Sr. S.P.S.: Miller, Philpott, Near, Lauri, Krave, Perry, Haffey, Allen.

Sr. Vic: Jones, Macdonald, Frechette, Eagle, Sheldrick.

LAST CHANCE

Action on the intercollegiate rugby fronts this week-end will be provided by Varsity and Western at the Bloor Bowl, while McGill and Queen's mix it at Kingston. Thus the same teams as last week are paired for battle, with a change of milieu to lend variety.

In past years Varsity and Queen's have dominated the Intercollegiate Union. This season, however, as the teams hit the half-way mark for the three-game stretch battle a couple of longshots are doing all the front-running, while Stevens and Reeve are sharing a fate worse than death down at the bottom of the heap. Thus the Blues and the Tricolour are again coupled in the betting—but this time for the show spot.

The Beavers still have a chance to put themselves up by the bootstraps and challenge the Mustangs' right to the second hole. With the advantage of a home crowd in their favour this coming Saturday the Blues may be able to overcome the one-point margin which separated the two teams last week. Only a disposition to gamble for five points in the pinches cost the locals a victory chance in that tilt.

Warren Stevens has been whipping his charges through their paces with much snap and fire this week. Notoriously a poor practice team, the Blues have responded nobly. Charley Prince has been the white-haired boy in practices so far this week. Always gifted with the ability to fire a perfect pass and hoist a better than average pigskin, "Bonnie Prince Charlie" may get a chance in these departments against the Purples two days hence.

Speedball Somers is another lad who has been going well in preparation for the Western game. Lou continued his good work against the Mustangs, despite the combination of Thompson's sky-scraping punts and an iron-clad down-field tackling system, which effectively hacked the Blue ball-carriers and prevented them taking many liberties in the open-field. Ken McQuarrie is ready to go despite rumours of injuries. The stocky backfielder is about due to shake off the attack of fumbles which has marred his play in recent games.

But the fellow who really hit his stride in the Western game was the chunky blonde from Kingston, Bee Rowland. The Bee was reeling off upwards of ten yards on every plunge in Saturday's matinee. The line came out of the London engagement in fine shape and is set to take on Willis, McLachlin, Benson, Oligant and Co. Outside wing Ted Jarvis played Saturday with his injured mitt in a cast, and will certainly see action against the men of Storen. It should be a fair tussle.

ALONG FACULTY FRONTS

Interest in the interfaculty rugby loop this year seems to be stronger than ever, despite the fact that weather conditions have been generally unfavourable. The presence of "big name" coaches, such as Frank and Annis Stukus and Earl Selkirk of Argos, along with Charlie Box of Balmy Beach, has been largely responsible for the upturn.

Tightening up of competition all along the line has been another factor. Last fall Victoria and St. Michael's outclassed the other teams in the league, with the result that other colleges lost interest early in the schedule. This year the "weak districts" have added new strength to pull up on a class level with Victoria and St. Mike's, who are proportionately weaker this year through loss of star players. Results from the three subdivisions to date bear out this fact, the only lopsided score of the current season occurring when Senior Meds wallowed Senior S.P.S. 20-0.

AROUND THE CIRCUIT

Focus of interest this Saturday at the Varsity-Western game will be a young lady by the name of Elizabeth Forbes, Western's drum-major. . . don't miss the train, Beth! . . . Well remember burly Lou Ruschkin, captain of the McGill team, who questioned almost every official ruling during the Varsity-McGill game here. . . The other day Lou was presented with a husky son, which will probably make him more capacious than ever. . . Jim McDonald has cast off his bandages and is hoping to get back in the game in two weeks' time.

MEDICAL SOCCERITES DOWN PILL ROLLERS

Interfaculty soccer was at its best yesterday when the well-trained Meds eleven eked out a 2-0 win over Pharmacy on the front campus.

Although the Medics outplayed their rivals almost all through the game, Pharmacy put up a stout defence to keep the score from mounting. Scoring opened after about twenty minutes of play, in the first half, when Boyd of the doctors told his way through a barrage of drug store boys to net one. From here on play reigned in Pharmacy territory without a score until Boyd scored his second goal for Meds on a pass from Kline.

Boyd undoubtedly displayed a fine dash of soccer with Kline also showing up well for the doctors. For Pharmacy Ryan and Gibbons turned in good performances.

Pharmacy: Wickett, Sutherland, Pitcher, Ryan, Gibbons, Cornell, Toy, McVey, Livingston, Woods, Lees.
Meds: Routley, Townsend, Kline, Rogers, Lore, Murray, Green, Hendey, Seymour, Cooper, Boyd, Holmes, Jones.

THE SPORTSWOMAN

By Marg. Conlin

This can't happen here. At the University of Texas, the co-eds were made to feel pretty important lately. (As if they weren't anyway.) It all started with a ruling that the men could not use the new interfaculty tennis courts unless accompanied by a co-ed partner. Since the courts are a feature attraction at this time of year the rush is on.

University of Oklahoma co-eds are all a-dither this week over the finals in the horseshoe tournament. Several hundred girls, representing sororities and independent districts, entered the competition, and we hear that the finalists would put Uncle Zeke to shame.

Varsity co-eds who have not yet taken advantage of their athletic card which gives them a reduced riding rate at Glen Muir, have missed some of the best riding weather we are likely to have. Remember when spring rolls around again you may have other things to keep you busy, so now is the logical time.

Some of the lucky few who were abroad this summer developed an interest in deck tennis and are looking for competition around the campus. There must be lots of girls who enjoy this game without ever having set foot on an ocean liner. It is fun and a badminton net would serve the purpose. Providing that there is sufficient interest shown, arrangements might be made to include this sport in the program at the L.M.

SADIE HAWKINS' DAY

Deep in the dimness of the S.P.S. boiler-room, a plot is being hatched by engineers which threatens to upset the whole equilibrium of campus social life.

Briefly, the Sadie Hawkins Society is at work.

It plans, in fact, it threatens, a Sadie Hawkins week, in which the positions of ed and co-ed are to be reversed. The girls, it declares, will have to date the boys up. Moreover, it adds, they'll have to foot the bills.

Apparently the whole thing originated with Sadie Hawkins of the come strips, and the idea's caught on. The legend goes, in the L'il Abner strip, that the inimitable Sadie, graced with a face like the back end of a lorry alter a smash-up, couldn't persuade any male, however low, to marry her. So her father, Hawkins, Sr., lined up all the unmarried lads of the village, gave them a 20-yard start, and sent Sadie in hot pursuit. First man she caught had to marry her. Pretty soon in the village there wasn't any more marriage problem.

Now the Sadie Hawkins Society is not planning anything quite so drastic as that on the campus. A girl has yet to be seen on this campus who has a face like the back end of a lorry after a smash-up. At least not a real bad smash-up. And anyway it is not the women who are planning it. It is the men.

In that womanless country of the Schoolmen it is thought that a week should be set aside when the gals do all the asking, all the entertaining and all the paying. It corresponds to the Sadie Hawkins day in that the gal is chasing the boy, but it differs in that it is sponsored by the boys here and in that the Week casts no reflections on the pulchritude of either sex.

Said one second year student in University College, who preferred to remain anonymous, "WOW".

Said a third year student in Victoria, "WOW".

Said a third year student in Mechanical Engineering, "WOW".

The week devoted to the boy-chase-girl enterprise begins this coming Monday with many prayers by engineering students mourning the death of the Date Bureau.

he had written a column in The Varsity in 1910 and 1911 called The Onlooker which dealt with the commonplaces of life even as the stories he writes to-day. "I remember," he said, "how we used to sit in front of the fireplace in the old Union—the bums and the pool players each feeling a bit tainted by the others' presence. But I consider those two years at Varsity, amid the beautiful surroundings and with the best books at my disposal of prime importance to my life. Since the first Clarke chased a sheep up a Scottish hillside I was the only one to make an attempt at any intellectual attainments. However, my father was relieved when I was kicked out of school, for he was afraid I was becoming a pedant."

After this short-lived name career young Greg Clark, whose name is now a byword in every village and hamlet in Ontario, went to work as a cub reporter on the Star of which his father was chief editorial writer. It was at this phase in his life that he met Jimmy Frise, whose friendship he still prizes. There followed three years of newspaper work, covering the waterfront, the morgue and doing general assignments. The war came and along with the rest of his generation went the twenty-three year old newspaperman.

"On my return I was a hardened, mature man not knowing exactly what to do about the career I had followed before the war. However, I finally got back into the newspaper game, for it is a game, and started in as the Star Weekly's first salaried staff writer. In writing the stories I tried one partner after another among whom were Charles Vining, Merle Dennison and Frederick Griffin. During this time I had known Jimmy Frise intimately, but we had never thought of working together.

FORESTERS DEPART COMMITTEES TO COPE TO STUDY NORTHLAND WITH GATE CRASHERS

Today at four o'clock fifteen foresters, representatives of the third and fourth years of the Faculty of Forestry, will leave the city, bound for the north-country.

The occasion for this extra-curricular trip is an opportunity for the woodsmen to observe the "operations" at several logging camps during the fall season.

The general locality of the camps is on the Haliburton lakes and the foresters will make Sherwood Forest Camp, the spring camp site, their headquarters over the three-day educational tour.

Arrangements for the week-end have been completed satisfactorily by Professor Cotens of the Faculty of Forestry, who is conducting it in conjunction with his forest utilization lectures at the university.

WALLACE SAYS WORSHIP AIDS CHRISTIAN FAITH

moral worship was a valuable aid to faith.

The Principal maintained that the church holds an important place in the minds of those not connected with it, and referred to his experience with church work in the west, where he was surprised to find that a number of people who never attended church considered it indispensable to the community and were anxious to support it financially.

He admitted that he could not subscribe intellectually to all the outward forms and phraseology in use among the churches, but considered the harmony and beauty of many of their services an aid to the mood of worship.

reins of Europe; has created a policy of expansion spreading into other European countries, and colonial aggression into the imperialist sphere." He said that the only deterrent to German expansion was the threat of a great pact, and Chamberlain failed to use his strength in this way.

After the disastrous incidents that occurred during the course of this year's U.C. Freshman Dance the question of "Crasher Control" is a popular one. The loss of the doorbell from the Women's Union and other damages suffered were beyond the control of the executive in charge, claimed Jane Patterson, Social Director of the W.U.A.

"At such year dances," said Miss Patterson, "the men's and women's executives co-operate and the men are stationed at the door to receive tickets, since they are supposedly the more formidable. One of the campus policemen is hired for the evening and this combination of forces is deemed sufficient." The ever-increasing number of men who wish to enter these dances by other means than paid admission is not viewed with alarm by Miss Patterson, who considers the existing organization of gate protectors can cope with any future agitation.

"They would be 'hooked out' by the general crowd," was the terse comment of G. H. K. Strathy, Trinity, when questioned about the crasher situation at his college. "Trinity," he said, "is so small that any outsider would be quickly spotted and removed if ever unfortunate enough to get past the door."

According to J. M. Garret, Faculty of Dentistry social organizer, the Dentistry dances are typically college affairs. An imposing array of class representatives is stationed at the gate and each is armed with his class list. "At these dances," said Mr. Garret, "it is practically impossible for aliens to get past the door, let alone actually attend the dance."

At most of the larger functions it is the custom to exercise control chiefly through the careful distribution of tickets beforehand but this alone is generally insufficient and with the height of the season approaching, many heads are puzzling over the slippery problem of "crasher control".

Now IS THE TIME to form your Banking Connection . . .

When you take your place in business or professional life, one of the most important contacts you will have will be with your banker.

Now, while you are still at college, this connection can be formed to advantage, for a savings account would serve you as a depository for your money for college expenses and as a means of building up a "success" fund. The Bank will welcome you as a customer now, and—with its long experience, great resources and nation-wide organization—it is in a position to be of helpful service to you wherever you live in later years.

Don't wait till college days are over . . . call on the manager of one of our branches mentioned below and form your banking connection now.

Blues Will Give All To Turn Western Threat

By Ed Goodman

Perched on the abyss of smashed titular hopes, in such a position that a defeat tomorrow means discardment, University of Toronto's senior football squad play hosts to the Western Mustangs at Varsity Stadium. Their speedy guests also need the victory to retain undisputed possession of second place. And in the back of their minds, is the crushing defeat received here last year in the semi-finals and ... revenge.

But the Mustangs will need more than a desire for victory tomorrow. For when the opening whistle blows and the game starts, they will be facing a team that is quietly but desperately determined to redeem themselves in the eyes of their students, who still loyally regard their team as the team to win this year's title.

Varsity has on several occasions shown the form that made them pre-season favourites, but they have lacked consistency, which added to injuries has caused them to lose to McGill and Western. But this is a new half of the schedule and there will be a change if determination and coaching have anything to do about it.

The same team that played last week are all intact for tomorrow's struggle. But neither Macdonald, Mumford nor Turner will be on hand. Ken McQuarrie's knee, injured last week, has responded well to treatment and Ted Jarvis will play again with a cast.

Varsity has an undisputed superiority along the wingline. They proved that last week, and the week before. It is up to the halves to hold their own and to add the necessary scoring punch. It is no easy job to match Faust, Thompson, Hilton and Kennedy, but the Blue half line have the speed in McQuarrie, Somers, Gray and Scott. The power in Rowland, Gray and Owen, the passing attack in Prince and Gray, and they should win handsily.

Western has not defeated Varsity in Toronto since 1931 when they captured the title. Varsity has not been out of the playoffs since their inauguration. Tomorrow afternoon both traditional facts hang in the balance.

"Chances Good" says Stevens Blues Show Top Condition

By Sid Roebuck

Saturday afternoon the Varsity big blue team plays host to Western's mighty Mustangs who in their last tussle were successful in knocking off the Toronto twelve. Your reporter spent yesterday afternoon running about the 'big bowl' in an effort to get some of the high mogguls opinions of Varsity's chances for Saturday and apparently everything seems on the bright side.

Warren Stevens, coach of the blue team, was the first of the mogguls to be interviewed, and was certainly gracious in giving us a few helpful tips.

When yours truly asked him how the team stacked up for Saturday's game, he replied, "The boys are all ready for a good tough game and certainly are in top condition." "Will Doug Turner or Ted Jarvis be in this Saturday?" I asked. "Well," he said, "Ted will be in there, but Turner is out for the season." "As far as substitutes are concerned, none will be taken from the intermediate team." We went off onto another subject and I inquired whether Charlie Prince will do any kicking this week. "Yes, Charlie will share the kicking with Rowland and Gray," Warren Stevens replied. The next question touched the modest spot of Steve's character. "Who do you think will win, Steve?" Mr. Stevens chuckled and appeared somewhat embarrassed, but finally: "Well, I'm not a prophet and so I can't say, but I do hope we win and our chances are good." But he did say that McGill would beat Queen's.

Wes Cutler, line coach for the Varsity team, said the line was very strong and smiled when Bucko Macdonald, who was standing beside us "gripping two crutches", remarked that the Big Blue line was the finest in intercollegiate rugby.

Captain Cam Gray was not available for an interview, but there is no doubt that Cam is more than hopeful of a Varsity win. Mr. Gray looked great in the practice and it would be well to keep an eye on him in Saturday's game.

Yea Varsity!

Team At Full Strength Western Anticipate Win

by Mord Smith

Greatly encouraged by their win over the Toronto Varsity Blues, the University of Western Ontario Mustangs are by no means suffering from over-confidence as they drill for the big tilt this Saturday. The lads are expecting a tough battle, and judging by the last game, they're going to get it. That game must have been a hard one to lose.

The Mustangs obtained a victory from the Tricolours of Queen's. But they paid for it. Most of the injuries have been repaired by now, however, and the team will likely be at full strength again. Lyn Thompson, our great booter, was somewhat banged up in a tackle last Saturday but will be able to take his place in the line-up. His partner, Jack Kennedy, last year's all-star flying wing, will likely be back in harness again. He was hurt in the first part of the season.

Claud Moore, who has been released from the hospital where he was treated for an injured right foot, will likely start at end. The other end is Roy Kent. Kent turned in a fine performance last week. At middle there is George Oliphant, a Toronto boy, and Foster Stark, both hardened veterans. Benny Benson and Jack McLachlin hold down the inside berths. Benson, especially, is one of the best in the game. At snap of course, is the old reliable powerhouse himself—George Willis. George has been playing the best game of his career and is eager for the big week-end at Toronto.

Al Hurley will likely start at quarter, assisted by Stu Carver. Al is a clever general and lightning on his feet. Carver is one of the old Blue Devils and is as eager for the big game as ever. Jimmy Farmer, the big half, is himself again and all set to go. You know our newest sensation, Clem Faust, by now and he's looking forward to this game with a bit of a gleam in his eye. Wally Hilton, who came in so handy when there was some plunging to be done, has recovered from a slight injury and is eager to excel himself again. It was thought for awhile that our Fighting Irishman, Brian Casey, had received a dislocated shoulder and would be out for the rest of the season. But this report was somewhat exaggerated. The powerful little half is as fit as ever.

All in all the horizon looks clear. The team is in fine spirits and prepared to give everything it's got to get another win. But nobody knows better than they do that they'll have to fight for it.

Varsity Co-eds Scorned By Impervious Footballers

Varsity co-eds can go right on agitating for cheer-leading privileges. But as far as the football team is concerned, the whole controversy leaves them cold. It's all because the players claim they are unaware of what is going on in the grandstands at those Saturday classics wherein they are the featured players.

No, the U. of T. football heroes are not "girl-crazy". On the campus they are never bothered by feminine adulation—or do they want it. They think "upswipe" hair is "nice at a distance" but evade close-ups. If a girl wants to lead the band she should jump down from the bleachers and go to town, say they. Even though co-eds don't understand football, it makes a good excuse for a week-end and who are they to kick?

Varsity co-eds can go right on agitating for cheer-leading privileges. But as far as the football team is concerned, the whole controversy leaves them cold.

Girls are all right in their place, if it isn't in the affections of a football player, is the opinion of the team's solicited manager, who would like to screen his charges from the public eye while they are dining. His worst fear is that the players lose their appetites if they ever get love sick. This hasn't happened yet to anyone except one of the linemen who has cut down to 5 scoops of mashed potatoes since he was bitten by the love bug.

The "perfect gentlemen" of the team are Bill Schweiger, Al Isbister and Ted Jarvis, in the opinion of the fair Rosina at Diana's. Bill Rogin will be away from the noon table for a few days while teaching in North Toronto, so the local chefs are concentrating on producing some "good meals" for Doug Turner, who is the team connoisseur.

T. A. REED

... "Dean of U. of T. sport", who has seen many great athletes of the past come and go. This issue is dedicated in his honour.

The Football Issue

Again The Varsity presents its annual football issue, and it was the wish of the sports staff, into whose charge the blue paper has been given, to dedicate it on this particular occasion to T. A. Reed. In honouring U. of T.'s "Dean of Sport", we pay a tribute to the Athletic Association and the place held by sporting activities on the University of Toronto campus.

There are several important unifying factors in this University, among which athletics play an important role. Besides the benefits gained by the participants themselves, there is that intangible thing called college spirit, which comes to the fore when undergraduates get together in a student section to cheer their team on to victory.

College spirit may be defined as the desire to co-operate for the good of the college. A campus as large, and with as many different groups as ours, is bound to have many disintegrating elements, but one of the great integrating forces is without a doubt the Senior Intercollegiate Rugby Team. This year's Blue team at the present time is not in the position in which her fans would like to see her. Tomorrow's game is one of the most crucial of the season, and it is a crucial game for Western too, who have right now greater championship hopes than they have felt free to hold for some time.

The team which represents Varsity tomorrow is composed of good athletes; it is well-coached and well-managed, and it should win. The crowd of students out in the stands to cheer those boys on, consists of good sportsmen, who recognize good plays on either side, and who are willing to cheer for friend or foe. And above all they recognize that for a lot of exhilarating exciting Saturday afternoon fun, there is nothing to be compared to a football match between the teams of two friendly universities.

Here is the team:

CAM GRAY—The driving force of the backfield the past four years. Kicks, runs and passes, with placements a specialty. The blond star, in his last year here, won the Johnny Copp Memorial Trophy last year and led the league in points scored. Has yet to hit his true stride this season.

KEN McQUARRIE—Came to Toronto by way of McGill. Another half, McQuarrie excels in running back kicks, usually paired with Jim McDonald. McQuarrie played a standout game last season and is expected to return to last year's form in Saturday's game.

JIM McDONALD—The Hard Luck Guy of the backfield. Jim hails from Moose Jaw and was starred on the half-line last season. In the last game of the season McDonald sprained his ankle after turning in a star effort in the first quarter. Again in Varsity's grid debut this season Cowboy broke his ankle. He hopes to be back in the game in two weeks.

LOU SOMERS—Rose to prominence this season in the second game against McGill. Speed is his penchant. Small and shifty, Lou starred with Harbord Collegiate teams before coming to Varsity. Earned a place with the team last year but saw very little action. A popular player.

CHARLIE PRINCE—Vaughan Road star who gravitated to University of Toronto last year. An accurate passer and a better than average kicker. Starred in interfaculty ranks with Victoria last year and made the jump to the big time this year. May get his big chance against Western this week.

BEE ROWLAND—A scholarship sent this former R.M.C. star to Toronto, thereby causing Teddy Reeve a large headache. Rowland is another triple threat man, and has been used mainly in the role of punter in this his first year with the Blues.

MURRAY SCOTT—Starred with Humber side in his high school days. Understudied Barry Gray at quarter last year and took over the position this fall. A shifty runner and a clever field general.

TED JARVIS—Outside wing, has starred for Varsity the past few years. Ted injured his hand two weeks ago but played against Western with hand in cast. A sure receiver for forward passes.

BEN SHUKEN—They call him "pay-off" this year. Ben, another veteran, has accounted for two touchdowns this season and ranks second in points scored to Herbie Westman. Shuken plays end.

NORM BEATTIE—Still another veteran. Norm is a deadly ankle-clutcher and a grand opportunist at recovering fumbles. Usually paired with Jack Holden.

JACK HOLDEN—Also has had several years' experience at the outside wing berth. Holden is another sure-fire receiver and many rate him the pick of the down-field tackling brigade.

FRANK SIRDEVAN—Frankie is one of the fightin'est players in league. He is a hard tackling middle who really makes holes for his backfield players. There are few linemen on any team of his calibre.

CAM MacLACHLAN—This is Cam's first year in senior company. He is now a middle, formerly a backfield man. Cam rated as the most improved man on the club. His lone tackling is a treat to watch.

GEORGE MEEN—Former North Toronto C.I. inside, George rates as one of the most conscientious players on the team. This is his first year, but he is holding up the centre of the line.

AL ISBISTER—This is Al's last year of helping the Varsity wingline at either inside or middle. Formerly a half, Al is the fastest man on the line.

BILL ROGIN—A grad of Assumption College, Bill is the tallest man on the squad and a hard man to take out on the line. He manages to get down the field awfully fast on kicks, as Western will see tomorrow.

BILL BEATTY—Bill is the inside with the mighty shoulders. And he uses them to great advantage for his bruising tackling and line blocking. Bill was with last year's intermediates.

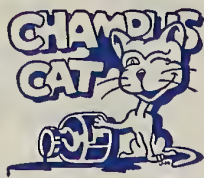

DOUG TURNER—Following a line of great maps such as Williams, Hees, Galloway, Doug is a great open field and secondary defence tackler with amazing speed. He is out for rest of season with a wrenched knee.

BEEFY McMILLAN—The youngest player in senior football, Beefy has done a great job of filling injured Doug Turner's boots. When he hits an opposing player you can hear it in the stands.

coherent. Miss Sayao is to be commended for including only two operatic arias on the program, neither of them familiar, although one from Massenet's Manon was done as an encore. Technically a soprano, this singer appears to be most at ease in the contralto register; on higher notes her best tone is obtained only in combination with volume. Milne Charney at the piano provided impeccable, if not very imaginative accompaniments, but during most of the program he gave the impression of being slightly apprehensive about something.

Herbert Cowan

The Sportsman

By W'n Flanagan

From out Glen Mawr way comes a bit of cheering news. The riding master out there says that the co-eds, especially, have improved 100 per cent. in their riding. The girls are keen enthusiasts, he finds, which is half the problem of mastering a horse. There have been no serious accidents and what's more the girls go for frisky horses in a big way, disdaining the more timid ones which the grooms trot out for them. If this (and the weather) keeps up who knows but the University might sponsor a rodeo!

We are sorry to say that the bowling does not begin until after Christmas. There have been many inquiries about this sport and considering its great popularity last year, you had better make it a "must" on your post-Christmas activities.

The first casualty of the basketball season occurred last Monday, when Jean Grant, star performer for St. Mike's, sustained a torn ligament in her ankle, while playing in a game against St. Joseph's Convent. Jean will be out for a week at least, and her services sorely missed.

The outlook is not very bright for co-eds with shooting ambitions. There has never been any suggestion for a rifle range offered at the university before and it is generally agreed that, while it is a good thing in itself, it is better and fairer to confine sports to those that are in most demand and consequently what the majority of the students want. At American colleges shooting is very popular and telegraphic shooting tournaments, as in archery, are numerous. Several colleges in Canada have tried out this method and found it highly successful, but it is yet to be put into practice here at the university. Unfortunately, shooting equipment is rather expensive and there would always be the problem of transportation to a suitable range. So, if you must shoot, you will have to do it at your own expense—and risk.

VARSITY JUNIORS FAVoured TO WIN FINAL ENCOUNTER

Passing Attack to Feature Playing Style of Team

SENIOR TALENT

Fresh from an impressive win over Western III's last Saturday, Varsity juniors have been working out with the intermediates and seniors in preparation for their return engagement this Saturday. Because of the weather conditions, Varsity played last week without tossing a single pass, their most dangerous offensive weapon, but in the next game the team expects to open up and are favoured to win by a decisive margin.

Without entering the team in a league this year Coach Graham has been concentrating on getting prospects for next year's seniors. Almost all the players now on the senior team, including Can Gray, Lou Somers, Murray Scott, Doug Turner and Charlie Prince, first played for Varsity juniors and learned the fundamentals of the game under the able guidance of Don Graham. This year the juniors have a few boys who should go far in senior rugby. In Jack Plaxton, whom all the downtown papers were raving about last week, Varsity has one of the best natural-born passers in the game. Don Isbister, who played with Trinity last year, is fast rounding into a fine backfield star, and Don Grosswirth is also a great prospect.

After Saturday's game the best of the juniors will be moved up with the intermediates, to complete the latter's schedule, and the two squads will be merged in the practices.

HARRIER RUNNERS COMPETE TOMORROW

The U. of T. residence men who have been getting up early every morning since school started to train for their initiation in the form of competition in the interfaculty harrier meet, will be delighted to know that the race comes off this Saturday morning in High Park at 12.30.

At the same time as the harrier meet is staged the senior team will compete against a quintet from Buffalo State. This team will be composed of Bill Hogg, Al Forrest, Dave Crichton, Nick Louttit, and one other runner. Next week the harrier team competes with Alfred runners down in central New York, and the week after the intercollegiate competition will be held on the High Park course.

Usually about sixty to eighty runners compete in the interfaculty event for the Brotherton Cup, on the course which is somewhat over five miles over hill and dale. Last year's winner was Dave Crichton, and the interfaculty title was won by Wycliffe College. From all appearances, S.P.S. should field the strongest team tomorrow.

Varsity, with two strikes on the batter, are waiting for Pitcher King Football to throw his last pitch before either getting to first base or waded to hibernation for another autumn to roll around. In our humble opinion it's going to be a ball right across the plate and it is going to be banged out for a home run. The Mustangs are in the driver's seat with a win scored last week over the Blues and are also one rung higher in the intercollegiate standing. Store's gang is the ball club that is going to decide the fortunes of the Varsity "Survivors" tomorrow afternoon and in spite of the fact that Western came out on top last Saturday, the university experts are making the locals favourites.

With 58 days to Christmas, a certain coach, not mentioning names, but if we hollered Yea Steve! he could hear us, has been playing at Santa Claus. He's been filling the stockings of rival coaches with football games which he has all tied up (Ed. note: slang for appears to be) . . . at least he has been in the pictures Frankenstein and Dracula coming to the Shea's next week (advertisement) and has become a Simon Legree. Everything has been cleared up between the team and the coach. The necessity for scoring more points than the opposition has been explained and a few more of the niceties of the game.

This week, practise started with a lay-off . . . so as to forget the nauseating feeling of losing to the Mustangs 3 to 2 last Saturday. But the last three days have been busy ones, perfecting all their mistakes . . . not we mean correcting them and oiling up their plays to throw at the Mustangs . . . and if that doesn't hold them we're going to make a collection of the plaster of paris casts worn by the team members and throw them at Western . . . That will hold them!

READING OUR TEA CUP!

Well, we tried to be an expert like the rest of the boys . . . you know, figure them out and honestly see if we could call winners. When we picked Beaches, Samia won; when we picked Samia Peterborough won; when we picked Varsity, Western won; when we picked both the teams tied the score. We decided to call off the picking when we overheard one of the boys in the Tuck Shop telling anyone that would listen to him that we couldn't even pick our teeth. We then looked around and seeing other experts resorting to the super-natural we decided it was the only way. So off we went, Shorly and me, to our favourite coffee shop, where we had tea and we had "Screwy Loogie", referee from China's foremost tea-cup readers, read our cup. Seeing a hair in our tea-cup, "Screwy Loogie" pounced on it and with a real chuckle screamed "A ha! Queen's to defeat McGill by a hair!" "Reasons?" we asked. "Confidentially, Queen's have lost three in a row—how much more do you think Reeve can stand? Besides, Queen's out-kicked McGill with their Westman and with any amount of luck should bring the Redfurn down to earth." Enough! Now take a peak at Shorly's cup and please tell us about the Western-Varsity game. Slowly Screwy Loogie looked and started off with Western leading. Faust and Thompson are superb . . . Western forward passing is clicking . . . always play their best game here . . . boy, what a team . . . look at that crowd . . . say, what a hand . . . what a girl . . . We left him raving about the girl and the vague impression Varsity was going to win.

But seriously, the Blues just can't fail tomorrow. The last contest was the last bad game they're playing this year. Varsity outplayed Western in every department except the score-board and tomorrow they're going to take full revenge. The game should be a complete sweep with Varsity winning by at least ten points.

Varsity have one of the best lines in intercollegiate football, Western have a young line, with plenty of spirit but little experience. Varsity has three kickers

Back Campus Sports Review

By Charles Dubin

A day's lull in the interfaculty rugby schedule gives us a momentary breather in which we can look around and see what's taking place in the league. Prospects for a bang-up season look the best in years, and with Victoria and St. Mike's weakened by graduation, while the remaining teams have been strengthened with large turn outs and good coaching, the race this year should be a mighty close one.

The brand of football the teams have been playing is of far improved calibre, and the games have all been thrilling from a spectators' viewpoint. With big-league stars handing out the information, the players have caught on fast and are playing clever football. They certainly deserve the full support of their respective faculties. So far, however, School and Sr. Meds have again turned out the largest crowds to urge their teams on and the rest of the faculties can take a well-taught lesson.

Though they looked pretty weak in their first game, Victoria will trot out a far improved squad in their next showing. The past week, they have added Joe and Jack Dales of the track team, and these boys have shown in practice that they can cavort as expertly on the gridiron as on the track. Another new player to wear the scarlet and gold is Casserly, whom they claim can really hoof the ball, and these boys may turn Victoria again into a Mulock Cup threat. Perhaps it's the force of habit which makes Vic always a threat.

Two boys who have stood out in the games to date are Fredrick Clinkett and Ronny Fugler. Lining up on the backfield with McKone and McGooey, two boys with five years' experience each, Clinkett has led Sr. Meds to two sterling victories over Sr. S.P.S. and St. Mike's, two powerful squads. An all-star of last year, Clinkett had a try-out with senior Varsity earlier in the season and impressed with his lofty punts and fine ball-carrying. With Clinkett as the spearhead, Sr. Meds are going to be plenty hard to beat. Small but shifty Ronny Fugler, who starred last year with Jr. School, is repeating his thrilling play with the same squad. He can punt and pass with the best of them.

For the first time in years, U.C. has a team which can make it tough for any of them. In Bill Bowlen, who played on the Varsity intermediates last year, the red and white squad have as good a kicker as any in the league. But the team that deserves most credit seems to be Dents. Last year with only two subs, the garnet and blue team moved right into the semi-finals. This year, hit hard by graduation, the Dental twelve again have a squad barely large enough to put on the field, are playing without a coach and yet were strong enough to win their first game and should on their showing win plenty more. That's the tight boys!

The best collection of ends playing on any team is the Blues' proud band, Slinkin, Jarvis, Holden and Beattie, and Western have to match these boys. PRINCE TO KICK IN RETURN GAME WITH MUSTANGS

Revival of School-Boy Rivalry when Varsity Meets Western Tomorrow

PUNTERS TO VIE

If Charlie Prince gets his rumoured opportunity to match punts with Lynn Thompson, stellar Western kicker, the fans will see a high school rivalry of long standing flare again.

In 1935, when Charlie booted Vaughan Road Collegiate to the Metropolitan Title over Northern Vocational, Thompson was only considered good enough to shine the bench in case the blonde star should meet with injury. "Bonnie Prince Charlie" was hailed as one of the smartest gridirons in Eastern Canada and a bright future was forecast for him.

Two years of mouldering in inter-faculty rugby hasn't helped any now that he has at last made senior company. It was really a bitter pill for the tiny Blue backfielder to watch his former understudy outkick Gray and Rowland by yards on every exchange. To cap it all he himself wasn't considered good enough to even hoot in the same game.

But in the return match Prince will get his chance. In practice he has begun to regain his lost Juggo. On Tuesday night particularly he was really sending them, both high and far.

If a kicking duel develops in Varsity Stadium one shall see a Merrivell grudge battle right in our own back yard. "I'll certainly be hooting my heart out," admitted Prince in that quiet way that means more than pages from some athletes.

Let's hope that this intense personal feeling will provide the spark to turn the mighty Blue machine into the unbeatable battering ram it should be.

CHAMPIONSHIP TEAM OF 1895

... note handle-bar moustaches ... padded jackets.

Take a good look! This picture is the championship football squad of 1895. Remember this picture when you take your seat in the concrete bowl for the Varsity-Western game tomorrow. If you do you'll be surprised at the physical differences between the Varsity team of 1895 and the team that will colour the gridiron tomorrow.

The Varsity team that will trot out tomorrow is the last word in what the well-dressed male wears on the gridiron ... each player will be a fashion plate in a costume worth close to one hundred dollars. The pants are made of light gray airplane silk, with blue and white stripes of elastic material up the back. The sweaters are made of blue and white jockey silk and if you contrast them with the padded jackets with the laces up the front and the plus fours worn by the champions of 1895, you will find a colourful change. White and blue helmets lined with sponge, and football shoes with two types of cleats complete the costume of the boys of 1938.

And the atmosphere at the games has changed too. There's a tenseness in the air. Crowds streaming through twenty entrances, filling the benches ... university bands with band leaders, and recumbent in uniforms, marching up and down the field going through formations while playing, giving the game the atmosphere of a circus ... students chartering trains to follow their teams and form cheering sections to vocally support their heroes ... Quite different from the quiet little pasture converted to a football stadium on Saturday, lined with enthusiastic supporters seated in horse-drawn carriages. It would be well to give this a thought (if you have time) during Saturday's contest.

The playing rules of the game have changed too. Forward passing introduced to Canada by our own coach, Warren Stevens, and now one of the game's most important scoring threats would be strange to the 1895 champions. Where once brute force was used to advance the ball, now deception, trick plays making the game more spectacular, are used. Now a science has been made of the game and like everything else in this age, specialization has entered it. Now it is traditional in each college to have a staff of coaches, one who specializes in line play, another to look after the halfbacks and another to see that the other two are doing their job.

It is interesting to note that the number of people that will cram into the Varsity Stadium on Saturday would have made up more than half of the people that lived in Toronto in the days of the 1895 championship.

DENTS DOWN ENGINEERS WITH SCORE OF 9-7

Yesterday the lower gym was the scene of one of the best lacrosse games of the year. Dents noosing out S.P.S. juniors in a wide-open contest, 9-7.

The game was featured by hard checking and fast breaking attacks which often ended in an exciting goal mouth scramble. The lead changed hands continually. Dents finally grabbing their lead in the closing minutes of the game.

FOOTBALL STARS OF FORMER YEARS AS SEEN TODAY

Sinclair, Murray, Snyder, Greco and Many Others, Recall Days of Yore

ACHIEVE SUCCESSES

Tomorrow twelve men trot out on the gridiron wearing the Blue and White of the University of Toronto. For over half a century athletes have proudly carried these time-honoured colours in gridiron battles. The game has changed and become streamlined, but nevertheless the sport and the calibre of the sportsman has always remained the same. Time and time again the question is asked, "What has become of these men?" What have the stars of the past fifteen years done after leaving college? These men have been raised by the game they loved to the pinnacle of greatness and fame. Time passes and amid a flattering crescendo of applause they depart from the field of football to the game of life. Today we recall just a few of the stars of the last decade.

Take the case of Jack Sinclair. Sinclair came to the University of Toronto in 1925 and starred for the Blue and White for seven seasons. An outstanding kicker and running half, Sinclair is always first mentioned in the list of great Varsity stars. After graduation, Sinclair journeyed to Warrentown, Virginia, and hung up his shingle as a full-fledged practitioner. Long John is in town at present to attend the Varsity-Western game Saturday.

Like Sinclair, other former grid luminaries have found their niche in private life. Members of the championship team of 1926, composed in part of France Trimble, Peginauld, Sinclair and the two Sydneys, Murray and Warren, have all settled down to a life of business in which sport must remain a sideline only. Murray Snyder is engaged in the furniture business in Kitchener. An insurance company in Guelph is occupying Peginauld's corner, while Warren Snyder is the attorney of Mimico. France Trimble's present occupation could not be ascertained. Another grid great of former decades who has travelled far in his profession is Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner of Toronto. Smirle was a line-smashing plunger back in the old days of bare-knuckle football.

GUS GRECO

... husky middle wing now yanking teeth in Sault Ste. Marie.

Stars of more recent vintage who are already firmly established in professions, are headlined by Gus Greco, star Varsity lineman a few years back and winner of the Johnny Copp Memorial Trophy, who is at present a dentist in Sault Ste. Marie.

Billy Bell, star quarter and halfback of the Blues several years ago, is a barrister in St. Catharines. Butch Allison, outstanding end, is working with an electrical firm in Toronto. Ralph Ripley, who called the signals for the championship squad of 1936, is connected with the Canada Life Insurance Company. Joe Connolly, of Marks and Connolly fame, is a coach at Assumption College in Windsor.

Of last year's team the majority have already established themselves in business life. Ivan Edwards, star running half of last year's team, is now a minister in Hamilton. The lure of the pigskin has attracted Ivan into its fold, and he is now playing outside wing for Hamilton Tigers. Turney Williams, captain last fall, is interning in the Toronto General Hospital. Barry Gray, quarter last year, is teaching at U.T.S., and devotes his spare time to kicking placements for Alex Ponton's Balm Beach. Another ex-Varsity gridder who has turned out with the Balmies is Jack Casson.

Government Suffers Defeat In U.C. Parliament Session

The government went down to defeat in the U.C. Parliament yesterday in its last session under the Hon. Albert Rose's Prime Ministership. The party's first loss of the season was scored on the resolution "Resolved that marriage need not be taught."

Interest in the debate was shown by the large number present, especially co-eds, who outnumbered their male rivals by about six to one. "Attendance has been increasing with leaps and bounds and women," the speaker declared.

Opening the debate, Prime Minister Al Rose exclaimed: "Everything I have learned about marriage has been shown me by the leader of the opposition."

Marriage is not required to be taught, not because we do not need to be taught but because we cannot be taught. No one can say: "Marriage is such and such; now go to work." The government contended that marriage is an individual problem to be solved only by those concerned in it. The Hon. Mr. Rose objected to the speaker's words at the conclusion of the first speech: "The speaker hopes that this debate will be kept on a high moral standard, as this is a delicate question."

The leader of the opposition pointed out that since history began, marriage has been taught and still is taught. She felt that science, invading so many new fields, should cover marriage, referring to the appalling divorce figures as proof of the need of science in this field. The Hon. Miss Macdonald considered the large number of co-eds present as a sign of the interest which would be shown at a series of groups to give them instruction.

The highlight of the afternoon came when Miriam Morgan (government) was describing what courses in marriage would do to the "charming arrogance" of man. "Would you marry ME?" P. C. McGillicuddy asked. Nothing daunted, the speaker went on to say that women's prestige would be lowered by the teaching of marriage. If it were taught to certain individuals of both sexes, they would form an inevitable caste, and where would their children be?

Gynecologist T. H. Van de Velde's assertion that mating should be between "a cyathophytic pyric woman and a schizothymeleptosome man" was deplored by the government. "Imagine a girl and a boy by the river describing themselves as . . ." about here words failed the Provincial Secretary.

After an hour and a half of hot debate, a vote was taken, in which the government had 39 supporters and the opposition 64. Notable was the number of co-eds in favour of instruction in marriage.

Handing over the Prime Minister's chair to Sally Macdonald, the Hon. Al Rose sadly declared that during his tenure of office he had learned that to introduce new information was a sin. Provincial Secretary Buttkie became leader of the opposition by acclamation.

WESTMAN LEADS SCORING RECORDS IN COLLEGE SERIES

Shuken of Toronto Second Followed by Thompson of Western

GRAY FOURTH

One glance at the individual scoring records in the intercollegiate rugby league gives a fair indication why the McGill marauders are at the head of the heap. For first place in the point-garnering competition is well taken care of by Herb Westman and his educated toe. He has thus far come through with fourteen scoring points at the half-way mark in the schedule, the entire total consisting of singles. This gives him an average of slightly less than a touchdown's scoring per game, not bad considering that the Redmen's lack of kicking has kept them out of the race for the last few years.

After him comes the reason why Varsity was forced to swallow the bitter pill of defeat last Saturday in London, Lyn Thompson, tied with Cam Gray at seven points each. Most of the ex-Balmly Beacher's singles have been instrumental in the two victories garnered by the Storen horde. A surprising feature is that Cam Gray has scored but one placement, his so-called specialty. This may be a clue as to why Varsity now finds itself in third place and desperately in need of a win this Saturday.

The complete scoring records follow:

	T	F	G	S	C	P
Westman, McGill	0	0	14	0	14
Shuken, Toronto	2	0	0	0	10
Thompson, Western	0	0	7	0	7
Gray, Toronto	0	0	4	3	7

Telford, McGill	1	0	0	0	5
Hamilton, McGill	1	0	0	0	5
Hurley, Western	1	0	0	0	5
Kenny, McGill	1	0	0	0	5
Rowland, Toronto	1	0	0	0	5

VARSITY SOCCERITES TO MEET M'MASTER

Both Blue and White Teams Favoured to Down Visitors

The blue and white soccer teams open the second half of the intercollegiate schedule tomorrow by playing hosts to McMaster on the front campus.

Both Varsity elevens whitewashed the Hamiltonians last week and are odds-on favourites to repeat their victories. The starry senior squad has easily emerged victorious in its league games to date and, with the benefit of experience and condition, will be out there fighting to keep its enviable record intact. Captain Art Menzies and the rest of the intermediates are likewise no pushovers and will be trying hard to come out on the long end of the score.

Amidst all the excitement and colour attending a football week-end such as this is going to be, remember that the university has two soccer teams more than worthy of your support.

LAVAL SPONSORS YOUTH CONGRESS

Quebec City, Oct. 27.—Laval University Student's Association has issued an invitation to students of Toronto, Queen's, McGill, Ottawa, and U. of Montreal to attend a congress in Quebec City on November 5th for the purpose of crystallizing student opinion regarding their willingness to refuse to go to war unless the shores of Canada are invaded.

"This is not a nationalist movement, nor a political one," said the secretary of the body, "but it is merely to protest against conscription and against Canada being asked to fight in wars."

VARSITY SECONDS REQUIRE VICTORY OR ELIMINATED

Varsity's 11's will be shooting for their first win of the season when they meet the much improved McMaster squad in Hamilton this Saturday. Having lost all of their scheduled games thus far the Blues must take all of their remaining contests to retain a mathematical possibility of finishing on top.

Their showing has been a sad pill for Coach Bill Byers and the Varsity fans at large to swallow for on paper they are a much better team than the results indicate. With men like Mills, Hodgetts, Fabister, Sweet, Duncan, Ross and Shiffman in the line-up, the Blues are bound to break out in a scoring rash. Perhaps this Saturday will see a reversal of form.

Last Saturday the McMaster outfit turned in their initial victory by scoring a sweet 12-0 victory in the Varsity oval, then by serving notice that they have finally started to roll. A few of their stand-out rugbyists include Kenneth McAdam, a powerful one-man line, the Duncan boys, Don Waterman, hard-hitting line man, Chuck Szuminski, backfield plunger and Hilton, drop-kick artist.

Hart House Songster

All members of Hart House are invited to attend the first Hart House Songster, which will take place in the Music Room at 8:45 p.m., Oct. 30. No knowledge of music or training as a singer is necessary.

Co-eds To Date Up Boys! 'Tis Sadie Hawkins' Week

Lonely eh?
Girls, here's the chance of a lifetime. For next week, the girls are going to date the boys up. They're going to give them an evening out, and then they're going to foot the bills. Take 'em anywhere they like. And the beauty of it is, they can choose the men they want.

The boys are right on their toes. Whitney Hall's crazy about the idea. And so is S.P.S. In fact, the whole thing's a knockout. "A natural," said an architect. "A pip," agreed a Trinity student. "Zowie!" said an engineer, simply. The boys are just bursting with enthusiasm.

And the one they have to thank is Sadie Hawkins, the girl with the face like the back of the lorry.

Sadie is the girl in the comic strips. She's in the L'il Abner series, which the Star runs. Her pedigree is peerless. Her ancestry goes right back to the beginning of Dogpatch. Yet, the legend runs, Sadie was graced with a nuke like the rear of a transport truck.

What could she do? The legend strode Hawkins, Sr. A man of action, he simply lined up the unmarried boys of the village, gave them a 20-yard lead, and set Sadie loose after them. First man she caught had to marry her. The idea caught on. Thereafter, Hawkins, Sr. organized an annual race, and Allah helped those who helped themselves.

Now don't think that the Sadie

Hawkins Society is going to organize anything as drastic as all that. Oh no, they're men of foresight. They've modified it.

It just means that for a week the girls are going to do all the dating and all the paying. That's all. Nothing like being chased by a Whitney Hall blonde across the campus and then having to marry her. "Why not?" asked a Vic girl.

One Annesley Hall girl already has her week lined up. She's asking a boy friend of hers out to lunch every day. Then, in the evenings, she's roping in a few gridiron stars.

Pretty nice, eh?
Here's another. A Cody House co-ed. There's a big broad-shouldered brute in her class she's been trying to get introduced to for quite a while. Never quite succeeded. That is, until she heard of Sadie Hawkins' Week. Now she's got him for a dance.

Now take the case of a U.C. girl. Comes from the country. Didn't know anybody. "Pretty tough," you'd say. But don't. Last night she met a sifter in the drug store, and dated him up for Monday, Wednesday and Friday. That's the way the Sadie Hawkins Society works around this place. "Poo," a lot of co-eds might say. "I couldn't do anything like that." Girls, think nothing of it. This is no time at all to be bashful. The boys are just itching to be dated up.

Girls, it's on you!

Serious Loss In Follies Cast If Tootsie Can't Reduce a Bit

And so Tootsie, the three year old elephant hailing from Rangoon, Burma, will not be able to play a major part in the University College Follies.

It all started when Frank Shuster, associate producer of the follies of the senior college, decided that nothing would pop up the show more than a nice, young elephant, with just a small amount of dramatic experience, to give it stage presence. So Shuster contacted the Ringling brothers circus, who presented a show in Toronto yesterday.

"I want," he told the manager of the circus, "an elephant."

"Ah, an elephant," breathed the manager. "When is your show?"

"November 18," said Shuster.

"Oh, dash it," said the manager, "we will be in Philadelphia then and we can't split up the show. Anyway, youse college boys are too wild up here."

"But look, old chap," he continued, "I think that if you phone up Miles Funeral Home, you might find an elephant there."

So Shuster, thinking only of the yellow of his show, phoned up Miles Funeral Home.

"I say, Mr. Miles," said Shuster, "I hear you have an elephant?"

"Yep," said Mr. Miles, "Tootsie's her name. She is about three years old and she comes from Rangoon, Burma."

"Do you suppose the Follies could borrow her for the show?"

"Sure," said Mr. Miles.

"How much?" asked Shuster.

"Not a cent," said Miles, "and I will throw a couple of donkeys in for nothing."

Shuster frankly admits that at this juncture, he had visions of a wonderful show, a show that would put to shame any that had been produced in the last decade. An elephant, wow.

But fate in the person of Willard Thompson, the manager of Hart House Theatre, stepped in and made impossible anything that had to do with elephants.

When Shuster phoned up the manager of the theatre where the show is put on, he was severely let down.

"You can't have an elephant on the Hart House stage. The floor would not stand it. Anyway, there isn't any door big enough."

Last seen, Shuster was heading for the circus with a tape measure. He is going to measure the elephant and then measure the door of Hart House Theatre.

"It is too good a thing to let go," he explained.

TORONTO STUDENT ATTAINS FAVOUR AS TORCH SINGER

"Life of Torch Singer, Athlete, and Student Combined, No Bed of Roses"

SINGS AT SLIPPER

by Norman J. Altstetter

Torch singer, athlete and high school student—this was how Phyllis Marshall described herself as the music of an orchestra played in the background, in an interview with the Varsity at the Silver Slipper on Tuesday.

The most impressive things about this seventeen year old girl are her well-poised personality and her soft-spoken manner. "I hope to enter the university next year and find a course in which I can continue my studies in interior decorating," she said, "although I shall make professional singing my life's work."

The life of a torch singer and student combined is no bed of roses as Miss Marshall pointed out. "I begin classes at about half past eight at Runnymede High School, where I am taking my senior matriculation, and finish there at two o'clock. Then home to homework and practice. At nine-thirty I am due at the Silver Slipper for work, although I really enjoy it. Usually I manage to get home about one-thirty and after about six hours of sleep I'm off to school again."

Phyllis Marshall began her professional career quite recently with Jack Arthur. She first received recognition when singing on the Star Fresh Air broadcast. From here it was only a short hop to a sponsored program. Besides these engagements Miss Marshall has sung on sustaining programs on the C.B.C. network.

"Although I like swing songs the sentimental type are the ones I prefer. That's the kind I sing for my school friends at lunch hour at Runnymede. But I find that the university students who come out to the Slipper to dance like 'A-tisket-a-tasket' best."

This young lady leads a varied life for besides her singing and school work she models for a professional photographer and takes part in school sports activities. In fact she played on a championship basketball team which

CAPITAL CLOSE-UP

By Ross Munro
CUP Correspondent

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—With Canada's wheat worries accumulating, a major debate on the government's agricultural policy and its attitude towards a subsidy program is predicted for the next session of parliament.

Faced with the farmers' dilemma of a good crop and falling prices, the cabinet is understood to be considerably concerned over the loss which the federal treasury will have to meet when the Canadian Wheat Board has disposed of this year's crop.

After six lean years the west has produced a crop estimated at 334,000,000 bushels. The federal government has guaranteed 80 cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern at Fort William if farmers sell to the wheat board. With practically the whole crop likely to be sold to the board, the west will benefit materially but the board is selling the wheat at 20 to 30 cents a bushel less than it paid for it. It has been estimated that the loss to the federal government will be about $50,000,000—and this is $15,000,000 more than the annual Canadian National Railways deficit, considered one of the country's major burdens.

Many old Liberals oppose the guaranteed price principle on the grounds it is a concession to government paternalism. Others high in the party ranks contend 80 cent wheat was the only thing to save the west and that within a few years government subsidies to agriculture and other branches of our economy will be accepted as sound practice.

With both sides lining up, it appears that the problem of Canada's agricultural price economy will be given a thorough going over when parliament meets probably before the end of November.

With Canada selling more than 225,000,000 bushels of its wheat abroad, this problem naturally assumed international proportions and closely involves the United States and its plans for controlling surplus farm crops. Acutely aware of the difficulties facing the Dominion and particularly the West, Premier John Bracken has called an international conference on marketing agricultural products to meet in Winnipeg next December.

Many authorities here feel it is rather peculiar that the international conference has been called by Mr. Bracken instead of by the federal government. However, Dominion officials likely will attend and give every assistance to the party.

There is a belief in some quarters here that the conference is a development from recent conversations between U.S. and Canadian officials concerning marketing this year's surplus wheat crop. No disclosures have been made as to whether the two countries are working in unison but it is accepted that this is a fact.

Further extension of this principle of co-operation between the two nations on marketing agricultural products might be worked out at the Winnipeg conference. President Roosevelt told Senator Josh. Lee of Oklahoma last week that he believes any plan for coping with surplus farm crops must be supplemented by an agreement among the nations of the world for an equitable division of the world market.

Many government farm experts believe in such crop quotas and by the time the subject comes up for debate in the house there probably will be a strong group who will support international quota agreements and even direct subsidies to western farmers.

There is a possibility of a storm being raised by Ontario members because Ontario farmers are not being given the opportunity to sell their wheat to the board at the fixed price. Both Premier Hepburn and Leopold Macculey, conservative leader in the Ontario legislature, have voiced their protest and it likely will be echoed in parliament.

Formal Clothing For Students Nets Agencies Neat Gains

Shirt fronts decorated with anything from traditional smears of lipstick, to carefully executed portrayals of bleeding hearts, cupids, arrows, and the friend of the night before, are the commonest signs of a gay evening when full dress suits are returned the morning after to local renting agencies.

Autographed shirt fronts and cuffs generously smeared with telephone numbers also crop up constantly, as students dash in between lectures to return their clothes within the time limit.

It seems that university students have a habit of expecting a better rate than the next fellow, and in spite of the fact that full dress suits and tuxedos often come back with that "slept-in" look, they usually manage to return their borrowed finery in better condition than the general public.

Rental agencies have one common complaint to make—fraternities are hard on their business. Although half-mast trousers and dangling cuffs are often the result, as long as students have fraternity brothers to borrow from they seldom turn up at rental shops. Among other scraps of information volunteered by clothing agencies, were the fact that co-eds are much more careless about cigarette burns than men; that the latter seldom leave anything of more value in their pockets than programs; that the demand for tails is much greater than that for tuxedos; that girls rent evening wraps, but when it comes to gowns they prefer their own, and that full-length, black velvet coats are most popular with the girls because—the age-old reason—they are most snderizing.

represented Runnymede Collegiate last year. It seems that all these activities are not enough to satisfy her overflowing energy for she hopes to take up the study of dramatic art in a short time.

However, she always looks up to her paragon Ivy Anderson, vocalist for Duke Ellington's orchestra, whose heights she hopes some day to attain. But Miss Marshall's musical tastes are not restricted to popular tunes for she describes De Bussy as her favourite classical composer and his Claire de Lune is her favourite composition.

Phyllis Marshall abounds in ambition and vitality which, unlike many of her contemporaries, she translates into action. This along with her charming personality is the secret of her success.

MEDICAL SOCIETY CARRIES ON FIGHT ON TUBERCULOSIS

Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes Works to Better Health

The Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes, formed last March at the instigation of the Medical Society of Toronto University, for the mutual benefit of medical students, internes, medical faculty and hospital boards, has been working steadily toward the betterment of health and welfare of Canadian medical students and internes.

At Varsity, due to the efforts of the society, fourth, fifth, and sixth year students undergo X-ray examinations of the chest. Other Canadian universities have followed suit, and Queen's gives X-ray examination to all medical students.

At a meeting of the CAMS Friday night in the lecture hall, the chairman, Paul McGee, spoke of the alarming incidence of tuberculosis among students and internes, and pointed out that the individual student must become conscious of the seriousness of the situation.

The society plans to obtain more uniform working conditions for hospital internes, with better facilities for recreation, and a corresponding betterment of health and welfare.

BLUES TIE PONIES IN JUNIOR TUSSLE

Varsity Juniors battled to a 1-1 tie with the Western Ponies Saturday morning on the back campus in the second game of their two-game exhibition series. The Blues had been victorious the week before in London and thus came out on top in the abbreviated schedule.

Following a scoreless first half, Varsity took the lead in the third quarter. A Plaxton to Grosskurth pass netted 20 yards, and after the same play failed, the latter kicked to the deadline for a single, and the first score of the game.

But the Ponies fought right back and after a Wooley to Gladish pass which was food for yards, Rolph kicked to the deadline on the first play of the last quarter, to knot the count.

PLAY TITLE BASED ON LINE FROM POEM

"I Have Been Here Before" is Regarded by Priestley as Provocative Material

There is scarcely anyone who has not, upon entering a room, or looking at a watch, or uttering a sentence, or opening a package, or smelling a flower, paused with the conviction that he has done that same thing before.

In literature there are occasional references to it. Dante Gabriel Rossetti wrote of it as follows:

"I have been here before,
"But when or how I cannot tell;
"The sweet, the grass beyond the door,
"The sweet, the keag smell,
"The sighing sound, the lights around
"The shore."

It is from the first line of the Rossetti stanza that J. B. Priestley has taken the title for his new drama "I Have Been Here Before", which Gilbert Miller will present at the Royal Alexandra for one week, beginning on Monday, October 31. Wilfred Lawson, whom Mr. Miller brought to this country in 1935 to play the role of the choleric attorney in "Libel", appears in the play, also Ernst Deutsch, a Czech actor well-known on the Continent but never before seen in this country. Lydia Sherwood, Eric Portman, Eileen Deldon and Harry Rousby. The play has played for over six months in London, where the critics called it Priestley's finest to date.

Priestley identifies the experience not as a false memory but as a real and (Continued on page 3)

Varsity Staff To Forsake Press For Party

Cut lines and coming events, by-lines and bulletin boards—all will be forgotten when the staff of the undergraduate newspaper gather for the first of their parties at the Royal York Wednesday night.

The night of the party will see typewriters and copy paper lying neglected, the Press deserted except for the night editor. For the staff will be down at Front Street, making merry at the Royal York supper dance.

Every year the staff holds three parties. One in November, one in February, and a formal dinner and dance at the close of publication. Usually held near the campus, the party this year has strayed from the former confines.

The party is regarded as an excellent opportunity for the staff to take part in activities other than those of journalism.

Rome, Italy and Germany will support the insurgent cause in Spain and are against mediation in the war, following a talk here among German and Italian diplomats, it was announced. They have also agreed on a policy of collaboration with Great Britain.

Campus Said Enthusiastic about Plan for Co-ed Dating and Paying

S.P.S. SAID HOPEFUL

Sadie Hawkins' Week is on. What's more, it's on the girls. This week, the co-eds make all the dates. They do all the entertaining. They do all the paying. The boys just sit back and enjoy themselves.

The whole campus is crazy about the idea. Whitney Hall thinks it's grand. St. Hilda's swears it's tops. The S.P.S. boys are just plain delighted. In fact, Sadie Hawkins' Week looks like a wow.

The S.P.S. boys started it off with a bang over the week-end. They are reported to have tied up traffic half a block along St. George Street, where 150 of them started a snake-dance across the road from Whitney Hall. "Good old Sadie," they shouted. "Long live Sadie Hawkins' week."

They've modified the whole thing, that's all. It just means that for a week the girls are going to do all the dating and all the paying.

Some enthusiasm over the week-end chalked signs all over the front of U.C., the Memorial Tower and the Stadium. The words on the U.C. front steps read: "The cry goes around—'Where is Sadie?'" "Good old Sadie," "Hurrah for Sadie."

A parking place has been marked: "Reserved for Sadie Hawkins." So keep your dates book clean, men.

STUDENTS TO FORM BAMBOO PIPE BAND

Owing to the success of the trial of the bamboo pipes at the Glee Club last year a class is being formed under the direction of Professor Kemp for making and playing these pipes.

The pipes, Professor Kemp pointed out, consist of a mouthpiece roughly two inches long, constructed of a piece of bamboo and a cork, in the form of a whistle, and an attached bamboo pipe, roughly 2 feet long, with holes in the fashion of a flute.

An effort is being made to form an orchestra of from twenty-five to thirty pipes, and should it succeed, the undergraduates will be treated to an interesting type of music.

"Tony The Trumpeter" Eclipsed Women, Swing-Band Steal Show

Pagantry, women and swing, combined with a glamorous victory over Western, gave Varsity its liveliest and most colourful Saturday afternoon of the current football season.

For most of the game, while pretty Doris Eagles and her three male assistants led eight hundred fanatically cheering Westernites, poor "Tony the Trumpeter", the free-lance hot-lips, found only an occasional opportunity to break through his melancholic gloom.

Varsity marched down the field. So did the Western band with their pompous heraldry, led by pretty Beth Forbes, Canada's first co-ed band leader. It was apparent that a jitterbug of the first water held the baton when the band swung through some of the sweet and hot at quarter and half time.

But neither originality plus nor backfield razzle-dazzle were sufficient to overcome the valiant Varsity rally in the last quarter when the scene of

MILITARY STUDIES NOW INCORPORATED IN ARTS FACULTY

Major Watson Appointed as Assistant Professor in Arts Faculty

CODY ANNOUNCES CHANGE

Speaking at the annual mess dinner of the University of Toronto Contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps which was held in Hart House last Friday evening, President Cody announced that Major M. B. Watson, Director of the Department of Military Studies, had been appointed "an assistant professor in the Faculty of Arts and the department itself incorporated into the faculty."

"Major Watson will now represent his department on the council of the Faculty of Arts," added the president. "I feel that this is a very satisfactory move as the department has not been attached to any faculty formerly, although it sets annual examinations in May."

The evening concluded with a lecture by Lt. Col. H. H. Madill and Major M. B. Watson on the recent manoeuvres of the Canadian army which were put on to train officers in handling larger bodies of troops and to demonstrate new equipment, some of which is now in Canada.

STADIUM RAIDERS FOILED BY FROSH

The vigilantes from the University of Toronto residences found their reward early Saturday morning when they captured two Western marauders at Varsity Stadium. The culprits from London had done no more than spill a bottle of purple ink on the outside Stadium wall when the Varsity freshmen seized them and consigned them to the "Chamber of Horrors."

Before they even got inside the Stadium the Toronto men pounced upon them and carried two of them off to undergo punishment—the third, a Western cheerleader, escaped. A little while later the London pair emerged from the red sandstone residences with heads shaved convict style.

"Tony The Trumpeter" Eclipsed Women, Swing-Band Steal Show

Varsity shifted very rapidly to the Varsity sections.

Though defeated, Western, however, was not too downhearted. The score was very close and their chances are still very good. They figure they have a real team and their co-ed cheerleader, although refusing the credit, declares that it is obtaining better student support both vocal and otherwise than any former team. It surely looked that way Saturday. Miss Eagles stated that she is no longer nervous when leading a cheer and that the spirit of the game quite enthralls her. Although doubtful at first, she now considers her efforts as but a pleasant and loyal duty to the team.

But if Western cheered well, so did Varsity. She surpassed all former efforts with the scoring of the winning touchdown and many a beautiful big yellow 'mum was trampled in the Western section at the same time.

Charlie Prince's Kick Turns Tide Against Western in Dying Moments

WESTERN CARRIES PLAY

By Ed Goodman
With but five short minutes separating their championship hopes from oblivion, University of Toronto's football squad pulled the proverbial "hattrick" and scored a thrilling touchdown to nose out Western Mustangs 8 to 7. The starting victory puts the Toronto team in a second place tie with their opponents.

Toronto's touch was scored when Murray Scott, who had played an outstanding game with his hard-tackling and steady backfield running, pounced on a loose ball behind the Mustang touch line.

However, the former Humber side ace must share his honours with blonde-haired Charlie Prince. It was Prince who engineered the Varsity touch. Kicking from his own 40 yard line, the slender back punted high and short to just about the Western goal-line. Thompson, on the Western half-line, let the ball bounce and Prince came dashing up on his own kick and dived at it. In the scramble that ensued Thompson deflected the ball to the sidelines, where Scott fell on it for Varsity's one-point margin, as it was not converted.

The hapless Western squad deserved a better fate. For nearly 3 quarters of the game they had carried the play to Varsity, with a dazzling pass attack, backed by some hard plunging and good kicking. However, they pay off on points scored and the 7 year jinx that the Varsity Stadium has had on the Mustangs still holds.

FROSH VICTORIOUS BUT 'T WAS COSTLY

Clouds of flour obscured a barrage of senile eggs as ferocious S.P.S. freshmen slugged their way to victory in Friday's flag rush.

Conscription won the day for the frosh, who heavily outnumbered their opponents; but it was a costly victory. Long before the first year hordes swarmed on to the back campus, a grim contingent of well-armed sophs were already planning strategy and improving their aim at the expense of non-combatants.

Survivors finally gave vent to the famous engineers' yell, then limped off into the dusk, followed by an admiring gallery.

The flag rush was the final initiation rite for S.P.S. frosh. Now they have become members of that hard-bitten faculty, the School of Practical Science.

Varsity Sailors to Vie in Boston Dinghy Race

Blake Tedman, the only student enrolled in fourth year architecture, is in the news again. Friday afternoon Tedman and three other Varsity students, Jim Easson, Jack Johnson and Doug Knowles, departed via motor-car for Boston to take part in the intercollegiate dinghy races to be held this Sunday in the Charles River basin.

Thirty select American colleges have been invited to enter the races. The Toronto quartet will go as Canadian representatives, having already won the Canadian intercollegiate dinghy title.

Varsity Night? - - - It's New

Next Wednesday evening will mark the first University Night at the Royal York, according to Miss Elsie Graham, special hostess of the hotel.

"This University Night is meant especially for students of the University of Toronto and will be 'their' night. Everything possible is being done in the arrangements for a special student's night."

Miss Graham stated that music would be supplied by the renowned Horace Lapp and the dancing will be to his music in the Imperial Room where he plays nightly at the supper dance. Included in his musical arrangements will be novelty numbers featuring college songs and Alma Mater songs of various Canadian and American universities.

Nor are these features all that University Night has to offer. On presentation of the student registration card the admission fee is severed in half.

Paul C. McGillicuddy, III U.C., was announced Saturday as the winner of the Rabbi Isserman Prize. This award is made every three years for the best essay on a topic dealing with international goodwill or inter-racial problems.

Czech leaders must bend beneath Hitler's yoke or flee the country. Czech citizens must accept Nazi decrees or suffer further infringement of their liberties. The Nazi program is being surely and not too slowly put into effect.

Robbery of the Soil

Few people adequately understand how lavish they are in the matter of nature's resources. Not long ago, calculated in terms of forest growth, vast areas of oak and maple were ruthlessly felled and offered to the flames to make way for the farm and garden. Now this originally rich soil has been radically impoverished, mined of its vital ingredients, and the cultivator is obliged to artificially replenish the land that was previously self-fed. The farmer appreciates now that he cannot continually remove chemicals from the soil without impoverishing or rendering sterile the land.

We do not often pause to consider the phenomenal work the plant performs. It is, of course, the leaf which is the miracle-worker by reason of possessing that singular substance called "chlorophyll" which in the presence of sunlight mysteriously synthesizes from carbon dioxide and water the material known as vegetable starch. The plant is the only organic mechanism actually making its own food, and thus supplying the nutritional requirements, directly and indirectly, of all animal creatures. The plant leaf physiologically mediates between solar energy and organic food. The leaf is, in fine, a diminutive biochemical laboratory or factory.

A square yard of leaf is alleged to produce sufficient carbohydrate material in two months to feed one person one good meal; also, it is said, the combined plants of the earth's surface manufacture each year at least one cubic mile of sugar. The little maple leaf, in Ontario and Quebec, accounts for a large and profitable amount of "maple sugar". And in the matter of fuels it may be remembered that gasoline is basically a product of "chlorophyll".

The top-soil must contain a proper amount of organic and non-organic material in the form of calcium, nitrogen, potassium, et cetera, and these ingredients are re-introduced into the soil under natural conditions, but under domestic conditions are becoming more scarce every year.

In town and city the "unsightly" autumn leaves are carefully raked together and destroyed, the ground thus being arbitrarily deprived of its natural heritage.

The practice of some home and garden owners is worthy of note. They build a bin in which the leaves are stored every autumn and, when they have become sufficiently decomposed, the deposit is returned to the tree plots or the garden. That is the way to help nature maintain a normal balance. Always remember that when leaves are burned there is a serious robbery of the soil that will some day react badly upon it.

Symphony Nine o'Clocks

On Tuesday evening the Toronto Symphony Orchestra will play the first in a new series of eight low-price popular concerts in Massey Hall. Starting at 9 o'clock and running until 10.30, the programs will be rather shorter than those of the subscription series, but will be held to the same artistic standards. During the series the Orchestra Association plans to present a number of Canadian artists.

The hour from 9.30 to 10.30 will be broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, whose new policy of putting Canadian orchestras on the air is directly responsible for this series of "Symphony Nine O'Clocks", as they are to be called.

It has been our opinion for some time that the orchestra has not been playing frequently enough to attain the degree of excellence of which it is potentially capable; compared to the amount of work done by the orchestra in, for instance, Boston, a city not greatly larger than Toronto, a season of ten regular concerts is almost negligible. For this reason alone the new series should prove beneficial to all concerned.

Tuesday's program will be as follows:
Overture, Tannhauser Wagner
Serenade for Strings Haydn
Overture, The Bartered Bride Smetana
Symphony No. 1 Brahms

Both orchestra and audience will dress informally. This, combined with attractively low prices and the luxury of a short concert that doesn't start until 9 o'clock should assure success to the new venture.

SECRETS OF BIG BLUE FOOTBALLERS EXPOSED!!

At last the secret of what goes on during those closed-door practices of the senior football team, is out!—Now don't worry, Coach Stevens, we won't give your secret away, except to the fifteen (by actual count) readers of The Varsity. Realizing how difficult it is to break in on the secret strategy sessions, Twinkltoes McHalfback (Prof. Twotoes McGurk to his friends) disguised himself as the back row of the bleachers. Not to be thwarted by these upside-down hangovers, Prof. McGurk managed to free himself of this disguise and crept out onto the field dressed as Varsity's own ten-yard line. When interviewed last night, Twotoes proudly admitted that he had discovered exactly what takes place in that sanctum stadium every afternoon. Said he in his very best Chaucerian English, "Yeah, I seen it with my own eyes, and it was practically unhold of before, myrably dictoo ya might say. But believe it or not, and may I boin if it ain't da truth: DEY WUZ PRACTICIN' FOOTBALL!" (Smell of something boining.)

let's go places

Double-headed horror at She's this week. Those two thrillers, Frankenstein and Dracula are presented on the same bill. Unfortunately, SHEA's audience reaction has DOUBLE changed considerably since they first appeared several years ago. The theatre-goers seem inclined to laugh at the parts that sent them into hysterics during the days when horror pictures were popular.

Bela Lugosi gives a good, sinister performance as Count Dracula, with his hypnotic eyes to great advantage. Castle Dracula presents a chilling spectacle, with its spider webs and grim exterior veiled in mist. The women, however, look rather anaemic, and do not seem attractive prey for a vampire.

Boris Karloff is still terrifying as the monster in Frankenstein. The product of a young German doctor's experiment into the occult phases of life, he leaves a trail of havoc in his wake, once he escapes. The trail ends in a flaming windmill, the monster did not destroy the man who created it, and the story ends happily. The make-up on the monster is excellent, and several of the scenes are adequately macabre.
L.G.M.

This week's presentation features Errol Flynn and Bette Davis. The setting is laid mainly in old San Francisco and the time is the four years between the election

IMPERIAL campaigns of Theodore Roosevelt and William Taft. The sisters are three rather pretty girls, foremost and oldest of whom is Bette Davis. Incidentally they are all blondes. Also, they all marry—successfully and otherwise—and during the course of four years they drift apart and go three different ways.

Bette marries a penniless but ambitious newspaper man, Errol Flynn, who goes away. Then he leaves on a long ocean trip, leaving her in the good old San Francisco earthquake, of which the picture shows some new shots. All ends in happiness when the wanderer returns to the scene of the election and finds Bette reunited with her sisters. She takes him back. A good evening's entertainment for the lovers and those who have missed the experience.

Hollywood Theatre

Around a recurrent theme of liberty La Citadelle du Silence shown at the Hollywood Saturday morning unfolded a powerfully moving drama, capturing the feeling of the patriot under foreign domination.

Marcel L'Herbier, the director, perhaps deserves the most credit for this superb picture. But then it was one of those rare combinations of a well-knit plot, perfect direction, remarkable photography and fine acting. In this connection Pierre Renoir is outstanding, playing a most unsympathetic role so sympathetically that it is impossible not to maintain at all times a respect and understanding for him.

This is no picture where the good and the bad are contrasted in bright light and deep shadow, but rather it creates a paradox of viewpoint.

Annabella as the brave young patriot shows fine restraint in a part which might be in the hands of a less capable actress, be melodramatically played. A more sincere portrayal would be hard to imagine.

This picture is one that strikes deeper than the mere emotions of the players or the play. It left us with a sense of the grandeur of the ideal typified in the last word—liberty.

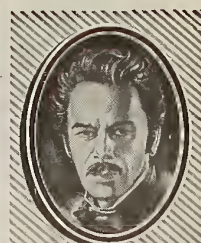

It is a picture that would be welcomed back in a repeat showing.

Varsity Harrier Team Outruns Buffalo State

Hogg of S.P.S. Keeps Lead in Race Over Hard Course

S.P.S. BEATS WYCLIFFE

The Varsity harrier team triumphed Buffalo State in a dual meet held Saturday afternoon in conjunction with the annual interfaculty harrier race. The Blue runners finished first, second, fourth, fifth and seventh to score nineteen points against Buffalo State's thirty-six. Hogg, S.P.S., Forrest, Emmanuel, Finlayson and Foulis, S.P.S. and Phoenix, O.C.E., represented Varsity. Hogg won in the very good time of 28' 30" with Forrest beating out the Buffalo State runner for second place.

This marks the third time that Bill Hogg has won the interfaculty race, which is run over the High Park course of a little over five miles, and it is also the third time that Forrest has placed second. One of the features of the race was the splendid showing of Foulis of S.P.S., a freshman who attended U.T.S. last year.

In the interfaculty meet S.P.S. easily defeated Wycliffe, the defending champions, with a point total of fourteen. In the interfaculty race Finlayson and Foulis moved up to third and fourth places and Goodwin was sixth. Wycliffe, represented by Louttit, Cardy, MacDonald and Lark, all of whom finished in the first fifteen, scored forty-two points. The runners who finished in the first twenty will constitute the cross country squad from which the two teams will be picked. These are: Hogg, Forrest, Foulis, Phoenix, Goodwin, Louttit, Taylor, Kaylor, Cardy, Hanna, MacDonald, Lark, Saunders, Brown, Morris, Hardy, Ross, Blakey, Bryde, Finlayson, who finished third, is ineligible.

somewhat remarkable one, related to the Time and Recurrence theories of P. D. Ouspensky and J. W. Dunne. He is playwright enough to recognize in these theories, whether he accepts them or not, provocative material for the theatre, and he uses them, not in the spirit of the propagandist, but as a craftsman.

One of the propositions of Dunne is that these strange memories are memories displaced in time, so that we recall things that have not yet occurred, or recognize incidents which, although they have not happened to us in our present existence, may have occurred in another.

An Omission

Due to an unfortunate mistake in the rugby issue, Bill Schwenger, veteran inside, was omitted when the team was described. Bill has played inside with the senior squad for the past two years and at the same time holds an intercollegiate wrestling championship.

SECONDS SWAMPED BY McMASTER, 24-1

Intermediates Are Eliminated by Whitewashing at Hamilton

Paced by the booting of Duncan, the deadly passes of Ken McAdam, the smashing line plunges of Szuminski and Auld, aided by their opponents' frequent fumbles, McMaster Maroons strode to a 24-1 triumph over Varsity intermediates Saturday afternoon in Hamilton. The victory kept McMaster in the race for the championship and eliminated Varsity from all further titular contention.

The first minutes of play indicated how the game was to turn out, when Varsity fumbled Duncan's opening kick, and Freddy Wellington, McMaster's snap, recovered the ball to carry it over the line for the first touchdown. McAdam converted to make the score 6-0. Varsity gained their only point of the game shortly afterwards, when a McMaster fumble put them in position for a point, which Phil Isibster booted over. From this period on, the game was in the complete control of last year's champions. Duncan and McAdam consistently outdistanced Isibster and Sweet, while the forward passing combination of McAdam and Jerome kept the blue team deep in their own territory throughout.

The way the Maroons were passing the ball around was reminiscent of the days when Syl Apps, Palmer, and Moore passed the team to a championship. Jack Hotz of Hamilton played an outstanding game, backing up the line and running the ends. Duncan regained his old kicking form and Ken McAdam was his reliable self. Highlights of Varsity shaped up as a nice pass receiver and tried hard throughout, as did Isibster and Mine.

DOUBLE VICTORY SCORED IN SOCCER

Intermediate, Senior Teams
Down McMaster on Saturday

By Bill Smith
It was a victorious week-end for Toronto as both senior and intermediate soccer teams kept step with the rugby squad by defeating the McMasterites in a double-header Saturday afternoon on the front campus.

The senior eleven ran true to form by shellacking the Hamilton heffies 6-1, scoring all six goals in the first half. Paced by Jock Mullett, Alf Dodds and Jock Honeyman, who netted two points each, the whole team turned in A-1 performances to keep the outcome never in doubt.

In the second half, as the Varsity vanguard turned down the steam on their steam-roller attack, the Hamiltonians came through for their only score, led by Johns and Goss.

The intermediate scoring was likewise done by twos, with Bill Snall and Art Boyd garnering a goal in each half. The Toronto team sewed up the game with two smart counters in the last fifteen minutes. Bing Thompson, at right wing for the locals, deserves honourable mention for his eager corner kicks and also Jim Cain in goal, for another well-earned shout. In the visitors' lineup, blond Ray Jenkins worked hard, as did Jim Cain, who played inside right with the seniors and returned in goal for the intermediates.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Schiffman

A GIFT OF THE GODS

The Mustangs, who haven't won a game in the Toronto bowl for seven years, threw a game into the lap of Smiling Warren Stevens last Saturday afternoon. Varsity had no more right winning that game than we had calling Queen's to defeat the Redmen. At the best, considering the breaks as part of the game, Varsity should have had a tie, which would have given Western second place and the Blues, the gate. Again we have the distasteful task of pointing out an error in judgment by the Western quarterback. Of all the plays to call, with one minute to play and only thirty yards out, score 8 to 7, he had to pick a placement instead of a single and thus lost the ball game. What made him do it will be the Great Riddle of 1938, but he did. It was blocked and another ball game was over.

SHOOTING THE WORKS!

And what a drab football game. The only colour all afternoon was supplied by the two finest bands in Canada. If it wasn't for the two bands most of the cash customers would have asked for their money back. And while we're talking about bands the Western band's swing arrangement could give most Toronto bands something to worry about. We might suggest that the Toronto band could do well to incorporate a swing song like Flat Foot Flossie or sumpin in their large repertoire . . . and draft that gentleman with the silver horn, who plays at any time during the game, to play their "hot lick."

The first half, of what was to be a crucial, do or die game, was dull and uninteresting, and except for a few minutes when Western were hot they displayed a calibre of football not fit for intercollegiate teams. It was in these few minutes when Western were hot, that the Sarnia flicker forward pass was used, completely bewildering the Blue defense and got them into plunging distance for their touchdown. For a game in which Varsity was going to shoot the works, use everything they had, the Blues were a disappointment—and if we saw the works we are just a little frightened of what McGill will do next Saturday.

The supposedly weak Western wing-line ripped holes in the Varsity line to let Hilton and Farmer go as far as they wanted—they out-rushed and out-fought the Blue "battering-rams" for the entire game. As far as kicking goes this has us completely baffled. Varsity has three kickers who supposedly can average fifty yards . . . yet they have been losing ten to twenty yards on every kick.

In the second half it looked as if Coach Stevens had given the boys a famous Knut Rodne oration . . . the boys came out and for the first few minutes with Bee Rowland carrying the mail, looked as if they were giving points, but then a few bad breaks just broke up the comeback. It took a short kick which bounced right over the line for the Blues to win the ball game. Charlie Prince came up fast and confused Thompson, who just about had his hands on it. Charlie made him fumble. Scott, who had been playing a brilliant defensive game all afternoon, was "Johnny on the spot" and fell on it for a major . . . which, added to a Cam Gray placement, was just enough to keep Varsity in the football race.

In the long history of football it is the first time we can remember that Varsity actually got the better of the breaks, but it can't happen twice in a row, and we assuredly can't gamble for breaks against the Redmen—so let's start rolling, gang, or else —!

Back Campus Sports Review

Fumbles, Forwards, Feature
Faculty Football Fare
VICTORIA 6, U.C. 6

Interfaculty football served up a choice dish for rugby fans Friday afternoon on the back campus, when University College gained a last-minute 6-6 stalemate with Victoria after a thrilling see-saw battle. Included in the varied grid menu were frequent fumbles, long forward passes and lightning runs.

Victoria scored the first point of the game on the last play before the half-time whistle. Casserly's punt bounding behind the U.C. line. After the intermission the Artusens came right back, with Munroe Murray, shifty-gaited backfielder, slamming his way to the Vic twenty-yard stripe. It was a fifty-yard run. U.C. lined up quickly, and McLean shot a touchdown pass to Essery over the Vic line. The placement went wide, leaving the score 5-1 for U.C.

Led by the Dales, Joe and Jack, and Casserly's lofty hoists, Victoria forced the play, only to have bad snaps relieve the pressure. Finally Doug McPherson wound up and tossed a perfect pitch over the goal-line to ArtTrickey. The Scarlet and Gold outside made no mistake on the play.

With little more than a minute to go, U.C. launched a drive that culminated thirty yards out from their opponents' goal line. Murray again hit the spotlight with a shoe-string catch on a forward pass, advancing play to midfield. Again the forward pass play was on, and Goodman took two short tosses to put U.C. in position for a point.

Although we vowed it wouldn't happen again, here we are writing about co-ed cheer leaders once more. The majority of Varsity students weren't a bit impressed by the feminine section of Western's cheer-leaders, mainly because they couldn't see her in action. For future generations, perhaps, the Stadium officials might arrange to have the visitors sit in the southern section. Here the antics of a co-ed cheer leader would be visible to the whole stadium.

This Sadie Hawkins is responsible for a lull in feminine sporting circles at present. Her innovation will just last for a week, after which most of the girls can get down to business.

There are 2 games scheduled, however, for the opening of the basketball season. On Thursday at seven Victoria Juniors will play Physiotherapy. From present indications, it looks as if Vic Juniors will come out on top. Friday, at six o'clock, St. Hilda's seniors meet U.C. seniors at the O.C.E. gym, and this will be a game to see if you aren't going to Montreal.

Karry promptly hoofed the ball to the deadline, tying the score 6-6.

Eddie Goodman, Munroe Murray, George Karry and Morton Pinkus stood out for University College, while the Dales brothers, along with Casserly and Hogg, paced the Vic attack, which functioned much more smoothly than it did in the Mulock Cupper's season debut against junior S.P.S.

BLUE TEAM WINS OVER MUSTANGS

Barely had the second quarter started when Western started to roll. A Faust to Hurley pass put Thompson in position to kick a single. Western continued to drive, with Hilton and Farmer plunging hard. Then a Farmer to Hurley forward and a lateral to Thompson moved them to Varsity's 13 yard line. Successive plunges brought it to the 1 yard line where Hurley went over on his second attempt. It was not converted. Oliphant, Willis and Kent kept Toronto completely bottled up with their splendid tackling.

As the second half opened Toronto seemed to wake up and Rowland and Gray started to plunge down the field. Prince also clicked on a couple of passes to Scott. Then assisted by a Western penalty for no yards, Gray kicked a placement from 15 yards out.

In the final stanza Western again started their forward attack featuring Alf Hurley, and their running attack with Faust, and gained a single point. Western lost the ball on downs but recovered it by intercepting a Varsity pass. Then Gray and Rowland plunged the ball to Western territory where Prince kicked his touchdown-scoring kick. Western could have tied it up in the last minute but elected to try a placement that was blocked in the last minute.

Varsity attempted twelve passes and completed five. The Mustangs threw the same amount but completed eight for a much better yardage-gain. They also moved the sticks eleven times to Toronto's seven.

GONE IS THE AGE OF BREAKOWNS

"Fishing" for a broken drill

UNDER TERRIFIC IMPACT, STRESS, WEAR, NICKEL ALLOYS STAND UP!

"Fishing" for a broken drill pipe a few hundred feet down in the ground was a nerve-racking job, with the whole crew standing idle. To prevent costly breakages, oil men have learned to take advantage of strong, tough Nickel Alloys.

Today, Nickel Steel cutters bite through the solid rock. Nickel Steel bit hoods stand up under constant shock and stress. Travelling blocks of Nickel Steel lift thousands of feet of drill stem weighing 100 tons or more to the surface. All parts subject to unusual strain, abrasion or corrosion are of Nickel Alloys. And in the refineries, where metals must operate at temperatures ranging from 70 degrees below zero to 2000 degrees above, at pressures up to 3000 pounds per square inch, and often under extremely corrosive conditions, Nickel Alloys are indispensable.

In opening up oil fields throughout the world, Canadian drillers have been the key men. Canadian Nickel has gone with them to speed their work and reduce overhead.

Nickel ore, lying dormant beneath Canada's Sudbury Basin, brings no wealth to Canada. But the mining, smelting and refining of this ore provides employment, directly and indirectly for thousands of Canadians. The sale of Nickel for peaceful industry the world over, brings a vast measure of prosperity to Canada.

'COURTING PERIOD SHOULD BE LONGER FOR HAPPINESS'

Quarrels Are the Time for Reasoned Judgment, not Emotionalism

IF DOUBTFUL GET ADVICE

An extended period of courtship was seen as the best guarantee of future happiness in married life, by Rev. J. D. Parks, who addressed a group of the Student Christian Movement in Hart House yesterday on the subject "Preparation for Christian Marriage."

The chief advantage of an extended period of preliminary courtship is that it allows a reasoned comparison of personalities and a greater knowledge of ideals and tastes, he said. It is when persons get married quickly, carried away by their emotions, that they afterwards regret their step and say "Love is blind."

"If in doubt about marriage, and you feel that you are being carried along by your emotions and play-acting, don't hesitate to ask the advice of some disinterested person who has had enough experience with life to know," he advised the students.

Quarrels are no time for "highly emotional gymnastics," he said, but an opportunity to use one's reasoned judgment to see whether they rise around vital principles or just minor issues. "If, for instance, the quarrel arises around selfishness, it may be legitimate or it may be a sign of inherent selfishness."

GIRLS CO-OPERATE BY DATING UP MEN

Half the campus is dated up. The other half is about to be dated up. The supply of girls is running out. The shortage is getting serious. There is lack of establishing a Sadie Hawkins' Bureau.

"This week, the girls do all the dating. They do all the entertaining and they do all the paying. What's more, they like it."

The whole thing's just a mammoth girl-chase-boy idea. And Whitney Hall certainly isn't slow on the uptake.

Last night, all the freshmen got together and phoned U.C. residences. Howard MacLaughlin answered the phone. "Sadie Hawkins asking," said a voice. "Oh yes," breathed Howard. "What can I do for you?"

Psychological Version Of Broadcast Explained

Prof. Ketchum Cites Similar Incidence of Mob
Hysteria

"NORMAL REACTION"

Yesterday Professor David Ketchum was interviewed by The Varsity regarding the psychologist's interpretation of the mass hysteria caused in North America Sunday night by a fantastic radio play.

Professor Ketchum, being a specialist in Social Psychology, gave a logical elucidation to the amazing phenomenon. Before entering upon his explanation, it might be fitting to describe the incidents that provoked this continent into an hysterical mood.

On a coast-to-coast network from 8 to 9, the Columbia Broadcasting Company was presenting an obviously realistic version of H. G. Wells' fiction fantasy, "The War of the Worlds," by Orson Welles and the Mercury Theatre of the Air. A statement issued by Columbia said: "It was announced at the beginning of the program, twice during its unfolding, and again at the end, that the program was a dramatization of an old novel." The drama commenced with a weather report, dance music followed and then came the startling news flash about an observatory professor noting a series of gas explosions on the planet Mars. Numerous news bulletins followed, reporting the landing of a meteor near Princeton, N.J., killing 1,500 persons. The meteor was discovered to be a metal cylinder containing

SINGLE TICKETS SELLING FOR SOPHOMORE STOMP AT UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

Can it be that University College co-eds are backward? Can it then be that they are stingy? Can it be that they haven't heard of Sadie Hawkins' Week? No, you shoot, gosh no!

Yet something seems to be the matter judging by the ticket sales for the coming U.C. Sophomore Stomp to be held Thursday in the Women's Union. For, astonishing to say, the girls are buying single tickets in fine fashion, but the poor, over-burdened males are still doing most of the double-ticket buying.

Can it be that U.C. men have to take second place to the men of School when it comes to glamour, magnetism and personality? A thousand voices cry, "No!" So rally around dear old Sadie, girls and boys, and take advantage of the Sophomore Stomp (the U.C. second year party in disguise) to get to know that secret passion. Come single or come double—but come! (Perhaps you'll meet him there.)

Galivanting Gals Go Ga-Ga Over Well-Mannered, Masculine Males

The unanimous opinion of Toronto's fairer undergrads is that the perfect escort is an imaginary male creature running around the totally uninhabited parts of our earth. That such a person could actually come into the realm of their ken seems inconceivable. They were ready and willing, however, to give helpful hints to their would-be beau ideals.

Contrary to popular expectations, good looks are not essential to the potential Romeo, "unless of course," says Fran Carlisle, "he is a terrific looking drip."

Prue McKin, who hails from Halifax, insists, "He should definitely be well shaved, but he should do it possible avoid looking as if he had done the job with an unwieldy axe."

Marg Eagleson of Tate House, expands this theory, asserting, "Men with

SCHOLARSHIPS

The Convener of Scholarship Committee of the Canadian Federation of University Women announces the following scholarships and fellowships to be offered during the session 1939-40:

1. International (A.A.U.W. Fellowship Crusade) Fellowship;
2. International Residential Scholarship at Crosby Hall;
3. International Senior Fellowship in Arts;
4. Helsinki Hospitality Fellowship.

Full information regarding these awards will be found on the Bulletin Board in the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall. Application forms may be secured from the Convener of the Scholarship Committee of the Canadian Federation of University Women, Acadia University, Wolfville, Nova Scotia.

OPENING MEETING OF RIFLE GROUP HELD YESTERDAY

Indoor Shooting Season Begins with Meeting at Hart House

NO WOMEN MEMBERS

Women and accidents—these are two things you won't find at the retreat of the University Rifle Association deep in the Hart House basement. This was the information given by Eric French, association president, at the opening of the indoor shooting season yesterday afternoon.

One member pointed out that the only time accidents might happen is when the C.O.T.C. invades the range and the recruits shoot out the lights. There is no objection to the women, but the only time they do appear is on Alumni Night, and then their performance is far from expert.

From a wooden padlocked box Eric produced the silver Mitchell Cup, on which the efforts of over a hundred association members will be concentrated for the next few months. S.P.S. won the cup last year. This year—well, Eric wouldn't promise, but Arts won the Deltary shield for outdoor trophy by laying claim to the indoor trophy themselves.

These Hart House marksmen shoot for the sport of it. There is no connection with a military organization, nor any P.T. credits to be earned.

SHORT STORY TECHNIQUE TO BE WRITER'S TOPIC

The Victoria College Writer's Group will hold its second meeting for this year on Wednesday, November 2, from 5-6 in Wynniwood. Professor Birney of University College will speak to the group on the subject "The Technique of Short Story Writing." This meeting will be a discussion meeting and an opportunity for you to ask any questions on the different aspects of short story writing.

Miss Rosemarie Schawlow, who is convening the group this year, asks that all those who are intending to come frequently sign the list on the Women's Literary Society notice board some time this week.

ACTA VICTORIANA APPEARS TODAY; PREMIER EDITION

Undergraduate Magazine of Victoria College
Released

THREE SECTIONS

According to its editors, the Acta Victoriana, undergraduate magazine of Victoria College, which appears today, carries on its well-established policy. The first section of the magazine embodies undergraduate literary efforts, and articles of general interest; the second section has five departments, the World of Books, the Monocle, Art, Music and Drama, Sports, and Off Key. The latter department is a new innovation and is devoted to humour, while the Monocle is a critique of undergraduate life.

The cover of the new issue strikes an exotic note in an abstract design by Harold Ayres, and the magazine is illustrated by two full-page cuts by Des Johnson and Loyd Whiting.

The present issue contains no graduate contributions, but Dr. Grant Lathe will contribute to the magazine's next issue. A series of articles hailing from various campuses across Canada will be inaugurated in the near future.

This year for the first time unpublished contributions will be returned with criticism. This is to encourage literary effort. Bill Hamley, the new science editor, has attempted to bridge the gap between Acta and the scientist. Thus, it is hoped, a more evenly balanced publication has been produced.

Leaping Doors Puzzle Dinners; It's Silemium

Jumping Jack Behaviour of Restaurant Doors
Explained

The answer is Silemium. The famous swinging doors at Diana Sweet's whose "open Sesame" antics have amused late feeding co-eds and bleary-eyed ones from the day of their inauguration last fall. A beam of light shines across in front of the door in such a way that anyone passing through will break the beam.

Whenever anyone crosses the pencil of light the door flies open. A little machine called a photo-electric cell is chiefly responsible for the jumping jack antics. The light shines on a little metal disc made from a very rare element called Silemium. The light shining on this metal causes it to give off negative electrons which are attracted to a positive pole. The electricity which is turned on in the relay uses these electrons to cross between the poles and (Continued on page 4)

MODERN GERMANY TO BE DISCUSSED

The U.C. Literary and Athletic Society will hold its second meeting this evening at eight o'clock. Professor C. Lewis of Trinity College will speak on "Germany Today." Professor Lewis was a student in prewar Germany and has studied the present situation quite intensively, having visited that country frequently during the past years. Professor McAndrew, Registrar of University College, will present the keys of the society to present and former members of the executive of the Lit. who graduate this year. Refreshments will be served.

Australian Debaters Fond of Hart House

TEAM DIVIDED

The second Hart House debate on November 2 will consider whether "in the opinion of this House, the maintenance of the British Empire is a barrier to progress." The visiting Australian debaters will support opposing sides: Mr. Fred Thonemann will speak in favour of the motion with Mr. Harold Beveridge, and his team-mate, Mr. Hugh Robson with Mr. Dave Owen will lead the Noes.

Both debaters have had wide experience in public speaking. Hugh Robson, L.L.B., from the University of Sydney, was on the debaters committee for three years, culminating with his membership on the team which won the debating contest between six Australian universities.

Mr. Fred Thonemann is at present a student of science in the University of Melbourne. In the years 1934-7, he was a member of the Melbourne university debating team. He has also won numerous prizes for oratory, and has taken a prominent part in dramatics.

For this debate special arrangements have been made to accommodate fifty feminine visitors who will observe events from the gallery.

ARCHAEOLOGY STAFF SCHEDULED TO GIVE SERIES OF LECTURES

Illustrated public lectures are being introduced by the Royal Ontario Museum as a regular Tuesday afternoon feature. Commencing November 1, lectures will be given every Tuesday at 5.10 p.m. in the museum auditorium.

Among the topics scheduled for discussion during the month of November are the following: Statues of the Madonna, by Prof. C. T. Curdell; Movement of the Vikings, by Prof. C. T. Curdell; How a Chinese Artist Viewed Life Twenty-Three Centuries Ago, by Prof. W. C. White; Bronzes from the Valley of the Assassins, by Prof. H. A. Thompson and W. C. White and Crafts, by Prof. H. A. Thompson and Classical Revivals in the Arts.

December lectures will include Arts and Crafts of Negro Africa, by Prof. T. F. McIlwraith, and A Prehistoric Indian Village in Ontario, by Prof. P. Nash.

The first seven lectures will be given by members of the staff of the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology.

Personality, Pulchritude, Poise Desired in Damsels For Dating

A happy medium seems to be the unanimous choice of Varsity boys regarding their ideal date girl.

Those interviewed mutually required several assets, namely, she had to be fairly good looking, possess a pleasing personality and have moderate conversational ability. Make-up, in excess, was frowned upon, but just enough to take away the wan look from over-studying was lauded as a desirable thing.

Bill Hewson, IV Law, student at Trinity, summed up his idea of the name of perfection by saying, "She would be a happy mean in all things except dancing; in that she would excel."

Ken Jeanneret, IV U.C., another lawyer, stated that his ideal must have, in addition to good taste and manners, good looks.

The visiting Australian debaters expressed unqualified admiration for the University of Toronto in an interview yesterday. The debaters, first to visit Canada representing the National Union of Australian Universities in an official capacity, will debate in Hart House on November 1. This will be their eighth debate of their present tour.

The debaters, H. R. W. Robson, a graduate in law from Sydney, and F. F. Thonemann, a third year science student at Melbourne, were very enthusiastic about Hart House. "This palatial building represents the most impressive aspect of university life which we have seen in Canada," said Mr. Thonemann.

Although the University of Melbourne constructed a $500,000 Union House on Dr. Bryden's return from Toronto last term, it has not the extensive athletic facilities of Hart House. Also, women are admitted to most parts of this centre for student activities. Mr. Thonemann confirmed that this was the result of a riot staged by the Sex Equality Club. In Melbourne, however, there is compensation in the fact that the men have the advantage of Dutch treats.

Courses in marriage or domestic economy have not been established in (Continued on page 4)

STUENTS TO DIRECT

The University Drama Committee, after the success of its first effort, "Elizabeth Bennet," last year, has now embarked on a new policy of widening its activities. The plan is to inaugurate a series of one-act afternoon plays, to be given on the stage of Hart House, utilizing the acting resources of the whole university, with student directors to be invited by the committee.

The first of the series is to be presented on December 5, and will be under the direction of Mr. Sholome Gelber, who has spent the last year in New York at the Neighborhood Playhouse. (Continued on page 4)

For Worthy Students

In yesterday's Varsity there appeared this statement allegedly made by some members of the Toronto Student Assembly concerning National Scholarships at its meeting last Thursday night. "The Students' Administrative Council has also been approached for aid, but they will ratify nothing until definite action on the part of the student body has been taken".

Such a statement thrown out for general consumption is apt to create the impression that the S.A.C. which is definitely interested in a National Scholarship campaign is somewhat impervious to demands made for students in need of financial assistance. In wishing to correct this erroneous idea Mr. E. A. Macdonald, secretary of the Council, has made the statement, a part of which is printed.

"The S.A.C. has been supporting National Scholarships for some years through the National Federation of Canadian University Students, and the bulk of the work of the Council is devoted to assisting needy students and worthy students in the University."

"Regarding the proposal of the Student Assembly, it was stated by the Council, that when more definite information could be presented to the Council, as to how these scholarships were to be collected and administered, then the Council would be glad to consider supporting this activity of the Student Assembly. There was no statement made to the effect that it would not ratify anything until the student body had taken action."

"Further on in the article, reporting the meeting it states that anonymous letters have been received by the Student Assembly depicting the terrible financial condition of certain students in the University of Toronto. There is no need for any student to write anonymous letters about so vital a matter as this. They need only approach the Students' Administrative Council, and if their condition is serious and requires help, they can get it there. On Friday last, 350.00 dollars was distributed though that office as gifts to needy students who without this help might have had to withdraw from the University."

In all fairness to the Council we would add that it has, mainly through the work of Mr. Macdonald, been doing its utmost to help as many students as possible. The fact that the letters received by the T.S.A. were anonymous might suggest that perhaps the need was not so great as might be expected. The editor of a daily paper soon develops an antipathy for unsigned letters and feels that those who have a charge should not be unwilling to back it up with their signature.

Any constructive plan for assisting boys or girls with the ability and the qualifications for a University degree, to obtain financial assistance will be considered with respect by the members of the S.A.C. But it does not merit criticism for continuing to use its funds for the best possible good until a better plan has been introduced. The fact that so many private gifts are made to Mr. Macdonald for distribution among those judged worthiest should testify to the confidence placed in him and in the Students' Council.

The Value of Debate

Some complacent reactionaries regard as "stupid" and profitless the open discussion of any question whose answer is not axiomatic. Those who share this view fail to comprehend the first principle of debate.

Terms whose bias-ridden popular use is ambiguous provide the raw material of debate. And the contest is not determined by bombast unless every rule of parliamentary procedure is ignored.

Debate is a test of the participant's ability to think quickly and consistently and to express himself clearly. A judged debate can only be won by sophistry when the unsuccessful debaters are more stupidly specious or dull-witted than their opponents.

The Hart House Debates, however, are not officially judged in this sense, as the decision rests with the members of Hart House who form the audience and also provide the speeches. This decision may not always correspond with what a committee of impartial judges would decide, since the question may involve beliefs cherished by some who, despite the barrage of logic and eloquence from the opposing speakers, will not relinquish their "principles" merely because their own spokesman proved to be less competent.

Nonetheless, while they are not fights to an official finish, the Hart House Debates—or more accurately—"discussions"—provide challenging stimuli to undergraduate thought on some of the most important and subtle questions of the day. Often they involve fundamental ethical choices.

Much as it may dismay the bigot to have the flimsy foundations of his favourite fancies exposed to public view, to make that expose is the privilege of any citizen in a democracy. And to encourage this wholesome habit of airing fallacies in the fresh air of controversy is the raison d'être of the Debates Room.

Got The Jitters

Every now and then a great play takes the world by storm. Mr. H. G. Wells' production, "The War of the Worlds", whether it be a great play or not, was received in a manner unprecedented in the history of drama.

The great American public has got the jitters. No other explanation can be found for the mass hysteria of last Sunday night. It seems incredible that a normal group of citizens, peacefully enjoying the comforts of a Sunday evening at home, should be so far rocketed from their complacency as to flee for their lives on the announcement that a "metal cylinder" containing strange creatures from Mars armed with "death rays" had landed. It is true that the presentation was realistic; Mr. Wells' art, and the imagination of Mr. Orson Welles combined in a most effective manner. But we are accustomed to realistic drama on the radio. Comic strip and movie short never tire of depicting foolish situations arising from persons mistaking radio drama for reality. It is because we have been exposed to a series of crises and harrowing suspenses during the last year, events associated in our minds with short wave broadcasts and hurried news flashes, that Sunday night's fabulous announcement caught us unawares.

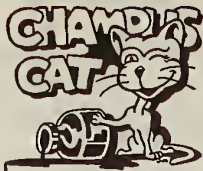

When a panicky crowd mobs the streets, swarms the police and ties up telephone lines, when peaceful citizens hide themselves or flee the city, when switchboard operators are asked such questions as "What time will it be the end of the world?", and "I can see the smoke from the bombs drifting over toward New York, what shall I do?", all because of a fantastic radio drama, it is time to worry about the frayed nerves of the civilian population.

Royal Alexandra

Another play that will undoubtedly provoke thought and discussion was presented last evening at the Royal Alexandra Theatre. The play was J. B. Priestley's "I've Been Here Before", and was com-

American space ships wiped out four Martian cylinders and three ice cream cones in a fierce battle off Mars today. Professor Pizpuzek, Ph.D., paleontologist, landed in Cdfrisk today armed with three microbes and a five-cent cigar. He wiped out half the population.

From Shrdlu-on-the-Hudson comes the report that forty-four regiments of skyscrapers landed in Vladivostok today. They demanded the return of the colonies on Jupiter. "If we don't get national self-determination, we'll blow your brains out," said one spokesman. "We shall have peace in our time," shouted an old Martian, emerging from the space ship singing "We're Having a Heat Wave."

TRINITY 2—JR. MEDS 1

Trinity made a clean sweep of their series with Junior Meds by slaying the Meds 2-1 yesterday afternoon on the back campus. In their first encounter Trinity trounced the Meds 3-1. Blocked kicks again proved a stumbling block for the losers. George Renison crashed a Meds' kick formation in the first half. Grass recovered for Trinity, and Henry Hussey scored the first point from this vantage with a long kick to the deadline.

Successive plunges by George Sparkhall and Jim Snyder moved the Trinity team back into pay-dirt territory a few minutes later. Hussey again came through with a single to make the score 2-0 for Trinity. Sparkhall intercepted a Med pass to advance play to the three-yard line as the half-time whistle went.

The doctors had the better of the play in the final frame, and finally

ENGLISH RUGGER TEAM RE-CAPTURES TROPHY

The English rugger team again captured the intercollegiate trophy after a hard game, defeating McGill 4-0 in Montreal on Saturday.

Varsity proved to be one of the best balanced teams in many years. The first half was spent entirely in McGill's territory and due to the Toronto scrum being out-pushed, Varsity were not able to get the ball to the three-quarter line. DeWolfe and Robertson played brilliant ball in the scrum.

SCHOOL LACROSSE TEAM TOPS UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

In a fast scoring second half the engineer thirds managed to collect eight goals to defeat the collegians' lacrosse team by a score of 13 to 4.

In the first half it appeared as if the game was going to be a photo-finish, but the reserve strength of the engineers ran the legs off the wearied collegians, who were so tired they did not seem to care.

McClough, who played goal for U.C., was brilliant in his play, making sensational stops from close in. It was his fine play that kept the score five to four in the first half. The tired collegians, however, were no match for the fast and tricky School team and in a short time were out of the game. Audley and Jones were good for School in their offensive drive.

broke into the scoring column on Biggs' long punt after John Quinlan had snared a Trinity fumble. Meds lost a chance to tie the count in the final quarter when an attempted drop-kick was blocked by Trinity.

Paul Snyder, Jim Snyder and George Sparkhall paced the Trinity attack, while Bill Hair and Biggs went well for the Medics.

Trinity: Drummond, Whitelaw, Dunlop, Wright, Lowndes, Fee, Grass, Hussey, J. Snyder, Harris, Partridge, P. Snyder; subs, Curson, Lindsay, Hunt, Boxer, Sparkhall, Renison, Alley, Seagrass, Cranfield, Baxter, McLean, Robertson, Walker.

Meds: Hair, Jolly, Biggs, Riggs, Corcoran, Anglin, Jamieson, Mottram, Dixon, McLean, Ross, Cody; subs, Benson, Moffat, Campbell, Quinlan, Arthur, Newman.

SR. MEDS 7—SR. S.P.S. 2

Sr. Meds continued their string of victories yesterday afternoon by defeating the vastly improved Sr. S.P.S. team on the Trinity campus 7-1.

The determined doctors got the first break of the game in the form of a 15-yard penalty to School on the partially blocked kick ruling, which they followed up with a 9-yard Clinkett to McNeill forward pass. Freddie Clinkett then got a single on an attempted placement. Half time score, Meds 1, School 0.

Grosskurth intercepted a pass for School on Meds 20 yard line which Patterson followed up with a single to deadlock the score at three-quarter time.

It was in the last quarter that things began popping. First, a handsome hoof by Clinkett for a single put the Medics ahead again. With two minutes to go, a Frank Merriwell finish found the Meds recovering a fumble on the engineers' 19 yard line. On the strength of some loose playing after a partially blocked kick, Meds crashed through for a touch, Gus O'Brien being the white-haired boy. The convert failed and the final score stood Sr. Meds 7, Sr. School 1. Emmett and Clinkett looked good for the victors, whilst Patterson and Black were School's best bets.

Sr. Meds: O'Brien, Hall, Mighton, Bally, Stephens, Wright, McNeill, McGoy, Fleming, Clinkett, Emmett, Lindsay, Cowan, Wayman, Bean, Bell, McCullough, Finklestein, McLure, Guyott.

Sr. S.P.S.: Patterson, Williamson, MacPherson, Black, Forrester, Ford, Brisley, Bridgland, Holden, Woods, Grosskurth, Rodzik, Chisholm, Galway, Currie, Milne, Creet, Keefe, Chrasto.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

THE AFTERMATH

Now that nearly everyone has managed to push their hearts down their throats to a normal position, after the photo-finish of last Saturday's football game, we can turn our eyes eastward, put our hands in our pocketbooks, and prepare for next Saturday's invasion of McGill. It has been many a year since a team went through a whole intercollegiate season with a defeat and in spite of their powerful showing up to date we don't think McGill is the team to accomplish this feat. Although whether it will be the Blues or Mustangs who turn the trick and upset them, is a toss-up.

The Redmen's two-game series with Queen's certainly didn't add to their hopes of a clean sweep of the schedule. Two Saturdays ago Bob Keefe, hard plunging half, was forced to the sidelines and may have to miss next week's game. Last Saturday Murray Telfer, another regular half, received a dislocated shoulder, and Lou Ruschin, their captain and inside wing, came out of the game with a badly wrenched knee, and both may view the next game from the grandstand.

All of which adds up to the fact that the Blue team have an excellent chance of winning in Montreal. In fact, now that all the bad football is out of their system and now that McGill has been materially weakened, we will go so far as to predict a Blue triumph (yes, we read yesterday's S.O.S.).

There are only 275 tickets available for the game in Toronto and we have been told that a complete sell-out is expected in Montreal, so do your shopping early. A special through train leaves Toronto at 5:30 Friday and arrives in Montreal at 11:30, which is as good as the Flyer's time.

WITH THE SAILORS

U. of T.'s dinghy racers took 6th place in the American intercollegiate meet for the Boston Dinghy Club Challenge Cup, and although other newspapers might think that 6th out of 26th is "well back" we are of the opinion that it is a remarkably fine effort. The Blue sailors were competing for the first time and against the finest collegiate sailors on the continent and under new and trying circumstances such as tide water and new boats. We offer them our heartiest congratulations!

WIDENING THE SPORTS PROGRAM

Ever since Warren Stevens has become Director of Athletics, Toronto students have been offered an ever-broadening athletic program. More international contacts have been arranged and sailing, skiing and golfing have been brought in or improved. It has been drawn to our attention that although there are a great many cricketers attending the university, the sport receives no official support. We think that with a little official encouragement the response to a plan for a cricket club would be immediate, at any rate it is worth considering.

INTRAMURAL FOOTBALL

As the intercollegiate football schedule is at the half way mark we now have a fairly good idea of who's who. In the group with Sr. Meds, Sr. School and St. Mike's, Sr. Meds have completely out-classed their opposition and are the team to beat for the Mulock Cup. In the second group Trinity and Dents are still fighting for the playoff position, with Jr. Meds out of the running. Jr. School are leading the other division, with U.C. and Vic still in the hunt. Unless Vic defeat School tomorrow, however, the latter will enter into the semi-finals. The crowds have been much better at the back-campus games this year, and judging from spectator remarks, a thrilling bill of fare is being dished up.

OVER THE NET

By Bernie Shifman

In one of the closest volleyball games of the season yesterday, Junior School defeated last year's champs, Emmanuel College. Emmanuel got away to a good start, taking the first game. School, however, were determined to win and came right back and took the next two close games, winning the encounter.

Emmanuel, who last year came through a lengthy season with few defeats, played their usual fine game, setting up the ball and smashing it away for points. School, however, were not bewildered by the play nor the reputation of their rivals, and counted point for point with their opponents. It took the third game to decide the victors and School came from behind to win match point.

THE WHOLE CAMPUS IS TALKING ABOUT CLAYTON'S DEPARTMENT STORE

Most things that are news to-day, are stale to-morrow. But Clayton's has a story that's front page stuff every day of the week. For Clayton's department store, with six floors of fashion for both men and women, feature "Classics for College".

Clayton's also specializes in a SPECIAL STUDENTS' ALLOWANCE PLAN for both eds and co-eds. This enables the student to pay for his clothes, very conveniently, out of his weekly allowance.

Drop into Clayton's to-day, to-morrow and every day, and see for yourself their wonderful bargains. You'll know the "why" of all the gabbing.

Clayton's is conveniently located at 230 Yonge St., opposite Shuter — and is open every evening.

HYSTERIA EXPLAINED PSYCHOLOGICALLY

ing odd creatures from Mars armed with "death rays" for attacking the people of this earth.

"The fact that America should be panic-stricken by such a fantastic play," said Professor Ketchum, "is not such an abnormal reaction as popularly thought. If the people had not so acted then the situation would have been stranger. The tendency of people today is to be suspicious of anything at all unusual. Mr. Welles, however, succeeded through some very clever dramatization, in convincing the masses that we were being attacked from Mars. You ask if mob psychology applies here. Yes, in a peculiar fashion. Although a person might be alone in front of his loud speaker, he might be affected as if by mob psychology. You see, the series of news bulletin acted somewhat like the impulse from a mob. Each additional bulletin added its facts to a situation which rapidly became more vivid and probable. Finally, America was swayed by the bulletins as a mob is swayed by false propaganda. As a person can be hypnotized into believing that my finger is a cigarette, so can a mob be soley concentrated on suggestion of self-destruction. A listener on Sunday would be entirely unaware of the room and people surrounding him. His attention would be drawn to one object—namely, his loud speaker. The rapid fire of news bulletins would make the listener incapable of thinking out the probability of the situation. False propaganda is issued so fast to a country that they are only given time to act and not to think. Such was the case on Sunday. An intelligent person would

VISITING DEBATERS LIKE HART HOUSE

Australian universities, Mr. Robson said. The engineers in Australia are the same hard-bitten, rugged souls that they are in Toronto, "but in Canada they try to imitate the Rockies." Neither of the debaters had ever heard of Sadie Hawkins before they visited Canada.

During the last European crisis, the Commonwealth stood firmly behind Great Britain, they declared. They believed that this reflected general student opinion. Since ninety-five per cent of the population of Australia is of British descent, opinion which is generated by the ties of tradition and sentiment is far stronger than anti-British isolationist movements. The Australians regard the position of Canada as a very fortunate one because of the necessity for its defense by other countries.

Periodic waves of fear of foreign invasion sweep Australia from time to time, they admitted. The militaristic imperialism of Japan is a source of constant concern for the statesmen in a hand of enormous area with small and ultimately stable population. The policy of a "White Australia" is rigidly enforced, for it is almost a religion there. Mr. Thonemann pointed out the fact that in spite of all, Japan is Australia's second-best customer, diverting a large proportion of trade away from England.

That sports could attract such a tremendous interest on the part of students was almost unbelievable to them, for in Australia, few beyond the participants are interested. There, cricket and horse racing vie with each other for the greater share of popularity. "Your rugby is as barbarous as trench warfare. Besides, the play is too close and the ball is out of play too much to meet the approval of eyes which are in love with the speed and openness of English rugby," averred Mr. Robson.

COURTSHIP PERIOD SHOULD BE LONGER FOR HAPPINESS

The preliminary courtship period, he said, is characterized by idealism, emotionalism and a desire to become independent of one's family. Persons who want to make over society to their ideals should not be mocked, since ideals are needed "to harmonize all the instincts of adolescence."

"There isn't a very wide gap between this idealism and cynicism," he warned. "The person who has been up at the emotional peak of idealism, if frustrated in his desire for marriage, may easily become unbalanced. This is one of the hardest social problems we have to meet." Said Dr. Parks, who has had wide experience in the field of religious psychology in Toronto.

"I deplore the fact that the period of preliminary courtship is so often, in university life, composed largely of expensive social activities," he said. Quoting from the findings of Dr. Ernest R. Groves, Professor of Sociology at the University of North Carolina, on the costs of students' social activities in some North American universities, he said that a male student in some colleges often has to pay $4 or upwards "for an ordinary night's entertainment," with his girl. This would include a movie, dance, refreshments and gasoline. Some week-end parties might cost him $25, according to the report.

"I don't think that a person can choose a mate to the best of advantage without having had opportunities to meet members of the other sex in varied group activities," said Dr. Parks. have been hit just as severely as the illiterate under the conditions of that drama."

Professor Ketchum told of a similar broadcast reaction in England last year. It seems that a Mr. Knox was dramatizing an attack on London. Londoners actually believed on an invading force was marching down Whitehall in the heart of London.

What is the reason for all this, you ask? ... why, you saps, IT'S SADIE HAWKINS WEEK. ...

MANY CRASHERS have original ideas, but here's one whose methods are unique. ... ART MUSIC AND DRAMA

ately presented by the original London company.

Here is Priestley once again tackling the problems of time. In this case, he goes to work on the theory of recurrence promulgated by P. D. Ouspensky who seems to have written an astonishing book on "A New Model of the Universe". The theory is that things that one experiences today are merely repetitions of antecedent acts and experiences, and his action takes place in a small inn in North Yorkshire, where all the characters meet by accident.

Although many may disagree, we feel that "London's most exciting play" is just another show. Priestley has obviously worked hard to put his ideas across, but we question the use of time theories as subject matter for sound drama, especially as written by this author. The trouble lies in the fact that Priestley has very little to say, and takes three acts to say it. However, in spite of flaws in the actual construction of the play, the small cast of players manage to build up an atmosphere that carries the play through to a fairly successful conclusion.

Priestley's spokesman in the piece is Dr. Gortler, an exiled German professor who expounds the theories on Time and Recurrence. Ernst Deutsch plays the role with a simple sincerity that is admirable. However, the acting plums will have to go to Wilfrid Lawson. His characterization reached the heights of a Hardwicke. However, it is not fair to single out members of the cast as all the players were equally competent.

The technical end of the production was excellent. The box set was one of the finest seen here to date, and lighting and sound-effects were excellent. In fact, it was these very details that helped so greatly to create the mystical atmosphere that was so essential for this production.

St. Hilda's College

Mrs. Lorna Sheard, physical culturist and exponent of the Stanislawsky method, will speak at Cartwright Hall, St. Hilda's College, this afternoon.

Quoting from one letter: "We have complexes, are inclined to be slightly neurotic, couldn't raise moustaches if we tried, and God knows we tried. ..."

SALLY RAND, of all people, addressed some of her fans in the freshman class at the University of Pennsylvania the other week on "What College Can Mean to You". ... She also spoke on the art of the dance, and she attributed the current dance crazes to the natural instinct to dance and the rumblings of unrest and insecurity that have shaken the world. These lectures on the cultural history of the dance were very popular, but the large class was extremely disappointed when Sally did not provide illustrations. ...

ON THE FOOTBALL FRONT ... at Varsity Stadium last Saturday, we had the privilege of watching a girl cheer-leader at work. ... It looks as if Varsity is really behind the times, when we see Western's scream-lined leader, and their fine swing band. ... We admit that the girl cheer-leader problem is dead, but here's one angle which might have been missed. ...

The point seems to have been forgotten that these girls may aid the football squad itself during the game. ... We admit that the boys that play might not get an opportunity to see them ... but think of the chance for the boys that warm the bench ... when the worries of the game get too great, even at a point where tea could not revive you, what could be more pleasing than to watch a girl cheer-leader at work. ... Ah well, perhaps it is too late to bring this up, but I can dream can't I? ...

house. He has selected two short plays, "The Brass Doorknob" and "Pawns", by Wilde. "I have chosen these," said Mr. Gelber, "because of their dramatic content, and because they possess, particularly 'Pawns', the social significance which I believe university drama should have."

Casting is to start immediately in order that a satisfactory pattern of rehearsals may be worked out. Parts are completely open to whoever wishes to try out. "The more the better," commented Gelber.

Mrs. Sheard, who is the founder and directress of the Physical Theatre Course in Montreal, teaches such phases of bodily culture as poise, walking, and stance, which are concerned with the theatre. She teaches this in accordance with the theory of the late Konstantin Stanislawsky, of the Moscow Art Theatre, who insisted on perfection in bodily movements, as well as on proficiency in acting.

In her talk today, Mrs. Sheard will deal with her own theory which she refers to as "Body Sculpture" as well as with technical aspects of the Stanislawsky method. The meeting is open to all who are interested in this phase of the modern theatre.

To Consider Value of Empire to Progress To-night

'PEACE MUST COME THROUGH ANTI-NAZIS'

C. E. Lewis Speaks on Germany, Describing Both Progress and Suppression

PRaises Achievements

Professor C. E. Lewis of Trinity, told the men of University College last night that the only possibility of peace in Europe from Germany's sector is the chance that the anti-Nazi spirit may eventually surpass Hitler's hold.

The first impression received by a visitor to Germany, he stated, is that remarkable progress has been accomplished in work projects. Railways have been improved and modernized; multi-lane highways have been laid from frontier to frontier; huge aerodromes have been constructed across the country; modern buildings have risen in place of old ones and undeveloped areas have been vastly improved. Such are pictures brought from Germany by various engineers and official visitors who have gone there at the invitation of any under the supervision of the government.

But that is only one view of the scene. Professor Lewis explained that such stories are the result of a genius for organization, and that all improvements are in preparation for a war which Germany hopes will make her supreme in the world.

Follies Deign Not To Date

How would you like to be dated a la Sadie Hawkins by one of the hand-picked sun-kissed maidens of the Follies chorus? Just in case you were contemplating the idea, here is what the college cuties think about it all.

"S.P.S. is just trying to save money for the rainy day when they have to buy their tickets to the School At Home," accused Elaine Brown. Fran MacLaughlin, the only red-head of the chorus, calmly declared that she didn't know any S.P.S. men anyway, so there!

"I'd never have the nerve to do it," timidly confessed Joan Tamblin as she listened aghast to tales of bold wenches sliding up to the males they had their eyes on and lining them up to agitate an ankle at some smooth fandango.

"It's a silly idea, but I guess it's

Kaltenborn Will Speak On "What Price Peace"

Radio Commentator will Appear Under Auspices of League at Massey Hall

NOTED TRANSLATOR

H. V. Kaltenborn, who broadcast reassuring comments during the recent European crisis, is appearing in Toronto under the auspices of the League of Nations Society. The subject of his lecture at Massey Hall, Thursday evening, Nov. 10, will be "What Price Peace?"

He is noted for his unique ability to translate Hitler's rapid-fire 73-minute speech, and his comments on its significance. "To prepare a script is utterly out of the question," he said, explaining that to broadcast news comments required his preparation of 35 years of practical newspaper experience.

Mr. Kaltenborn has introduced the new two-way broadcasts between Europe and America, conversing back and forth with Maurice Hindus in Prague, and with Sir Frederick Whyte in London. He has enjoyed interviews with Chiang Kai-Shek, Benes, Hitler and Mussolini. He has been in the thick of the battle and was the first reporter to report war news direct from the war zone.

According to Mr. Kaltenborn's fan mail, news-listeners prefer reassurance, even if slightly biased, to sensational facts relayed by broadcasters.

Mr. Kaltenborn has lectured on journalism for many years in Columbia University and will be conducting a course to teach students of journalism how to understand current events. His speech at Toronto will have the same aim.

The first address of the noon-hour series dealing with "Christianity and the World Crisis" was given in the Women's Union yesterday by Miss Clare Brown, recently appointed secretary of the Student Christian Movement at Toronto, who spoke on "Christianity and Modern Problems".

Mr. Wilson is a graduate of Toronto and now occupies an important post as feature and editorial writer on the Post's staff. His work has given him wide acquaintance with the business and political world and he will approach his subject with that particular background of experience.

Provost Cosgrave, the Provost of Trinity College, will complete the series when he speaks next week on the same topic, but from the point of view of a clergyman.

PRICE OF TICKETS REDUCED BY HALF

Special Car for Swingsters Added Feature for Varsity Rooters

RECORD CROWD EXPECTED

Friday afternoon at five-thirty the Varsity special will leave the Union Station bound for Montreal and the McGill-Varsity rugby game. As in bygone years there will be a substantial number of supporters along with the team, making up the happy throng bound for the land beyond the Ontario-Quebec border.

According to Mr. E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the Students' Administrative Council, railroad prices have been reduced as much as possible by a guarantee of the sale of one hundred and fifty return tickets. The regular week-end rate to Montreal is almost double the price of students' tickets which are available at the S.A.C. office.

Although the tickets have been on sale only a short time they are being sold in numbers which indicate a record-breaking crowd of Varsity supporters at the game on Saturday afternoon.

This special train offers plenty in the way of amusement for students on the outward-bound trip. It will be equipped with a special car for dancing and the melody maestros of the band will be present to offer their latest attainments in swing and sweet music.

Immediately after the game on Saturday there will be a tea-dance in the (Continued on page 4)

Conscription Protested By Laval Students

Quebec Invites Varsity Men to Speak at Meeting This Saturday

LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN

There appears to be only a passive interest here in the meeting of students which the faculties of Laval University, Quebec, are sponsoring this Saturday. The demonstration will take the form of a torchlight parade to be followed by a gathering at Place Montcalm, a hall holding about 2,000 persons.

The purpose of the meeting, which will be conducted in French, is to protest against conscription and participation in foreign wars.

Laval has invited Toronto to send a representative to speak to the gathering. Mr. E. A. Macdonald, secretary-treasurer of the S.A.C., felt that there would be a passing interest, but because of the time and money required to attend, it would not attract the attention which it might otherwise.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Lockhart, general secretary of the Student Christian Movement, placed a high value on such an opportunity for Toronto students to get the French-Canadian point of view.

Paul C. McGillivray, H.U.C., expressed favour in any meeting such as this in which the students can exchange their views. "The government can learn of student trends and it stimulates the opinions of the undergraduates at home," he said.

Harold Beveridge saw "good sense" in such a chance to register university opinion. He considered it a good opportunity to clear up views and hear opinions of those in different environments. "I feel that the results would repay the effort involved," he declared.

Hart House To Admit Fifty Co-eds To Debate

Reporters Wanted

There is still room for a limited number of sports reporters on The Varsity staff. New men are invited to sign the list in the men's office, Hart House. No experience required.

KNIGHT IS CALIBAN IN 'THE TEMPEST'

Josephine King Directs Play in Hart House This Week

STUDENTS IN LEADING ROLE

"The Tempest", under the auspices of G. Wilson Knight, of the English staff at Trinity College, will be presented at Hart House Theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of this week with a matinee on Saturday.

Mr. W. Lyndon Smith, who scored in the role of Iago in Othello and Autolycus in Winter's Tale, will play the role of Prospero, Professor Knight who will attempt to humanize the character of Caliban, a half-deformed monster. Miss Josephine King, director of the play, will interpret the role of Ariel, the elfish sprite who represents air and fire in contrast with the earth and water qualities of Caliban.

Professor Knight believes that "The Tempest" is one of Shakespeare's greatest works, extracting the best features from all his other plays.

John Barnes, Trinity, will play the role of Ferdinand, and John Dickson, U.T.S., Sebastian.

Next week, Professor Knight is to play the part of Macbeth in the Brownlow Card production of the same name.

"PLANT CELLS" IS TOPIC OF DR. BURTON'S ADDRESS

"The survival of Plant Cells after submersion in Liquid Air Science" will be the subject of an address by Dr. E. F. Burton at the Physics Seminar Thursday at 4.15.

Dr. Barnes will also speak on the subject of "Experimental Study of the Rate of a Moving Atomic Clock."

Sadie At Home At Whitney

Whitney Hall is really going to town on Sadie Hawkins' Week.

Take Falconer House, for instance. Yesterday, about 10 co-eds took their men over to the drug store and treated them to a round of pop.

Then they paid the checks.

Last night, they held a Sadie Hawkins' "at-home." The girls phoned Knox College residence. "Sadie speaking," said the voice, when a theologian answered "why don't you come over and bring some of the boys?" In two minutes Falconer House was swarming with theologians.

The girls were waiting to receive them; did the whole thing on a high plane. "How do we won't you sit down?" and all that sort of thing. Two dozen theologians took pews and waited.

Apparently, the co-eds had the whole thing worked out beforehand. A dozen of them barged in with big pads. "We will now," they announced, "interview you."

Australian Orators Side with Varsity Men in Debate 8.15 Tonight

Fifty feminine visitors will be admitted to the Hart House debate to-night when two Australian debaters pair off with two University of Toronto debaters to decide the worth of the British Empire to progress. For this event, which has been sponsored in part by the Students' Administrative Council, special arrangements have been made to accommodate fifty co-eds who will observe events from the gallery.

Formally, the subject of the debate is "whether in the opinion of this house, the maintenance of the British Empire is a barrier to progress." For the first time during their extended debating tour through the universities of Canada, the visiting Australian debaters will support opposing sides. Fred Thome-mann, a student of science at the University of Melbourne will speak in favour of the motion with Harold Beveridge of University College. Hugh Robson, L.L.B., a graduate of the University of Toronto will support the opposition. (Continued on page 4)

U.C. Sophs Postpone Annual Fall Stomp

It may have been due to Sadie Hawkins, or a rise in the price of floor-wax, or perhaps an invasion from Mars, but whatever it was, the second year executive of University College have deemed it advisable to postpone their Sophomore Stomp originally planned for Thursday evening.

When questioned last evening concerning the sudden change in plans, the executive would only state that "unforeseen and unfortunate circumstances have arisen which force a postponement." However, it was intimated that a substitute for the cancelled dance would be held near the end of the term.

Rarely in the history of the social life of the university has an event of this sort been cancelled at the last moment, but the executive felt that there was no other alternative. Those who purchased tickets may have their money refunded from any member of the 4T1 executive of U.C. this week, it was stated.

The interviews certainly were methodical. The questionnaires were marked out in columns. "What," it said, "is your phone number?" "What type do you prefer?" "Have you a steady girl friend?" Only one theologian had the temerity to answer "yes" to this one. Then there was a big space for general remarks. One freshman was described as "bow-legged, but upper half quite nice." Careful notes were made of personal habits. "Smokes quite a bit," was one shocked comment. Notations were made regarding occasional cases of opium smoking, hashish eating and other idiosyncrasies.

Now don't think the activities of Sadie Hawkins' Week are being confined to Whitney Hall; oh, no. On the contrary. Take the case of one U.C. co-ed, for instance. She phoned up one fraternity and asked the secretary what kind of cigarettes he liked. Ten minutes later she was around with a pack. Now she's got him dined up for the rest of the week. Pretty nice, eh?

Need for More Scholarships

Dear Sir:

In yesterday's issue of The Varsity, the editorial, "For Worthy Students" attempted to clarify the position of the Students' Administrative Council regarding a National Scholarships Campaign as advocated by the Canadian Student Assembly.

We have no fault to find with the statement given by Mr. Macdonald nor with the editorial itself. Both were quite in order under the circumstances.

Nonetheless, an erroneous impression of the activities and management of the Assembly must inevitably have been gained from the references, allegedly made by members of the Assembly, to anonymous letters which, regardless of the original intention, insinuate incompetence on the part of the Council.

It would be manifestly unjust if a national organization, which holds such promise for all Canadian undergraduates, should stand condemned in the eyes of the Council and of Toronto students in general because of such a foolish incident.

To suggest that the Assembly proposes a better system of student aid than now exists would be absurd, and irrelevant to the scholarships campaign.

The only argument for more scholarships is the need for more scholarships; and this has absolutely nothing to do with their administration or with that of existing funds for student aid. While it may be true that no Toronto student on record in the last decade has been forced to discontinue his course for financial reasons, the fact remains that many have serious difficulty in making the most of the academic opportunities afforded by this and other universities. So long as this is so, more scholarships are in order.

To obscure this principle by focusing attention on personalities and on the mistakes of individuals would be both petty and vicious.

As for the administration of the grants in aid to the provinces, if the national campaign were successful so far, the recommendations in the Assembly brief to the Rowell Commission last June tentatively suggested, among other things:

- 1) That the Canadian Federal Government appoint a committee to make detailed investigations of educational conditions in the provinces, with a view to apportioning most fairly proposed grants to the provinces, in aid of needy students who have proven themselves to be especially qualified to continue their studies in the fields of higher learning and research.
- 2) That, in apportioning the grants, special attention be given (a) to the financial status of the province as a whole; (b) to the prevailing income level; (c) to the size and distribution of the eligible population.
- 6) That eligibility for a state scholarship be confined to those below a fixed income level.
- 7) That adequate provision be made for maintenance allowances to accompany the individual scholarships.

9) That the scholarships be financed by conditional grants from the Federal Treasury to the provinces.

10) That the size and conditions of the grants be determined by the findings of a federal investigating committee.

11) That all grants be subject to periodic alteration with respect to value and to conditions binding their administration.

13) That a permanent National Scholarships Council be established by the Federal Government to supervise the administration in each province and to conduct intensive investigations, pertinent to any system of state scholarships, in the provinces and in other countries. (This Council might well be attached to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.)

To clarify further the proposal of State Scholarships for Canada, we would suggest that, to avoid all possibility of the individual scholarships becoming associated with political patronage in any form, each university should be awarded grants by the provincial governments on the same basis as in recommendation 2), and that a board appointed from the faculty of each university should award the individual scholarships.

This statement may be regarded as presumptuous inasmuch as it comes from the erstwhile summer executive of the National Scholarships Committee, whose members now have no official status in the Assembly. We hope that our intentions will not be viewed as unduly meddlesome; they are concerned exclusively with academic justice and the fair treatment of an important idea.

Respectfully submitted,

Paul C. McGillicuddy, III U.C.

Harold J. Beveridge, IV U.C.

Stop the Press

The other night a speaker who had that evening addressed a group of students on a certain topic, later called up the press and forbade the reporter (who had spent her evening "covering" the meeting, and some time after writing a story), to print what he had said. Personally we thought he had his nerve.

Our reporters are always willing to co-operate with speakers, and if asked to refrain from printing certain statements will do so. But if a speaker does not wish certain things to be published, the time to say so is before he makes them, not after they have been taken down. In fact if he is willing to spout certain things before a hand-picked audience of radicals or sympathetic thinkers, in a meeting which is declared public, why should he be unwilling to let the world hear?

We are in sympathy with leaders of discussion groups, who when questioned on certain matters will for the sake of the interrogator make statements which would not have been made for a public address, and will co-operate with such persons. Leaders of religious discussions especially, should feel free to ask restraint on the part of the undergraduate newspaper, when their remarks are made in relation to some specific problem arising among a minority group.

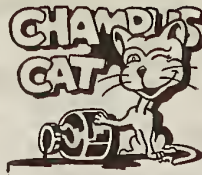

ARF MUSIC

Toronto Symphony

Surrounded by the strictest informality, Sir Ernest MacMillan ushered in his Symphonies Nine O'Clock last night at Massey Hall. The program was short, and the orchestra did its best to make it shorter. Although the horn section of the orchestra sounded less like the Salvation Army than it did last year, the musicians did not seem especially anxious to exert themselves for the hoi polloi.

It is a great pity that more attention was not paid to this concert both by the orchestra and by the city's listening public. To take the place of the Prom during the winter, a "highbrow" concert must be well done and well-supported. In spite of this we subscribe wholeheartedly to the principle of Symphony Nine O'Clock.

All through the concert, Sir Ernest did not quite succeed in creating a unity out of the various instrumental sections. This was especially evident in the rendition of the overture to Smetana's The Bartered Bride. Throughout this piece, the strings ambled about like a flock of sheep without their shepherd.

I'M AGIN IT

The telephone trilled:
It was someone for me—
An event which is rare.
I said, neither thrilled
Nor unmoved, "D.C.C.
May I ask who is there?"

"It's me," said a voice,
And at that my heart slipped
Right into my boots:
For I had no choice
But to hear the clipped
Masterful tones of young Toots.

Would I dance or go to A show? My slow-moving brain
Refused to accelerate.
Every portion in toto
Beat with the refrain,
"She's wanting a date."

I stood and could think
Of no single excuse.
Whispered "Yes," with one breath
I snipped every link
That preserved me (the deuce!)
From a date worse than death.

May none now to me ever speak
In praise of Sadie Hawkins week.
D.C.C.

Correspondence

To the Editor:

Dear Sir:

Last Saturday, I attended my second game as an undergraduate. At the first game I applauded weakly for outstanding plays of both sides. Varsity lost, but I went home telling myself that McGill had a fine team and deserved to win. This was the emotional experience of thousands of undergraduates. We had been passive; the game left us cold; we were without the enjoyment of emotional release. Everyone was self-conscious, afraid to be remarked about for letting out a whole-hearted, lung-searing cheer.

There was a time when football teams faced each other with murderous hate in their hearts. It was a hate that transmitted itself to the spectators who willingly received it. They hated every man on the team opposing the one they were supporting, with a mortal hatred. Emotions reached a pitch whose tenseness expressed itself in explosive cheers. Spectators kept their attention riveted on every move of the game. Whenever the team came from behind to win, the onlookers experienced a personal victory over a malicious enemy. It was a momentous event in their lives. They really enjoyed the game.

What, then, is it that makes the undergraduate supporters of the University of Toronto, a name which thrills many not connected with our institution of learning, so weak in their response to the image of a blood and thunder battle whose appeal depends on that "life and death" quality? How can they really enjoy the game without being violently partisan? I, for one, advocate heckling and jeering, because they stimulate the release of emotions which is necessary to the true enjoyment of rugby-football.

WOMEN'S UNION

WYCLIFFE, VICTORIA SOCCER VICTORS

Wycliffe edged out a fighting Knox soccer team on the front campus yesterday by the score of 2-1. On the other half of the field U.C. lost a 2-0 decision to Vic in a rather loosely played tilt.

U.C. and Vic remained deadlocked at nothing-all for almost three-quarters of the game before Stone put the latter one up with about nine minutes to play. The U.C. gang were obviously trying, playing with one man short of a regular team. With only one minute to play, Zurburg deked the net with a bullet shot which had goalie Knox beaten all the way. Small and Zurburg played best for Vic, while the Red and White netminder, Knox, played brilliant ball and kept the opponents from mounting the score.

The Wycliffe-Knox game produced a much better brand of football than that displayed on the other side of the field. Both teams chalked up a point in the first half on efforts by Simmonds of Wycliffe and Stewart of the opposing team. Morris ended the scoring and won the game for Wycliffe when he soloed in and parked one inside the Knox etchell.

Simmonds and Morris played brilliantly for Wycliffe, while Stewart and Vincent showed up well for Knox.

U.C.: Knox, Slater, Samson, Johnson, Nickel, Mackay, Moore, Errington, Waidie, McDonald.

Vic: Kane, Vassilitt, McDonald, Paton, Menzies, McLeod, McKinnis, Small, Zurburg, Stone, Cummings, Hoffman, Loney.

Wycliffe: Coleman, Hooton, Simmonds, Cathcart, Abbott, Kerr, Morris, McDonald, Simpson, Shaw, Sutthust, Park, Taylor.

Knox: Vincent, Currie, Stewart, Davidson, Williams, Anderson, Thompson, McDonald, Hansen, Barr, Calder, Vance, Somont, McKee.

OVER THE NET

A determined Emmanuel B volleyball squad last night turned back the St. Mike's B team in two straight games played in the upper gym at Hart House. The Theologians clearly outplayed the Bay Street sextette and deserved their two-game margin.

The first tussle started off in a very close fashion with the score at one stage being 5-5, but Emmanuel turned on the heat and the game ended in a rout, the final count being 15-6. The second game was turned about with St. Mike's breaking away to an early 11-2 lead. But the Theologians fought back grimly and were finally victorious 16-14.

On the whole Emmanuel played a much more scientific brand of ball than their opponents, constantly setting up the forwards with perfect chances for spikes. Best for the winners were Rowlands and Affleck, while W. Cronin and Guest tried hard for St. Mike's.

Emmanuel: Rowlands, Elmslie, Bryden, Scott, Rowland, Affleck, McKennitt. St. Mike's: Dugan, Shantz, Golding, Callan, Funk, R. Cronin, Gottry, Walker, Guest, W. Cronin.

Jr. Vic went into a tie for second place in the group with St. Mike's when they defeated the latter 17-15, 15-10 in two closely contested battles yesterday afternoon in the upper Hart House gym.

The first tilt was hand drawn-out, the serve repeatedly shifting from one court to the other. The spiking of Dunn, Costello and Shute for St. Mike's was balanced by that of Hoffman and Gillespie for Victoria. It was anybody's game until the winners finally out-played the Saints for the last two points.

In the second encounter Vic was reinforced with the addition of Ferguson and Tuck for most of the game. The score stood 8-6 for the losers when Vic gradually began to forge ahead. The final score 15-10 for Vic.

Two inexperienced teams took the

NEWCOMERS ENCOURAGED

Radical changes in the constitution and policy of the University College Players' Guild were promised for today by a special meeting of the directorate Sunday afternoon.

The president, Douglas Hicks, and the vice-president resigned. The directors then discussed a new constitution replacing the presidency with an executive of four year representatives. They intend to present the plan for discussion at today's meeting and to hold an election. This change coincides with a movement in the directorate for new action in the Guild policy.

"I feel the Guild has not been giving enough opportunities to newcomers," said Hicks. "We intend to remedy this."

Speaking OF SPORT

By Hal Rubenstein

BREEZES FROM A WIND-BLOWN GRIDIRON

Rumours began emanating yesterday from Kingston to the effect that Ted Reeve will be through as coach of the Queen's rugby team at the end of the present grid campaign. This shocking news comes as a distinct surprise to those who have been following the fortunes of the Limestone City gridriders since the "moaner" has been mentor over there. The reasons advanced for Ted's withdrawal by the circulars of this information is that the pressure of business has so greatly heaped up on his shoulders that he cannot continue in his present dual alumni who are thoroughly disappointed at the winless record of the intercollegiate champs so far this year. If Reeve does quit we certainly think that it will be a great loss to Queen's in particular and to the intercollegiate loop as a whole.

From Kingston comes another choice morsel of news. The referees have finally caught up with bad man Ralph Jack and because of his attack on Russ Merrifield during the game with McGill he will be out of intercollegiate rugby for the remainder of the season, having incurred in that game his second match penalty of the year. For the past few seasons Jack has attained notoriety because of his dirty tactics in both rugby and basketball. His prowess in both these sports will be undisputed by no one but it is unfortunate that he has to combine dirty work with skill to be effective, to his methods of reasoning. Now the "moaner" will really have something to moan about.

Western's lineering championship hopes received a severe jolt when it was learned that Clem Faux will be lost to them for the rest of the grid campaign because of a broken bone in his foot received in the game with Varsity. This year has seen more injuries in intercollegiate competition than we can remember for many a moon. How we Varsity rooters can testify to that!

SADIE SNAGS SOMERS

After all these years of snickering we have finally found out the truth of the statement that "you've got to be a football hero" Sadie Hawkins has achieved something that many opposing tacklers could not do—she has caught up with shifty Lou Somers. It seems that Lou received a mysterious phone-call asking him to take Miss — to —. This isn't cricket. What's he got I haven't?

REGARDING VOLLEYBALL

We dropped up to see the interfaculty volleyball game last night in Hart House and were truly surprised at the brand of ball displayed by both St. Mike's and Emmanuel. The play was much more scientific than we ever expected with both sides showing great skill in the art of spiking. Our conception of the game had been a now-you-slap-it-then-I'll-slap-it affair, but were were pleasantly surprised at the exhibition offered. Another satisfying feature was the great spirit displayed on both sides after a good play. This phase of interfaculty competition is worthy of more support than the players have been accorded. Let's get out there and cheer.

A WORD OF THANKS

A figure unnoticed often in the athletic wing is that of Mr. Charles Walters, instructor of the fencing classes. Mr. Walters holds the distinguished position of being undefeated Canadian champion in three weapons. He accepts no remuneration for the hard work he puts into training the fencers at U. of T., not even for the beginners, and believe me they're some problem. So, more power to you, Charles Walters.

Back Campus Sports Review

Fumbles, Forwards, Feature
Faculty Football Fare

For the first time in many years, the Victoria rugby team was eliminated from a crack at the play-offs, when they bowed before a mighty Jr. S.P.S. twelve, 3-0, on the Victoria campus yesterday afternoon. Jr. School through this win gained undisputed possession of first place, having won all their games up to this point.

The game was a thorough exhibition of good football with infrequent fumbles being made up for by brilliant plays. The first half showed both teams to be evenly matched, each taking his turn at invading the other's territory. Vic seemed to get the wrong end of the breaks during this half, fumbling at the most inopportune times. It was not until well on in the second quarter that Jr. S.P.S. scored. Throwing all caution to the winds, Barry booted a placement from the Vic 35 yard line to count three points. Thus at the end of half time Jr. S.P.S. 3, Vic 0.

In the second half play was still more evenly matched. Kicking by Fugler of Jr. S.P.S. and Casserly of the Scarlet and Gold was the feature of this episode. During the closing minutes of the game, the engineers had a chance to mount the score, but some weird playing left them stranded on the enemy's five yard line. The play of the day occurred in the dying moments of the game. Macpherson of the Vic gang threw a forty-five yard pass to Tricky, which was completed and left Tricky along with two of his comrades, Tricky along with two of his comrades, Tricky Lipin and Dale, in the open. Tricky passed the oval to Lipin, who was

EXAMS FAR AWAY STUDENTS DAWDLE

A survey was made Friday afternoon of just how much time in a half-hour a student actually devoted to studying. The three main libraries of the University were covered. The results may be a little startling, but it must be remembered that Friday afternoon was a mild fall afternoon.

Three students in the main library were timed. It was ascertained that the top man had devoted twenty-eight minutes to study. The lowest end in this group had studied twelve minutes out of the same time.

The students who were concentrating the hardest were asked what was their secret of keeping their minds on their work. They all had essays due shortly, or they had translations in a foreign language that just had to be done.

Congratulations are due Vera Argue for winning a proficiency scholarship, enabling her to enter college via Harbord Collegiate. Not content with academic honours Vera gives every indication of obtaining further honours in the sporting field, if her showing at the recent tennis meet is indicative of her ability. Vera, you remember, is the gal who displayed such a fine brand of tennis in eliminating Betty Kirby, St. Mike's.

Little Vic's edging is too low for co-eds with badminton ambitions! The girls claim that last year they encountered no little difficulty in the interfaculty badminton tourney, because they were accustomed to playing with the bird at a fairly low level. When they came up against girls with high sky tendencies it was just too bad. In spite of this, one of their players, Hildegarde Goodfellow, made the team.

The McGill-Varsity game is one of Varsity co-ed can afford to miss. Apart from the important factor that the train fare has been cut almost in half to suit student allowances, the game promises to have plenty of thrills. If you don't know much about football, go anyway. There is always dancing on the trip down, where you ought to pick up a little football information.

"More jobs for more men." That was the key to prosperity, Mr. Griffin declared. "The working man who restricted his time to eight hours a day never got very far." Labour must not believe that a "soak the rich" policy would in the long run be beneficial.

DR. CURTAIN WILL GIVE PERSONALITY POINTERS TO GIRL STUDENTS

Beginning Monday, November 7, the W.U.A. is again sponsoring a series of weekly lectures which will be a continuation of those Dr. Gwen Mulock gave last year. This season, however, Dr. Anne Curtin will deliver five talks on "Personality Hints" in the Theatre of the Women's Union.

Dr. Curtin is inaugurating a new policy this year, that of spending a good deal of time on questions asked by the co-eds. There will be a question-box placed outside of the Theatre in the Women's Union Monday.

Who is it?

A picture is reproduced below. It is the picture of a girl who lived at the turn of the century; a dear, sweet, unsophisticated product of the age of Victoria. A native of Dogpatch, a romantic village of the aristocratic south, she wears a white satin evening dress with no suspenders, a hair-up hair-down, a string of beads and a charming smile. One glance will show where many of our current fashions come from. And can't you catch the whimsical humour shining from her sweetly crossed eyes? Just look at them cross! Sure, go ahead. And look at her nose—her naively tilted nose. Look at her mouth. Not a horse this side of Dogpatch can boast of such kissable lips. We could go on for hours elaborating on her unparalleled charms—her delicate, shell-pink ears, and the freckles on her cheeks. Who is this girl who has been sainted by all the eds and co-eds of the university? Who is she who has become the goddess of the datebook, the patroness of the sweet hours after nine?

Drama in Dogpatch

That is how Sadie collected a spouse. The plot pictured above was lifted, allegedly by the engineers, and with appropriate modifications was concocted into the biggest snoot-cocking at convention that this campus has ever seen. Of course, it is not to be implied that co-eds must chase and capture a man because of unpopularity. No, a thousand times no! It was merely thought that the idea of chasing man was a good one. And so, backed by enthusiastic freshmen in every residence in the university the idea has grown and grown and grown until it has reached earth-shaking proportions. It is common campus gossip that a certain dean of women has dated up a certain professor of economics for a spasm at Googes Orster Bar. And we don't mind the Winnipeg Free Press. As for Sadie Herself, it is said that she climbed to the top of the Memorial Tower and shouted to a university official crossing the campus "THAT'S MY DAD!" And if you don't collect a date out of it this year, poor lonely lad, you are bound to get one next, because the Sadie Hawkins' week is to be an annual festival.

HERE IS ANOTHER illustration which shows that man is being ground under by the Machine Age. . . . Ted Peterson, columnist of the Minnesota Daily, comes forth with good reasons concerning the degradation of man. . . . He claims that it does not matter any longer whether you are mouse or man, but today whether you are fact or figures. . . . and here is his compilation of his standing in the university. . . .

"I am a numbered man. To the English Department, I am File No. 31. To the Athletic Department I am student ticket No. 6745. To the university post office I am P.O. 8981. To the government I am Social Security No. 470-05-0247. To the state highway department I am drivers' license no. 4A85454. To the bank I am Savings Account No. 3745.

"And to Margaret I am just GL 3147, to be called only when GL 5986 is out of town" . . .

HERE'S AN IDEA for the long McGill trip. . . . It seems that the students of the University of Michigan believe that dancing while riding revives you no end. . . . therefore while en route to the Yale-Michigan game in New Haven, they had one car of the special train converted into a dance platform. . . . WHAT WILL THESE YOUNG FOLKS THINK OF NEXT? . . .

AT LAST, SOMETHING NEW. . . . The U. of North Dakota has a real honest-to-goodness hermit. . . . Horace Carson of the university bought the nearest lot to the school for $5. He hired a carpenter to put up an 8 by 8 foot frame structure and enclosed the place himself. . . . Carson admits his hermitical instincts, and has equipped his home with a new stove, kerosene lamp, and trunk. . . . It seems that he too, wants to be alone. . . .

London, Nov. 2: The British Parliament gave their approval by an overwhelming majority to the British-Italian treaty in a sudden move today and thereby the official status of Ethiopia as an Italian colony is now recognized.

Ottawa, Nov. 2: Herbert A. W. Plaxton, appearing today before the Royal Commission, swore that no member of the House of Commons or of the Senate had any financial interest in the John Inglis Co., manufacturers of the Bren guns.

Ottawa, Nov. 2: The opinion of an authority high in military circles was expressed here today which little doubt that Britain is prepared and intends to lend aid, both financial and technical, for the greater acceleration of the armament industries in Canada.

HERBIE WESTMAN TOP POINT SCORER

McGill Star Paces Senior Loop with Seventeen Points

HURLEY IS SECONDD

Entering into the fifth week of inter-collegiate competition, Herb Westman of McGill continues to lead in the individual scoring race. Thus far he has amassed a total of seventeen scoring points, all singles and all instrumental in the Redmen's undefeated record so far this season.

Tied for second place with ten points each are Hurley of Western, and Gray and Shukun of Varsity. This trio of scorers each represents a different method of scoring. Hurley's two touchdowns came as the result of line plunges, while Shukun's ten points were accounted for by two completed passes converted into major scores. Gray's scoring activity has been confined to his trusty right foot which has accounted for one placement, four singles, and three converts. Can he fail to convert only one touchdown out of four scored by the Beavers.

DENTISTS DEFEAT FORESTRY SQUAD

Playing a man short for over a period Forestry absorbed an 18-0 defeat at the hands of the fast-stepping Dents lacrosse team in the lower gym yesterday afternoon.

The Foresters put up a game fight but were helpless in combating the Molar-men's fast passing attack and extra man power. The Dents' starting line of DeLagan, Smokum, and Sproule displayed a real scoring punch, bagging 15 goals between them.

Forestry: Ballantyne, Chalk, Reynolds, Grinnell, Kirk, Hope.

Dents: Coffin, Godison, Shand, McCoy, Sproule, Smokum, McCartney, DeLagan, Toye.

Patroness of Date-Book To Appear in Person

Sadie Hawkins, Deb of Dogpatch, to Make Formal Bow Tomorrow

AT SILVER SLIPPER

Climaxing Sadie Hawkins' week—brought to the college campus by the men of S.P.S.—a Sadie Hawkins' night will be held Friday at the Silver Slipper, Riverside Drive.

The Dogpatch Deb will make her formal bow to society tomorrow by appearing in the Silver Slipper floor show and singing a song from the U.C. Follies of 1938. The Sadie Hawkins night is being presented by the Slipper in conjunction with The Varsity.

After a hilarious week, when the social process was completely reversed according to an old Dogpatch custom, undergraduates will have an opportunity of seeing Sadie herself. Co-eds are apt to receive a word of advice from Sadie on the gentle art of man-gettin', as it is practised in the hills around her Kentucky home town.

Sponsors of the affair promise an evening full of fun and surprises. There will be favours, balloons, noisemakers, prizes, a gala floor show and special entertainment. Phyllis Marshall, who will be at dear old U. of T. next year, will sing her haunting melodies.

A coupon is published in this issue on page three which will admit one couple at half price. Further information may be obtained from The Varsity office, Rm. 3730, or the Slipper, Ly. 5122.

BY HANNIBAL HOOPS (Staff Correspondent)

Dogpatch, Ky., Nov. 2.—A hoe-down in the town hall tonight drew the country folk for miles around to bid adieu to Miss Sadie Hawkins, who was tendered a going-away party.

Sadie left right after the party broke up at 9:30, carrying $194 (being the total of a collection), as expense money for her long trip. Miss Hawkins, one of Dogpatch's most prominent daughters (and we mean prominent) will be the guest of honour at a "Sadie Hawkins' Night" party at the Silver Slipper, on the banks of the Humber, up in Canada. The girls at a school there—the University of Toronto—have been holding a Sadie Hawkins week. It seems a long time to keep running, but maybe it takes them longer to get their men.

For travelling, our Sadie wore a gown of white cheesecloth with ventilator holes, striped stockings (very fancy) and Mrs. Hairless Joe's new store shoes.

Proposed Municipal Grant Topic of Parliament Debate

The pros and cons of a municipal grant to the University of Toronto will be fully discussed on Thursday afternoon at 4:00 in the Junior Common Room of University College when the U.C. Parliament meets to debate the resolution: "Resolved that this University is worth $100,000 to Toronto." The deputy-speaker, the Rt. Hon. Sir Albert Rose, of the Last Summer, will preside.

The Rt. Hon. Sally Macdonald, beginning her first debate as the first female Prime Minister of the Parliament, will stress the tremendous benefits to Toronto of the increased purchasing power which 2-3000 outside students bring to the city for the duration of their college courses. "Each student from outside the city spends an average of about $500 per year on rooms, board, clothing, entertainment, books, etc.,"

MUNICIPAL GRANT ARDUSES COMMENT ON LOCAL CAMPUS

Students Favour Civic Award—Attitude of Council Rapped

SEEN AID TO EXPANSION

The question of a municipal grant to the University of Toronto has aroused considerable campus comment, it was learned yesterday. Students and campus officials gave their views yesterday on the topic, which has been widely publicized in downtown newspapers.

George Stoddart, Speaker of the U.C. Parliament has to say, "I think the city has taken a most narrow view of the needs of the university at a time when the university needs its financial support as well as its moral support so badly. Most people realize that real estate is burdened almost to the limit, but surely there are other means of

MEDS SOCCERITES ORUB DRUGGISTS

History Repeats as Doctors Down Pharmacy Team 2-0

History repeated itself yesterday afternoon on the front campus as the Meds soccer team again shot out their Pharmacy rivals 2-0. Although the Pharmacy was the same as last week, the play was much closer and both teams played an improved brand of football.

The first half ended with no points for either team and with the druggists holding a small advantage in the play. Only twenty minutes remained as Meds bagged the initial corner on a clever passing play by Art Boyd and Henry Lore, the latter just moving up to inside left in time to net the ball. The second and last score was a long kick by Cooper.

The field was quite slippery, but the boys played head-up soccer with bespectacled Henry Lore, and Captain Hugh Kline standing for the red, white and black. Goalie Ed McAleese and Pitcher shared the limelight for Pharmacy.

Meds: Cooper, Lore, Seymour, Boyd, Kline, Joseph, Green, Emmett, Lane, Holmes, Park, Pasby, Prouse, Henders. Pharmacy: Wickett, Sutherland, Pitcher, Ryan, Gibbons, Cornell, Toy, McVeigh, Woods, Livingstone, Taylor, Calahan, McAleese.

BIRNEY SKETCHES STORY TECHNIQUE

University College Professor Guest Critics at Meeting

Professor Birney of University College was the guest critic at the first discussion meeting of the Victoria College Writer's Group yesterday afternoon. His subject was "The Technique of the Short Story".

"There must," he said, "be a significant experience in the writer's philosophy of life." The short story is more than just a slice of life lifted whole and set down for the reader without interpretation. At the same time, the point of view of the author should never be evident, making proletarian writers make no attempt to conceal this.

He stressed this unconscious interpretation also in dealing with the emotional element in short stories. He warned the group not to name emotions in their writing but to concentrate on the physical and mental aspects of the emotion.

His final word of advice to the group was to study life around them, themselves, and their own reactions to life. Modern fiction should hold a prominent place in any aspiring short story writer's reading, the fiction of the type appearing in "Story" being especially recommended.

NEGATIVE UPHELD IN WOMEN'S DEBATE

The first debate of the Women's Inter-faculty Debating Club was held yesterday afternoon in the Women's Union. The subject of the debate was "Resolved that Resignation is the better part of Valour".

The speakers for the affirmative were Myriam Anglin and Mary Macdonald of St. Michael's, while the negative was taken by Margaret Cast and Greta Riddell of Victoria College. After considerable deliberation, the negative was upheld.

Miss Genevieve Taylor presided over the meeting. Miss Marion Cooper acted as secretary. The judges were Misses C. Brown, C. MacKay, and H. Parsons. Refreshments were served.

Victoria Eds Despair Co-eds Don't Co-operate in Girl-Chase-Boy Craze

During this Sadie Hawkins' week, Victoria College eds are rapidly losing faith in the Scarlet and Gold co-eds. One sophomore thinks that next year's freshmen should be required to carry a pan and shovel, which would be symbolic of the attitude of their senior sisters. Another ed thinks, however, that manhood money bags would be more appropriate, as they are too grasping to accept the margin in the rough. Every night this week, an air of silent expectancy has hovered over Burwash Hall, with every ear cocked toward the telephone, and every phone call a decided disappointment. As the week shortens, the chorus gains momentum, "No More Dates with Annsley!"

Motion Defeated in House by Vote of 78 to 17

CO-EDS ATTEND

By a vote of 78 to 17, the motion "Resolved that in the opinion of this House the maintenance of the British Empire is a barrier to progress" was defeated at the second Hart House debate last evening.

H. J. Beveridge, U.C., held that the British Empire was an expression of an association of capitalist-controlled nation-states. In a spirited polemic against capitalism, he maintained that it made for material, moral and cultural degeneration rather than progress.

A visiting debater from Sydney, Australia, H. Robson, L.L.B., showed that when freedom of thought and expression is greatest, progress is greatest. Since the British Empire provides a maximum of each, he reasoned that it cannot be a barrier to progress. Nevertheless, he pointed out that liberty, especially of the press, can be transformed into license, referring to a misrepresentation of his opinion of Canadian girls which appeared yesterday in a Toronto paper.

In turn the affirmative side was supported by F. Thonemann, another visiting debater from Melbourne, Australia. He claimed that "British freedom" was "only a magic counterword which is used by politicians to stir up the emotions of a crowd", and that British political, economic and personal liberty was only a travesty on the word. "A party system of government necessarily makes a gross misrepresentation of a large majority," he said. The worship (Continued on page 4)

Wilson Finds Church A Stabilizing Force

"We are living in a believing world," was the conclusion reached by Mr. Kenneth Wilson, in his S.C.M. noon-hour address yesterday on "Why the Church".

Mr. Wilson, for fourteen years a feature writer on the Financial Post, said that while his background in this field seemed unrelated to his topic, he felt that the subject was of paramount importance.

In tracing the development of the Church from the beginnings of spiritual awakening, expressed in primitive animism, to the formation of the Church Mr. Wilson pointed out that the Church had developed and refined the arts, comforted thousands in various crises, and assisted in the preservation of faith.

"The Church has been aiding in the binding of communities," he continued, "and the Church has been a stabilizing force in Quebec." Mr. Wilson further suggested that if the Church were crushed, it would surely rise again, eventually to replace the authority of Stalin and Hitler. He urged the Church to remain out of politics and rebuked its policy in China.

DRAMATIC GROUP HOLDS MEETING THIS EVENING

The Victoria Dramatic Society will hold an open social meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in Wynmwood. Outstanding feature of the varied program will be a demonstration of various make-ups by George Johnston, director of this year's major production, "The Good-Natured Man". Also there will be two impromptu plays. Other features are promised. The meeting will conclude with refreshments.

Traditionalists say that the new movement has made American education "effeminate" and has produced children who are inferior spellers and readers. A test was made at Ohio State University of five hundred carefully matched children from Progressive and traditional schools. Results showed that Progressive pupils are more advanced in knowledge of current affairs and creative thinking, and show more ability in leadership and co-operation, but fall behind in the three R's and history.

Back Campus Sports Review

With the half way mark in the intra-mural football schedule already passed, a brief summary may not be amiss. In the first of the three groups, Sr. Meds have definitely outclassed their rivals, Sr. School and St. Mike's. Blanketing a powerful St. Mike's team 14-6 and then smothering School 20-0, the older Doctors proved themselves an early threat. Then a 7-1 victory over a much improved S.P.S. squad put the group leadership definitely into the hands of Earl Selkirk's charges.

In the Trinity, Jr. Meds, Dents group Trinity hold the leadership only by virtue of having played more games than Dents, each having won their engagements against Jr. Meds, thus definitely eliminating Jr. Meds. Judging from the Trinity-Jr. Meds and Dents-Jr. Meds clashes, it looks as though Dents will come out on top.

In the third group, Jr. S.P.S. have clinched the group leadership by defeating both Victoria and U.C. With only two games left to play in the group Vic and U.C. do not retain a mathematical possibility.

Judging from the way Freddie Chinkett, Sr. Meds star kicker, has been booting the ball, the Doctors appear to have a strong claim to the Mulock Cup this year. Their natural ability plus the coaching genius of Earl Selkirk will make them a hard team to beat.

A tentative schedule for the basketball league has finally been arranged. Unless further notified, the teams will play in the order specified. The draw is published elsewhere in today's issue.

Four groups have been formed, and the winners of each group will comprise the four teams for the semi-finals. But that won't be until way off at the end of the month (hope, hope).

Group one consists of Ioria Jr.s, Physiotherapy and U.C. Frosh.

In Group 2 are Victoria Frosh, St. Hilda's Seniors and U.C. Juniors.

Victoria Seniors, St. Hilda's and U.C. Juniors comprise Group three.

There are 4 teams, Meds, St. Mike's (the defending champions), Nurses and Household Science in Group 4.

Team managers are reminded to hand in all players' eligibility slips before the first game. The league opener between U.C. Seniors and St. Hilda's Seniors tomorrow night at six in the U.T.S. gym, is also expected to be something of an eye-opener.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Alan Harvey

THE CAGERS ARE COMING

While the Varsity football team drills for its crucial test with McGill Saturday afternoon, Warren Stevens and his aides are making preparations for the initial basketball practice on Friday, November 4. Both the first and second teams have a busy schedule lined up for them and Stevens is desirous of having a full turnout on Friday. Freshmen interested in the sport are particularly welcome.

The Blues may not win the football laurels this year, but it appears, even at this early date, that they will be right in the hunt for basketball honours, surrendered last year to Western after a bitter struggle. This year the Varsity squad will have two stand-out newcomers in Moose Rogin and Scrimby Acheson.

These two stalwarts earned their basketball diplomas at Assumption College. And the sporting curriculum at Assumption is particularly stiff. Rogin also served an apprenticeship at Michigan State, and was given all-star rating. Rogin does a pretty fair job, too, as linesman for the rugby team, while Acheson is considered one of the fleetest cagers in the Dominion.

Of last year's cast Frankie Dempster, Walt McGregor, Jim Craig, Chick Mahoney, Frankie Minahan and Percy Singer will return to action. All these players have done at least one year's service with the senior squad. A couple of youngsters coming up from the intermediates, Red Humenik and Red McLaughlin, will battle for the places vacated by Frank Dougherty, Tommy Sullivan and Jack Powers.

THE GENESIS OF BASKETBALL

The Doubleday of the hoop sport is a Springfield, Massachusetts gym instructor, named James Naismith. Back in 1891, Naismith was faced with the problem of providing a pastime for an overflow of athletes. So he carved out the bottoms of a couple of peach baskets, whence derives the name "basket", and provided his pupils with a soccer ball.

And so we have basketball, a pastime which has done considerable growing since its origination in 1891. At the present time, basketball takes second place on the university sports calendar only to hockey and rugby.

AROUND THE CIRCUIT

Thursday is the day when the big game still looks a long way off and last week's game is stale stuff. However, we would like to put in a word for the Students' Administrative Council, whose co-operation has made it possible for a large number of Toronto students to make the McGill trip at a reduced rate. Students are advised to get their tickets as soon as possible. . . . from McGill comes word that Bob Keefer is back in the McGill line-up and looking disgustingly healthy. . . . so great has been the response to the intermediate swimming instruction class that a supplementary class will be inaugurated, to be held every Thursday at eleven o'clock. The class will be limited to thirty-five members. And for those who wish instruction in the fundamentals of water-polo, classes will be held Monday and Thursday at three o'clock. . . . and P.T. credits will be given. . . . to introduce a note of current interest, might we suggest that one of our prettiest co-eds date up Herbie Westman. . . . for Sadie Hawkins' week, of course. . . . on the afternoon of Saturday, November 5. . . . curtain.

Varsity Hardest Hit with Three Stars Forced to Sidelines

FAUST OUT FOR SEASON

By Sid Roebuck

Injuries, the bane of all rugby teams, has hit the intercollegiate loop this year harder than ever. Apparently "old man bad luck" has been pointing his wand at each of the teams in turn, showing favoritism to none.

Varsity has three of her stars polishing the bench for the rest of the season. These men include halves Don Mumford and "Cowboy" McDonald, and snap Doug Turner. Don was laid up before he even had a chance to put on his uniform, with an appendicitis operation just before the current rugby campaign got under way. Jim McDonald fractured his ankle at Queen's while Doug Turner performed a rather crude job of twisting his knee against Balmy Beach, when he tried to do a double-jointed stunt during practice.

The league-leading Montrealsers seem to have lost one of their axes for the season in the form of "Sleepy" Telford. "Sleepy" suffered a dislocated shoulder in the Queen's game and so Mr. Telford will take his place alongside the throng of Monday morning quarter-backs. Lou Ruschin, captain of the McGill team, received a loving tap on the knee and so will help Telford at warming the bench. Bob Keefer, star half of the Redmen, has been nursing a shoulder injury. If Varsity can produce one more casualty to the Montrealsers this Saturday, the boys should be able to get up on their bridge.

Western's loss to the home troops was augmented by the fact that Clem (Continued on page 4)

The most charming number was the quintette, in which the two old stagers Curci and Cervi (Curci sang with Tellezzini) did a marvellous bit of acting. Leola Turner as Michaela was charming, and sang very well—without acting. Carmen's Seguidilla and Chanson Boheme were well done, although the Habanera was a disappointment. Don Jose's Flower Song was efficiently executed. We were disappointed at the omission of two entr'actes.

But the only really serious disappointment of the evening was Mostyn Thomas as Escamillo, the torador. He sang poorly, and his stage movements were so wooden, that he reminded one of an animated cartoon. It is unfortunate that the torador was so flat, because it robbed the performance of some of its brilliant colour.

The ballet and the orchestra were as good as could be expected. The dancers, especially Lydia Arlova, did justice to the exciting spectacle of the Parade. Mr. Peroni's conducting was able but uninspired.

Since the British Empire is an abstract expression of an association of nations, D. Owen, Trinity, felt that moral and cultural progress could not be of any concern to it. He drew attention to the fact that the Empire is a group of free dominions with common aims, ideals and traditions, and that it therefore represents the height of Cod: A rag, a bone, a hank of hair, and a notebook.

Term paper: Concoction whipped up to make life miserable and to smash the idealism of youth. Term papers, once written, are sturdy creations, and through transmigration are blessed with eternal life. This fact was discovered by a political science professor recently who was much distressed to discover among papers assigned on Contemporary Trends in American Government, twelve papers on the Harding administration, twenty on Coolidge's, four on Hoover's, and only one on Roosevelt's.

HAVE YOU EVER STOPPED TO WONDER what the average college student's intelligence quotient is? . . . Well, if you haven't, what do you think of this? . . . Out of 275 applications for N.Y.A. jobs filled out at the University of Kentucky, 44 contained simple technical errors.

FOR THE FOOTBALL FAN ONLY. . . . On one of the Manitoban intercollegiate football teams, it seems that one of the ace ends in the heat of battle ran the ball right up to the enemy touch-line, was tackled, and in the pile-up was unable to shove the ball over the line because the goal-post was in the way. . . . BLUES INVADE P.Q. TO MEET LEADING TEAM

Scribe at Columbia Finds Grads Nostalgic

Atmosphere of Grim Determination Pervades Academic Work, and Play is Serious, Says Toronto Graduate

By Arthur J. Benson
(Staff writer—The Varsity)

New York, Nov. 1.—That the University of Toronto does not compare unfavorably with Columbia University is the almost unanimous decision reached by Varsity graduates studying down here at Columbia. On two points in particular all agree: Toronto's handicap of inadequate finances, and its superiority in the matter of intimacy and personal contact. There is considerable divergence of opinion in non-academic matters, however, although the high cost of living is felt by all.

"Academic efforts at Columbia are carried on in an atmosphere of painful, almost grim determination," pointed out George Edison, a Trinity College graduate who is working for his Master's degree in philosophy. "Knowledge is vaguely endorsed as an end in itself; but concretely it is looked upon in terms of attaching necessary letters to one's name—letters being at least a meagre guarantee of three square meals a day sometime in the future. Sigma Phi Sorority to Sponsor High School Convention for Magazine Editors Over Week-End

The annual convention of Ontario high school magazine editors, sponsored by Sigma Phi, will take place this week-end. About seventy-five delegates representing schools from Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Toronto, and elsewhere, are expected to be present.

Canon Cody will open the convention on Friday morning. On both Friday and Saturday mornings groups of delegates will hear lectures on reporting, make-up and art work.

Professor Birney and Mr. Piper of the Toronto Star will be among the speakers. Opportunity will be provided for discussion and criticism of the magazines of the schools represented.

Awards made will be the Toronto Daily Star award for the most outstanding magazine, the Varsity shield for the best literary section, and the Sigma Phi trophy for editorial writing.

TEST RECOMMENDED FOR TUBERCULOSIS AMONG UNDERGRADS

Incidence of Disease is High Among Those Between Fifteen and Twenty-Four Years of Age

"Every student in the University of Toronto should be examined for tuberculosis," was the opinion expressed by a very reliable source who is very close to the question, but who desires to be anonymous.

Between the ages of fifteen and twenty-four this problem of tuberculosis is very acute. These are the "bad ages" for this disease, and it appears that the disease is more alarming at these ages than at any other age. If a person at these ages is discovered to have T.B., and the proper measures are taken, he has a ninety per cent chance of recovering.

The actual incidence of tuberculosis among students hasn't been discovered as yet. However, in the United States two hundred schools are at the present time giving examinations for the white plague to their students.

If a university wishes to take a progressive attitude to this alarming problem, this same informant said, the whole university should be examined for this modern plague which afflicts the white race. The cost of the skin test is very low and fairly effective, so it appears that it would be worthwhile to apply it to the whole university.

Whether this problem of tuberculosis has become more serious in recent years, is not known. Only at the present time has very much attention

Dogpatch's Famous Sadie To Appear in Dance Held For Benefit of Scribe

Sadie Hawkins, the cute little miss who stepped from the comic pages to headline prominence this week, arrives in Toronto today. Dogpatch's most famous daughter is expected by train at noon and while no official civic reception has been planned, it is anticipated that large numbers of Varsity students will meet her at the station.

Sadie, who is travelling incognito, is accompanied by Hannibal Hoops, Dogpatch correspondent of The Varsity, who has been covering the trip.

Her arrival in Toronto to make a personal appearance in the floor show of the Silver Slipper tonight climaxes the Sadie Hawkins' week originated at Varsity. Tonight has been decreed Sadie Hawkins' Night at the Silver Slipper when the entire men's and women's staff of The Varsity will be the guests of the management.

OTTAWA ANTICIPATES MANY APPOINTMENTS

Changes Foreseen in Senate and Cabinet as Dunning and Elliott Incapacitated by Illness

By Ross Munro
C.U.P. Correspondent

Ottawa, Nov. 3.—A spurge of appointments to the senate and important government positions and possibly a change in the federal government line-up before parliament meets is anticipated here.

Illness has incapacitated both Finance Minister Dunning and Postmaster-General Elliott and while there is a chance Mr. Dunning will continue in the cabinet, it is unlikely he will be able to handle the heavy duties of the finance department again. Revenue Minister Hiley was been looking after Mr. Dunning's work since the latter's collapse in the commons last June and appears to be doing a good job, along with his regular work with his own department.

SCOTS POET THEME OF KNOX LECTURE

MacDiarmid is Described by University College Professor as Herald of Scottish Regeneration

"To most people the name Hugh MacDiarmid conveys little or nothing," said Professor R. S. Knox, speaking at the regular Thursday afternoon lecture on authors. "Yet he is one of the most aggressive of the Scottish nationalists. He is of those who see the poet as a spiritual leader in the lives of men."

Professor Knox described MacDiarmid as a man whose interests go far beyond his own country, but whose chief concern lies in the rescue of Scotland from what he describes as "English ascendancy, the blight that has ruined the country socially and politically." To him, the famous poet Robert Burns is the symbol of a Scottish regeneration.

"MacDiarmid boldly champions the use of his native language for all poetry," said the professor. He rightly holds that the Scots tongue can again become a medium for good poetry. His work shows an extraordinary power of emotional concentration. In subject and in mood his early poems have a wide range. The distinction of these early poems is easily recognized and it is apparent that Scotland has something to contribute to poetry in its own native language."

Murray Scott Joins Ranks of Injured with Broken Thumb Sustained in Practice; will Wear Special Equipment

By Alan Harvey

It will be a case of "wio or else" with the Varsity senior football squad when they face the undefeated McGill Redmen across the hard-baked gridiron at Molson Stadium Saturday afternoon. According to the rules of the Intercollegiate Union, they must defeat the Redmen, top team in the college loop, or fade out of the play-off picture.

The injury jinx which has been dogging the Blues since the opening of the season was still hanging around the Varsity camp this week. Murray Scott, co-hero with Charlie Prince of last Saturday's delicious victory over Western, reported to Warren Stevens with a broken thumb sustained in Wednesday's practice. The sprightly little signal caller swells the already large list of casualties, consisting of Cam Gray, Jim McDonald, Frankie Sirdevan, Doug Turner and Don Mumford. Gray picked up a sprained ankle in the Western game, while Sirdevan came out of the same fray with a broken nose. However, this trio can not be omitted from the line-up, and will wear special equipment to protect their injuries. McBLUES MUST BEAT REDMEN

McGill Scribe Confident of Victory Despite Weakening of Montreal Squad through Widespread Injuries

By Monty Berger

McGill's undefeated and united Redmen are not finding the going any too easy. Playing the game during the week-ends has been the least of their worries, but what transpires in between times is enough to cause innumerable headaches. The situation is like this:

Murray "Sleepy" Telford, towering middle wing, dislocated his shoulder in the first minute of play at Queen's last week. Eddie Tabak, who has been on the sidelines since the game against Western is still out with an elbow that refuses to function as it should. Captain Lou Ruschik, just recently called "Papa", seems likely to be damaged. Ronnie Perowne, McGill's pepper-box quarter, rated by many the best in the league, has been hobbling around rather painfully since last Saturday. Hamilton, Westman and Robb have bruises

EXCAVATION HALTED BY STARKEY MURDER

Authenticity of Old Testament Corroborated by Archaeological Discoveries in Palestine

"Since J. L. Starkey was murdered at Lakhish in January, excavation in Palestine has become almost impossible," says Sir Charles Marston, J.P., F.G.S., who is speaking in Hart House Theatre at 5 o'clock today on "The Bible and Archaeology".

Sir Charles explained that the director of operations at Lakhish had grown an immense beard and was doubtless mistaken for a Jew by the quick-triggered Bedouin. Since then the camp has been raided three times. He, however, would hazard no opinion as to the final outcome of the troubles in the Holy Land.

The archaeologist who is an executive director of the Palestine Exploration Fund, has also worked with McAlister and Crawford at Jerusalem.

MAESTRO MITE MACABRE

Have you any old corpses that you would care to donate to a worthy Cause? Are you willing to make a sacrifice for the Advancement of Culture and the Propagation of the Arts? If so, rally round.

The conductor of the U. of T. Symphony Orchestra is worried, not to say nonplussed. Some time ago he orchestrated a choral-prelude of Bach, which he intended to have the orchestra play next January at their annual concert. The long-haired people on the campus have been working on it for three weeks.

It appears that last Sunday evening a certain local funeral home inaugurated a series of radio programs which are to come each week right after a famous hour of classical music. It is one of those cheery programs which cause thoughts on Life, Death, the Frailty of Human Existence, etc., etc. And of course they have chosen as a theme-song the one choral-prelude in question.

Which simply means that when the orchestra start off their concert with the piece in January, the audience will run for cover from force of habit. So—if you have any relatives who are tottering on the brink or if you yourself feel that to struggle any longer is futile, please see that the corpse is given to the undertakers so that they may be more easily persuaded to change their theme-song before too much damage is done.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Shanghai, Nov. 3.—Large triangular area bounded on two sides by Yangtze River and Lake Poyang and in South by unconquered Kiangsi and Hunan provinces was today reported as being the scene of a Chinese-Japanese struggle.

Hendaye, France, Nov. 3.—The Spanish insurgent army was today endeavouring to defend the slopes of the Caballeros and Pandos mountains after gaining control of the last line of natural defence between Gardena and the river in Southern Catalonia.

Jerusalem, Nov. 3.—British residents of Palestine were today warned by an Arab revolutionary leader to expect "reprisals".

London, Nov. 3.—Mr. Hore-Belisha, British secretary of war, today revealed that Britain's defence for war was very weak in comparison with other countries.

FEMMES FURNISH FARE

The girls have been catching the spirit of Sadie Hawkins week, a canvass of restaurant proprietors revealed yesterday. One proprietor leaned over his register to tell how the fair escorts went ahead to find a place, returned to show the boy friend to it, helped them off with their coats, handed them the menu, and sweetly asked them what they would like to have.

"You should have one every month," he went on. "Yes, they nearly all pay, although a few of the shyer ones slip the shekels to the male. There was a professor in the other day treated by a lady also."

One waitress reported that she nearly always gave the checks to the girls; she could tell because they had cokes, while the men guzzled sodas of the expensive kind, or devoured sundae found at the top of the menu.

Another waitress remembered a co-ed who was slightly taken aback when her male companion asked for a nickel in order to go and powder his nose. Most of them have treated it as a big joke, and have not been the least bit embarrassed when reversing the bill-paying process.

One of the more expensive restaurants reports that the treating has been quite rare. Evidently the girls have a practical intuition and know what to avoid. In case the girls have become a little "flirt" by this time, a well-known cafe makes a special offer for this week only, that girls can pay their bills by washing dishes.

A Moral Re-Armament

One of the most discouraging factors in the world today is the gigantic rearmament programs being staged in most of the important nations. And each nation feels that it is necessary to re-arm in order to protect its borders from some other power which is re-arming for apparently the same reasons. Indeed the world has a right in the face of all this to feel pessimistic.

Warships are built for one purpose. That is to make war. Machine guns are made for the same reason, and although it may be argued that these huge war machines are being built to ensure peace, there is only one answer. If you prepare for war you will get war.

Fear of nation for nation, distrust of one ruler for another, or a people with one type of government for a people with another type of government, is at the basis of a great deal of the trouble. The same things which cause disruption in community and family life cause national disruption.

Human nature can and must be changed on a national scale, and this involves the eradication of fear, enviousness and dishonesty in the lives of all men and women. To quote Lord Baldwin and sixteen other British leaders, signatories to a letter to the London Times, of Sept. 10th, "The real need of the day . . . is moral and spiritual rearmament".

The letter of Lord Baldwin evoked so much comment, and was so well received that British sportsmen too, issued a statement that they were aware of the need for a rearmament, and also of the influence that sportsmen could have to create, between peoples irrespective of class, creed and nationality, bonds of unbreakable and spiritual quality. A statement to this effect was issued and was signed by such famous men as Captain George Eyston, Bunny Austin, Jack Beresford, J. B. Hobbs, W. W. Wakefield, Jimmy Wilde, S. C. Wooderson, and many others.

The faults in the nation's sickness lie within the heart of the individual, and it is only through a complete change in outlook upon life that man is going to be able to escape from the phobias which are making the world despair for peace.

Class Party Chivalry

One of the best media university students have to get acquainted is that provided by class parties. To most of these one may go alone, meeting partners and making friends there. If for no other reason than this, class parties have an important function in campus life.

It should be noted, however, that the success of this type of party depends to a great extent upon the chivalry of the men. Sometimes there are cases where the gentleness of the men fails, and the result is that no one takes the initiative in getting acquainted and asking for dances. Such an example occurred at a sophomore class party last Friday night, where a large part of the male element failed to fulfill some of the social graces for which it is traditionally responsible.

A large number of men—and there were just as many freshmen, juniors and seniors as there were sophs—found joy in congregating along one side of the hall and amusing themselves, instead of having the courtesy to arrange dances with the girls who were waiting patiently on the other side. At this particular dance, unlike some class parties, girls were not in the majority, so that the only excuse for their being "wall flowers" was lack of courtesy on the part of the men.

One solution to this problem might be found in having more "Paul Jones" dances on the program, or some of the "Sadie Hawkins" variety where it is up to the girl to ask the boy. This would give the girls a break occasionally and leave them less dependent upon momentary whims and lack of politeness amongst the men.

Perhaps a better solution would be for the men to learn what gallantry is, and come to the next class party prepared to enter into the spirit of the evening and treat the girls as they would like to be treated themselves.

A short notice appeared in the lower corner of the front page of this paper yesterday through an oversight on the part of the editors. A complaint had been made in the office by a certain campus organization in order to correct an implication which had been made in a former issue of this paper. The notice which concerned the attitude of the S.A.C. towards scholarships, had been clarified in two previous editorials and was therefore quite irrelevant, as well as being in itself a mis-statement. In future it would be appreciated if all matters dealing with corrections, clarifications or complaints regarding the editorial column material were made to the editor himself.

ARE MUSIC

San Carlo Opera

For its second Toronto offering, the San Carlo Opera Company presented The Barber of Seville yesterday afternoon to an audience composed largely of students. The numerous curtain calls, so often a feature of San Carlo presentations, were missing this time, not through the fault of the audience's youthfulness, but more because there was little to enthuse over. The settings were excellent, the musical direction very capable, the supporting cast willing and able, but important major roles were miscast. The production just wasn't up to standard.

As predicted yesterday, Harold Kravitt as Basilio the singing teacher, shared whatever honours there were with Ivan Petroff, who was a very proficient Figaro. Kravitt's basso, together with his turn for comedy, was very enjoyable, while Petroff kept the action moving when it was threatening to disappear altogether.

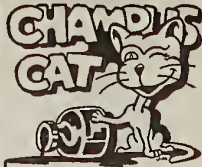

For some reason Lucille Meusel was allowed to sing the part of Rosina and while she did her best her voice was not sustained enough in the upper registers. She was ill-advised, in the singing lesson scene, to attempt Je Suis Titania from Mignon as it was beyond her ability though it was somewhat better than her other efforts. As for her leading man, Lawrence Power as Count Almaviva, it can be said that he knew his limitations. His voice was certainly not powerful but as he did not attempt to overcome that defect by shouting he was easy to listen to when he could be heard.

Special mention is due to the fine work of Natalie Cervi as Doctor Bartolo, who was a fine old aristocrat. Though he appeared years older than any other of the cast his voice would be a credit to a man half his age. To him, and to Kravitt and Petroff any credit for the production is due.

For an opera which later becomes so pleasingly noisy, Aida is admittedly rather slow in starting, but last night the San Carlo Company carried the (Continued on page 4)

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The athletic directorate has made some sweeping changes. Although several precedents were smashed, nobody is in much of a hurry to pick up the pieces. . . . There's a new system for recording P.T. credits: When you've attended five P.T. classes you get a red star. When you have accumulated five red stars you exchange them at the Key Office for a gold star. When you have five gold stars you turn them in for a red star and start all over again. Needless to say, the odds favour the house. . . .

There is also a new athletic uniform, for men students. It consists of bright Dutch Tile Blue semi-slacks and a white dirndl blouse, with short puff sleeves and contrasting blue piping on the edges. A prominent Varsity athlete took one look and said "I'll be dirndl if I'd even be seen dead in it." The new togs were designed jointly by the P.T. potentates and the psychology department for intercollegiate encounters, the effeminate appearance being intended to arouse involuntary feelings of chivalry in the opposing team, thus making them take it easy on Our Boys. It works, but whether through chivalry or pity has not been determined. In fact, it works so well that the C.O.T.C. will probably adopt it as a uniform for hand-to-hand fighting. Already the tyro officers are being taught to say "Oh, Adolf, this is so sudeten" in several languages. . . . The new outfit will be modelled at a fashion show in the Tuck Shop, and there is a plan to popularize it by using it as a costume for the U.C. Follies chorus. . . . Pardon my not sitting down. . . . I just had my garters pressed.

Mr. Ikey continues to be mentioned as the likely successor to Mr. Dunning although there is a conflicting rumour that the Revenue Minister would drop out of politics and would be willing to accept an appointment to the Nova Scotia supreme court. The situation naturally depends on the extent of Mr. Dunning's recovery within the next few months, but the government will probably want to have a full-time finance minister by the time parliament meets.

Youthful William Mulock, Liberal member for North York, is the likely choice for the postmaster-general portfolio. Mr. Elliott's illness is still considered serious and he will not return to the cabinet, according to several well-informed sources here. Mr. Mulock is a great friend of the Prime Minister's and has showed considerable ability in his parliamentary duties.

Other cabinet-shakeup rumours insist that Hon. C. G. Power, minister of pensions and national health, will accept a senate appointment and Dr. James McCann, Liberal member for Renfrew South, will succeed him. Justice Minister Lapointe is reported to be desirous of appointment to the senate but the old warrior of the Liberal party plays such an important role in the commons as Mr. Mackenzie King's right hand man that most political experts here do not believe he could be spared from the house. Six senate seats are open and will be filled shortly along with the numerous diplomatic vacancies. New ministers are to be appointed to the Canadian legations at Tokyo and Paris and the new legation at Brussels will need a minister. Little excitement is being caused here by the four by-elections scheduled for Nov. 14 in London, Waterloo South, Montreal-Cartier and Brandon. Conservative Manion will be returned in London as the Liberals decided not to oppose him after the Prime Minister made a specific request in this regard.

BLUES SECOND TEAM MEETS O.A.C. AGGIES

Varsity Squad Are Hopeful of Garnering Their First Win of the Current Rugby Campaign

The league leading Guelph Aggies invade Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon to battle the winless Varsity intermediates. Undeclared in their first four games, the Aggies need only one more victory to win back the title which McMaster took from them last year.

With a heavy line, a tricky backfield, and a smart forward-passing attack led by Lecky, Smith and Follwell, the Aggies have run roughshod over all their opponents, and in their last engagement with Varsity, trounced the blue and white squad by the score of 36-2.

This week, the intermediates and juniors have been merged in practice, and Coach Bill Byers should trot out a far stronger team than at any time this season. The intermediate line, bolstered by Ross, Shiffman and Bell, has been strong throughout, and with Plaxton and Grosskurth of the juniors probably lining up in the backfield, this department should be much stronger. If the Blues develop a better forward-passing defence, and Ibbister and Sweet can match Follwell's lofty punting, the Toronto team might give the Aggies their hardest game to date.

VIC LACROSSE TEAM DEFEAT MEDICOS 15-5

Led by Jack Aymer, the Victoria stickmen defeated Medics in the lower gym yesterday afternoon to the tune of 15-5.

Victoria lost little time getting underway and led 11-2 at half-time. Aymer bagged seven counters, with Bert Holman accounting for the other four. Meds started right in the hunt, however, and held Vic to a 4-3 score in the second half.

Both teams played hard-checking games but the Vic line of Aymer, Casserly and Holman kept Medics well bottled up with their fast-breaking diversified attack.

Medics: Wright, Mubart, Metzler, Birrell, Henders, Aiken, Gates, Cowan, Boyd, Robertson.

Vic: Holman, Casserly, Aymer, Hunnisset, McIntyre, Lee, Rutherford, Sherry, Kimbre.

TEST RECOMMENDED FOR TUBERCULOSIS

been paid to examinations in regard to the disease.

Doctor Ryerson, the Assistant Dean of the Medical School, in an interview said that the examinations of the fourth, fifth and sixth year students was at the present time only in the experimental stage. Because of this no definite result could be announced as yet. However, tuberculosis is very common among students of university age, but whether it is more prevalent among university students than those of the same age, hasn't been ascertained at the present time, said Dr. Ryerson.

The tests for T-B are being given at the School of Hygiene of the Connaught Laboratories by the medical students. In this way no cost for the tests is incurred by the university. The skin test by which some tuberculin is injected under the skin, is the method being used. Should the skin test show an affirmative finding, the student is given an X-ray examination of the chest to find out whether the white plague has taken hold of him. In the cases where the skin test is negative, it means one thing. That the student as yet has never had tuberculosis or even been exposed to it.

QUEEN'S WINS ANOTHER CHAMPIONSHIP

The home stretch has finally been reached—and the experts as usual have been fooled—Varsity, that was called to finish on top, is now being crammed in the second slot with Western, with a "do or get out" game scheduled for tomorrow... the McGill-Varsity clash in Molson's Stadium has all appearances of being the epic of the intercollegiate struggle for the championship.

Tomorrow is going to decide whether the Big Blue team has any championship hopes. It's a little strange to think of championships with the ever-fighting Queen's boys... and the cunningness of Reeve out of the running... but no matter what Queen's do tomorrow, or the following game, they're through.

However, even in four straight defeats Queen's may upset the championship hopes of the two teams who will be fighting for victory tomorrow. It was in the Queen's game that Bucko MacDonald, ace hurler and running half, was crippled... But the Tricolour in last two smashing games against McGill put out "Sleepy" Telford, husky middle wing, with a dislocated shoulder. The fact that Captain Ruschin twisted a knee and Rommie Perowne twisted an ankle in the last Queen's game, is certainly not going to help the Redmen's chances from coming out of this injury-infested season without a mark on the debit side of their ledger. Hamilton and Westman collected some knocks and bruises that are more than incidental... so no matter which team wins we can still blame it on Queen's "The ex-champions".

CERTAIN FEELING I FEEL THAT

In spite of the bruises, injuries, etc., ad infinitum, McGill on paper should take the fast recovering Blue team. So far this season McGill have been unbeaten, winning four consecutive games. The Redmen have had the most consistent kicking... most powerful line bucking... and plenty of pep. They have been steady as the Rock of Gibraltar (term is now out-dated), playing football all the time. Meanwhile the Varsity team have been spotty at the best. Starting off the season by losing Turner and Mumford, they never seemed to have gotten straight again. In games at certain times the Blues have looked like world beaters, at other times they have looked like they just didn't care. Their kicking and passing up to date is not close to what they are capable of. So tomorrow's contest on paper looks like a McGill victory... but yes, but there are some things that you can't put on paper... there is something that isn't figured when you compare teams as to strength... whatever you want to call it, whether spirit, dying teams' last courageous stand—or—that we figure is going to pull Varsity through a mighty close game.

Varsity has yet to play a game as well as they are able—they're bound to elick this season and there are only two games left—We feel that Varsity is going to break out with the kicking they deserve, the plunging, passing and running. The Blues have finally got that win feeling... they just have to... In order to qualify for a play-off it is necessary for the team second in the running to have defeated or tied the first team once at least.

The biggest crowd ever to accompany a Varsity team to Montreal is leaving today. Cars, trucks and train will be crammed full of students. Tickets for the train and the game are going as fast as the pies in the Tuck Shop. This crowd expects a Varsity victory, but win or lose, Blue Team, we're right behind you!

ATTENTION PLEASE, VARSITY...

Right now we would like to congratulate the people who have co-operated in so difficult a task as to make clearer the plays in progress and co-ordinate wires, and telephone, to bring the news hot off the other gridirons over the public address system installed at the Stadium. It is only with the co-operation of the Varsity-Western game played in London, and the McGill-Queen's game in Montreal... and we do think the crowd enjoys it...

THE SPORTSWOMAN

Monday marks the official opening of the Baseball League. At present the games are scheduled to be played at the Little Vix gym. Since this gym is rather low and small for the baseball addicts, they are trying to obtain the use of the gym at U.T.S. for their games. The latter place is higher and far more suitable for baseball.

Ski togs in yesterday's advertisements seemed like the height of something or other in view of the very mild weather. Don't forget, though, that the skiing season will be here in a few weeks. An intercollegiate women's meet is being held after Christmas by Mc-

CHARLIE PRINCE

—who will share punting and passing duties with Cam Gray tomorrow afternoon. "Bonnie Prince Charlie" played an outstanding game against Western last week.

VARSITY SOCCERITES TO TAKE ON AGGIES

League Leading Blue Soccer Teams Leave for Guelph to Take on Improved Aggies

Varsity's intercollegiate soccer representatives journey to Guelph tomorrow for their scheduled encounters with the O.A.C. Redmen.
This will be the last meeting of these teams this year, and judging from their past records two tidy tussles are on tap. The senior eleven, on the strength of their previous 4-1 licking of the Aggies, are favoured to repeat, although the O.A.C.'s are always good goers in their own backyard. The intermediate game should be a come-and-go affair, as the two teams having played to a one-all stalemate here three weeks ago after overtime.

McGILL SQUAD WEAKENED BY WIDESPREAD INJURIES

that certainly can't be simply disregarded as minor.
The outlook for this week's game at McGill is decidedly none too good. About the only thing that is definitely left is plenty of spirit and grim determination to come through with another win. That "Beat Varsity" cry which, echoed round the campus for the past two years succeeded in rousing the Redmen to superhuman feats of beating the Blueboys at Molson Stadium for their only victories of those years. That cry is being heard again. It spells poison for the Toronto team.

whole, therefore, students here work seriously and, as a consequence, play seriously.
When asked to compare New York co-eds with Varsity girls, Edison confined his remarks to the former, saying that behind their conspicuous glamour and calculated realism they seemed to have "a normal share of healthy inhibitions".
Not so easy on the male students is Marian Best, who was graduated in sociology this year by Victoria College. "I haven't seen a man worth looking at since I came down here," she declared, then smiled and added, "except those who came from Canada".
"The words 'democracy' and 'liberty,'" she continued in a more serious vein, "are used very loosely and bandied about in conversation incessantly, while John Strachey is shut up on Ellis Island. Similarly, most people think Germany should be stopped, but by the American democracies, with America sitting by to administer the coup de grace. I find that I have developed a strong Canadian nationalism since coming here, and have unconsciously become more pro-British than when I was in Toronto."

BLUES MUST BEAT REDMEN TO REMAIN IN PLAY-OFF

Donald, Mumford and Turner, early season casualties, will of course be absent from the team when it lines up against McGill.
Despite these afflictions, wheel-chairs, crutches and splints were discarded yesterday afternoon as the Blues spun through a light work-out against the juniors and intermediates. Highlighting Stevens' coaching technique this week was a showing yesterday of moving pictures of the last McGill-Varsity game, to impress upon the players the strength and weakness of the two teams in the various departments.
The Kerr-coached Redmen appeared today to be a prohibitive pre-game choice to rack up their fifth straight triumph Saturday afternoon. However, statistics do not warrant this overlay. Teddy Reeve's lamented Queen's team, bogged down in the cellar of the college loop with four straight defeats, was strong enough to hold McGill even on first downs and kicking exchanges.

PHARMACY APPOINTS ATHLETIC CAPTAINS

thing to ridiculous lengths, particularly since their performance perked up amazingly after the first act. There wasn't a great deal wrong with the singing, but it was much too confidential—for a while the audience was apparently overlooked. But considering the size of the audience perhaps that wasn't so surprising.
The stirring second scene of Act II was the turning point. From here on the performance was consistently good, substantial opera with few weaknesses, the climax coming in the heavy drama of Act III.
So far as the principals were concerned it was a smashing Ethiopian victory, with Mostyn Thomas as Amnona doing easily the best acting and singing of the evening, and Bianca Saroya as Aida using a not too flexible voice to the limit of its possibilities. The others, with the exception of Lyuba Senderowna as Amneris, were undistinguished.
The chorus was quite large and effective, the priests as usual giving a convincing imitation of animated mummies, and there was lots of spectacular ballet. In fact, the whole show, even including the orchestra and the scenery drops, was exceptionally good.
Possibly our approach to opera is all wrong, but even in the final tragic moments we couldn't help wondering why the scene-designer considered it necessary to surround the cut-away cross-section of a closed vault with ancient Egyptian decorations in the most approved style.

The Tempest

Members of the Shakespeare Society in collaboration with G. Wilson Knight donned costumes, put on make-up and recited Shakespeare's comedy, The Tempest, very badly on the boards of Hart House Theatre last night. The set was ugly. The cast acted poorly. The script by Mr. Shakespeare was excellent.
The first five minutes of the play were completely without meaning to the audience, which was confronted with thunder and lightning mingled with voices yelling unintelligible words. This was the tempest. Whether the storm frightened the actors or not we do not know.
Mr. Wilson Knight (Caliban), Mr. Henry Richardson (Gonzalo), and Mr. Arthur Crisp (Stephano) are to be

MASS MEETING

By M. N. Davies
C.U.P. Correspondent
Quebec City, Nov. 6 (C.U.P.)—Conscription law and participation in any European war was emphatically opposed in a mass demonstration of the student body of Laval University in Quebec City Saturday night.

Absolute neutrality of Canada and a pressing need for Canadian foreign policy defined by the Canadian Parliament was stressed by more than a dozen students who spoke before a crowd of fifteen hundred students and general public.

Following is the resolution passed at the meeting: "Students of Laval declare themselves opposed to all participation in European wars and demand that the Canadian government declare officially the absolute neutrality of Canada. Students of Laval demand repeal of conscription law in statutes. Students of Laval demand that the Canadian government proclaim a national holiday on December 11 each year on the anniversary of Westminster Statute."

Sadie Hawkins Laid to Rest for Remainder of This Year

AT SILVER SLIPPER

Sadie Hawkins was formally buried for one year at a party at the Silver Slipper Friday night. Out of about two hundred and seventy-five couples on the floor, one hundred and forty were admitted in the Hawkins manner—paid for by the girls.

The band played the Blue and White twice during the evening, accompanied by lusty singing by the undergraduates. Queen's and McGill songs were also played, but the vocal response was weak.

At the close of the floor show, the belle of the evening was introduced. But before Sadie was presented to the crowd, Lou Weingarten, feature editor of The Varsity and director of the U.C. Follies, (Continued on page 4)

OPPOSING FACTIONS UNITED AT DANCE

Last Friday night the Banquet Hall of the Royal York Hotel was the scene of the annual S.P.S. soph-frosh dance. To the swinging strains of Bob Lyons and his orchestra, and his charming songstress, Aileen Stevens, the members of the first and second years of the little red schoolhouse danced away the night.

Unfortunately, Marquette and Linda, celebrated dance team, engaged for the evening, were unable to appear, but their substitutes from the Royal York floor show entertained ably in their place.

The patrons and patronesses of the dance were Dean and Mrs. C. H. Mitchell, Prof. and Mrs. T. R. Loudon, Prof. and Mrs. W. J. T. Wright, Prof. and Mrs. A. Wardell, Prof. and Mrs. H. W. Price.

Sit in Downpour During Last Quarter of Game at McGill

Last night four hundred students came home from the McGill game somewhat the worse for wear. Sitting in a downpour for the fourth quarter, the supporters watched the home team go down to defeat in a field of mud. Most of the points for the victors were scored in that quarter, following which the rooters repaired to the tea dance soaking wet and pretty downhearted.

It looked as if even the elements were against the Blue team and its supporters. Two huge black clouds appeared over the stadium, and literally opened up right over the stands. The supporters had to walk through the streets in the downpour and listen to the insults of the McGill students. "Who won the football game?" they asked repeatedly.

Then came Saturday night, and the usual round of the city's night spots. The students proved a boon to the operators of the hansom cabs, riding in them "just for the novelty."

Sunday arrived, but the Toronto people didn't have a chance to attend a Sunday movie, for the train left Windsor Station at three. Three hundred whirling miles passed in six hours and a half. The return trip was featured by a race between trainmen and students for the light switch. Both won.

BROOKER TO SPEAK AT LIBRARY NIGHT

For some years past it has been the practice of the Library Committee to arrange two or three library nights during the winter. At these meetings outstanding authors will speak on their leisure reading.

The first of these nights will be Thursday, November 10, at eight-fifteen o'clock. The speaker will be Mr. Bertram Brooker, telling of books he has read, and why. Not only is Mr. Brooker an artist, but is well known as a novelist.

The gathering will be informal at the Hart House Library, around the fireplace. Smoking will be allowed. After the meeting, refreshments will be served.

FRENCH CLUB SPONSORS THEATRE NIGHT AGAIN

Following its usual custom, the French Club of University College will once more sponsor a theatre night. It will take place in Hart House Theatre on December 9. Two plays will be presented. Both will be under the direction of Miss Cole, Professor Finch and Professor Houppert of the French Department of University College.

STUDENTS URGED TO REDEDICATION

Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews of Ontario urged Canadian youth to rededicate themselves to democracy in his address to the Victoria College Convocation on Friday night. The convocation coincided with the celebration of the college's Charter Day.

After watching a long line of scholarship winners receiving the congratulations of Chancellor E. W. Wallace, Mr. Matthews opened his talk by offering to donate a "Lieutenant-Governor's silver medal" to the college.

Democracy, could be saved in a world "darkening under the wings of totalitarianism" if the problems of the nations and of classes were solved by "unselfish co-operation," he declared.

At the convocation, Principal W. T. Brown gave his report, and after speaking generally of the problems of education, declared that from what he knew of "the traditions of Victoria University and of the spirit of the lives lived there," there was no danger of either communism or fascism obtaining a foothold among the students.

Prodigy-Pianist To Play At Hart House Concert Next Sunday Evening

The soloist at the Hart House Sunday Evening Concert, which will be held next Sunday, will be Jack Samaloff, boy-prodigy pianist. Samaloff, who is still attending Harvard College, has given concerts in Toronto with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan, as well as several radio recitals.

The second of the Sunday Evening Concerts, which are given in the Great Hall, will commence at 9 p.m. Representatives of the various colleges and faculties have been requested to call at the Warden's office between 12.30 and 1.30 p.m. today to receive their allotments of tickets.

WILLMAN TAKES STUDENTS TO MOON

Royal Canadian Institute Told About Soundless World of Moon

AT CONVOCATION HALL

Launching his figurative space ship at Convocation Hall on Saturday evening, Dr. Peter Millman of the David Dunlap Observatory took the members of the Royal Canadian Institute on a trip to the moon, and showed them a lifeless, airless, soundless world, where daytime temperature goes beyond the boiling point of water and night temperature is as cold as liquid air.

Dr. Millman showed the Royal Canadian Institute a "road map" of the moon as seen through the 72-inch telescope of the University of Toronto with its many markings long thought to be land and sea, but which when examined closer prove to be giant mountain ranges and craters enclosing plateaus as large as Ontario.

During recent years, Dr. Millman said, astronomers have been attempting to solve the problem of the cause of the moon's markings. Two theories exist, he said: One is that the craters have been caused by extinct volcanoes and the other is that the moon's topography has been carved up by the impact of meteors. The speaker's personal view was that both theories have some truth but the larger craters have doubtless been caused by meteoric impact because vibration lines extend radially outward from them, which would suggest that the soil had been disturbed by the "loops" of the lunar surface as it trembled from the shock of being struck by meteors several miles in diameter.

Saturday, Nov. 5, Montreal.—A powerful, smashing, McGill team, outclassing Varsity in every department of play, retired the ever-trying contenders to the amazing score of 23 to 2 in Molson's Stadium. Not since 1914 has any team from McGill been able to manage to score that many points. But not since 1914 have they had a line smasher like Andy Anton, who crashed through twice to score majors and once to dribble the ball over the line, where Robb pounced on it.

For the first time this season the weather man mixed it up and started the boys playing on a slow muddy field, and later turned on the rain that came down in buckets, but by that time it didn't matter. A first-minute fumble put Varsity within scoring distance and a point was scored. But McGill, powerful and dangerous at all times, were out to average a 30 to 0 score of a previous season, and mercilessly went over for one touchdown after another, completely demoralizing the Blues.

MARSTON DISCUSSES BIBLICAL HISTORY

"Recent archaeological discoveries in the Holy Land disprove the claims of the so-called higher critics of the Old Testament that the people of those days were barbarians," stated Sir Charles Marston, J.P., F.G.S., in an address on "The Bible and Archaeology" in Hart House Theatre, Friday afternoon.

A brief word of welcome was given by Desmond Hunt, president of the Varsity Christian Fellowship, who were sponsoring the lecture. Dr. R. B. McElhann, principal of Wyelife College, in introducing the speaker, mentioned that Sir Charles was well known to Christian people the world over, having made forty round trips to America.

Referring to some of the discoveries, Sir Charles mentioned tablets of Abraham's time bearing mathematical calculations involving square roots and cube roots. Excavations in Egypt, Assyria, and Asia Minor show that people had acquired the knowledge of writing and collected great libraries even before the time of the flood.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Weimar, Germany: Chancellor Hitler yesterday declared that Germany was ready to disarm if other nations would do so, but expressed distrust of the democracies and intimated that the Reich would continue rearmament as long as British politicians continued to criticize his policies.

London: Three R.A.F. bombing planes flying non-stop from Egypt to Australia today shattered the Russian record by a hundred miles. One plane was forced to land as a result of fuel shortage after flying 6,400 miles from Ismailia, Egypt, the other two are continuing on to Port Darwin, Australia.

Jean Martin, III Vic, believes hair worn high is becoming to very few girls and that the others "just kill it." As for the hoop skirts, "They died with the Nineties—but they can always hide an awful figure," she said.

Betty Gregory, I U.C., does not like hoop skirts because they would be clumsy and might be a bit embarrassing at times. Asked what she thought of upswept coiffures she replied, "They're all right if they're tidy."

"If I had nice shoulders I'd wear a hoop skirt," smiled Marion Leeder, IV

"Old McGill"

The largest crowd of Varsity football supporters ever to take the excursion to McGill, saw the Senior football team go down to defeat before a real championship Red team Saturday. Right now Western has still a chance to force the McGill men to a play-off if they are able to defeat them for the first time of the season this week in London. And the Blues and the Queen's team find themselves for the first time during the past many years out in the cold without a playoff chance, before the schedule is over.

On the whole, although the situation is somewhat disappointing to the Varsity supporters, not to say the Kingstonsians, the prominence of those teams which for some time have been termed the underdogs is perhaps a very good thing for Intercollegiate sport. The Blues still have one more game to win, and the centre of interest for Toronto is on the chance of Toronto forcing Queen's to fight hard in order to escape the disgrace of a winless season.

It has been difficult during the past ten years to keep up interest for the McGill team, but now it is encouraging to see the ever-increasing enthusiasm for this year's crop of Redmen. Although Rugby gets a great deal more publicity than any other sport it must be remembered that it is only one sport of many, and there are many cups besides the famous Yates Trophy. There is still one more week of football to go, and after that there are many other teams which will be glad of the support of the sports fans of the U. of T. campus.

York Bible Class

York Bible Class, under the leadership of Mr. Denton Massey is, according to Dr. Stanley Russell "the most regular, reverent, and responsive audience in Toronto." Any young man who has come to the University of Toronto and had for the first time the privilege of sitting in on this Sunday afternoon class must have been amazed at the sincerity and definitely religious atmosphere of the group.

This organization, which might well be the model for any other organization of young men in Canada, is one of the things of which the city of Toronto is proud. And it has done a work during the past fourteen or so years by which both the city and U. of T. have benefited, for among the thousands of members who have belonged to the class during its existence there have been and are many University men.

Deer Park United Church, where the class meets, is usually packed to the doors on a Sunday, and latecomers will often find it necessary to secure seats in the aisles of the gallery. And the very able leader, who refers to his class as his "first love", is inspired to give his best to the young men who have gathered together from all parts of the city to listen, not to words of worldly wisdom, nor lectures on economics, nor political ideas, but to an exposition of the Scriptures. The class is what it is named, a Bible Class, and although Mr. Massey is well able to lecture on many other subjects, he keeps his services definitely religious in atmosphere.

Besides the Sunday services the class carries on other worthy activities; it not only provides the members of the class with recreation and amusement, but it does a great piece of charity work each Christmas time. And by means of radio the services have become a weekly worship period in hundreds of Ontario homes.

Although sensationalism is never used to attract new members, the attendance is kept at an amazingly high peak, and the services are marked with informality, and roars of applause to the sparkling humour and keen wit of the class leader, and members of the executive. For those men who have no affiliation with any particular church or religious group, and feel that they have a need for the inspiration gained through such a body, there is no better place to go on a Sunday afternoon than this Bible class.

The class may be congratulated in having as its guest speaker at its annual banquet no other than Herbert Hoover, former President of the United States. Mr. Hoover has always taken a keen interest in boys' work and should be one of the most inspirational speakers that it would be possible to secure.

It is obvious to any thinking person that even the present standard of living cannot be maintained in rural Canada if some readjustment is not made to establish parity and equalize the buying power of all social and industrial groups. A pre-war revenue will not sustain the farm family when they buy on a market that has been forced skyward by debt, ever-growing taxation, increasing wage scales, extravagance and waste—"The Farmer's Advocate".

ART MUSIC

(San Carlo Opera

On Friday evening the San Carlo Opera Company presented Puccini's great musical tragedy, Madame Butterfly.

Once again a Toronto audience had the opportunity of watching the portrayal of the title role by Hizi Koyke. Miss Koyke was not at all times equal to the singing essential to the part, but her fine acting more than made up for this flaw. Her interpretation had a poignancy that never failed to project.

Lawrence Power was somewhat miscast as Lieutenant Pinkerton, Butterfly's faithless American husband. However, the rest of the cast played and sang well, and they succeeded in giving the romance the treatment it deserves.

In Lohengrin, on Saturday afternoon, the company became really impressive; the parts could hardly have been allotted better, and as a result the performance was admirably integrated.

Lyuba Senderowna is obviously more at home in German than in Italian opera. As Ortrud she seemed almost worthy of the Metropolitan in power and beauty of voice and dignity of acting—an amazing improvement on her Anneris of Thursday, which was itself good. Her work made the second act a greater artistic achievement than we had expected to hear from the San Carlo. None of the other singers reached her level, but all were at least adequate, and two, Harold Kravitt as the king and Bianca Saroya as Elsa, were outstanding. Arthur Geery as Lohengrin was a little lacking in vocal strength, but dressed in a magnificent silver costume he looked the part perfectly.

Had it not been marred by atrociously poor acting, Saturday night's Il Trovatore would have been exceptionally good, for the singers had excellent voices.

Norina Greco as Leonora had a beautiful, dramatically strong voice. Mostyn Thomas, the Count di Luna, sang in a rich, full baritone, but unfortunately only when standing at strict attention, naturally slowing the action tremendously. Aroldo Lindi acted Manrico in such a self-conscious manner that his characterization became quite absurd. Only the role of Ancena, sung by Charlotte Bruno, a remarkable mezzo-soprano, received its just portrayal. Her narrative in the second act was one of the highlights of the opera. In all other respects the performance was very successful.

Throughout the engagement the operas were mounted in an unusually attractive manner, most of the drops being apparently new and very colourful. One of the scenes for Aida even drew a burst of applause on its own account—not a frequent occurrence under such circumstances.

Carlo Peroni's conducting was always assured and in the best of taste, and the orchestra was consistently good, particularly in strings and woodwinds.

Every performance was a smooth, professional job, in spite of the minor flaws mentioned.

Hollywood Theatre

To one of the largest audiences at the Hollywood's French movie screenings this season, was presented a remarkably well-made picture, La Grande Illusion. Perhaps when first conceived this picture was to be an indictment of war, but it has turned out to be more than that. It is an artistic accomplishment.

A remarkable achievement is use of three languages in the film. When a German speaks it is in German—not in French. It is indeed a novel experiment which added much to the realism of the whole.

It was good to see von Stroheim again and in a part which he does to perfection. In fact if we were to make a choice among such an able cast it is to this grand German actor we would give the laurels. Pierre Fresnay as the heroic French captain also turns in a remarkably fine performance.

In fact everyone connected with the production may well be proud of it as a French lesson we say givestein, done with the easy skill of an us more.

For the second of the Friday afternoon recitals, Wilma Stevenson Dohler as the guest artist presented a widely diversified program of piano music. Her rendering of Chopin's Fantaisie in F Minor was outstanding for its formal freshness and subtle phrasing. By popular request she repeated Goosen's Marionette Show, a boisterous short, short piece reminiscent of Debussy's Gollywog's Cakewalk. An unfamiliar number by Liszt, St. Francis Walking on the Waves, was played with fine restraint, flowing easily to the climax. VARSITY WINS, TIES IN DOUBLE-HEADER

In two crucial games at Guelph Saturday afternoon, the Varsity soccer teams fared quite well as the seniors won 2-0, and the intermediates tied 2-2.

Attention was centred on the latter game since defeat meant virtual elimination from the championship race for either team. In the first half Hendricks put the Aggies one up on a shot that barely missed goalie Kane's outstretched arms. But it was an inspired band of blue boys that trotted out on the windy field in the second half and proceeded to dominate the play, deserving even more than the one-goal which Art Boyd netted on a well-played penalty shot. The Toronto team maintained the driving pace in the overtime and were rewarded when "Tony" Antoni scored on "Bing" Thomson's pass, their jubilation being short-lived, however, as the Aggies were awarded a penalty shot which Livermore made good.

Hendricks was easily the best man for the red team, with Roy Errington, Ted Simmonds and Murray Townsend deserving special mention for the blue and white.

The senior game ran true to predictions, although O.A.C. fielded a vastly improved eleven. Jack Mullett headed Alf Dodd's goal-mouth pass for the first score, and in the second half it was Tommy Rutherford who chalked up the other Toronto tally. This senior affair was far from a pink-tea party with the inevitable result that play was not up to par. Starting were George Fraser, Forbes Thomson and Jack Mullett, and the two Aggie fulls, Middleton and Davidson.

Toronto Senior: Harvey, MacIn, Thomson, Convey, Fraser, Dodds, Honeyman, Rutherford, Mullett, Sills, McDonald.

O.A.C.: Shaw, Thompson, Brown, Livermore, Abbott, McNabb, Hendricks, Small, Davidson, Gay, Tinsley.

RUGBY SCHEDULE NEARS COMPLETION

With the intercollegiate rugby schedule nearing completion, two of the three groups have declared a winner, while the play-off representative of the third group is still to be decided. The two squads sure of play-off berths are Sr. Meds and Jr. S.P.S., while leadership in the third division is disputed by Dents and Trinity.

Up to date Sr. Meds have played three of their four scheduled games and have been decisive victors in all of them. The key man in the Meds' attack has been Freddie Chickent, a triple threat man whose kicking, passing and running have featured every game to date.

In the second division Jr. S.P.S. present one of the strongest teams School has had in several years. With their 14-0 conquest of U.C. Friday afternoon, they completed their schedule united and undefeated. The Stukas-coached gridders represent the Argo style of play on a small scale, with strength in extensions and forward passes featuring their attack. Fugler, Barry, Kilpatrick and Munro have starred consistently for the Toile Oike men, their strong team has chased Victoria, last year's Mulock Cuppers, out of the play-offs.

The only other unbeaten team is the Dents outfit, which has played but two games to date. Trinity has also won two games but they lost their Thursday match with Dents 2-4, which gives a fair indication of where the strength lies in this group. However, it is still mathematically possible for Trinity to tie the Dents for first place, or even to finish ahead of the Holamren. Right now it looks like Sr. Meds, Jr. S.P.S. and Dents in the rugby play-offs.

In the soccer set-up Wyckoff, Meds and Dents are in the van in their respective groups. Vic is the only team not quite certain of winning up on

THINGS I FOUND OUT ABOUT MONTREAL

That Coach Kerr of the McGill football team, has an idea that many of the football coaches should follow. During the game Kerr takes up a position on the centre field marker on the top of the bowl in a little enclosure. In it sits with a telephone connected directly to the bench where the assistant coach sees the weaknesses of both teams, make substitutions and suggestions to the players through his mouth-piece—no, not the telephone—the assistant coach gets you down . . . the second depresses you . . . the third finds you immune and the fourth finds you happy again. . . That surprisingly enough, after travelling all the way to Montreal to cheer on the Varsity football team a good percentage of the Toronto crowd didn't see the game (no, I mean they just—well—forgot to go) . . . That if all the water that fell and was absorbed by the clothes of the spectators was squeezed out and collected, then bottled, it would correspond exactly to the amount of fire-water extinguished by the football fans (well almost any way) . . . That Andy Anton, the heavy inside who scored two touchdowns and was responsible for a third, has a real name that goes something like Antonopolis but with cutting and revising has been whittled down to Anton. . . That the football proms after the game had as many people as the U.C. Follies (now do I get a ticket?) and what is even more surprising is the fact that instead of handing out pass-out tickets to those that have taken more punishment from the shaggers than the football team takes in a game, you get punched as you come in . . . no you get stamped with indelible ink, branded so to speak on the top of your hand . . . which serves to identify you as a cash customer and you're out two bucks and twenty four cents (12 per cent tax! remember?) if you forget yourself and wash your hands before the dance is over. . . That the city has horses and carriages which are your only means of climbing up the mountain, and that in spite of the romantic ideas of driving in these carriages, seeing the beautiful spots with a little quaint Frenchman, you'll probably get saluted with "Hello Luntsman" in Brooklyn, New York, English instead of the expectant "Bonjour" (I know—it happened to me) . . . That there are more ways of playing the big drum than with drumsticks . . . We saw one gentleman gently playing it with little red ivory squares. He must have been a good player too, because they paid him $47 for a couple hours' entertainment. His audience must have been real swing fans because they kept in rhythm with him shouting "Shoot the Seven to me Johnnie boy" (I must learn to play the drum that way) . . . That a football game that was played at Montreal last Saturday drew more people than any game in Montreal since 1928 and that the official figures do not count because there were almost as many people in the trees and on top of surrounding buildings, as were in the stadium. . . That the McGill co-eds have found a novel way of utilizing pipe cleaners. By twisting them into the letters of the university, and decorating them with the colours, attractive colours can be made and an amazing amount are sold to the people in Montreal are much more obliging and helpful to a stranger to the city than most cities that we have been in. Perfect strangers where to go—how, etc. . . It was surprising and certainly taught a great many of us a lesson that we shouldn't forget. . . That the University of Montreal and McGill University just don't seem to get along . . . it was once more evident that it is now and, that one of the McGill students claimed that this reputedly fascist student body is communistic (Yea Redmen!) . . . That you get on the back of the Montreal street-cars (this little bit of information almost cost my life) . . . That it is very surprising how fast people forget. . . Montrealers who were shouting for a little competition on Saturday . . . and were disgruntled because of their superb football machine's scoring ability . . . a few years ago they were also disgusted but for a different reason . . . people just can't stand prosperity. . . That anybody who still feels that the new athletic fee is high should go to McGill and pay twenty samples (dollars to you) for the same privilege that we get for only three! . . . That it seems to me we lost a football game on Saturday and c'est fini (I learnt that in Montreal too!).

top-sided tilt. Fugler huffed a single right after the kick-off, when two forwards were good for forty yards, to bring him within scoring distance. Three minutes later the Engineers scored a touchdown on a thirty yard run, to a flawlessly executed set run, Fugler to Munro to Kilpatrick. Barry kicked the convert.

U.C. nearly scored near the end of the first quarter when they recovered a fumble on the S.P.S. forty. Plunges carried the ball to the thirty, but an intercepted pass spoilt the opportunity. Both teams then tightened up defensively and left no further chances to score during the first half.

In the third quarter Fugler shook Barry loose on a wide lateral, and the latter went twenty-five yards to the U.C. six-yard line before being brought down. Munro made the required distance on his first plunge. Barry converted. Fugler completed the scoring when he kicked a single just before three-quarter time.

U.C. threatened briefly in the fourth quarter when they broke up a pass play and obtained possession thirty yards out. A sleeper pass to McDiarmid netted fifteen yards, but a second pass was intercepted to end the rally.

Jr. S.P.S.: Fugler, Munro, Barry, Kilpatrick, Stirling, Sloan, Baker, DePaul, Reynolds, Graham, Allen, Portland, Moore, Rubin, Smith.

U.C.: McLean, Mallion, Essery, Clavin, Harris, Foulds, Moore, Murray, Karry, Ferguson, Culler, Stewart, Wilkins, McDiarmid, Singer, Pinks, McLaughlin, Hogul.

Taking their first step in a determined advance towards the women's intercollegiate basketball title which they held back in '36, St. Hilda's Seniors decisively defeated the inexperienced U.C. senior team on Friday evening. While both teams made many mistakes, the Saints displayed a much cleverer type of basketball.

Miss Margot Thompson, a former star for St. Hilda's, is coaching the Seniors this year, and although it is too early to call a winner, her team is much stronger than last year and shows great promise of annexing the intercollegiate title. Although Betty Kirk and Midge Munro were unable to play in the Saints' first game, the team led by Joan McMaster, made a most impressive showing.

Queen's send many of their best athletes up here after graduation and among the co-eds particularly they can do nothing further to add to their laurels. U.C. Jrs., however, were very fortunate in persuading Gladys Heintz, the brilliant captain of the women's basketball team at Queen's last year, to act as their coach. Although her charges did not display anything spectacular Friday evening, Miss Heintz is not discouraged, especially since they had had only one practice together.

An injury to her ankle in Friday night's game, may force Violet Penty-piece out of competition for a few weeks. This accident is a further blow for the U.C. Seniors, who lack any surplus of players.

TRINITY DRAMATICS

On Wednesday at 4:30, the Trinity College Dramatic Society will present a one-act play on the stage of the U.C. Players' Guild. Members of both societies admitted by card.

ALFRED COLLEGE DEFEAT VARSITY HARRIER TEAM

The University of Toronto harrier team went down to a 17-38 defeat before a crack Alfred College squad Saturday afternoon in the cross-country relay held over the mountainous course at Alfred College, New York State. The victory marked the American team's second straight triumph over the Toronto outfit in two years' competition.

Lagasse of Alfred College was first to complete the difficult course, in the good time of 32:08. Bill Hogg of S.P.S. headed the Toronto runners, finishing fourth. Goodwin was next in line for Varsity, coming in eleventh, ahead of his team-mates Louitt and Phoenix, who took twelfth and thirteenth places respectively. Sixteenth place was taken by Kaylor, another Blug-chad runner.

Next week the Varsity harrier team will compete at High Park in an intercollegiate meet with McGill, Queen's, R.M.C. and O.A.C.

Shattering 51-3 Defeat Claimed Most Disastrous of All Time

PASSING IS FEATURE

Uncovering one of the smoothest passing attacks shown here in years, the undefeated Ontario Agriculture College team smothered Varsity intermediates 51-3 Saturday afternoon at Varsity Stadium, to write into the records the most lopsided defeat ever handed wearers of the Blue and White. Stressing a brilliant forward passing attack, punctuated by lightning run-backs, the Baldwin-coached Redmen swept into the lead late in the first quarter and piled up points almost at will thereafter.

For the first ten minutes of the first quarter, Varsity kept the Redmen bottled up on their own side of mid-field. Then the storm broke. As Jack Plaxton stepped back to whip a pass to a waiting receiver, Len Wilks, Aggie halfback, charged forward to take the loss in full stride and race eighty yards for a converted touchdown.

Once the Aggies had broken into the scoring column, it was a story of touchdown after touchdown, most of them coming via the aerial route. The entire Aggie backfield, backed up by a hard-charging line, went in big-league style throughout. Len Wilks, Junior Follwell, George Reynolds, Joe Fraser and Al Smith ran and passed rings around the Varsity squad, while Leckie and Junke also went well along the wing-line. Follwell, Fraser and Wilks scored two touchdowns apiece, while Smith and Junke each tallied a major to pile up the Guelph total.

A touch of comedy was introduced in the debate late in the fourth quarter. Catching the entire Varsity team flat-footed on an intercepted pass, four Aggies passed the ball back and forth unmolested until Junke, a lineman, was accorded the honour of carrying the ball over the goal-line.

Phil Ibbister, who accounted for all of Varsity's three points on singles, stood out for the losers, along with Hugh Bailey and Don Veisler. The victory, Aggies' fifth straight score in intermediate intercollegiate play, gave them undisputed possession of first place and the championship of the college circuit.

to kick. McGill got the advantage of the wind. The first Redmen play was a fumble and it looked as if the Blues were in. If Varsity had made the most of this opportunity, the result might have been different. But the plays did not click and Varsity on an attempted placement, took a single. With the wind behind him, Perowne, playing his usual heady game, made it a kicking game. Westman, as usual did his best kicking against Varsity and forced the Blues further and further back into their own territory. Varsity, kicking from their own two-yard line, were slow in getting down and Merrifield, passing to Westman, brought the ball to the Toronto 18 yard line. McGill then showed a startling forward pass attack when Hamilton threw a beautiful thirty-yard pass to Keefer. Andy Anton, burly middle plunged the ball over for McGill's touchdown. Keefer converted, making the score McGill 6, Varsity 1. Varsity got their second break of the game when the kick-off was fumbled by Perowne. Again Varsity attempted a placement and cashed in for a single. The quarter ended and Toronto now had the wind; McGill held the ball as the half ended McGill 6, Varsity 2.

From this point on McGill were never in danger. Starting with the wind Westman kicked sixty-five, and seventy yard towering punts to the Toronto halves who were quickly downed by hard McGill tackles. Merrifield's run-back of a good kick by Prince against the wind brought the ball into position for him to throw the ball to Hamilton, who ran the ball to the two-yard line. Anton went over for the touch, which he converted.

From this point on Varsity were playing through a heavy rain set in and playing was difficult. A Varsity fumble was dribbled over the line by Anton, and recovered by Robb. A little while later Merrifield caught a Varsity pass, hit the open field and galloped through the already dusky field for the touchdown, making the score McGill 23, Varsity 2.

SADIE HAWKINS BURIED BY STUDENTS AT DANCE was called upon to explain the real meaning of Sadie Hawkins' week.

Weingarten traced the newly inaugurated institution to some Varsity reporters who were rather short of change and decided to let the girls pay for them. He described the "wonderful time" the boys were having, what with having their hair done and receiving corsages.

In the opinion of all the co-eds on the campus, Sadie Hawkins' week has been a success. Sadie is dead, but the girls and the various non-amateur organizations who found the week profitable, intend to resurrect her next fall.

ST. HILDA'S SENIOR TEAM BEAT U.C. BASKETEERS

Displaying a starry type of basketball in the first interfaculty game of the season, St. Hilda's senior team swamped U.C. Seniors, 24-5 at the O.C.E. gym on Friday night.

U.C. Seniors were without the services of a number of their regulars, and lacking practise, never once threatened the Senior Saints. The outstanding player on the floor was Rosemary Annsley, St. Hilda's versatile forward, who scored eleven points. Janie Church played an excellent defensive game for U.C. and prevented the Saints from piling up a much larger score. Joan McMaster, captain of the winning team, played her usual fine game; U.C., already short of players, were further handicapped when Violet Pettypiece was obliged to leave the game as a result of a strained ligament in her ankle.

NICKEL GIVES STRENGTH AND TOUGHNESS TO A 25¢ SPANNER OR A 1500 TON HYDRAULIC PRESS

TODAY, if you were at the Sudbury Mines, you would see eleven-ton buckets of Nickel ore being hoisted to the surface from the depths of the earth. Tomorrow you might purchase a spanner, a screw driver or a pipe wrench containing some of that same Nickel. For Nickel is being alloyed with steel to make tools tougher, harder, stronger—but lighter in weight. In a pair of pliers or a giant lathe, Canadian Nickel prevents breakage.

The world over, makers of machinery and equipment are using Nickel Alloys. In the gold mines of New Guinea, in the San Francisco Oakland Bridge, in the tin-mining dredges of Malaya or in Egypt's Aswan Dam, Nickel is doing its part in checking breakage and corrosion. In such small things too as the keys of a clarinet or a delicate surgical instrument, Nickel finds an important place.

Canada's Nickel mines must keep pace with the world demand. That is why new millions are being spent each year in Canada for new equipment, machinery and supplies to mine and refine still more Nickel. Canada's world market for Nickel must be retained.

HELP PLANNED FOR CHINESE STUDENTS BY COMMITTEE

Subscriptions to be Solicited; Contributions Turned in to S.A.C. Office

PARTY PLANNED FOR JAN. 13

Students will again have the opportunity of eating Chow Mein with chop sticks in a truly Oriental atmosphere, according to plans released by the Far Eastern Students' Relief Committee, which met in the Women's Union yesterday.

The committee, which is continuing its appeal especially for the relief of students in China, hopes to better its record of almost 400 last year and has set an objective of 1,000. Besides the party planned for Friday, January 13th, subscriptions will be solicited and all contributions may be turned into the S.A.C. office in Hart House.

A luncheon will be held at the Campus Coffee Shop on Saturday at 12.10 p.m. in honour of Mr. Lyman Hoover, Student Secretary of the International Committee of the Y.M.C.A. in Peiping, China, 1930-37. Mr. Hoover has just returned from a 12,000 mile journey through China and Japan.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Washington, Nov. 6: Forty million in U.S. tomorrow go to the polls to indicate the popularity of President Roosevelt's New Deal, and to make or break politicians considered presidential possibilities for 1940. Thirty-two governors will be open, thirty-five places in the senate, 432 seats in the house, lesser offices, state constitutional amendments, and referenda. The election is an off-year election. President's term still has two years to run.

Paris, Nov. 7: Communists and socialists combined war nation against a nationalist plot to seize power which would be carried out in an uprising on Armistice Day. They called on Premier Daladier to guard the democratic regime. They accused Colonel Francois de la Rocque's social party and Jacques Doriot's French Peoples' Party of plotting.

SIREN AIDS IN ABETTEMET

In the deep black of night Sadie Hawkins, that much-maligned damsel from Dogpatch, turned into a glamorous siren this week-end and became involved in one of the most daring kidnap plots ever perpetrated as a band of first year "worms" from Trinity decided to deal with the more oppressive sophs in their own sweet way.

Many people passed that dark sedan parked by the Hoskin Street turnabouts behind Whitney Hall but little did they know that it was a "crime car". Others probably noticed a beautiful Whitney Hall blonde step out of the car but no one imagined that she was the "come-on" who, using the name of Sadie, was to lure two second year Trinity men into the hands of the waiting "worms".

Edgar Bull, one of the victims, was delighted when he heard a lovely-voiced Sadie telephone to invite him out, and he was equally delighted when he stepped into the automobile with her. "Suits me fine!" he exclaimed, little knowing that three "worms" with vengeance in their hearts were hidden in the back seat.

Kaltenborn To Speak On "What Price Peace"

Lecturer's Aim is to Teach
Students to Understand
Current Events

Aiming to teach students of journalism how to understand current events, Mr. H. V. Kaltenborn will lecture at Massey Hall Thursday evening. Mr. Kaltenborn, who recently broadcast reassuring comments during the last major European crisis, is appearing in Toronto under the auspices of the League of Nations Society. The subject of his address will be "What Price Peace".

His ability to translate Hitler's rapid-fire speeches, and his comments on their significance have made him one of the outstanding news commentators of today. He maintains that the use of a script is utterly out of the question. That to broadcast news comments requires long experience. He himself has had 35 years of practical newspaper work.

Jack Samaloff, the seventeen year old boy piano prodigy who is to deliver a concert this Sunday evening at Hart House is a fifth year student at Harvard Collegiate and there this reporter found him, a diminutive, unpretentious fellow, who does not take his one claim to fame too seriously.

Samaloff was born in Lithuania and had already been playing the piano for several years when at the age of nine he came to Canada. Continuing his studies at the Conservatory of Music under Guerrero, he has repeatedly won scholarships which have carried him through his studies.

He recalled the first time the music bit him when as a child with senses fascinated, he would watch his pianist cousin practicing hour after hour. His family, he explained, had always been musically inclined. His mother and sisters possess fine, though untutored voices and his aunt had, in

ARCAND TO SPEAK ON FASCIST ETHICS

Rev. N. MacMurray will Reply, with Talk on Christian
Social Ethics

Adrian Arcand, French-Canadian fascist leader and editor of L'Illustration Nouvelle, will speak at the Women's Union today at 1.30 under the auspices of the Student Christian Movement. The other speaker at the meeting will be Rev. Norman MacMurray, who will reply to Mr. Arcand's speech on fascist social ethics with a talk on Christian social ethics.

Despite certain splits in the ranks of the Quebec fascists, Arcand is the strongest fascist leader in Canada. According to a statement made to the press some time ago, John Ross Taylor's Ontario fascists are co-operating with the Quebec branch.

Arcand's connection with Maurice Duplessis' Union Nationale government of the Province of Quebec has been a matter of conjecture among Canadian political observers for some time. The widespread belief that Arcand's paper is the semi-official organ of the Duplessis government was publicly denied by M. Duplessis two months ago. He insisted that the Quebec government has not the slightest connection with the fascists.

DR. CURTIN SPEAKS ON PERSONALITY

Do not Pattern Yourself On Your Neighbour, Speaker
States

"Don't try to be like your neighbour," was the advice offered by Dr. Anne Curtin when she began her series of lectures on "Personality Hints" at the Theatre of the Women's Union last night.

"Personality," she stated, "is the total adjustment to static forces and it is not fully developed until about the age of twenty-five. The university age is really too late to form attitudes towards emotional trends but," Dr. Curtin admitted, "by working with yourself, you can sometimes change your attitude."

It is Dr. Curtin's intention to deal in her informal talks with the emotional development of the individual and to answer questions on any subject ranging from pre-marital relations to the harm in smoking and the freedom allowed while wearing a fraternity pin.

TORONTO VIEWS TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON

Moon Does Not Determine
Weather Conditions,
Astronomer Finds

For the second time this year, Toronto was able to observe a total eclipse of the moon last evening. From 3.41 until 7.22 p.m. the earth cast its shadow over the planet.

Miss R. L. Northcott, M.A., Computer in Astronomy at the university, declared that this eclipse was not at all unusual. On May 14th a similar overshadowing took place. Little could be learned at the observatory in front of Hart House but at Richmond Hill it was expected that interesting observations would be made. Miss Northcott explained that the time of eclipses can be computed to the nearest minute. It is the slight variations in time from which astronomers gain important data regarding the moon's movements.

Miss Northcott felt that the unusual amount of interest shown here in yesterday's eclipse was at least partly due

PRESS CLUB MEETS IN WOMEN'S UNION

Provides Opportunities for Meeting Students and Writers

The Women's Press Club will hold its first meeting of this year today at the Women's Union at 4.30. Professor E. K. Brown of the English Department of University College will be the guest critic.

The Press Club tries to meet the demands of those women students on the campus who are interested in writing. It provides an opportunity for these students to get acquainted and to meet professional writers and critics.

At its monthly work meetings manuscripts of any kind are submitted anonymously and discussed by a guest and the members of the club. Membership in the Press Club is open to women of every college and freshies are especially invited.

S.A.C. MEMBERS DINNER GUESTS OF PRESIDENT CODY

The members of the Students' Administrative Council were the guests of President and Mrs. Cody at dinner in the Women's Union last evening. The President has made it his custom to invite all the members of the Council to dinner early in the fall term every year, in order to meet them and discuss the work for which they are responsible in the University.

At one time the Council was composed of specially elected representatives from the various colleges and faculties, but some years ago the custom was changed to have the presidents of the various student societies act as representatives to this organization. Speaking frankly and confidentially to the members of the organization which had the recognition of the Board of Governors as the representative body for the entire student population of the University of Toronto, he outlined the problems of the University which, growing and expanding year by year, is constantly in need of more room, buildings and equipment. He charged the students with their responsibilities to the University both while at college and after graduation.

In speaking of those things which

Lectures Outlined For Coming Year

Five distinguished speakers on Europe, Palestine, Czechoslovakia and personal marital relationships are being brought to Toronto this season to lecture before the Holy Blossom Forum, it was announced yesterday.

On November 28, at Holy Blossom Synagogue, Phyllis Bottomo will lecture on "Love and Marriage". Miss Bottomo is author of over 30 novels, notably the best seller, "Private Worlds", and her most recent book, "The Mortal Storm", the story of a German family, divided against itself, living under the Nazi regime.

"Can Europe Survive?" is to be the topic of an address given December 12 by James Waterman Wise, who has been engaged as war correspondent in Brazil and Spain. Son of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, he is a young man and has devoted himself entirely to the problems of youth and progressive movements. Reports describe him as a "traveller, writer, lecturer, authority on European social and political conditions".

A debate on "Who Should Rule Palestine?" on January 23, will feature Ameen Rihani, Arabian authority, and Dr. James Heller, speaking on behalf of Judaism. Mr. Rihani is a recognized authority on both political and cultural subjects in the Near East, while Dr. Heller, a leader of the American Zionists Council, is one of the outstanding Rabbis of Judaism in the United States.

Maurice Hindus, eminent Russian author who was heard on Columbia network talks from Prague during the recent European crisis, will speak next February 7 on "Czechoslovakia—Cockpit of Europe". He will give his answer to the questions being asked about Czechoslovakia, and his impressions of what went on behind the scenes just before the Four-Power pact was signed.

CO-EDS APPROVE MARRIAGE LECTURES

Most of the girls when asked about a course of lectures on marriage, said, "Of course we should have it. If the boys need it so do we. After all, it takes two to make a bargain."

A certain young girl from I Physiotherapy when asked what she thought about long courtships shook her head and said, "I'd marry for love at first sight."

One Thousand Needy Students Provided for if Grant
Is Given

Representatives of the Toronto Student Assembly met last night to discuss a national scholarships campaign to obtain a $500,000 annual grant from the Dominion government.

Dr. Grant Lathie, travelling secretary of the Canadian Student Assembly explained that the sum would provide one thousand clever but needy students with scholarships of $500.

"As the provinces have educational autonomy," said Dr. Lathie, "the C.S.A. suggests that a sum be allotted to each province according to the eligible number of matriculating students, that sum to be administered by a provincial scholarships board."

Before any bill can be presented the C.S.A. must have the support of the student bodies throughout Canada. Bill Kerr, chairman of the Toronto Student Assembly suggested. He said that the aim of the Assembly was to promote inter-university activities and to allow for the expression of student opinion throughout the country so that a forceful appeal for scholarships may be sent to the Dominion Parliament.

A scholarships committee will be appointed at the next meeting of the Assembly on Nov. 15, open to the entire student body.

Presence at College Explained by Co-eds

"Not for knowledge!" was the negative reason given by co-eds when asked "Why did you come to college?"

Most of them agreed that some work was necessary but they felt that a good time should be had by all. "I was going to work but thought I would have more fun at college. I did and I got a man, too," said a II year Household Economics girl.

Patty Perrin and Betty Nash confided "I really came to have a good time, but don't tell anybody." (So we didn't.) The Sadie Hawkins view was not held by one Whitney Hall co-ed. "No, I didn't come to get a man. I came to be nearer the one I've got." A large number of co-eds stressed the social life and acquisition of new friends.

One Vic student wanted to get away from it all, agreeing with the affirmative in the debate to be "Resolved that College life is artificial and out of touch with reality."

A damsel from Northern Quebec could not be accused of any designs on the other sex, as she said, "I didn't even know this was a co-educational college. So that lets me out."

"It's always been taken for granted that I'd go to college, and here I am. Having a wonderful time," said a III year Moderns student.

A few souls merely muttered, "That's what I'm trying to find out," when questioned.

SCENERY USED AT STUNT NITE

The atmosphere of Ontario's scenic northland, replete with trees, tents and foresters, will be brought to Hart House on the night of November the twenty-fifth.

As evening falls on that Friday night some thirty-five foresters and their friends will prepare to celebrate on the occasion of the annual Stunt Nite.

With music emanating from Eddie Stroud and his orchestra, entertainment by the Mermaid Club in the form of aquatic stunts, a comical skit, prizes for the best forester, and a camp dinner amid sheltering trees, this Stunt Nite promises to be one of the finest ever held.

Dancing will go on in Hart House from 9 p.m. until 2 a.m. with the picturesque woods' costume, to be worn by all the foresters, adding a suitable touch to the festivities.

In addition to the regular entertainment there are several surprises in store for all on the twenty-fifth, according to Ross Grinnell, the president of the Foresters' Club, who points out that Forestry Stunt Nite will be open to all students of the university.

According to Mr. Grinnell, the slogan being voiced today at the Faculty of Forestry is "Come to Stunt Nite and the foresters will give you the time of your life."

For Radio Devotees

Just as the movies have telescoped time and space in ways that still astonish devotees of the legitimate stage, so has the radio, especially during the recent crisis, speeded not only transmission of spot news but of editorial comment. Up until the last week of September, editorials were more or less carefully prepared lucubrations: but the trouble in Europe, with its implications of the frightfulness of war, made radio transmission of news a frantically urgent necessity. And not only straight news, as the event showed, but interpretation of news, comments on events, and so far as possible, predictions of consequences likely to result as the nations of Europe cringed towards signing the Four-Power Pact in Munich.

During the crisis the attention of the whole world centred upon one man. The world waited eagerly for his rapid, verbal reports, his extemporaneous editorials broadcast minute by minute upon the heels of each development of the European situation. He was the man with sufficient fluency in German to translate without pause Hitler's 73-minute foam-flecked oration which was awaited, with all the appearance of apprehension if not terror, even as far away as Toronto. On the instant of the speech's completion he went on the air with a quiet, authoritative interpretation of the speech and correctly predicted its likely consequences.

The man who did this astonishing editorializing is of German descent, but surely no friend to Hitler. He is H. V. Kaltenborn, a veteran newspaper man who was reporting the Spanish-American war before the turn of the century. He regards as nonsense the notion that it is necessary to prepare a script. His background of 35 years of newspaper experience provides him with all the preparation he needs. But his achievement brought out one very interesting fact. The fact that at times of international tension, people prefer some re-assurance, so long as it is based on reasonable grounds, to strictly factual announcements over the air.

This poses a very entertaining question, brought out last week when Mr. Kaltenborn, who is speaking at Massey Hall this week, was presented with an engraved scroll at a banquet in Chicago attended by editors of the leading Chicago dailies. The question is, whether radio is to compete with or collaborate with newspapers. Presenting the scroll, the Dean of the School of Journalism of Northwestern University said that Kaltenborn's achievement perhaps signified a new era in the relations between newspapers and radio because during the crisis intensive coverage of the European situations had fanned newspaper circulation into unprecedented heights. "Each fanned interest in the other's product," he concluded.

Of course in Germany and other countries under dictatorship, it is supposed to be a crime to listen to broadcasts from unsympathetic sources. The dictators try to make this stick by making available radio receiving sets which receive only the customary nationalistic pap. Yet those people in Germany and Europe generally who were able to listen by short wave to the Kaltenborn broadcasts sent letters of congratulation to him because it was only by this new medium that they were able to inform themselves as to political happenings in the countries in which they lived.

Important also, during Kaltenborn's newscasts of the crisis, was use of the trans-Atlantic telephone. It is, he says, one of the few systems of communication not yet under censorship in Europe. But even this had an amusing kickback, for the telephone company has a rule that only one person might be at each end of the line and protested vigorously at having a conversation broadcast to millions. It now appears that the telephone company graciously abrogated this rule.

The Absent-minded Affluent

Presumably there are as many ways of losing as of gaining money. To our amazement, we see by a recent press report ways in which cash, in sums ranging from ten dollars to ten thousand dollars, may mysteriously disappear, or, rather, the owner disappears, leaving his dollars unclaimed. It is reported that something like three million dollars remain unclaimed in the banks of Canada, which sum will be automatically appropriated by the Department of Finance; this huge aggregate of money is comprised of large and small amounts.

A depositor opens an account and then promptly proceeds to forget about it, or he uses the bank merely as a convenient hiding place for his funds. The banking rules require, when an account has remained neglected for two years that the client be notified, and if there is no response the banks send out an annual notice until the five year legal term has elapsed; then it is entered on the finance minister's unclaimed balance list.

Obviously it would simplify matters and at the same time avoid considerable embarrassment, were the depositor required on opening an account to designate plainly his nearest-of-kin. Probably someone then in the course of events might find himself the beneficiary of a sum of money, even if moderately small, realized at an opportune moment, to help liquidate a mortgage or to expedite the payment of a debt unfortunately incurred, which sum of money might otherwise again be lost, to certain pressing individual needs.

ART MUSIC

Jessica Dragonette

Last night's Celebrity Concert at Massey Hall brought a very beautiful, white-gowned Jessica Dragonette to the stage, on her first season of concert work after ten years as a radio artist.

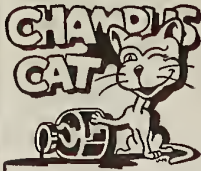

Miss Dragonette's voice proved to be quite as charming as her appearance and personality. Luckily too, her selection of program was in keeping with her vocal powers, besides being very interesting, and thus, the whole evening managed to be a very enjoyable one.

The program contained the traditional groups of German Lieder and French songs to which surprisingly was added a group of songs by American composers, and four ancient songs, two of which were by Marie Antoinette. One of them, together with an old French folk song, which Miss Dragonette sang as an encore, were really the highlights on the program. In these, both little tuneful, witty songs, the charm and lyric beauty of her voice were displayed at their best. Another humorous song, a little bubbling work by Brahms, was also very well sung.

Only when Miss Dragonette uses the extremes of her register is her voice somewhat doubtful. Her high notes and also her very low ones, lack tone almost completely. This was demonstrated in her operatic aria, the Meditation from This. But throughout the rest of the program, which did not require any great vocal exertion, the effect was really very satisfying. For when she sings well within her register, Jessica Dragonette has a voice of very fine timbre. When to this can be added a poise and personality such as Miss Dragonette possesses, the result is a charm and nicety quite new to the concert stage.

The accompaniment was furnished by Arpad Sandor. He was featured also in a solo group of Chopin Preludes. These were played with a rashness of tempo somewhat overdone, even for Chopin.

hackneyed. But you won't mind hearing the same old thing as long as it is said as well as these two say it. Wallace Beery has more than a highly expressive face—he acts well. Mickey Rooney wins the sympathy of the audience with charm. There is a piece of fair movie propaganda sneaked in the program. We gathered from it that the entire movie industry was attempting to tell America that movies are good stuff. Their point was well taken. The other feature of the program is "Rich Man Poor Girl", a silly sort of plot with many highly amusing moments. There will be little to learn from these two movies except how to laugh if you have never learned. If you know how to laugh and want to practise up on it a bit we would suggest a session at the Loew's Theatre this week.

U.C., MEDS, VIC JRS.
WIN HOOP GAMES

Every variety of basketball was displayed last night at the O.C.E. gym when interfaculty competition got under way with three games completed. The winners for the night were U.C. Juniors, who defeated Vic Seniors 21-9. Meds who defeated Vic Seniors 29-16. And Vic Juniors who defeated U.C. Frosh 34-22. On the whole all games were better than is usually seen at the beginning of the season.

The opening game between Vic Juniors and U.C. Frosh was the best game, with the Freshies from U.C. giving surprisingly strong opposition to their more experienced opponents from Victoria. However, the Juniors from Vic coached by Joy Brownlee and led by such stars as Molly Moore, took the game 34-22.

Vic Jrs.: R. Thompson; Ruth Dander; Det Clark; Berna Christie; Molly Moore; Marg. Casson; Ruth Poulby; Billy Steele; Doris Fenner.

U.C. Frosh: Lib Seccombe; Eric Armstrong; Betty Christie; Edith Caster; Bea Kennedy; Joyce Lang; Jean Clement; Mary Emmett; Betty Kettles; Ev. Tanton; Agnes Kennedy.

Meds and Nurses, working fast but often carelessly, played the second game with Meds scoring 29 points to 16 by Nurses. The sensation of this game was Elsie Courtney for Nurses, who was all over the floor making miraculous saves and spectacular shots. Doris Prowse led the Meds' attack and the Meds won on superior passing and co-ordination.

Meds: Doris Prowse; Jean Brerton; J. McInnes; H. Holden; Beth Harrison; J. Engles; Lilian Sugarnan; Flo Alan; May Wall; Marib Boslaugh; Alan; May Wall; Mari Moshaugh; Mary McFarland; Joe Sheldon; L. Karmalska.

Nurses: Sally Stillman; Elsie Courtney; R. Bourne; D. Storms; Betty Burland; Barb. Waite; Phil Dawson; Harriet Brown.

PRACTICES BEGUN IN BASKETBALL

Through Graduation of Former Stars

By Melvin Kates

Now that Varsity's senior rugby team has been eliminated from the play-offs, interest in the Varsity sporting fun centres around the coming basketball season. Last Friday "Mac" McCutcheon held his initial practice and about 40 players, experienced and inexperienced, turned up to show their wares by shooting the ball around. Since Warren Stevens can now give his full attention to the hoop game practices will begin in earnest.

The likelihood of Steve having a contending team in the Senior Intercollegiate Group seems fairly bright with the enrolment of the two renowned Assumption stars, "Moose" Rogin and "Snubby" Acheson. However, Varsity has been hard hit by graduation, there being no less than five positions vacant. Those departed are Frankie Dougherty, Tommy Sullivan, Nels Hogg, Jack Powers and Red Gordon. Frank Dempster, clever defense man, is taking post graduate work in Dentistry, and may turn out if time is available.

But the left-overs from last year's squad, Fred Minahan, "Chick" Maloney, Walt MacGregor, Percy Singer and Jim Craig, will make a back and to bolster the outfit. "Red" Humenik and "Red" MacLaughlin may be moved up from intermediate company. Another player Steve may count upon is a fellow named Flaherty who played senior basketball in Hamilton last year.

Coach MacCutcheon of the champion Varsity II's also has his worries. Harold Axon will be ineligible this year. Ned Green and "Matt" Matthews have graduated. Roland is not back at school and Humenik and MacLaughlin may be called upon to play senior ball. Nevertheless Mac can be depended on to field a team worthy of defending their title. All last year's players mentioned above will be available and in addition "Sonny" Gold, Don Ferguson, Jack Algiers, McAllam, Frazier, and Allen of the junior squad will be fighting for positions on the second team.

Back Campus Sports Review

By Irv Gould

Sr. Meds again displayed a championship brand of football last night to finish off their group games by defeating St. Mike's by the score of 6-0. For the first three quarters there was no score and it was not until the final five minutes of play that St. Mike's fumbled to put Meds in a scoring position. Clinkett received the ball on an end run from McGooey and ran it over for a touchdown.

The score was not a true indication of the play as both teams were evenly matched. The only department in which St. Mike's were outclassed was on the line and the Meds kept breaking through repeatedly.

The outsiders for both teams tackled well and the halfbacks displayed some excellent ball carrying. Flaherty for St. Mike's proved himself the trickiest man on the field and the way he pivoted and rolled his hips had the Meds tacklers completely at bay. McGooey for Meds was also running back kicks for some good gains.

The turning point of the game was when Clinkett hoisted a long boot that spun end over end, making it difficult for Flaherty, who fumbled the catch. The ball was dribbled and fallen upon by Meds. Clinkett then made the only score of the game by completing an end run over the goal line. The touch was converted and the last five minutes had St. Mike's vainly trying to make a comeback, but the game ended with the ball deep in their territory.

Senior Meds: O'Brien, Hall, Prowse, Bolly, Stephens, Lindsey, McNeill, McGooey, McKone, Fleming, Clinkett, Emmett; subs: Cowan, Wagman, Finkelstein, McElure, McCollough.

St. Mike's: O'Brien, Flaherty, McKinnon, Broderick, MacLaughlin, Royne, Barry, Riley, Stover, Gormont, Shanty, Barrett.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Ed Goodman

THE SCENE CHANGES

Although the fellow who runs the weather machine does not seem to realize it, the time is rapidly arriving when skates and basketballs will replace cels and soccer balls, as the current athletic attractions on the campus. As has already been suggested in this column, Varsity should go a long way in regaining the basketball title from Western this year. This assertion is based mainly on the fact that to the half dozen of last year's team back at College can be added the formidable figure of "Moose" Rogin and his former Assumption College team-mate, "Snubby" Acheson. Moose has the reputation of being the finest basketball player in the Dominion and Acheson is also supposed to be away above the ordinary.

As desirable as regaining the basketball title is, and as promising as the chances appear, nevertheless there is one title that would give even more satisfaction to see once again within the walls of Hart House, the hockey championship!

The Canadian Intercollegiate Group which consisted of only Varsity and McGill. Ace Bailey is back again this winter as coach of the Blue squad and although the football season should have taught us the foolhardiness of prophecy before the league starts, nevertheless if Ace can find two or three good defencemen to fill graduation vacancies, Varsity possesses an excellent chance of ending up ahead of both McGill and Queen's, who were first and second last year. Of last year's rearguard only Cam MacLachlan is back on the defence—Ernie Roy, Bruce Charles and Charlie Driscoll all having graduated. At goal

WITH ACE BAILEY'S CHARGES

Varsity has not yet won the title of the eight-team International Intercollegiate League formed two years ago. McGill led the American-Canadian division both years. And for several years prior to that, the Redmen ruled the roost of Bing Caswell and Frank Blackhall are both eligible, which should leave the net well guarded.

But it is up on the forward lines that the Toronto team should sparkle and where Ace Bailey will have his trouble choosing his team. For all of last winter's squad except "Mucky" McElquham, will be out, Craig, Cassels, Fremes, Morrison and Boddington all having returned. And to this list can be added a host of players from the intermediates and Juniors and one or two who were indelible last winter such as Taylor. And when the second and third teams boast of such stars as Maynard, Callon, Glynn, Scott, Woods and Ross, they must be seriously considered. The only difficulty is that the only really promising defence prospect is Stevenson of the Juniors, the rest just mentioned are forwards.

From this rather summary glance at Varsity's hopes and although as yet there is no information forthcoming on Queen's and McGill, it can still safely be said that University of Toronto hockey fans will have an opportunity to really get excited about their pucksters this year. Personally we think that most of the excitement should be provided in practice when the fellows who fight for a berth on the team, and the possible trip to Los Angeles that may go with it. For Warren Stevens has been trying hard to arrange games with Loyola University down in Southern California, but plans are still in the embryonic stage and nothing definite has been decided.

OVER THE NET

Dominating play throughout, S.P.S. III volleyball team swamped a hapless University College third team 15-7 and 15-5 in the upper gym Friday afternoon.

The engineers drew ahead early in both games and maintained their advantage throughout. The school team was better organized than the Artsmen, who were playing their first game of the season, and this superiority was the chief factor in their victory.

Gerry and Haffy shone for the Schooldmen, while Captain Jack Her-shoran of U.C. went well in a losing cause.

In yesterday's volleyball encounter, Sr. U.C. had little trouble in beating Sr. Vic to the score of 15-8 and 15-6. Led by Charlesworth as their best man, the red and white team ran up a lead of twelve points against Victoria in the first game. Vic stayed a brief rally, but weakened after scoring eight points.

Vic started well in the second game, but lacked the scoring punch which a good spiker would supply.

Freshette and Bowles were the backbone of the Vic team, while U.C. were aided considerably by the fast spiking of Charlesworth on the set-ups given him by Silverberg.

U.C.: McGregor, Savlov, Pearl, Silverberg, Ross, Murray, Charlesworth, Soech.

Vic: MacDonald, Lipin, Freshette, Bowles, Jones, Rutledge.

by Meds. Clinkett then made the only score of the game by completing an end run over the goal line. The touch was converted and the last five minutes had St. Mike's vainly trying to make a comeback, but the game ended with the ball deep in their territory.

Senior Meds: O'Brien, Hall, Prowse, Bolly, Stephens, Lindsey, McNeill, McGooey, McKone, Fleming, Clinkett, Emmett; subs: Cowan, Wagman, Finkelstein, McElure, McCollough.

FORESTERS LOSE TO JUNIOR S.P.S. IN LACROSSE GAME

A 10-2 victory over Forestry in the Hart House gymnasium last night put the Junior S.P.S. lacrosse team within striking distance of the group leading Dentistry squad.

The luckless Foresters were unable to cope with the steady attack of the rugged Schoolmen, who scored six goals before Grinnell got the first of his two points for the green and white squad. Belford, who led the seniors with 4 goals, played a flashy game for the engineers as did Quist, Starr and Beggs. Ballantyne in goal and Grinnell starred for Forestry.

It was the second defeat for the Foresters in two starts.

Paris, Nov. 7: An attempt to assassinate Ernst von Rath, secretary of the German Embassy was made by 17 year old Herschel Srynspau, Polish-Jewish refugee from Germany wishing to avenge Polish Jews expelled from Germany. Von Rath's condition is critical from two bullet wounds. Srynspau, caught by embassy attaches, was turned over to the French police.

The Sportsman

By Marg. Conlin

Co-ed athletes were pretty busy yesterday when the Basketball Club disposed of three of the games on its schedule and the baseball league had its opener at the Little Vic gym.

A much improved St. Mike's team which, however, lacked practice and co-ordination, was defeated by the "A" team from Vic in the most thrilling baseball game of the season (it was the first official one). Barbara Knox, pitching for St. Mike's, and Anne McPherson, leading the Vic attack, were mainstays for both teams.

Biggest surprise of the day was the showing made by the U.C. Freshies against a more experienced Vic Juniors team. Edith Caster and Lib Seccombe were prominent in the Freshies' attack, and the entire team showed great promise.

Meds in their inter-colle tunic are to be congratulated on their win last night against a game but weaker team from Nurses. Someone said after the game that it is the first basketball game Meds have won since the last eclipse, but we seem to recall past successes on their part. Their team this year seems stronger than it has been for many seasons though.

One day this week or maybe next we are to have the honour of having a guest Sportsman from Western. This is by nature of a warning because from past experience we have learned that Western doesn't do things in the generally accepted way. More later.

Chiang Kai-Shek, generalissimo of the Chinese forces, fighting the Japanese invaders. His reputation in the world of journalism has also been enhanced by interviewing such inaccessible world figures as Benes, Hitler and Mussolini. As a war correspondent he has been in the thick of the battle and was the first correspondent to report war news direct from the war zone. He was mainly responsible for introducing new two-way broadcasts between Europe and America, conversing back and forth with Maurice Hindus in Prague and with Sir Frederick Whyte in London.

Like any other prominent personality in radio, Mr. Kaltenborn is the recipient of much fan mail. From his fan mail, news-listeners seem to prefer reassurance even if slightly biased, to sensational facts relayed by broadcasts. Mr. Kaltenborn is a well known lecturer in Columbia's school of journalism and will be conducting a course there dealing with current events in that field.

SADIE HAWKINS has left our midst . . . the beautiful debutante from Dogpatch has gone back home after a very successful week on the Varsity campus. . . . There is a notice on The Varsity bulletin board which states that "Sadie Hawkins is dead" . . . a tear drops from our eye as we realize that Sadie will not return for the rest of the year, but this thing has grown bigger than you or us, and is now to be an annual institution. . . . Personally we believe this week has been a complete flop. . . . Any girl who could fail to see the possibilities in dating up one perfectly good Exchange Editor should have her head examined. . . . Ah, how bitter life is. . . . Tomorrow they'll be dragging the river for my body. . . . And will they find me? . . . don't be silly. . . .

TEXAS ROOTERS have now taken to learning card tricks. . . . Two thousand students will take part in the demonstration which will provide various displays, among which will be the rather tricky display of a Steer chasing a Mustang. . . . The students know what to do by means of mimeographed instructions attached to each card. . . . It is all very simple. . . . YOU TOO CAN BE THE LIFE OF THE PARTY. . . .

AT THE VARSITY STADIUM on Saturday, the O.A.C.-Varsity intermediate game proved to be the classic of the season. . . . Besides the fact that the Farmers succeeded in trouncing the little boy blues by almost fifty points, they were easily the funniest outfit of the season . . . the Brothers Marx and Ritz both faded into the background when the Guelph team show their stuff. . . . Their Hipper-Dipper and Razzle-Dazzle-Frazzle plays had the stands in a positive uproar. . . . On one of their converts, the line, instead of blocking out the Blues merely raised their arms high in the air and sang "Praise Allah!" . . . even with this, the pass convert was completed. . . . After every touchdown that the Guelph boys scored, the subs of the same team would run from the bench and applaud their team politely and then run back to the bench. . . . The last play of the game was also a humdinger. . . . The O.A.C. back merely took the ball and ran backwards around thirty yards practically begging the Blue boys to tackle him, then he calmly tossed a fifty yard pass, which was coolly completed. . . . WHAT A TEAM, WHAT A TEAM. . . .

THIS STORY comes from Richard Taylor of the Ohio State Lantern. . . . It seems that a slightly mellowed gentleman was sitting behind Taylor at the U.S.C.-Ohio State football game. . . . the happy chappie spent the entire first quarter screaming "Come on, Purdue, come on, Purdue!" . . . Finally Taylor could endure it no longer, and he tapped the man on the shoulder and told him that Ohio was playing Southern California. . . . "Nuts!" he bellowed, "I'm in the wrong stadium!"

Correspondence

The Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

Referring to your leading editorial in today's (4th Nov.) issue, I wish to draw your attention to the following premises on which the editorial was based:

(1) "And each nation feels that it is necessary to re-arm in order to protect its borders from some other power which is re-arming for apparently the same reasons."

It is submitted that neither Italy, Japan nor Germany had the above excuse for re-arming during the period 1925 to 1936 in face of the Washington Naval Treaty of 1921 and the London Naval Treaty of 1930 which were conscientiously implemented by Britain, France and the United States in the drastic reduction of naval armament; and in face of the Western Locarno Treaty of 1925.

That Germany and Italy had no reason to fear aggression was amply demonstrated during the post-war period while they were still minor military powers.

Thus, the first premise of the editorial does not hold water.

(2) "If you prepare for war you will get war."

It can be said with equal truth that to the Editor, The Varsity.

Dear Sir:

That editorial on Friday last on Moral Rearmament was good stuff! No one can deny the simple truth which you have stated: "The faults in the nation's sickness lie within the heart of the individual." As one writer has put it,

"It's Tom, Dick and Harry's sin, That's brought us to the mess we're in."

There is a growing body of opinion among responsible people, both in Canada and throughout the world, that the answer to the world's problems can come only through a new moral, spiritual and physical fitness in the lives of individuals. I feel that we in the universities can quickly demonstrate this answer in a way which will affect every part of our national life.

We can no longer remain as spectators. We must come down off the bleachers and get into the game.

cology, said, "Do not have long engagements because it's a good idea to get married as soon as possible and find out the worst."

A definitely long courtship was the opinion of a Trinity co-ed. She said she would like to know how her future husband reacts in his own environment.

Phyllis Thompson said, "I would not like a courtship to be any longer than necessary. As far as a course for the girls goes, I certainly approve. Some girls obviously need it."

There was only one girl interviewed who was against the idea. She said that, "Things like that can only be learned through experience."

if you do not prepare for war you will get war, as instanced by Abyssinia and China; and if you do not prepare for self-defence you will undoubtedly become subservient to those unscrupulous neighbours along with whom we must live in this world.

How many of us, as non-aggressive, peace-loving citizens, would feel secure without the defensive and armed organization of our local police?

The following question, then, must be answered, Is it not preferable for peace desiring nations to prepare for war and, if forced into one, to stand a reasonable chance of success, than to become the victim of any imposition forced on us by a bigoted and unprincipled neighbour?

(3) "The same things which cause disruption in community and family life cause national disruption."

To this might well be added, "and the same relative safeguards against such disruption must of necessity be provided, in the hope that their very presence will prevent such disruption."

I am in whole-hearted agreement with the latter half of the editorial, which must, however, bring up the question, How can we assist in eradicating the vices enumerated from apparently conscientious and actively aggressive potential enemies?

Director, Dept. Military Studies.

Students' Views Vary On Armistice Service

Many Favour Religious Service
Rather than Military Display to Commemorate Those who Fell in Last War

Feelings and opinions aroused by the approach of another Remembrance Day were the subject of an investigation by The Varsity yesterday. These ranged all the way from unqualified praise for the custom of public remembrance of the fallen, through praise qualified by additional suggestions to condemnation of the practice or some features of the services which are held at these times.

George Meen, II U.C., lauded a reasonable display of military strength at these services. He said, "I imagine that those who died for their country would appreciate the fact that others were ready to make the same sacrifice to defend what they had done their bit to win."

"It is a poor-spirited man who does not feel an obligation to attend these services, in memory of those who gave their lives that we might enjoy peace and security," exclaimed Doug. McLeman, II Vic.

Religious Service Fitting

Said Oliver Lawrence, O.C.E., "I think that the idea of having a religious service, rather than an entirely civic one, is good, for it seems to be the most appropriate, if not the only way, of expressing a sentiment of common gratitude to dead men."

Howard Haney, II C. & F., asserted, "Since war still goes on, I deplore the fact that those young men seem to have sacrificed their lives in vain. But because they made a valuable contribution at the time, their names should not be forgotten. Nevertheless, they should not be cited by propagandists as examples to realistic-thinking young men to go and do likewise."

John Widdell, V Meds, found that there was at least one point of goodness in Remembrance Day services for, "The memory of carnage and destruction in the past helps to keep in mind the necessity of preserving peace in the future." However, he felt that many religious services and military demonstrations do not contribute a great deal.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Munich: In an address to Nazi party veterans celebrating the fifteen anniversary of his 1923 Munich beer hall putsch Adolf Hitler last night declared that the price of friendship with Germany was the return of her pre-war colonies.

Ottawa: Prime Minister Mackenzie King last night announced that parliament would be summoned within the first two weeks of the new year and that matters of Canadian defense would be taken under very careful examination.

New York: Early returns from yesterday's American gubernatorial and senatorial elections show the Republicans well on the way to gaining much of the ground lost when Roosevelt brought a Democratic landslide in 1932. Democratic governors, and non-Democratic New Dealers like La Follette and Olsen were conceding defeat as this paper went to press. Governor Lehman (D) of New York held his position by a very narrow margin after an exciting campaign against New York's District Attorney Thomas Dewey (R). All Roosevelt-purged Democrats but O'Connor of New York managed to return to seats in Congress.

WOMEN HELD PAMPERED DARLINGS OF COMMON LAW

Co-eds Support Course to Enable Women to Understand Legal Mysteries but Professors Sceptical of Dangers

Co-eds on the campus yesterday were not at all ashamed to admit their rather vague knowledge of legal and business practices, and heartily endorsed the establishment of a course which would help them to understand those mysteries.

Due to so many legislative acts to insure the equal rights of women, the University of Southern California has introduced a course to enable women to learn just what their legal rights consist of and how to transact their own business under them. And such a course would receive a warm welcome here, according to the co-eds.

Shirley Hill, one of the three women in the Law course, said, "A simplified course of instruction in legal rights for women would be a fine thing." However, she felt it was not so much a case of women being swindled in common property deals by their husbands as seems to be the point in question in California. "Women should know about the various inheritance laws so they can understand what is happening to their property when their husbands die," she explained.

Sheila Scott, II U.C., voiced the same opinion. "When I'm a widow I don't want to be swindled. We women should have some simple instruction in these matters." Agnes Kennedy, I St. Hilda's, was all in favour of the scheme, admitting that most girls should know more about legal and business points.

REID DESCRIBES NETHERLANDS SCENES

A fitting subject approaching Remembrance Day was chosen by Capt. Fred H. Reid for his travelogue, "Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg," last evening in the Eaton Auditorium. The lecture was beautifully illustrated with coloured slides and two reels of moving pictures.

Flowers and bulbs are one of the chief industries of Holland. There are one thousand varieties of tulips alone and at one time fortunes were paid for a single bulb. There were several pictures of the more picturesque ancient costumes of the Dutch but the lecturer pointed out that coifs and wooden shoes have been replaced in most parts by modern clothes. The up-to-date trend was further seen in the apartment houses of Amsterdam with glassed-in staircases and schools made almost entirely of glass.

Belgium prides herself on her beautiful cathedrals and public buildings. The large war cemeteries both British and German are well kept. One of the memorials, the Great Gate built in 1928 bears the names of 56,000 British soldiers. Every night at this gate the Last Post is played.

Luxembourg, in the south, had at one time the second strongest fortifications in Europe. The capital city of Luxembourg is situated in the midst of scenic wooded hills.

In conclusion the Last Post and the Reveille were played, while pictures of the great war memorial were shown on the screen.

LETTERS CLUB PRESENTS SPEAKERS

With the discontinuance of the English and History course, the old English and History Club has been abandoned, but in its place a new "Letters Club" is being formed.

At the five monthly meetings there will be speakers interested in Canadian literature from every angle, who will point out the advantages and disadvantages of Canadian literature in the various fields of poetry, drama, novel-writing, publishing, newspaper-writing, and so on.

As this is a new club, it is desirable that as many first and second year students as possible attend and take an active part in its organization from the very beginning. The first meeting, to be held Thursday evening at 8.30 in the Women's Union, will be primarily an organization meeting, and it is hoped that all those interested will turn out and take part in the elections.

Mr. W. S. Milne, guest speaker on Thursday evening, will address the group on "Canadian Drama", after which an informal discussion will take place.

POWER DIES - SOUP COOLS

The black-out at 6.28 last night was not officially part of an air-raid precaution demonstration, nor a prelude to the final consummation, but was due to the automatic cutting out of the main switches in the power-house owing to an overload on the lines.

Fortunately no serious accidents resulted from the sudden power failure although a former editor is reported to have burned his fingers while trying to dial a Hart House phone with the aid of the glimmer from a match.

The service to the buildings on the south of the campus was restored within two or three minutes but the northern circuits could not be closed so easily. Hart House, Victoria and Whitby remained in darkness until electricians could cut out the Arena where it was believed that the freezing equipment was taking more power than the line could stand. Transformers were installed in Hart House and the Arena last summer so that Hydro power might be used and alternating current will be turned on in the House for the first

TOO MANY PARTS IN GREATER TORONTO SAYS PLUMPTRE

Economics Professor Compares
This City to Chicago as Regards
Problems Facing Large Metropolitan Area

That Greater Toronto would be greater if its divisions were less, was the conclusion arrived at by Prof. F. W. Plumptre of the Economics Department, during the course of his address to the Urban Problems Group on "Problems of a metropolitan area" in Wymilwood last night.

Stating that our Metropolitan Area comprises thirteen adjacent municipalities, each with its own government, he said that "the technique of government has failed to keep pace with scientific progress." He said that as the suburban areas develop and increase, those most capable of efficient administration move out, and place themselves beyond the pale of municipal elections, resulting in gross deterioration of administrative efficiency.

As exemplified in the revealing situation in Chicago, the professor continued, problems of a metropolitan area face under five headings: engineering inefficiency, poor water, gas and transportation systems; administrative inefficiency: traffic by-laws changing at every community boundary line, duplication of welfare and educational authorities, and also of political authorities, resulting in competition and mutual

Vic Drama Society Now Inaugurates Experimental Drama

Victoria College Dramatic Society is turning this year to experimental drama. Because a large number of students who came to the try-outs for "The Good-Natured Man" and for the first Hart House one-act could not be used, an effort is being made to give them a chance in another type of play.

A number of one-acts are going to be produced in Alumni Hall. There will be no scenery, no make-up, no footlights. The success of the play will depend entirely on the actors. Lists have been posted for anyone to sign who is interested in acting in or directing. One play has already been cast and enough people have signed up to make possible the casting of either one or two more. Everyone who signs the list will be given a part in some play produced.

time today. Only direct current is generated by the three steam-driven dynamos in the power house east of the Anatomy Building, and this makes the introduction of alternating current complicated.

It was guest night at the University College women's residence and the dinner was half way up from the kitchen on the electric lift when the power failed. When it finally reached the dining hall floor twenty minutes later it was no longer very warm. At Annesley the candles on the tables lent a somewhat formal air to the occasion.

Not one of the hundred odd men in Hart House locker room was the least bit excited by sudden darkness although it seemed to arouse some latent humor among the athletes. Not a toe was stubbed or a shin cracked, but perhaps a cake of soap may wake up in the wrong tote-box tomorrow morning. In the Great Hall no orders could be filled during the darkness but the temporary lack of food was compensated for by the general good humour of the diners.

Arcand Accuses Jews Of Ruling World Trade

Fascist Leader Condemns Alleged, Foreign Influences on Canadian Life and Advocates Strong Nationalism to
S.C.M. Audience

Adrien Arcand traced the formation of the Canadian National Unity Party to the impotence of the two old parties, in a talk yesterday. Speaking to the Women's S.C.M. meeting, he said, "The old parties have had to yield to high finance, and have not been able to prevent or foresee the shattering of social justice, and cut-throat competition in business. They have abandoned their promises of welfare and prosperity, and the people of Canada have had to turn to new formulas."

As leader of the Canadian National Unity Party, Mr. Arcand characterized Communism as international. "All over the world there has been a national reaction, because of the abuse of internationalism," he said. "Our currency is controlled by foreigners, and the education of the Canadian masses depends on the foreign cinema. Foreign capital and finance control our national life."

"Power only can produce real change," said the fascist leader. "Discussion and babbling do not help. We must get rid of international influence on the Canadian soul. We must create a national outlook in the minds of young Canadians."

He returned to the talk on Communism. "Powers of division are at work and are weakening national unity so that they may conquer the country. Communism is weakening the moral fibre of Canada so that it may be a better prey in its clutches."

The speaker insisted that there is no economic problem in Canada—just discipline to be restored. "We have been talking about our rights, but we

Follies Director Defends Production

"This is a vicious perversion of fact," said Lou Weingarten, director of the University College Follies, in reference to a statement appearing in the Toronto Telegram, in the "Thomas Richard Henry" column, to the effect that "The College Follies seem poor return for all the money put up by tax-payers and parents."

The comment was instigated by a letter from an irate tax-payer, who had written to the Telegram asking why tax-payers had "to pay for education which teaches semi-nudity." The notes appeared under the caption "Legs! Legs! Legs!", and the writer seemed to be lamenting the fact that girls in college shows should wear so little clothing when appearing in a chorus. "This statement is an instance of the narrow bigotry which unhappily still exists in the world. There are some people who can't look at a piano leg without blushing," the Follies director continued.

Apparently the tax-paying letter writer gained his impression from a photograph in a downtown paper of some of the university girls appearing in their college show. "Most newspapers," he said, "would refuse to give publicity even to an old ladies' home, unless a part of their other limbs were exposed to the camera."

The U.C. Follies are entirely self-supporting. It was learned, and not a cent of the tax-payer's money goes into them. "Although there was perhaps some excuse for the impression gained by the Tely's correspondent, we see no reason why the columnist should give such unmerited criticism," Weingarten concluded.

French-Canadian Editor Tells Varsity Reporter Party not Fascist but Nationalist with No Foreign Connections

By Lloyd G. McDonald

While a group of women practiced military manoeuvres in a swastika-hung auditorium outside, Adrien Arcand, leader of the National Unity Party of Canada, outlined the aims and activities of his party in an interview with The Varsity last night.

"Our party is not Fascist," declared Arcand, "it is simply nationalistic. We aim to give the best things in Canada to Canadians alone."

The party has now affiliated itself with all similar organizations throughout the other provinces, following a convention in Kingston on July 1st. They desire to control federal power and establish a new system. Instead of members representing the people geographically, they will represent the classes, Arcand revealed. "We wish to set up a corporate state and rid the country of foreign control," he said.

Foreign control, Arcand explained, means the Marxists, who are controlled by the Jews, Moscow, he went on.

DENTS GRIDDERS SHUT OUT MEDICOS

Dents proved conclusively that they were better in the dark than Junior Meds when they trounced the Medicals yesterday afternoon 12-0 in a game that terminated long after dusk. Dents now lead their group with three straight victories, while Meds have yet to win a game.

Red Humeniuk set the stage for the Dentists' first score when he rifled a long pass to Parrot early in the first quarter. Humeniuk then plunged over the Medics' goal line for an unconverted touchdown. Dents again broke into the scoring column in the second quarter when Murray Hawton, still in his first season as a griddier, intercepted a Meds pass and raced fifty yards for a touch. Humeniuk looped a pass to Racher for the convert.

The second half was played in near-darkness and some sloppy football was the result. With two minutes to go Hawton kicked to the deadline for the final point.

Humeniuk, Kulyk, Racher and Wariner starred for Dents, while Jack Biggs went well for Meds.

E. K. Brown Addresses Women's Press Club On Prose and Poetry

Professor E. K. Brown told the Women's Press Club yesterday afternoon that emphasis on a "poetic ideal" really is in favour of any effort to increase the vocabulary of poetry. For this reason he is sympathetic to the efforts of the younger poets today.

Mr. Brown showed that the peculiar value of poetic prose and of poetry lay in the fact that it suggested rather than stated facts. "The art of prose," he continued, "is not developed for us to its full emotional values as in the other countries."

He advised the club members to be very careful in their experimental verse and urged that in using any poetic license the poet "should know very clearly just where and how other writers have struggled with the same point."

Unwarranted Criticism

Because of publicity which has not been warranted, this university has at times been placed in an unfavourable light. Due to this publicity the general public has been misled into believing that it exists only for week-ends, at which time the students magically appear at the stadium to cheer the rugby team on to victory. The other side to university life is braving with the constabulary or bottle in hand leering at pretty co-eds. (For some reason, co-eds always have to be pretty.) But this is not the case. This university has a job to perform. Among other things it teaches its students to work, and just as important, it teaches them to play.

The undergraduates are proud of the standing of this institution, and the annual class lists are indicative of the way that they regard them. We are proud of our teams and the clean way they play. We are proud of other university activities too. If attendance is any indication, we are proud of the University College Follies. We are proud of it because it is a clean show; because it is produced by college talent; because the chorus is well-trained and attractive; because the lyrics and songs are written by undergraduates; because the whole production is a credit to the university.

However, this university feels no shame that a picture of the chorus was taken for publication. It cannot be responsible for the fact that each member of the chorus was normal in the respect that she had two legs, nor for the fact that the photographer should wish to emphasize this fact. But it is proud that the undergraduates, when they want to enjoy themselves, are intelligent enough to write a clean show with a decently clad chorus with no suggestion of smut which is a feature—and seemingly necessarily so—of choruses in other parts of the city.

It is time the public knew the truth. At university we work hard and play cleanly. It is a travesty on justice when those who know the facts and are in a position because of the influence they wield in the daily press to reveal them, to allow the truth to be hidden. The University College Follies is not dependent on the unfavourable publicity which the dailies might drum up. We want no part of it. But once that the wrong opinion has been formed in the public mind it is the duty of the press to state the facts. The Follies is not a leg show and never will be. But as long as the dailies think that their readers want the risqué and the sordid in public affairs, want the rah rah and the hipper dipper angle from the campus, then that's what they will publish. Despite this trend U. of T. will continue to produce clean shows, clean teams and clean students no matter who objects.

A Thriving Minority

Everybody knows that medical students are a hard working group. What is not generally known is that of the nine hundred enrolled the women form a substantial minority. The medical course has always been considered a masculine stronghold, into which the occasional stray female forces an entrance. Such is not the case at the University of Toronto. There are sixty women enrolled in the medical course, a larger group than at any other university in Canada. They are not straggling intruders, but are organized into an active and hard-working group. They are accused of entering the course for social purposes. In reality they are serious about their profession, and most of them hope to practice on graduation.

Although they have longer working hours than any other co-eds on the campus, Medettes take an active part in university functions. They have their own Athletic Society, and enter basketball and swimming teams into the interfaculty competitions. They help publish the Medical Journal, and put on a skit to compete with the men on Daffydill night.

Like most groups on the campus, Medettes have their grievances. Chief among these is the lack of residence or meeting place. Many of them are from out of town, yet they are not accepted at the official residences, nor have they a place to hold their meetings.

A difficult six-year course is a heavy undertaking, and persons who regard co-eds as a frivolous element around the campus would do well to consider the sixty of them who are working for an M.D. degree.

Classical Protest

Lovers of classical music continue to deplore the swinging of old favourites. Recent protest took the form of a letter from the Bach Choral Society, when they were roused to a new pitch of indignation by a broadcast of a swing version of Bach's D Minor Toccata. The letter stated: "By no stretch of the imagination could such performances be tolerated except by people of no discrimination. If this is permitted to go unchallenged, swing renditions of the Mass in B Minor will follow. . . ."

Guardians of the classics seem to feel that there is desecration implied in setting a melody to swing. They believe that because of its ballroom associations, swing music stands for all that is inartistic, frivolous, and wicked. In point of fact, the rendering of swing music makes considerable demands upon the skill and artistic sense of the performers. Certainly the playing of Bach's three hour B Minor Mass would be a triumph of ingenuity.

The melodies of past masters are as free as the air about us, and if some wish to make variations in the tempo, it is mere quibbling to protest. Changes in the old order are always frowned upon. The civic guardians of Bach's day forbade the playing of his compositions in church, because he "corrupted the sacred melodies". Wagner's contemporaries considered him a barbarian. Swing music may not have the glorious possibilities of the works of the classical masters. But to waste words abusing it in a world full of major grievances is foolish and profitless.

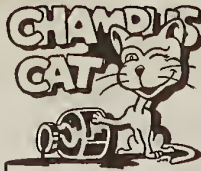

Toronto Symphony

We have never heard the Toronto Symphony Orchestra come nearer to greatness than it did last night. An almost inspired assurance of execution was evident in every choir, and if, in this review, we make little further comment on the purely mechanical aspect of the concert, it is because there was almost nothing to complain of, and we feel no inclination to dissect so supreme an artistic achievement.

At this point it might be well to explain that we are speaking almost exclusively of the playing of Sibelius' Symphony No. 2, which rather effectively eclipsed the impressions left on us by the earlier part of the program. This is a work which exemplifies admirably the curious way in which repeated hearings increase a listener's appreciation of great music. The first time it may produce hardly more than a feeling of awe; now, having heard it some four or five times, it seems to us as strongly melodic and as profound as anything by Beethoven or Brahms, and in some passages, particularly those for violins in the last movement, almost overpoweringly beautiful.

Allowing for the margin of orchestral virtuosity possessed by the Philharmonic, the performance did

RUGBY TEAM'S RADIO NOW IN HART HOUSE LOCKER ROOM

Since the rugby season is over (well, almost anyhow), and the players scarcely feel like music any more, that peachy radio which has adorned their dressing-room for the past few weeks is now providing music for the skating-rink in the locker-room. Yes, the latest gag for getting P.T. credits is to go skating on the ice-covered floor of the Hart House locker-room. This idea was inaugurated by Prof. Twotoes McGurk whose love for the great winter pastime prompted him to open all the windows on these cold icy mornings, thereby freezing the drip from the undried athletes (?) returning from the showers and the swimming-pool. It was found that after several mornings of this despicable process, the floor was covered with a lovely sheet of ice. Early yesterday the senior hockey team turned out for their first practice of the season, but finding the space in the locker-room too limited, they invaded the swimming-pool which was covered with three feet of ice, in which twenty-three Arts students were imbedded, frozen blue. Even the fifty-nine Green-Eyed-Whitewashes seemed delighted with the new skating-rink, and it was a touching sight indeed to see them oozing around on their inside-out hobbletoes, to the tune of "Shoot the flicker to me Cammie boy", which was being played for the benefit of the departing rugbyists. The ice is expected to be removed shortly, however, because it is feared that the crowds of men on the rink may bring back Sadie Hawkins (remember?), and heaven knows we . . . not suffer greatly by comparison with the recent broadcast from New York, and MacMillan's understanding of the work seems hardly less penetrating than Barbirolli's.

The other important orchestral number was Ravel's choreographic poem, La Valse, a somewhat demoniacal perversion of the Strauss waltz technique in which the tempo and style are familiar, but the emotional values distorted almost beyond the scope of sanity. Most of the audience seemed to regard it as a rather amusing piece of whimsy, but it is well known that there is no accounting for the fancies of a Toronto audience.

The concert began with a completely inconsequential but quite entertaining suite by Handel, arranged by Beecham, called The Gods Go A-Begging. A sort of program for the music, apparently by Beecham, is given, but its origin and significance are not made clear, and it doesn't do any harm to forget it and listen to the orchestra.

Jan Pearce, a popular radio tenor, was the guest artist and sang several times acceptably enough, but after the Sibelius we don't remember much about him.

Still on the subject of basketball and in particular with reference to the game between U.C. Jrs. and Vic Seniors it appears that the Juniors will take group honours if they continue the heady type of play they were using Monday night. The Bobby McDonald-Anne Gurney combination is pretty hard to beat, and Anne Gurney's deadly accurate shots from the centre of the floor were nothing short of sensational.

This is not surprising because as in the case of the U.C. Freshie team, most of the new girls are private school products, where basketball is the chief all year round sport.

Jean Atkinson is back with the Physios this year and after Thursday we shall know if their team is as strong as it was last year. The first House-hold Science team to enter the league will meet St. Mike's on Thursday evening and this game will clear up a lot of arguments.

The other two teams in this group, Meds and Nurses, have been seen in action already and at present St. Mike's have the strongest team of this group.

Nurses have good material but lack team-play and substitutes. If they can overcome these drawbacks they will become definite threats. Their dynamic Elsie Courtney couldn't have worked any harder Monday night, has ability plus stamina and enthusiasm. She sounds too good to be true, nicht wahr?

OVER THE NET

EMMANUEL A vs. JR. MEDS

Emmanuel A spikers continued their winning ways against Jr. Meds yesterday, taking two straight games 19-17 and 15-0 in the upper gym.

As the score would indicate, the first game was a thriller. Junior Meds went out on the head end of the parade in the early stages of the game, leading 10-5 at one time. However, Emmanuel rallied strongly, to bring the score to 13-13. From there on it was a dog-fight, with the lead alternating from one team to the other. Three times Jr. Meds fooled the serve with game point in their grasp, while several remarkable saves by both teams stalled off the winning point. Finally Bob Bath, who stood out for the winners with his consistent spiking, won the final point on a well-placed shot.

In the second game, the Emmanuel attack really began to click, and they finished off the trying Meds by a 15-10 score to take the match.

Bob Bath was the standout for the victors, while Reingold and Milford appeared best for Meds.

Emmanuel A: Scott, Bath, Elmslie, Affleck, Jiblin, Davidge, McKinnett, Rowlands.

Jr. Meds: Reingold, Kaufman, Milford, Shapiro, Herman, Harnick, Hayward, Goldenberg.

SR. MEDS vs. SR. S.P.S.

Spiking strongly throughout, a well-drilled Senior Meds volleyball sextet easily defeated Senior School by scores of 15-4 and 15-12 in the upper gym yesterday. The Doctors, basing their attack on the spiking of Sonny Wise and Murray Cash, simply toyed with the Engineers and had no difficulty rattling up the 15-4 count.

In the second game, however, the Meds sent on some substitutes and the School team, paced by the brilliant play of Jack Miller, rallied to bring the score

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bruce Smith

INTRODUCSH . . .

Now that Sadie Hawkins and intercollegiate rugby are dead as far as Varsity is concerned, at least for another year, a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of other things. Track, tennis, rowing, golf, rugby and soccer are likewise almost memories, and on the other hand, hockey, basketball, swimming, boxing, wrestling and fencing are hardly started, let alone in the competitive stages. So, Graham, the moral of it all is that he who hath sport colymus to concoct, hath a doughty problem on his hands.

THE SOCCER SITUATION . . .

Inspiration comes when one turns to that sport which lacks only commercial possibilities to make it one of the best on the campus—soccer. The McMaster, Western, O.A.C. and Toronto teams have been earnestly going about the business of declining a winner in both senior and intermediate groupings for the past five weeks, and will complete the task this coming Saturday.

In the senior section the London luminaries and the Varsity venerables are at present tied, with the deciding encounter on deck for this week-end. Coach Ted Slade of the locals has welded eleven individual stars into a unit that has rolled up a season's total of 19 goals for, and 3 against, and which should culminate the year's work with a championship-victory on the front campus Saturday. You never can tell though, for who knows but what Western has enlisted the services of Orson Welles to scare the locals! No matter what happens, this senior squad, paced by the four Knox notables, Forbes Thomson, "Buchan" Muchin, Jack Honeyman and Alfie Dodds, has played sterling soccer all fall and deserves any praise this corner can give them.

But the intermediate group is having a photo finish "par excellence" and is still in the process of declaring a winner. One local evening paper has already asserted O.A.C. are champions, although they are tied with Toronto in points. And according to the intercollegiate playing rule laid down in chapter XVI, section 3, subsection C (so help me!) which says that the tied team with the largest net score shall be declared the winner, the Aggies are at present holding a three-goal advantage. Therefore, the question is, can our intermediates go on a scoring spree and net three goals more than the redmen next Saturday? Here's hoping they do, for it's their only chance.

It still seems as unsatisfactory as the 1938 license plates (ah! but have you seen the pretty black and white edition for 1939?) that two teams play a whole season with neither team securing a decision over the other, and one of them gets the champion's laurels through some break as an extra goal or two. But such is life, and who are we to kick? Win, lose (or draw) it was worth the effort and to say the least, it was a noble effort, and to Messrs. Kane, Boyd, Menzies and company goes plenty of praise.

ON DISPLAY . . .

Six-man football sticks its head above water once more this season at the stadium this afternoon during half time of the senior high school playoff game. York Memorial Collegiate will split up their team and give a demonstration on how to play and how not to play the half-dozen arrangement. By the way, if you want to see some surprisingly good rugby, give a look when some of these collegiate teams get down to business.

Senior Basketeers From St. Hilda's Defeat Vic Freshies

Last night saw a 37-14 victory for St. Hilda's seniors over the Vic freshies in the O.C.E. gym. Despite this difference in score the game was a keen one with many high spots.

The Saints turned in a sure, steady game with a superior accuracy in their combination work and shooting.

Joan McMaster's usual fine performance showed in her scoring 14 of the 37 points, while "Tibs" Annesley also shone in forward work. The Vic squad exhibited a fighting spirit and throughout the game disclosed fine material.

In the last quarter, Vic used long but sure passes. Beryl Pollock starred for Vic, all 7 of the baskets going to her. Another feature was Jean Crawford's aptitude for being in the right spot at the right time.

St. Hilda's: Joan McMaster, Tibs Annesley, Joan Griffiths, Betty Kirk, Mary Mayes, Pat Scott, Midge Munro, Mary Becker, Marg Large.

Vic: Beryl Pollock, Jean Crawford, Eleanor Jose, Joan Stirling, Lois Davidson, Phyllis Hulse, Winnie Hardy, Gratia Gordon, Patty Perrin.

ST. MIKE'S LEAD LACROSSE GROUP

An 11-5 victory over a fighting Knox College team put the St. Michael's College lacrosse squad into temporary leadership of their group last night.

Led by Cassidy and Doyle, the freshmen outsped and outshot their opponents to chalk up their second win in three starts. St. Mike's dominated play from the opening whistle and held a 2-2 lead at half time. Knox rallied in the third quarter and Casler scored two goals in quick succession. Their success was short lived, however, as Cassidy and Coates combined to mark up three more points for the winners.

Play was rugged but clean throughout and only two penalties were handed out by the referee.

St. Michael's: Silvester, McLean, Doyle, Hector, Cassidy, Gendron, Wilpeny, Coates, Fitzpatrick, Callahan.
Knox: Near, Aldin, Casler, Davis, Codrane, Wilson, Spencer, Reushaw, Stier.

VIC DEFEATS ST. MIKE'S IN WOMEN'S BASEBALL GAME

Displaying an improved type of baseball over last year, Victoria women's "A" team defeated a strong St. Mike's team 25-10 yesterday in the opening game of the season at Little Vic gym. Joan O'Donnell for St. Mike's scored the first home run of the season. Victoria's pitcher, Anne McPherson, was

S.P.S. SOCCERITES TRIM U.C. ELEVEN

Three goals in quick succession kept Senior School in the running for the group soccer title as they blanked Sr. U.C. 3-0 on the front campus yesterday. This win puts the Engineers one point behind the leading Vic team, whom they next meet.

The superior strength of S.P.S. was seen in the way they kept the play in U.C. territory during most of the game. After a scoreless first half, Buck MacMillan secured the initial corner on a low shot which caught the corner.

The next two goals were scored on fast plays by Harakas, who turned in a fine performance at centre-half for School.

ARCAND BERATES JEWISH FINANCE

have been forgetting about our duties," he said.

During the question period, M. Arcand said that Jewish influence on the International Gold Bank was no speculation but a fact. He accused the Jewish people of creating two international banks, the bankers and the proletariat.

In answer to M. Arcand, Rev. Norman MacMurray clarified the Christian stand on fascism. Mr. MacMurray, who is chairman of the Canadian Fellowship for a Christian Social Order, traced the Christian religion to a basis of a way of love. This includes both love of God and love of one's fellow man.

"Nothing must be allowed to supersede love of God," he said, "not even love of the state. Under no circumstances can a Christian subscribe to a nationalism which tries to take the place of God."

He said that there can be no exceptions to a Christian's love of man, either. There must be no exceptions regardless of race, nation, class or religion. "This does not mean a sentimental sort of love," he maintained, "but an active love."

"This ruffs out anti-Semitism for the Christian," he said. "Anti-Semitism is definitely anti-Christian. It also rules out anti-internationalism, if the brotherhood of man is to mean anything." Mr. MacMurray found Christianity incompatible with fascism and the enforcement of the advancement of truth.

"However good and true are the ends of other ideologies," concluded Mr. MacMurray, "the Christian can never subscribe to the belief that the end justifies the means."

SPEAKING OF SWING

By Les Vipond

Andy Kirk and his Clouds of Joy with Mary Lou Williams at the piano blew into town last week, marking the beginning of the Palais Royal's new policy of regularly importing name bands, which policy is going to mean a great deal to Toronto's lovers of swing. Kirk's session was so well supported by fans that the Palais more than broke even, all of which augurs well for future importations, among which will be Louis Armstrong definitely, and the greatest of the great possibly.

In many ways Andy Kirk's "Clouds" are just another bunch of Negro swingsters. Nearly all of the soloists gave forth with breaks in the most horrible taste, and then again the same soloists would play the most inspired improvisations with a genuine emotional depth. The trombones (we haven't any accurate personnel) were particularly marked by these extremes, as were the trumpets; the tenor sax soloist seemed more consistently good, but the clarinets were used about as poorly as is usual with run of the mill Negro clarinetists. The drums and bass were about all that could be desired in solid background except for an occasional fervent ground of the cymbals during saxophone solos, and at least one horrible racket of a drum break.

Nevertheless, there aren't a handful of white men in the world who have the instrumental technique combined with the beautiful, bewitching vibrato packed with real emotional value that these musicians of Kirk have. When white men with their taste and powers of rejecting what is mere exhibitionism or bathos really capture the feelings of Negroes the golden age of jazz will have arrived. In some cases of course this already has happened; and there is more than one instance of negroes who have both critical faculty and good taste (Ellington and possibly Basie and Coleman Hawkins).

But the feature attraction of Kirk's outfit is Mary Lou Williams. Continuing to use superlatives, we submit that Mary Lou is the greatest girl hot pianist on the planet. Why don't recording companies exploit her prowess as a soloist more often? She combines the solid left hand rhythm of a Fats Waller with the trumpet-like right hand improvisations of an Earl Hines; the whole is pervaded by the delicacy and elaborateness of an Art Tatum. This doesn't mean that she is just an amalgamated copy-cat. Her work is always subject to her own original imagination, and her hot passionate choruses are unique in the hierarchy of swing. Her versatility is remarkable, in a piece she wrote and arranged for Benny Goodman called, if memory fails us not, "Roll 'Em", she even out boogey woogie's Mead Lux Lewis.

If there is any drawback to her performance it rests in the fact that she is not a great orchestral pianist; her delicacy of touch and thrilling cascade of notes is often lost in the sheer volume of an orchestra the size of Kirk's. She could still learn a lesson, this time from Count Basie who provides the best orchestral piano in the business, and who is able to combine imaginative improvising with solid rhythm. But we regret that it is as a soloist that we feel Mary Lou ought to be featured, not as a unit in an orchestra.

Incidentally our own Trump Davidson seems to have gone definitely Dixieland. He is fresh back from the fog of England and Ray Noble, and held up his end of the affair last week very creditably. He's permanent at the Palais now—until Miesi turns up sometime about the end of the month.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

The opinion of certain members of the Law staff who preferred to remain anonymous, was that women are in a pretty good condition with regard to legal rights here in Ontario. "To quote an English judge," said one. "Women are the pampered darlings of the common law." However, they felt that women needed instruction.

Sidney Waugh, another woman law student, thought it was "a great idea". She felt that the whole subject of property and land law, and inheritance proceedings was involved and women needed guidance.

URBAN PROBLEMS

frustration; financial injustice; taxation should be levied with regard to the ability of the community to pay and the municipality affected, whereas those left in the centre of a city bear the brunt of the burden, as the rich move to the suburbs.

With regard to the future of Toronto, Mr. Plumptre emphasized that here the problem is by no means as preponderant as in Chicago.

ARCAND INTERVIEWED AMID SWASTIKAS

has given orders to Marxists in all countries to smash the countries in which they live by strikes, uprisings, and disorders.

Continuing his dissertation against the Jews, Arcand declared that his party did not find it reasonable that Canadians need Asiatics to supply them with food, clothing, alcohol and furs. The condition of their admission, he declared, was to settle the country. This they did not do, he said. He accused them of having no business ethics whatsoever, and declared that they conquer us by the policy of laissez-faire.

"I am a Zionist," said Arcand, "and am in favour of a national home for the Jews—but it should not be Canada."

Arcand described Canada under the National Unity party. There will be a system of obligatory trade unions, embracing all trades and professions. Labour leaders will be supreme and the unions will not be international. The Chief of the Canadian State will be the governing head.

"If anyone can prove that I have received any money from foreign powers or any outside source," challenged Canada's National leader, "I am ready to resign and dissolve the party. A nation which cannot find leadership within itself is a nation ripe for slavery, but there are means within Canada to save the country."

Arcand declared that his party was increasing daily in numbers, but denied that they had any ambitions to conquer and rule other countries.

A journalist for twenty years, Arcand is now editor of L'Illustration. Other party members entering the hall saluted their leader, their hands outstretched from the shoulder.

Correspondence

To the Editor, The Varsity.
Dear Sir: I send my enthusiastic appreciation of the editorial in last Friday's Varsity. As one of the seven thousand readers it is great to see, if only occasionally, such a positive constructive article as "A Moral Rearmament" on the pages. Will you let us hear from that element of opinion again?

OPINIONS VARY REGARDING SERVICE

towards a thoughtful understanding of the meaning of war.

"It is a splendid thing to remember the sacrifices of the dead but, from a practical standpoint, it seems more important to keep in mind our obligation to care for those who yet live, those who were unable to re-establish themselves in civil life," said John Pounder, I Vice.

"Bands, uniforms, marching men, in short, militaristic displays, are to be condemned as arousing the belief that war is a romantic thing. It is a far cry from this pageantry to muddy trenches and decapitated and mangled bodies. In my opinion an S.C.M. Remembrance Day Service is three times as practical in developing an intellectual attitude for peace as a service at the Memorial Tower," said Bev. Burwell, III Vice.

Several of the students who were questioned confessed that Remembrance Day meant little to them. Lorne Carpenter, III Meds, maintained that much of the feeling of thankfulness for the Armistice has disappeared in twenty years. He believed that three out of five Canadians have been born after the war. Therefore, he agreed with Bill Crockett, II U.C., who said, "I do not think that these services can stir up emotions of gratitude if the horrors of war have not actually entered into your own personal experience."

Harold Acker, IV U.C., seemed to detect a little inconsistency between the ceremony and the actual practice. "Surely we are 'breaking faith with those who died' when we refuse to 'hold the torch high' by defending peace and democracy against fascist aggression! I can hardly see that our government is pursuing a peace policy when ninety-eight per cent of Japanese nickel and aluminum come from Canada. Assistance to China and the Spanish government would be a concrete contribution to peace."

Ivor Baldwin, IV Vic, would like to see these "demonstrations of Canadian nationalism supplanted by a spirit of internationalism." He hinted that he got a little tired of hearing such hymns as "For all the saints who from their labours rest" and "Onward Christian Soldiers" sung at these services because he believed that the number of soldiers who fought because of idealistic motives was relatively small.

Lloyd Haines, II Vic, said, "During the two minutes of silence next Friday I shall be wondering if, a year from now, we shall be holding Remembrance Day or looking forward to another Armistice. If this far becomes a reality, will individual wealth be conscripted along with the sacrifices of youth? Will the soldier of the sword be mortgaged by the soldier of the pen?"

Remembrance Service To Know War Dead

University Luminaries to Attend Ceremonies in Formal Procession

CARILLONS FEATURED

This Friday millions throughout the world will commemorate Armistice Day and pause in silence in remembrance of their war-dead. The various universities throughout the world will also have services in honour of their alumni who fell in action, serving their country.

The Alumni Federation of the University of Toronto in co-operation with the C.O.T.C., will hold a Remembrance Service Friday before the Soldiers' Tower adjoining Hart House. The service will commence at 10.50 a.m.

The academic procession will be led by the lieutenant-governor. In the procession will be the President of the University, the Board of Governors, and the Senate of the University, the President and Directors of the Alumni Federation, the heads of the various colleges and faculties and the Students' Administrative Council. The government will be represented by the Hon. Ian Strachan and Lieutenant H. A. Milten, representing the officer commanding the Second Military District.

Preceded by the C.O.T.C. band under the direction of Captain Slater, a guard of honour from the C.O.T.C. under the command of Major W. S. Wilson will parade to the Soldiers' Tower where the royal salute will be given. The lieutenant-governor will inspect the guard of honour.

President Cody will conduct the service at the Tower. The singing of the hymn will be led by members of the Hart House Glee Club.

COURSE REVISIONS MEET CHANGING CONDITIONS

The English and History course has now only one more year of life. Twenty-four students remain in the fourth year of this course, which leads to a specialist's certificate for high school teachers. To take the place of this course, the Department of Education, three years ago, substituted the two courses, English Language and Literature, and Modern History. Graduates now may obtain a specialist's certificate in both history and English.

The English Language and Literature course and the Modern History course, have now reached their third year and next year will take the place of the former English and History course.

Every year courses in the University are changed to suit changing conditions. To meet the demands of students, some courses must be abandoned, others must be combined in order that students may have the widest possible choice.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

London: In a speech at the Guildhall yesterday Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain stated that Britain's foreign policy was one of peace and self-defense, but not one of world policing.

Toronto: The life of Controller Fred Hamilton was twice threatened last night by anonymous telephone calls.

Washington: The sweeping Republican victories in Tuesday's elections caused a sharp rise in the stock market, and are considered an omen of future Democratic defeat.

BLUES PREPARED TO GIVE QUEEN'S WARM RECEPTION

Tricolour Determined to Break
Winless Record in Final Engagement

NEW CHEER UNCOVERED

By Bernie Shifman

The glories of former play-off years will be revived on Saturday when the once league leaders, Queen's, come to town for another effort to get into the winning column. Ted Reese's band come determined to destroy a winless season and Varsity is equally determined to keep them without a win.

Some students have the idea that the senior intercollegiate race is over but if they got a peek at the practices "Steve" has been giving the boys they would think the season hadn't started. The early practices, of tackling, blocking, etc., have been getting their share of attention, so as to ensure the Tricolours a good reception. The Varsity team has been practising harder for this game than they have for any this season and this might be the game that they'll start clicking.

Anyway a brand new yell has been uncovered to give the Blue men something to fight for. It goes like this:

Yea ye! ye!
Blue and White!
With all (your) might!
Halibala! halibala!
Halibala bala,
Varsity! Varsity!
Rah! Rah! Rah!

'Tis Sad

No Elephant at Folies!

Contrary to rumours there will be no livestock show included in the University College Folies this year.

The idea of exhibiting elephants, camels, mosquitoes and other tropical fauna was toyed with for a considerable length of time but it was finally discovered that it would not be feasible. The reason, say reliable sources, lies in the fact that there are no stables in Hart House. Furthermore, they state that there is an old rule which states that no mosquitoes are allowed to enter the hallowed precincts of the House without being introduced by a friend. As no one yet has found the correct manner in which to introduce a mosquito they shall be barred from the show.

Learning of this Lou Weingarten, director of the Folies, stated, "St. Semper Tyrannus!"

Despite the loss of their silent friends the cast is carrying on in their usual cheerful manner. In fact they are in such good spirits that they have consented to give a free performance at the Royal York tonight. Free for the price of a dance ticket.

In anticipation of riots at the ticket lists the Folies committee has engaged a troop of special police for today. The list goes up this morning in the U.C. Junior Common Room and in the Round. Vast crowds are expected to storm these localities in search of tickets.

SILVER JUBILEE IS CELEBRATED BY NEWMAN CLUB

Catholic Students will Mark Anniversary This Week-End

CHAPLAINS TO RE-UNITE

This week-end Newman Club will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding on the campus. Beginning Friday night with an informal get-together at the club house at 8.30 p.m., the committee in charge of arrangements has planned an extensive program of entertainment. Following the Requiem Mass at 9 a.m., the members will gather at Varsity Stadium to see the Queen's Varsity game. That evening there will be a formal dinner at Eaton's Round Room.

The Newman Club here was founded in 1913 on St. Joseph's Street by the late Archbishop McNeil. In 1921 the organization moved to the quarters on St. George Street at Hoskin. The first Newman Club was founded at the University of Pittsburgh, and now there are two hundred and thirty-eight of them scattered through Canada, the United States, China, Japan and Hawaii wherever there is a secular university attended by Catholic students. There is a chaplain attached to each club and many of the former chaplains here will be in attendance this week-end, explained the present chaplain, Father McQuillan. The chaplain at the time of the inception of Newman Club was Fr. Thomas Burke, C.S.P., now stationed at the Newman Club at the University of California, Berkeley, Calif., but who is expected to arrive tomorrow for the jubilee.

REV. W. BREWING TO BE PEACE SERVICE SPEAKER

The Reverend Willard Brewing, B.D., D.D., minister of St. George's United Church, will be the speaker at the S.C.M. Peace Service in Wyndcliffe College Chapel at five o'clock this afternoon.

Dr. Brewing, who is a member of the Fellowship of Reconciliation and the Fellowship for a Christian Social Order, was graduated from Episcopal Seminary, Philadelphia, and was until recently minister of St. Andrew's Wesley Church, Vancouver.

The service is one of the series of monthly worship services sponsored by the Movement. In addition to his address the leader will direct the congregation in an Act of Meditation.

BULLETIN BOARD!

Representing every activity on the campus, the Bulletin Board is scanned by practically all students in the University.

The diversified activities are listed over every few issues. Taking a random copy of The Varsity, study groups, glee clubs, drama, worship, symphony, speeches, debates and music are listed. In other issues such sports as riding, shooting, tennis and golf share space with more academic pursuits.

The Bulletin Board fulfils its purpose of keeping students informed as to what is planned for their interest and enjoyment.

As is usual, even the Bulletin Board has its lighter moments. Listed under a religious club, we find that a prominent scientist is journeying to another country to deliver a lecture.

CANADIANS URGED TO CLOSER CONTACT WITH FOREIGNERS

Friendship and Hospitality to Strangers

PARTY FOUNDED

"To encourage Canadians to show friendship and hospitality to the foreign students of the University, and to understand and enjoy something of the life, culture and manners of these students and the countries from which they come, is the purpose of the International Party sponsored by the Toronto Local Council of Women," said Mrs. E. Thomson, at a dinner given to the foreign students of the University at Sherbourne House last night.

Mr. A. R. Gopalayengar, a lecturer from Mysore University, India, doing post-graduate work in botany on a Vincent Massey Scholarship; C. P. Chien and G. C. Wong, both studying at O.C.E.; Mr. Brian Roberts, a dentist from England; were in the gathering of men and women assembled from different parts of the world.

GHOSTS, MARTIANS DISCUSSED TODAY

U.C. Parliament to Debate Likelihood of Attack from Mars

POSSIBILITY DOUBTED

The possibility of the "War of the Worlds" ever materializing will be discussed on Thursday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Junior Common Room. The resolution reads: "Resolved that this House rejects emphatically the possibility of ghosts and Martians."

The Rt. Hon. Sally MacDonald, Prime Minister, declared that the only ghosts that haunted her were the ghosts of past examiners in her course who had failed to materialize properly in their aspirations. "As for the Martians, if perchance they do exist, I doubt that they would 'come down to earth,' figuratively or literally, considering the present state of world affairs."

The Opposition Leader, Hon. H. H. Botnick, emphasized that nightmarish occurrences in this world could mean only one thing—the existence of ghosts.

"The tremendous furore occasioned by a recent radio program proves that people's nerves are at the breaking-point due to the possibility of supernatural occurrences. But 'All's Wells that ends Welles!'" he concluded.

"What is Happening in World"
Theme of Talks by Sir A. Zimmern

FREE $10.00

The Geneva School of International Studies will hold a special two weeks' session from December 5th to 17th in New York City at a hall to be selected, and will revolve about a series of lectures by the director, Professor Sir Alfred Zimmern entitled "What is Happening in the World?"

An inaugural lecture will be given on Monday, December 5, at 8.30 p.m. Dates and titles of succeeding lectures will be as follows: December 6, The Geographers' Answer; December 8, The Sociologists' Answer; December 10, The Lawyers' Answer; December 13, The Economists' Answer; December 15, The Political Scientists' Answer; December 17, The Philosophers' Answer.

Each lecture and subsequent discussion forums are to be presided over by a specialist in the field covered by the lecture.

In addition to the regular lectures and discussions, there will be a seminar on national backgrounds, conducted by Lady Zimmern, as well as a public lecture in Riverside Church on Sunday, December 11th, in which Sir Alfred Zimmern and Dr. J. A. Mackey, President of the Princeton Theological Seminary, will discuss the present world situation from the point of view of the Theologian.

A fee of $10.00 will be charged for the course. Enrollment is limited to 300 and will be restricted to seniors and graduate students in government and the social sciences. Applications should include details and purpose of the applicant's present course of study, the recommendation of a faculty adviser, and be addressed to the New York Office: Adele Follows, Asst. Secretary, 2475 Palisade Avenue, New York, N.Y.

'WHY THE CHURCH?' COMPLETES SERIES

Churches Today Viewed as Scattered and Ineffective
Fragments

"The modern church lacks universality and unity," said Provost Cosgrave of Trinity College, as he completed the S.C.M. noon-hour talk series on "Why the Church?"

"I do not believe in churches," said the Provost, "but in the Church, the Holy Catholic Church, which exists today only in ideals. The Anglican Church, the Roman, the Presbyterian, the United are only scattered and mostly ineffective fragments of the real, ancient, universal and unified Holy Catholic Church. These fragments of 1938 instead of co-ordinating with each other, are competing. But half a loaf is better than none, and likewise a fragment of the Church is better than no fragment."

"Why the Church? Even as it stands, in its lamentable state, it has some power left. It knits together all classes. It teaches the doctrine that ought to come into man's mind. It is still the best method for diffusing the gospel." Provost Cosgrave mentioned one claim of the Church that cannot be denied and which is of value to scholars of all religions. "We owe," he said, "the New Testament to the Church. It selected these books from other works of the ancient times and set them forth for the world."

Reginald Heal New Hart House Artist

Reginald Heal, a newcomer as far as Hart House guest artists are concerned, will be heard at the regular Friday Recital in Hart House tomorrow. Although this is Mr. Heal's first appearance in Hart House, he is well known to musical audiences in Toronto.

Originally from Cleveland, Mr. Heal, who possesses a rich tenor voice, has been associated with the Toronto Conservatory since 1917, has sung with the choir at Old St. Andrew's Church for the past ten years, and is a member of the Conservatory Choir.

Mr. Heal's program will start with Bach's familiar "Come Sweet Death" and will be followed by a well balanced selection from the works of other composers.

RETURN OF COLONIES SUBJECT FOR DEBATE

"Resolved that this house favours the restoration to Germany of her pre-war colonies," is the subject to be discussed before the house at the second session of the Victoria College Debating Parliament, to be held in Alumni Hall on Monday, November 14th at 8 p.m.

Speaking on the paper will be Genevieve Taylor and Dudley Bristow, in support of the government; Greta Kiddell and Geoffrey Dales in that of the opposition. Procedure will be as usual, and when the papers are completed, the House will be thrown open for speeches from the floor. In spite of violent protest from the Scotch members of the college, the cabinet remains obdurate in sustaining its policy regarding refreshments. "Seventeen Words or Ten Cents" is the official slogan.

Whoa!

Queen's is Yet to Come!

Don't rush down to the library like that! Just because Varsity didn't beat the Big Red team from Montreal does not mean that the old hired dipper season has blown. No Sir.

In fact for a band of students from Queen's, the season has only started. The bunch to date numbers about 600. They are the ones who are going to come to Varsity with a gasping, snarling, foaming, real hot, fighting mad Tricolour team that is going to lick the trousers off the Varsity men or leave their bones bleaching on the grid-iron.

The students down at Kingston are pretty mad. The alumni, too, are pretty mad. Because their team hasn't won a game in the whole season. But there is one last chance, coming this Saturday afternoon. If the gods are in favour, disgrace can be avoided. And so 600 rosters are coming down on the off chance of seeing the disgrace escaped.

What will happen if Queen's loses again is dreadful to contemplate. Will they tear up the stadium? Will they chop down the goal posts? Will they raid Whitney Hall? Just what will they do? Whatever they do is sure to be exciting so that it will be worth while to go to the game on Saturday, if only to make sure that there are more Blue and White rosters than Queen's men.

Back Campus Sports Review

By Sid Reuchuk

The curtains were pulled shut on this year's rugby season in so far as Victoria and University Colleges are concerned, when the two teams yielded themselves to a 5-5 draw yesterday on the Vic campus. These same teams had tied in their previous tussle on the U.C. plantation, by a six-all score.

As the score would indicate, the game was of a teeter-totter nature, with both teams alternating in threatening each other's territory. The first quarter saw the pre-game "goose-eggs" kept intact with neither team scoring, although U.C. showed up slightly better than their opponents. In the second canto, the red and white ball-carriers opened wide, and two end runs, one Wilkinsky to Mallion in which Wilkinsky skirted for forty, and the other Murray to Mallion, brought them to the Vic ten-yard stripe. On the next play MacLean plowed through for the necessary yards for a U.C. major score which was not converted. Thus the score at the end of half time was U.C. 5, Vic 0.

Vic opened the second half by moving the sticks twice to plant themselves ten yards away from the U.C. touch line. At this point the scarlet and gold attempted a placement which failed to go further than the scrimmage line where a red and white griddler recovered. After two unsuccessful tries at denting the Vic line the gang from U.C. had their kick blocked. The ball bounded back about twenty yards where a Vic man pounced on it for a touch-down which was not converted. Thus the game ended with the score knotted at five apiece.

During the last quarter, Larry Smith of U.C. suffered a cracked ankle. For the red and white, Murray, Cutler, and MacLean played fine football while the Dales boys and Casserly showed up well for Vic.

U.C.: Murray, MacLean, Cutler, Mallion, Moore, Ferguson, Coulter, Goodman, Tedingham, Morley, Singer, Wilkinsky, Tucker, Bruce-Robertson, Harris.

Vic: Rowell, Bowles, McLaughlin, Thompson, McRae, Gibbs, Trickey, Casserly, Hogg, Jack Dales, Joe Dales, Pallette, Harris, Quetin, Lipin, McArthur.

Varsity co-eds have shown great interest in fencing, which they claim is the most graceful of sports. It is almost unique among sports in that it does not require an extensive area. Agility, both mental and physical, is the chief requisite for success. An innovation here, so far fencing has been limited, but any time now there should be enough advanced players ready to make up a competitive club. A class for beginners is held on Wednesdays at 4.15 at the L.M. if you are interested in mastering the intricacies of this "most ancient and noble game".

Tonight, Physiotherapy, which was one of the strongest threats in the Basketball League last year, will make its first 1938 appearance. Physios should take the Vic Jrs. on the strength of their experience and especially since Jean Atkinson is still with them. Down at St. Joe's gym at 6.30 Household Science will make its basketball debut. St. Mike's are having the same difficulties as Vic Jrs. in regard to forwards—they haven't got them. On the basis of greater team experience in this case too, we are calling St. Mike's to defeat the Cooking Class.

Vic Freshies put up some stiff opposition Tuesday night in an effort to stem St. Hilda's Seniors' attack. They deserve a great deal of credit for holding the crack Saints outfit from piling up a much larger score.

No official games at all yesterday, but the usual basketball practices kept the players busy. These serious about their swimming and badminton are getting ready now for the post-Christmas meet, which is a good thing.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Alan Horvay

Apparently Mac McCutcheon, capable director of intramural athletics, never wearies of thinking up new sports to increase the already extensive program of interfaculty sport. Mr. McCutcheon revealed yesterday that table tennis, probably the most popular indoor pastime on the campus, had been added to the official sports calendar, and that an interfaculty tournament would be staged in December to celebrate its seasonal debut.

Until this year table tennis has been the poor relation of the interfaculty family. During the past few seasons, however, the sport has flourished in college common rooms and in residences, and finally this autumn Hart House formally recognized its popularity by setting up tables for the use of undergraduates in the boxing room, long sacred to members of the cauliflower cult. So great was the response to this innovation that the long-promised table tennis tourney was decided upon. Details of the tournament follow in the succeeding lines.

Each faculty is to be restricted to a maximum of eight entries, these representatives to be determined by elimination tournaments within the various colleges. Deadline for these intra-faculty elimination tests is November 26. The double elimination system will be in force in the interfaculty tournament, assuring that each player must be defeated twice before being stricken from the lists. The tournament will be divided into flights of sixteen, with the winners of each flight playing off for the individual title.

Points will be awarded each faculty on the basis of number of victories, number of players entered, flight winners, individual champion, etc. The matches will be held in Hart House, although players may play elsewhere in the University by mutual arrangement. And so it looks as if there will be considerable ping-pong in Hart House and environs before the snow flies.

QUEEN'S WILL PROBABLY WIN

The above heading will not be misconstrued, we trust, as rancour on our part toward the Blue team. We have not been overly disappointed in the showing of the team this season, because it is hardly to be expected that a team with three key men on the sidelines, and as many more ready for the bench at the slightest provocation, should compete with the outfit that Doug Kerr fielded this season. And we do not think, like so many of our acquaintances, that the Blues have been playing below their true form this fall. These partisans have been selling the Blues to hit their true stride in each game to date, to play their best brand of football, supposedly ten or fifteen points above the form they actually displayed. We do not expect any sharp climb up the class scale against Queen's on Saturday, because to our way of thinking they have been playing their best football, and it just wasn't good enough.

So far as we have been able to gather thus far, Stevens has about five backfielders ready to toss against the Tricolour in the season wind-up. Lou Somers can probably break even numbers for the hundred yards, but he is not a particularly shifty runner nor does he have an effective change of pace. If he has, he has been very successfully concealing it all year. It hardly seems likely that Lilliputian Lou will outspeed the Queen's downfield tacklers unless he uncovers a shifty stop-go stride between now and game time. Ree Rowland has been hitting the centre of the opposing wall with considerable perseverance and some success all season, but his booting has been off-colour and he has not been used much on run-backs. McQuarrie seems to have been playing in a fog this year and apparently requires his side-kick McDonald for inspiration.

Then there is Charlie Prince. The Prince showed up well in his last two starts and appears to do everything moderately well. Cam Gray has lost his chief weapon, the field goal, but has been playing a consistent game otherwise. Thus it seems likely that the Blues will hold their own with Latimer, Annan, Johnston, Brown, Simpson and wherever else Teddy Reeve chooses to send out for backfield duty. It is along the line, however, that the Kingstons hold the decisive advantage, and for two reasons.

The first being that Frankie Sirdevan, the backbone of the front line, has a broken nose, which has never been known to assist in the execution of a successful block or tackle. Also the Tricolour vanguard are pretty well fed up with having their faces smeared in the dirt and will be out to get that one victory for the Reverend Reeve. It is an undisputed fact, moreover, that Mr. Reeve's team corps did not earn their front-line positions because of their fine tenor voices or because they refused to put washers in the collection plate at Sunday School. They're tough.

Add to this the psychological fact that the Reeveement will be coming in there with an everything-to-win, nothing-to-lose attitude, while Varsity, fresh from the blow to their play-off aspirations last week at McGill, will have no such incentive, and you get a fair idea of what we're driving at. Varsity has made their bid and missed: hence there is a certain psychological let-down, a relax of tension; whereas Queen's became resigned to elimination long ago.

OVER THE NET

By Al Rose

With the volleyball schedule rapidly nearing the half-way mark, there have been very few surprises in the games played to date. However, two of last year's finalists, St. Mike's "A", and Emmanuel "A", have turned in spotty performances, although neither team is out of the running as yet.

On their performance to date Wycliffe appears to be the best of the long list of twenty-three teams, the largest entry in intramural history. Dents and St. Meds will also give a good account of themselves if they reach the finals.

Wycliffe netters, rated the class of the interfaculty volleyball league, gave another demonstration of their power last night in the lower gym when they dusted off the St. Michael's team 15-0 and 15-4.

The Pharmacy B volleyball team handed S.P.S. III their first defeat of the season yesterday afternoon in the little gym in a match that took three games to decide.

The engineers could do nothing wrong at first and had no difficulty in rolling up a 15-9 score. Then the better-drilled druggists started "to set them up" and win easy points to capture the next two matches 15-11, 15-8.

International Fight For Peace Supported

Famous News Commentator Plays Hitler before Packed House

LEAGUE HELD RESPONSIBLE

"During the recent crisis, I received constant reports of the eagerness of the German people for peace," said Mr. H. V. Kaltenborn to a capacity audience at Massey Hall last night. "I also know that the German general staff were against the Czechoslovakian adventure."

"So fanatical is Hitler that he might have sent troops marching into Czechoslovakia," he continued, "and Goering went to Munich on behalf of the general staff to restrain him."

The speaker went on to outline the state of affairs which existed within Germany during the crisis. He claimed that the German people were purposely kept in ignorance of what was happening. He also claimed that Germany was not and is not as ready to fight as she was in 1914. Germany is divided, and there is a great deal of antagonism to the Hitler regime, he said.

"If the fundamental weaknesses of Germany had been understood," said the veteran news commentator, "it would have been easier to oppose Hitler's adventures and to prevent him

WOMEN DEBATERS MEET AT QUEEN'S

Resolved that "College life is artificial and out of touch with reality," was the topic for the debate trials for the choice of the women's intercollegiate debating team held last Wednesday afternoon at the Women's Union.

About ten entrants from Trinity, Victoria and St. Michael's took part. Miss Ferguson acted in the capacity of judge as Dr. Victoria Mueller, who previously consented to act, was unable to be present. Miss Ferguson commented on the fact that there were no entrants from U.C.

Members of the team chosen are: Betty Blair, III Trinity; Alice Ireland, Margaret Casto, IV Vic; Betty Hunter, II St. Mike's.

Two members of the U. of T. team will meet the debaters from McMaster in the Vic auditorium on Nov. 22 and two will make the trip to Kingston to meet the Queen's team.

He Has Interviewed Great International Figures in Many Countries

SHOWS GENUINE SINCERITY

By Saul Zuker

In a back-stage dressing room in Massey Hall last night Hans von Kaltenborn, who had just told a capacity audience that the Chamberlain policy was the wrong one in dealing with a Madman like Hitler, found time to give an exclusive interview to The Varsity about the American elections, a general peace policy, and about his own experiences in the early days of radio.

This tall, stoutish, semi-bald news commentator whose small bristling gray moustache still displays spatterings of blond hairs, certainly has a right to speak with authority on current international events. He has toured the globe on more than one occasion and has interviewed practically every important personage in the international limelight today, including the heads of Fascist as well as democratic countries. He should be no stranger to Canadians who throughout the crisis heard his carefully measured but illuminating commentaries on the situation. In his Massey Hall lecture last night, however, he became so engrossed in his subject that his voice assumed the rapid fire staccato of Clem McCarthy rather than the cool emphatic style which characterizes it on the radio.

"Ordinary sentimental talk on behalf of peace is not enough," he pointed out. "Definite action, such as stopping sales of supplies to aggressor nations and boycott of the products of these nations is necessary."

The usual question asked Mr. Kaltenborn after a lecture is where does

MCGILL FAVOURED IN HARRIER MEET

On Saturday morning in High Park at 10:30 a.m. McGill University will defend its intercollegiate Harrier Championship against Toronto, O.A.C., and R.M.C. The Redmen have won the title for the past two years and are favoured to repeat. Five men compete and the first four finishing from each university score points. McGill have four of last year's team available led by Frankton, intercollegiate three mile champion, Cook and Cowan, who finished one-two in the mile, Terry Todd, and a new man, Peter.

Toronto has three veterans in Hogg and Forrest, who have been on three harrier teams, and Goodwin, who was on the team last year. Phoenix is a harrier from Western, and Foulis is a promising freshman who came up from U.T.S., where he holds their cross-country record.

O.A.C. will be dangerous contenders and they have beaten Toronto in the past. They have three veterans and two new men in Eedles, Vaselev, Fletcher, Young and Seymour. R.M.C. will be represented by Hopkins, Dansereau, Parker, Field, and Boswell.

The intermediates, composed of Louttit, Taylor, Kaylor, Hanna and McDonald, journey to Western to meet Western, O.A.C. and McMaster.

ARMAMENTS ROUSE MUCH DISCUSSION

Large Increase in Defence Estimates Predicted for Next Session of Parliament

OPINIONS DIFFER

By Ross Munro
CUP Correspondent

Ottawa, Nov. 7.—Canada's armament program is a topic of major political interest in the capital now and predictions are being freely made that defence estimates will be increased to possibly $50,000,000 next session of parliament. This year the estimate was $34,000,000.

It is assumed the government will embark on an armament program and a difference of opinion is reported within the national defence department concerning the method of arms manufacture best suited. The issue is private manufacture under a profit-control system or government manufacture in a Dominion arsenal.

Defence Minister Mackenzie and his deputy minister, General L. R. LaFleche, maintain that nationalization of the arms industry is the ideal method but Canada cannot afford to build and operate a Dominion arsenal right now. It is estimated it would cost $30,000,000 to get such an arsenal ready for production. The alternative is private manufacture after the fashion of the Bren gun contract with the John Inglis Company of Toronto, which is being investigated at an inquiry here now.

WELL-LIKED PORTER HAPPY TO BE BACK

Jack Warwick has returned to Hart House after his first absence for nineteen years. The popular Hall Porter, who knows practically every man on the campus, has not been in evidence this term. A heart condition has kept him away.

Feeling ill all summer, he was finally forced to take a complete rest from his activities, but now he is back, feeling

Before the Soldiers' Tower, commencing at 10.50 a.m.

CONDUCTED BY THE ALUMNI FEDERATION, UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

HYMN—(Led by Members of Hart House Glee Club)

One chord will be struck by the band. The whole congregation will sing.

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home.

Under the shadow of thy throne
Thy saints have dwelt secure;
Sufficient is thine arm alone,
And our defence is sure.

Before the hills in order stood,
Or earth received their frame,
From everlasting thou art God,
To endless years the same.

A thousand ages in thy sight
Are like an evening glee;
Short as the watch that ends the night,
Before the rising sun.

Expect Real Battle Between Old Rivals

Tricolour will Fight Desperately to Avert Shame of Six Straight Losses

TEAM AT FULL STRENGTH

By Mac Hitsman

Sports Editor of Queen's Journal

With the last game of the season in sight the Tricolour will be striving harder than ever to catch up with the victory cap which has been eluding her all season. Varsity Stadium has been very good to Queen's on past occasions but whether a determined Varsity team which has had a more successful season itself can be beaten in its own backyard is another matter.

It has been a strange season for the Tricolour and one which will be remembered for a long time. In the first three games Ted Reeve's machine got away to an early lead but then failed to hold the advantage in the last two periods. The last two games with McGill and Western respectively were keenly contested, but the visiting aggregations had enough superiority to pull away from the Tricolour.

Varsity and Queen's, the teams which have ruled the roost for five years, have had to give way to the previous tail-enders. Saturday's game will have no effect on the intercollegiate race but both teams will be fighting to win. Queen's has yet to win a game while the Blue team would like to break even with three victories.

Doug Annan and Bud Johnston, the two absentees last week, will be back in harness and giving added power to the Reeve outfit. The team suffered another loss when Bob Davis, who has been fighting off injuries all season underwent an operation for appendicitis last Friday. Captain Art Stollery will be at quarterback as usual, while Jack Brown, the Tricolour's ace kicker, and Bob Simpson, a newcomer to senior football this fall, will fill the other

FRIDAY SING SONGS

Members of Hart House will be delighted to know that the first of the series of the popular Midday Sing Songs will take place today at 1.30 p.m. in the East Common Room. Mr. Ross Workman, well known for his excellent work in conducting the Sing Song in the past, will again be the leader.

Beginners Welcomed At Boxing, Wrestling

A large caguel of enthusiastic froth are turning out nightly to study the many arts of self defence under the expert tutelage of Mel Giomna and Chesty Martin.

In the wrestling room Chesty Martin is putting his grunt and groan artists over the jumps and through the ropes. Stew Phoenix, intercollegiate light-heavy champion, has come from Guelph to O.C.E. With rugby over, Bud Schweigert from the seniors and "Fighting Fat" McIntyre from the intermediates will be back with the pretzel benders.

Jack Piggott, intercollegiate 165 pound boxing titlholder, is nursing a hand broken last summer though he is expecting to fight in Buffalo at the end of the month. Hood and Dillon are another pair of the old brigade who are out steadily. "Dud" Barnes, Ted Jarvis, Parker and others are expected shortly. With a little more support from the freshmen we can look forward to a banner year with the leather pushers.

Injury-Riddled Stevenites Have Chance to Finish in a Second Place Tie with Mustangs

NO TITLE THIS TIME

The Limestone City crew will display their wares for the last time this season Saturday afternoon at Varsity Stadium when they play host to the visiting Queen's gridders. Despite the fact that neither team can gain a play-off berth with a win, the game should be productive of good, wide-open rugby.

The Limestone City crew will be fighting hard for a victory in order to ward off the disgrace of a winless campaign. And to them the sweetest kind of victory will be one over a Varsity outfit right in the Bloor Street Bowl. On the other hand a win for the Blues coupled with a Western defeat at the hands of the McGill Redmen, would give the Stevenites a second place tie with the Mustangs; and this is the goal at which the locals will be aiming.

Many Varsiters seeing action in tomorrow's game will be crippled but willing soldiers. Included among the injured are Bee Rowland, Al Ibbister, Murray Scott, Frank Sirdevan, Don Mumford, Doug Turner, and Jim MacDonald, an imposing list of notables. But all will play with the exception of the last three mentioned. It was hoped

GOVERNMENT WINS AT U.C. DEBATE

The Rt. Hon. Solly MacDonald led her government to a 19-12 triumph over a bevy of ghosts led by Opposition Leader Hon. H. H. Butnick. The decision was the result of a debate, "Resolved that this House rejects emphatically the possibility of Ghosts and Martians".

The government illustrated that ghosts could not visit the campus because the medical students would see their butchered patients, and a ghastly decimal point would throw out the calculation of a well-meaning School man. Furthermore "Ghosts are unprofitable", they maintained, pointing for verification to the new low in the price of cotton. With the accusation of fear thrown at them the opposition countered this charge with illustrations of great men such as Napoleon and the Kaiser succumbing to that same fear of the unknown.

S.C.M. PEACE SERVICE ADDRESSED BY BREWING

Addressing the S.C.M. Peace Service in Wyllie's Chapel yesterday afternoon the Reverend William Brewing, B.D., D.D., stressed the necessity of not minimizing the glory of those who fell.

He pointed out that the attitude to war is changing in our generation. "The desire for revenge has largely disappeared, people only wish to be allowed to live harmoniously with their fellow men," he stated.

Formerly if one declared he was a pacifist he was ostracized, but today it requires very little courage to take such a stand. Not only is the attitude prevalent among students, but he quoted from speeches made by Stanley Baldwin in Parliament a few years ago. Following his address Dr. Brewing led the congregation in an Act of Meditation.

"Lest We Forget"

As we bow our heads today to honour those who gave their lives a score of years ago, we cannot but feel ashamed that after that costly lesson we have emerged with such a world as this. It has been said that they died in vain, and that after all they were merely misguided lads, who cherished an ideal, a fantastic illusion that it was all a war to end wars. If they died in vain it is our fault.

The time has come when we have to look closer home for the causes of warfare. Twenty years later we see a world forgetting the past and preparing for another war which may come only too soon. In our mad rush we stop for two minutes . . . and then go on sowing in our own hearts and in the hearts of our companions those insidious seeds of hate and jealousy which lead to strife. Not because we want to but because we forget.

Twenty-five years ago, some of those men who today have become drunks of our streets, to whom we self-righteously refuse to give a dime, were hot-blooded youths with ideals and ambitions. They were prepared for the sacrifice, and we wonder if they sometimes do not feel that it was all in vain. Tonight the floors of some of the hostels and missions in down-town Toronto, will be covered with men sleeping with nothing under them but newspapers, and a hard floor. Tomorrow they will go out into the streets with the same clothes they slept in, stiff and sore . . . to beg. Those men, some of them, are veterans of the great war. But we have forgotten soon.

Some of them were exposed to gas, and they have been cared for in their suffering. Some of them have been exposed to shells, and they are still in hospitals. Most of them were exposed to liquor and vice, and because some didn't have the resistance to cast off the curse they are in the streets. Perhaps it is the only way, but let's not forget, that they were heroes yesterday.

Have you forgotten yet? . . . For the world's events have rumbled on since those gagged days

Like traffic checked awhile at the crossing of city ways:

And the haunted gap in your mind has filled with thoughts that flow

Like clouds in the lit heaven of life; and you're a man relieved to go,

Taking your peaceful share of life, with joy to spare. But the past is just the same,—and War's a bloody game . . .

Have you forgotten yet? . . . Look down, and swear by the slain of the War that you'll never forget.

From "Aftermath"—Siegfried Sassoon.

Remembrance Day is not a time when our national pride is stirred by the sight of uniforms or marching men. It is not believed best to honour those who died to end wars, by making a display of force, nor is there any room for anything associated with that foolish contradiction, the so-called 'glories of war'. Rather it is a time when we pay humble tribute to those boys, who when forced to make a decision between sacrifice of life and the loss of certain spiritual values, found that life was not too great a price to pay. Those of us who were facing the problem of what we would do in case of war, and those of us who are still facing the problem of what are yet to do in case of strife, realize a closer bond of sympathy with those warriors of 1914-18.

Today is a day when we swear, not that we are willing to fight for national pride, or a fantastic illusion, but that we will make as great a sacrifice in time of the absence of declared war, for the maintenance of peace, freedom, and the privileges of democracy, as they did in the last generation. To seek to build a society by positive constructive methods, based on the principle of the fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of all men, irrespective of creed, colour or race, requires as much moral courage, conviction and sacrifice as are required in time of war. As we pause for two minutes, let us remember for what they fought and died, how they fought and died. Let us remember some of those who are suffering the atrocities of warfare, because we are greedy enough to seek the almighty dollar in the war markets of the world . . . let us remember that Canadians can do something constructive for the sake of peace.

Going Reactionary

Stocks rose on Wall Street when the Republican gains were announced. No more conclusive or more macabre comment could be made on the recent American mid-term elections. The progressive movement was dealt a blow, which, if not fatal, was strong enough to bring home to its champions the need for organization.

Mayor LaGuardia has called a meeting of progressives in Washington. Now that the meeting has been called, half the battle is won. But the other half, that of organization, of reconciling the American Labour Party with the westerners like the La Follettes and Olsen. The unions will be another tough nut to crack, but reconciliation must be effected between the C.I.O. and the A.F. of L. or stocks will rise on Wall Street forever.

That much has been accomplished by the recent elections—a potential solidification of progressives into a movement.

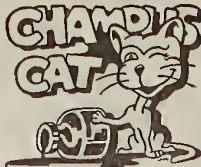

But there are few if any constructive achievements besides this one that came from the elections. Hopeful signs of realignment of American foreign policy have been decisively squelched, and isolation is the rule. President Roosevelt has been notified by the people that he is a nice fellow and all that, but a third term is definitely out. Frank Murphy, Democratic governor of Michigan, was defeated because he refused to call out the National Guard against striking automobile workers. (LaGuardia has invited Murphy to the conference of progressives.)

In the west, Philip LaFollette, fighting son of "Fighting Bob", the only real third-party threat for the presidency the United States has seen, has gone down before a Republican. Olsen, Farmer-Laborite, lost the governorship to another Republican. And thus, Wisconsin and Minnesota have passed over to the reactionaries after years of progressive administration.

In the South, the verdict was decided at the primaries, where reactionary Democrats defeated progressives, and slid into Congress against their leader's wishes. It will be a long time before Texas sends so liberal a representative to Congress as Maury Maverick. He was the man who had the courage to fight for social reform in the hidebound south, where social conditions are as bad as they are in certain parts of the Toronto slums.

From now on the South will be represented by "Cotton Ed" Smith, who sits in the Senate and rants against the least constructive measure, by Vice-President Garner, who was anti-Roosevelt and reactionary even before the superior personality of his chief forced him into idleness and obscurity.

Whom can the Democrats nominate for President in 1940? Murphy would have been considered, but he was thrown out of a governorship. Senator Paul McNutt was the logical choice even before Roosevelt was thought of, but, and this is an ironic comment on the American mentality, Democratic strate-

Glatz and Grandjany

Last night at Eaton Auditorium Hertha Glatz, contralto, and Marcel Grandjany, harpist, combined in a concert which charmed a discriminating audience. The singer who is a Viennese by birth, besides being very restful on the eyes, had a voice which to this reviewer was technically excellent. Add to this a well-chosen program, excellent diction and a developed sense of the dramatic and you have Miss Glatz. By herself she could have presented an enjoyable program; however, the management had also sent along a versatile harpist in the person of M. Grandjany and while he could not be expected to rival Miss Glatz's performance, nevertheless he suffered none in comparison.

The contralto's voice was all that could be desired and she possessed a range which was exciting to listen to. Never once did she seem to have to strive for her notes. Time after time her warm, vibrant voice swept upwards and unerringly and effortlessly achieved the right effect. It must have occurred to more than one present that a role such as Carmen was made to order for this charming miss, and when she obliged with Bizet's gay Habanera that impression was solidly formed. Her Schubert numbers were exceptionally well done.

Marcel Grandjany won approval with his brilliance on the harp and while at times his performance was not all that could be desired, it was none the less intriguing. He showed to best advantage in his own composition Autonne which smacked strongly of the influence that Claude Debussy wielded upon the French. Shortly after he played as an encore Clair de Lune but he did not give it all that it deserved. The overtones were not controlled as well as could have been done, with the result that the rendition suffered accordingly. Despite this defect M. Grandjany was very interesting to listen to. Altogether it was a program that an audience could revel in—and did.

Graner, O'Connor and the others are bound to make a try. Should they be successful, the progressives will be forced to nominate a candidate before they will have had time to consolidate as a party.

Back Campus Sports Review

The St. Mike's double blue representatives in the intercollegiate rugby were clobbered by a 6-5 victory over Sr. S.P.S. yesterday on the back campus. This game meant nothing to either of the teams in so far as both were previously eliminated from a crack at the "money series" by Sr. Meds.

After beating around in the centre of the field during the first quarter, Sr. S.P.S. got their break early in the latter part of the first half, when Black of School recovered a Saints' fumble on the latter's ten yard line. On the next play, Williamson hit the line for ten to score a touch for the engineers, which was not converted. Then the score at the end of half time read Sr. S.P.S. 5, St. Mike's 0.

In the second half the double blue showed a complete reversal in form. A forward by School was intercepted by Larry O'Brien who galloped sixty yards for a major score for St. Mike's. St. Mike's pulled out ahead when they converted. The only feature of the play was a seventy yard punt by feature of the game, while O'Brien and the double blue's hooter, Flaherty.

Flaherty's kicking was easily the best in the game. Williamson and Ford turned in good efforts for the losers.

St. Mike's: O'Brien, MacKimm, Broderick, Ronayne, Maley, Barry, Wilpers, Gurnow, Kuhn, Bannigan, MacLaughlin, Doyle, Flaherty, Schantz, Barrett, Riley, O'Hara, Higgins.

Sr. S.P.S.: Ford, Bridglat, Williamson, Creet, Holden, Milne, Christo, Black, Grosskurth, Busif, Currie, Patterson, Chisholm, Keefer, Salton, MacPherson, Rodzick, Forrester, Wood.

The Mulock Cup playoffs are just around the corner and two of the three finalists have already qualified. Sr. Meds and Jr. School swept through their groups without a defeat, and this afternoon Trinity and Dents will battle it out for the third playoff berth. A Dent victory will give them the position, but if Trinity win, the two teams will have to meet again in a sudden death affair.

Once again, the dark horse of the league has fielded a fighting bunch of players who don't know the word defeat, and might upset both Sr. Meds and Jr. School. The condense and almost subless squad are still undefeated and this afternoon might put them right in the finals.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shiffman

GONE ARE THE DAYS . . .

Tomorrow Queen's tackle the University of Toronto football squad to pull out the curtains on the 1938 season. Both teams are a little bewildered . . . they play tomorrow and no matter who wins it has no effect on the standing. Queen's are still fourth and Varsity undisputedly in third position. As in Thorne Smith's book called "Turnabout" the league has taken a spin and we find last year's finalists occupying third and fourth positions. In fact it's five years since their monopoly set in, at least that's what all the papers have been saying. For five years it was "Beat Queen's" or if a Kingstonic, "Beat Varsity" when the play-off season set in. But the muddys are gone—let's hope not for ever . . . but they are gone and Varsity plays Queen's tomorrow.

McGill leaves Montreal and goes down to Western for the week-end. Western still has a mathematical chance of forcing a play-off . . . in which case they might take the Yates Cup. That is mathematically speaking . . . although we'd like to see McGill beaten just once, we feel that Western are in about the same position as the batter who has swung at the third pitch for strike three, but the catcher dropped the ball and is trying to beat the ball to first base. But it is sometimes done, and Western has all the breaks in their favour . . . home ground, Redmen have two stars who will be unlikely to appear . . . nothing to lose, everything to gain . . . Coach Stoen might pull it out of the bag but Varsity plays Queen's tomorrow.

OH LET'S MAKE BELIEVE . . .

We've been thinking . . . real hard about tomorrow's set-up . . . we mean about championships and cups and the game. How many have ever seen the championship? How many have seen the Yates Cup? That's what we thought and we wouldn't know the difference between the Yates Cup and the cup that is emblematic of the intramural volleyball championship. So we thought it wouldn't be a difficult thing to make this a championship game. See, we just forgot about McGill and Western and make it a two-team league . . . like it was in former years and gee, we're getting all enthused about tomorrow's game.

But seriously we feel that tomorrow's contest is going to be more than just a game to round off the schedule. Teddie Reeve has never gone through a season without one single win and no greater love hath Teddie than defeating Varsity, even if he has to practise his team kicking placements so as to hit the bar so they might regain the ball and score a major instead of a placement. But Warren Stevens has the same idea and if the Blue team can score two wins over the Tricolours in one season his season is complete even if we don't win a cup that no one has seen . . . (sour grapes). So this week with a surprisingly large squad left after the bruising few weeks, Varsity practised harder than ever and the team is ready to chalk up their third victory. It's going to be a good game no matter who wins and Queen's always plays best in Toronto.

So come one, come all, as the curtain goes down on several of the football players' careers. Tomorrow will be your last chance to say good-bye to old favourites like Capt. Gray . . . good old Halder . . . both teams will be practising medicine, not football . . . Shukun, Cam MacLachlan, Bill Beatty, Rogh and Isbister, all will be playing their last game wearing the Blue and White.

I OFFER YOU CONGRATULATIONS

The time of reckoning has come . . . The season closes and Varsity for the first time in a long time has missed the play-off position. Unfortunately the Blue team were struck by the injury bug early in the season and upset the predictions of all the experts in the country including yours truly. Coach Stevens and the gang should be congratulated for going in there without the main springs of their machine and trying all the time to make good these predictions. The best player in intercollegiate football was lost before the season started. The best secondary man and hardest tackle in the league was next to go. Budie MacDonald, easily the greatest long distance forward passer, was next to go. Budie MacDonald, easily the greatest long distance forward passer, was next to go. So like a tiger that lost its teeth, Varsity played this season in one of the best round-out groups in many a year. Every team was strong with no breathers in between, as in former years. So, speaking for the spectators, thanks for a most enjoyable season of spectating, Big Blue Team!

Accurate long shots plus superior team play accounted for St. Mike's win over Household Science last night. The Saints quickly built up a substantial lead in the first half, and despite their game rally in the second half, the girls from Household Science could not overcome this lead. When the whistle blew at the end of the game the Household Science were really playing their best. Jean Clarke, star centre, played well, and Peggy Arnold turned in an effective game for the losers. St. Mike's had a distinct advantage in height, which showed to advantage both in the toss-ups and in intercepting passes.

We wonder who the two St. Mike's eds were, who turned up last night to watch St. Mike's and Household Science play. The boys were enthusiastic yet decidedly silent onlookers and we only hope the feminine attendance did not quench their school spirit.

Although as yet unofficial, the latest swimming news is that the intercollegiate meet will be held at Queen's University on Feb. 2nd. The intercollegiate will be held in March. Generally speaking those who place first and second in the intercollegiate naturally are eligible for the intercollegiate team, but due to the fact that Queen's wish to have the meet early, a team will have to be chosen from those who wish to try out their speed at L.M. pool. Any girls interested in getting their senior "T", if they care to come down and test their speed and diving, have a very good chance of making the team.

Vic Mrs. displayed fine teamwork last night in defeating Physiotherapy. Individual honours go to Mary Casson for her work in guarding Jean Atkinson, stellar player of Physios. Jean was not able to get more than three points in the whole game, which is indicative of Mary's fine guarding. Physios seemed rather careless in their play and played a rough, loose, game which it would be advisable for them to change.

Varsity Soccer Teams Play in Title Tilts

Seniors Meet Western at Stadium Preceding Rugby Game

INTERMEDIATES ON SPOT

Intercollegiate soccer comes under the full glare of the sports spotlight tomorrow afternoon as the seniors and intermediates engage Western in two games that will decide the 1938 group champions.

For the first time this year the blue and white senior soccer squad will perform at Varsity Stadium. The crucial encounter is scheduled to begin at 12.30 sharp so as to allow plenty of time to complete the two forty-five minute halves before the Toronto-Queen's tilt. This means that all the local fans who arrive by one o'clock, at which time the Stadium gates open, will see most of what promises to be the best soccer match of the year—and there have been some excellent ones up to date.

No injuries of any consequence are reported on either side and the stage is ready for this, the last game of the season. The set-up is perfect. Both teams have lost but one game each, Western's reverse being at the hands of the U. of T. representatives during the first half of the schedule, and Varsity's loss having been an unfortunate default to McMaster. Thus the winner tomorrow captures the group leadership and automatically the division championship.

The intermediate tussle is slated for 2.15 and will take place on the front campus. In this minor group Toronto and O.A.C. are tied in points but the Aggies have the inside track on the winner's laurels by virtue of a three-goal advantage on the season's scoring. Hence Toronto must bang the ball at a machine-gun pace on the Western goal and try to net three more points against the London representatives than Guelph does against McMaster.

that MacDonald would be able to play as a farewell gesture to his university rugby career, but his ankle is not in shape and it was not considered worth while taking any chances. Playing their last game for the Blue and White will be Cam Gray, Ted Jarvis, Ben Shukun, Jack Holden, Cam MacLachlan, Al Beatty, Bill Rogin, and Bill Beatty.

On the Queen's line-up will be several old and many new faces. Those previously viewed in Varsity Stadium are Stollery, Pithouskie, and Annan, among others. But missing will be the familiar figures of Munro and Thornton, who have spoiled many a game for Varsity rooters. But Ted Reeve has come up with two new satellites in the persons of Joe Turner and Jack Brown. The latter is said to have outlicked Herb Westman when they appeared on opposite sides of the line of scrimmage.

"Country Bride" scored a terrific hit overnight in the Soviet theatres. American audiences have quickly taken to its gaiety and its tunes, the latter by the Isaac Dunayevsky who did the score for "Beethoven Concerto" and other successes.

Mr. Kaltenborn traced the growth of Hitler's power in Europe directly to the unopposed Japanese aggression in Manchuria in 1931. He claimed that the fact that Japan was allowed to get away with the aggression wrecked the principles upon which the League of Nations was founded and paved the way for the advance of the totalitarian powers.

This advance of the dictator states paved the way for the German occupation of Austria, which, according to the speaker, even Hitler regretted while it was going on. This led directly into the situation in the Sudetenland.

"The Sudeten problem becomes a European problem not of itself, but because of German propaganda efforts," he told the audience. "Runciman could have settled the problem, but, according to his own reports, the negotiations were made useless by 'incidents'."

Come what may, the Tricolour can be counted on to put up a good game and one which will be well worth watching.

McGill Victorious in Intercollegiate Harrier

Cooke Leads Red Team Over High Park Course

Blues Wind up Season By Victory Over Gaels

Varsity, O.A.C., and R.M.C.

Saturday

NEW RECORD SET

Led by Lloyd Cooke, fleet half-miler, miler and distance man for McGill, the Red Harriers trounced Varsity, O.A.C., and R.M.C., on the High Park course, Saturday morning, to retain the intercollegiate title for the third year in a row. Taking over the pace after the first mile the dusky speedster glided over the hilly course to finish well in the lead in the new record time of 27 minutes 32.5 seconds. The former record was set by Bill Kibbleshaw three years ago.

O.A.C. pulled a surprise by finishing in second place after McGill, while R.M.C. placed fourth. Second man in was Young for the Aggies; Todd was third for Montreal; Hogg first man for Varsity, slipped in after a tough fight in fourth position, while O.A.C. nabbed off fifth place. Cowan, McGill miler, placed sixth, with two more Morreycellers and another Farmer behind him, before Forrest crossed over the line, second man for Varsity. The first R.M.C. man across the tape was in 14th place.

This was the worst defeat the Blues have suffered in many years. Both Oave Crichton and Finlayson were ineligible, or Hec Phillips' team would have been considerably strengthened. The McGill cross-country men defeated Oarmouth in a dual meet two weeks ago, and plan to run in New York in the near future.

TELLS OF WORK WITH ABORIGINES

"Anthropology and Human Behaviour" was the subject of the lecture given Saturday night in Convocation Hall by Dr. Clark Wissler, curator-in-chief of the Department of Anthropology at the American Museum of Natural History, New York.

The speaker told several stories of his field work among the American Indians, especially those in western Canada. A genius is considered by the Indians to be a lucky man to whom inspiration is given by a higher power. Dr. Wissler remarked that progress can be made in the study of human behaviour by those who study savages as well as those who study civilization.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Roulay: Two tragedies struck at this northern mining town over the weekend. At least seven persons died in a hotel fire early Saturday which swept the town's business section. Six were drowned last night when an automobile dropped from a ferry dock.

BLUE SOCCERITES WIN DOUBLE VICTORY

Seniors Win Division Championship by Defeating Western, 3-1

Varsity's soccer squads ended the season's schedule Saturday afternoon with a double victory over Western. Up at the Stadium the seniors played in a preliminary to the rugby game and captured the division championship by romping off with a 3-1 victory, whilst the intermediates fought it out on the front campus and kalsomined the Londonites 1-0.

Undoubtedly the class of the league, Toronto's senior eleven fully deserved the season's honours. Backed up by a dependable half-line and paced front by a well-trained forward five, the Blue team spotted Western an early goal by Oliver and came right back in no uncertain manner to score three pretty points.

Although the intermediates held an advantage in play during most of the game, they could only cash in on one goal, that being netted in the second half by Art Boyd. Unless arrangements are made with O.A.C. for a play-off, the intermediates are through for the season, although undefeated.

Seniors—

Toronto: Ward, Powell, Muchin, Thomson, Conway, Fraser, Honeyman, Dadds, Rutherford, Mullett, Sills, McDonald.

Intermediates—

Toronto: Kane, Townsend, Johnson, Simmonds, Abbott, Menzies, Boyd, Small, Errington, Thompson, Antoni.

Western: Girvin, Ure, Harris, McKeller, McCagan, Bass, Nesbitt, Sherwin, Hillen, Wallace, Smith, Keyes, Dickinson.

Dents To Oppose S.P.S. In Semi-Final Game For Muloek Cup

The regular schedule in the inter-faculty football loop was concluded on Friday afternoon as Oents tied with Trinity to enter the third bracket of the Muloek Cup playoff series, along with Senior Meds and Junior S.P.S. Following the game, dates were announced for a straight elimination series, which will determine this year's winner of the Muloek Cup.

Dents will oppose Junior School in the first clash, which will take place Wednesday afternoon, November 18, at three o'clock. The winner of this contest will enter the Muloek Cup final against Senior Meds. This game will be staged on Friday, November 18 at two-thirty. Both games will be played in Varsity Stadium. The officials will be Ted Jarvis, referee; Cam Gray, umpire, and Bert Holman, head linesman.

STUDENTS HONOUR GREAT WAR DEAD REMEMBRANCE DAY

President Cody Leads Prayer for Fallen at Armistice Service

MATTHEWS ATTENOS

Hundreds of students stood bareheaded in honour of the war dead at the Armistice service Friday morning, in front of the Memorial Tower of Hart House.

The service was honoured by the presence of Lieutenant-Governor Hon. Albert Matthews, who, with President H. J. Cody, inspected a guard of honour from the University of Toronto contingent of the C.O.T.C., under the command of Major Wilson.

A memorial prayer was said by Dr. Cody to honour those fallen during the Great War. The singing of "O God Our Help in Ages Past", was led by members of the Hart House Glee Club.

Students filled the roadway and the embankment beside University College, while many watched from the windows of Hart House.

At eleven o'clock Major Wilson drew the Guard of Honour to attention for the observance of the two-minute silence. At the conclusion of the silence, the Last Post was sounded.

Following the service a carillon recital was given by J. Leland Richardson.

VICTORIA MUSICIANS PLAN COMIC OPERA

Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pinafore" to be Presented by Music Club

Under the capable leadership of Mr. T. J. Crawford, Victoria Music Club will again favour Gilbert and Sullivan, this year's choice being the H.M.S. Pinafore. The opera will take place the week of January 10th, with four performances.

Principal as well as minor roles have almost all been chosen. The heroine, Josephine, will be played by Peggy Evoy. Vera Argament portrays Buttercup. Both girls are in first year, and much is expected of them. As yet no suitable tenor has turned up for the role of hero, but many will be happy to hear that John Bain will be Captain Corcoran.

Sorrow Prevails As Rugby Ends Co-Eds Start Back To Library

Discussion of the weather took predominance over the game during the first few minutes of play on Saturday.

A shower of chilling rain recalled the Montreal week-end to some who turned up coat collars and declared themselves resigned to anything. In one section, however, a co-ed's umbrella was seen opening and a group of boys rushed for shelter. All but the lucky first six then sat around and shouted, "Put it down—can't see."

Almost greater joy was displayed by Varsity when the Western triumph over McGill was announced, than over their own victory. This was reported

CAMBRIDGE OFFERS RESEARCH AWARD

Christ's College Announces Research Studentship to Graduates

An appointment to a Research Studentship will be made at the end of July, 1939, at Christ's College, Cambridge.

Candidates must be men who will have graduated before 1 October, 1939, at some university other than Cambridge, and who have not commenced residence in Cambridge at the time of election. They must have been born not earlier than 1 October, 1913. Preference will be given to those who will by then have already devoted at least a year to research. Every candidate must declare that he intends, if elected, to proceed to the degree of Ph.D. in the University of Cambridge, and the student either before or shortly after appointment must obtain permission to enter the university as a research student. Tenure of the studentship is conditional on this permission, and its continuation on diligence in the prosecution of the research. The studentship will be normally held for two years, but it may be prolonged for a third year in exceptional circumstances. It is of annual value not exceeding £200, and will be paid quarterly. It may be held in conjunction with other emoluments, but the latter, and the student's private means, will be taken into account in fixing the amount which the student will receive.

THEOLOGICAL STUDENTS TO HOLD FIRST MEETING

"The Church and the Ministry" is the subject of papers to be presented by students of Trinity and Emmanuel at the first meeting of the Theological College Union in Wycliffe College this evening.

This year the discussions relate to the differences which exist among various church bodies on the question of the Ministry, the Sacraments, and the Word.

Co-Eds say they are sorry to see the end of the season for several reasons. The game itself is enthralling and was particularly so for those few freshettes who had never seen a game of rugby before.

However, the girls do not feel at a loss as to what to do with future Saturday afternoons. An increase in theatre attendance is indicated but also a back to the library movement. And then comes the suggestion, "Christmas shopping—why not do it early?"

CHURCH IN ORIENT LAUDED BY HOOVER

Student Secretary of Y.M.C.A. Tells of Journey through China and Japan

"The greatness of the fellowship of the Christian Church is the impressive thing in the Far Eastern situation," said Lyman Hoover, Student Secretary of the International Y.M.C.A., from Shanghai, preaching at the University Service in Convocation Hall, Sunday morning.

The preacher, who has just returned from a 12,000 mile journey through China, Japan, Manchukuo and Russia, illustrated this from his stay in Tokio at the invitation of Japanese Christians. As he had heard Japan he had been puzzled about his reception, but was cordially received. Eating with a group of students in a cafe, one said, "We want you to take a message for us to the students of China. Tell them we don't hate them and are trying to find a way to join hands with them, but it is difficult. We would like some Chinese

WESTERN VICTORS OVER M'GILL, 16-5

Mustangs Force Play-off by Ending McGill Winning Streak

The mighty McGill machine, which swept through its first five games without a reverse, finally met defeat on Saturday afternoon in London at the hands of Western Mustangs. Paced by the inspired performances of Jimmy Farmer and Clem Faust, the Mustangs turned in an inspired showing all round and trounced the Redmen 16-5 to force a play-off in the college loop.

Herbie Westman gave McGill a 1-0 lead in the first quarter with a mammoth punt, and the 6,000 fans in attendance, a record crowd for the J. W. Little Memorial Stadium, settled down in anticipation of a Western defeat. However, Jimmy Farmer, chunky half-back from Windsor, Ontario, changed their jitters to cheers when he played over the McGill line from one yard out to put Mustangs in the lead, and the fighting gridders from the City-by-the-Thames never relinquished that margin.

Main cogs in the Western triumph were Farmer, Faust, Benson, Ojilant and Lyn Thompson. Jack Kennedy, back in the line-up after a long rest, also went well on the half-line. Alf Hurley, clever signal-caller, was hurt in the first quarter tackling Kiefer of McGill and retired in favour of Brian Casey, veteran of many grid wars. Roy Kent, Mustang outside wing, also retired from the contest in the first session.

Last Rugby Game of Season Results in 13-10 Win for Local Squad

TORONTO QUARTETTE STAR

By Alan Harry

Because they gave their best football display of the season, because their front wall troops turned in a standout effort going both ways, and because they uncovered a booter who could outshoot the rival kicker, Varsity Blues wound up their 1938 grid activities with a 13-10 victory over Queen's at Varsity Stadium Saturday afternoon. The triumph gave Varsity three for six on the season and plummeted the Revereans into the cellar with six straight losses.

Pass master Charlie Prince, whose patches were going straight as a string to their targets, and whose soaring spirals gave Varsity an edge in the kicking exchanges; Speedball Louis Somers, who reeled off three long runs in a performance that had some of that thrilling electric quality which brings a crowd to its feet; Frankie Sirdevan, who twice crashed the Queen's kick formation; and Norm Beattie, veteran outside, who cashed one of Sirdevan's efforts for a major score, played outstanding roles in earning Varsity's third win of the college schedule in a spotty, sometimes spectacular football show.

LIBERALS APPROVE CAMPUS RESOLUTION

Adoption of Undersecretaryships Favoured by Twentieth Century Club

A resolution favouring "the immediate adoption by the Dominion government of a system of undersecretaryships similar to that now in effect in Great Britain", sponsored by the University of Toronto Liberal Club, met with almost unanimous approval of the Twentieth Century Liberal Association of Ontario in its annual convention at the King Edward Hotel on Saturday.

M. R. Dale, Graduate Studies, in moving the resolution, favoured the plan as leading to "greater efficiency for good government in Canada". It would provide assistants to cabinet ministers, a training ground for prospective ministers, and satisfy local representation in the administration, he said.

A mild crisis developed in the meeting when members of the University club questioned the power of the resolutions committee to rule out three other resolutions of the club. Howard McLaughlin, IV, U.C. president, charged that only "innocuous" resolutions had been accepted. "This convention must not be a rubber stamp for anybody," he said.

DR. CODY TO DELIVER SERIES OF LECTURES IN NEW BRUNSWICK

President H. J. Cody is leaving on Wednesday for Mt. Allison University, Sackville, New Brunswick, to deliver three lectures under the Josiah Wood foundation.

The President will discuss in the three lectures the citizen's relationship to the university, to the Dominion and to the Empire.

What a Movement?

Thousands of Ontario music-lovers were enraged yesterday afternoon when the New York Philharmonic's weekly concert was cut short in order that the local station could carry a commercial program for children.

Barbirolli was conducting a superb performance of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, and was part way through the second last movement, when the music petered out and a voice informed one and all that the makers of somebody's dolls was about to present the first of a series of programs for the kiddies. Then an appalling wail announced that some child prodigy was trying to sing. Several thousand people tore their hair.

The Philharmonic's broadcasts have been running for eight years, and during that time have been generally considered the best program on the air. Judging from the few fleeting seconds that we could stand of the kids' broadcast, it is probably the worst that has ever been given, or ever will be. And yet it has to sell dolls during the Seventh Symphony. And what's worse, it will continue to ruin great music until Christmas.

Surely CFRB is not so dull as to think this is good business! By reducing the program to one of fifteen minutes' duration the Philharmonic would be able to finish in peace.

Despite the fact that the Broadcasting Corporation tries to justify its existence by carrying the program on its nation-wide hook-up, neither of its local stations runs the program. And we still pay $2.50 for the privilege of being run by such an efficient, wide-awake, far-seeing organization. Furthermore—where's the good old Magic Key gone?

"Father of All Turks"

A man who could face realities was Mustapha Kemal, renamed Kemal Ataturk, the "Father of all Turks". Realizing what makes for national progress and prestige in the twentieth century he spent the last fifteen years turning the face of Turkey from East to West. A despot of the Fascist variety. Ataturk leaves to his people a legacy unmatched by any other twentieth century ruler in material, social, and educational accomplishments. Not hankering after the traditional superstition of the Moslem faith, Ataturk had no sentimental regrets for the passing of the exotic East.

The abolition of the veil, the fez, and the institution of polygamy, and the substitution of civil, criminal, and commercial codes of law copied from Western models were significant among his reforms. He built up a modern mechanized army, thereby adding to Turkey's prestige among the European powers. His government doubled the country's railroad mileage, started sugar and textile factories, and coal and iron industries, to make Turkey more self-sufficient. He ordered electrification and reforestation programs and began to build a merchant marine. His policy of "Turkey for the Turks" largely eliminated foreign capital, dominant during the Sultan's time.

However alarming Ataturk's policy may have been to neighbour nations, there can be no doubt of its benefits to Turkey herself. He transformed her from a straggling group of disunited factions to a flourishing united state.

With the passing of Ataturk dies a modern Machiavelli. Following a policy of expediency combined with efficiency he became one of the foremost of the post-war dictators.

Speaking of Sport

The football season is over. Those glamorous Saturday afternoons of swaggering, rollicking bands and alluring drum-majorettes, of good football and gaily-dressed crowds, are finished, as far as Varsity is concerned, until next October. Last Saturday against Queen's a half-dozen Varsity stars, whose names have rung across the Bloor Street gridiron these many years, played their last game of football and departed from the scene of their grid triumphs with, perhaps, many a sorrowful backward glance. The Varsity Stadium, after the last straggling spectator had left late Saturday, must have had a similar empty, nostalgic quality.

It is true that something distinctly a part of University life ended on Saturday afternoon. And yet, while nourishing this half-regretful attitude to the departed football season, we should preserve a forward-looking, expectant attitude of the sports that lie in the future. For the winter sports calendar of the University of Toronto is an extensive and varied one. Senior and junior hockey, senior and intermediate basketball, intercollegiate boxing, wrestling and fencing, along with the extensive itinerary of interfaculty athletics, are some of the activities that lie in store for the sports fan. Senior hockey means exciting winter afternoons at Varsity Arena, as teams from McGill and Queen's, and from American universities such as Harvard and Yale invade Toronto for games with the Blues. Basketball, coupled with boxing, wrestling and fencing, and other indoor pastimes, signify entertaining evenings in Hart House, topped off with the inevitable dance.

Last year the Saturday evening sports program at Hart House, which on one occasion featured a three-ring circus, proved exceedingly popular. This year dates have been made with outstanding American universities, whose visits should pack Hart House to the eaves. The senior hockey team has lined up a date-book with tentative trips to Loyola, California, to the University of Washington in Seattle, and other American schools of learning. The junior hockey team, which plays its away games at Maple Leaf Gardens, failed to attract much attention last year, but the promise of an improved team this year, plus the uptrend in interest in junior O.H.A. hockey this year, augurs increased attendance at these games.

For the executive-minded, there are many positions open for managers of the various interfaculty teams. In short, if you are interested in sport, you can easily find an opening in some capacity, either as an executive, a participant, or a spectator.

Hart House Quartet

Truth compels us to report that the Hart House Quartet failed appreciably to come up to its own standard in its second concert Saturday night; insufficient preparation, over-confidence, and carelessness may all have helped to produce this surprising lapse; the two more tangible of these possibilities were perceptible at different times, but whatever the cause past performance has shown that such an occurrence is unnecessary and therefore inexcusable.

In the Beethoven and Smetana quartets there was an unpleasant stridency of tone in the forte passages and an occasional tendency to scramble in rapid work; the usual intimate reciprocity of interpretation shown by these players was scarcely ever apparent. In short, almost every quality which distinguishes the group was impaired, at least part of the time.

But even on its off-nights the Hart House Quartet is still the best source of chamber-music in Toronto, so the evening was not a total loss; the slow movements of the two works mentioned above (Beethoven E flat and Smetana Aus meinem Leben), and the three Idylls by Frank Bridge were quite up to par—so much so that, by contrast, the rest of the program may have appeared worse than it was. The Bridge music is no challenge to the intellect, but it is pleasant, modern English, contemplative writing, well suited to the string quartet medium. Smetana's Aus meinem Leben, besides being eminently acceptable to listen to, achieves the remarkable distinction of following with some docility the program given for it by the composer.

Our complaints about the concert are made more in anger than in sorrow; we expected better and we

If we may be allowed a non sequitur, this seems as good a time as any to express our growing admiration for the first violinist, James Levey, whose style is comparable to that of Heifetz in purity. Some appear to consider it frigid, but his general personality seems to us an adequate compensation for any such tendency. Herbert Cason

Hollywood Theatre

The French cinema offering at the Hollywood Theatre Saturday morning, Sept Hommes et Une Femme, was just another mildly amusing comedy. Really the only bright spot was the performance of Fernand Gravet, who deserved a better fate than his in this picture. Vera Korene as the wealthy widow choosing a husband from among seven suitors, seemed far from being a very desirable prize. Her final choosing of Gravet, playing the part of a faithful friend, certainly does not come as a surprise because it would be hard to imagine a choice of one of the seven. (Continued on page 4)

THE VISITATION OF 1854
It fell about the Whitenside
A gale was raging sore
When out of the night (oh terrible sight)
Came a ghostly coach and four.
The driver was a red Walloon
The steeds were Unicorns
The occupants were maiden aunts
Who sported devils' horns.

They drove around the campus
They circled it three times
And then they alit and proceeded to flit
To the sound of the Hart House chimes.

The small observatory
Was sitting close at hand
And thither they did make their way
And enter hand in hand.

The door closed tight behind them
A light appeared inside
A green light too, which turned to blue
As the turning of a tide.

Most recent blow to the rulers in feminine swimming circles is the upturned hair "do". It seems that they just can't interest the co-eds in water while they have the precarious curls to maintain. After the rain Saturday, they can leave a sign of relief because from all appearances disgusted Varsity co-eds decided to favour the long bob again. Not that they had much say in the matter.

Saturday marked our last chance to pick up the odd shovels via the parking lot route. Every Saturday this fall various members of the Women's Athletic Society have taken turns doing this volunteer work at their two parking areas at the stadium. The money thus obtained is all turned over to the Women's Athletic Building Fund. To the four heroines who braved the elements last Saturday until the game was well under way, the Directorate extends its sincere thanks.

By degrees we are learning more about the various intercollegiate basketball prospects. We are also becoming much more wary about making predictions. However, at great risk to personal safety, we dare to predict that tonight Nurses will take Household Science; St. Mike's will trounce the Medettes; U.C. Srs. will defeat Vic Frosh; while Vic Srs. should edge out the Frosh from St. Hilda's—but your guess is as good as ours.

Back Campus Sports Review

True to the prediction of the "Back Campus Sports Review" of November third, Dents ousted Trinity for the privilege of playing in the Mulock Cup series Friday afternoon in a thrilling game, ending in darkness with a scoreless tie.

The first quarter revealed the evenly matched strength of the two lines. The second quarter, packed with fumbles, recoveries and intercepting, saw a continuation of the scoreless game. Smith, plunger for Dents, was taken off the field with a dislocated shoulder.

In the third, play went from end to end, propelled by the big boot of Hawend. The fourth quarter was played with darkness deepening. Bitten back, Dents recovered their own kick and maintained the advantage until the final whistle.

Dents: Hawley, Smith, Campbell, Parrott, Hutchinson, Neisfy, Coleman, Humenjak, Singer, Hawton, McKie; subs: Racher, Kuyik, Weicher, Reynolds, Dixon.

Trinity: Wright, Canfield, Croshie, Casson, Whitehall, Sparkham, Dunlop, Pex, J. Snyder, Goss, Drummond, McMichael, McAdam, Lindsay, Galloway, Hussey; subs: P. Snyder, Harris, Res, Robertson.

URGES LESS INTEREST IN MATERIAL AFFAIRS

That people should turn from the material to the spiritual, and that they should regard wealth as sometimes a hindrance and an encumbrance, not always a blessing, was the view expressed by Dr. Edith Gordon in her Bible Class on Sunday afternoon.

In her talk, she told of the dissatisfied young man and his question: "Good Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" She stressed the fact that Christ met him on his own material ground, and set him the task of selling all his goods and giving the proceeds to the poor. Dr. Gordon believed that if the task had been harder, but one through which he might have won renown, the young man would not have hesitated to do it.

students to come to our conferences, but we realize that if we sent them an invitation the authorities in certain areas might take it as a command and cause trouble if they could not come. We hope you can find a way of fellowship that will not embarrass them."

When such a message was delivered to Central China the S.C.M. at the government of Hunan replied that they would set aside a certain day for prayer for peace and understanding and invited the Japanese to observe the same. Not only that, but students in many parts of the world kept this special day.

Most of these Oriental students have not been raised in the environment of the Church, but are new to the faith and yet they will not let their Christianity be absorbed in militaristic nationalism, but are trying to be Christian more sincerely.

Speaking of Sport

GOODBYE . . . A THOUSAND GOODBYES!

An excellent crowd turned out to bid farewell to the gridiron favourites of Toronto University in spite of a dull, windy day last Saturday. It was goodbye to seven members of the Big Blue team, in a game, which if it would have been a championship game, would have had everyone on their feet for the entire game, but seeing it was only a league game, lacked the full vocal support of both student sections.

Varsity versus Queen's. Both teams played sparkling football and again proved that the best game of the year is the famous Queen's-Varsity foud. The Big Blue team boomed with all its guns. All their weapons of attack scored direct hits on the Tricolour line. The aerial attack of Varsity had the crowd wondering where this forceful weapon was hidden all season. The kicking and running of the backfield had the entire press box wondering whether this was the same team that played the Redmen the previous week. But the most surprising feature of Saturday's contest was the working of the line. The line was tackling, smashing, blocking kicks and in general making Paitowski and Stollery's lives miserable for them.

It was goodbye to seven old favourites on the Big Blue team. Yet as these players who had given all for years, who had played in crucial games, in rain, in snow, and even in heat, passed out of the picture unnoticed, two new players gained their spurs. Charlie Prince, ex-Vaughan Road star, slight, blond halfback, played one of the finest football performances we've seen in the Blue Bowl in years. His passing was direct to the man, and giving him time to get in the clear. His kicking was excellent, getting distance on each kick, hooking the corners and bouncing out. His quick thinking on returning kicks at opportune moments gained much yardage for the Blue team. His catching and running was steady and reliable. He clearly established himself as a crowd favourite, on his brilliant performance last Saturday.

Little Lou Somers, shifty (note A. Harvey) running halfback, combined with Bonnie Prince Charlie to do some fine running for the Blue team. For the first time in the current season the ball finally came out on an extension to the last man, who was Louie, "Mercury personified." His runs around the ends were breath taking. He clipped off two beautiful runs around the end which had everybody out of their seat (even the assistant sports editor. His catching and run-backs were only fair but Queen's ensured themselves that Little Louie wouldn't get away by boxing him in repeatedly.

Queen's played hard, clean football throughout the game. It was one of the best games of this season. It was the cleanest Queen's-Varsity game that we have had the good fortune to see. Few penalties and hard tackling featured this game. It was Canadian football at its best, and at its best it gave the few American spectators who had the opportunity to see this game, a good idea of what the Canadian game was like. It was three rouges (single points), that decided the game, a thing that is absent in the American game.

WESTERN WON . . . WOW!

Well, the invincible McGill team were handed a defeat by the ever-trying Westerners. A perfect Redmen record was ruined in a final game which incidentally forces a play-off and creates the possibility of the Mustangs capturing their first title in the history of intercollegiate football.

The Western gang of Farmer, Hurley, Casey, Faust and Thompson went riot and outscored the Redmen, who in all fairness were weakened by injuries in this contest. The game must have been a lulu to watch and points towards an interesting play-down as the Queen's-Varsity engagements were in other years. Rugby enthusiasts are going to see a real battle when the Redmen face the Mustangs for the Yates Cup in Montreal.

FOOTBALL EXPERTS NOTE

The sports department is going to pick an intercollegiate all-star team this week. Whoever we pick, we always get a kick (note internal rhyme) about this half should be on, this half shouldn't, etc. So as to make it as democratic as we can we're going to ask all those who are interested in selecting a team to pick one and let us have it before Wednesday, 4 o'clock. Please send your selections to sports editor, Varsity office.

OVER THE NET

The Dentistry volleyball team duplicated the winning ways of their football brethren by trouncing an inexperienced Meds III squad to the tune of 15-3, 9-5, 15-9, in the Hart House gym Saturday morning. It was the only scheduled game of the week-end and gave the Molarmen their second straight win of the season. On the other hand it marked the first time the Medicals had played together and they will likely improve off this effort.

Dentistry: Brown, Posen, Stinson, Gross, Shiger, Danzinger, Mackenzie, Neisfy, Shiger.

Med III: Levitt, Floren, Sacks, Demme, Levy, Freedman, Lane, Levine.

London, Saturday, November 12—

Bill Bryers' entrants in this year's intercollegiate rugby derby failed to break their long string of losses, going down to a 9-7 defeat at the hands of Western Colts in London on Saturday. This clash climaxed an unsuccessful season for both clubs, Western and Toronto finishing third and fourth respectively.

The second quarter started with an aerial attack, a Krol to Guthrie forward moved play to the Varsity 15 yard stripe. A placement kick by Guthrie counted three points more for London's hopefuls and put Western one point behind Varsity. The Blues came back with a thirty yard pass, Plaxton to Bailey. This, coupled with an end run which was good for 20 yards, put Varsity on Western's 20 yard line. A kick by Grosskurth gave Varsity a 6-4 lead at half time.

The second half began with a ninety yard run by Krol of Western after a Varsity kick-off. A forward pass, Krol to Dixon, resulted in a Western touchdown and put the Colts out in front 9-6. At this point Grosskurth started kicking them long and high, only to have Krol run the ball out from behind his touchline twice in succession.

Varsity began the final quarter with play resting 20 yards out from Western's cinder. An attempted placement by Paisley went wide, but counted a point for the Blues, who now found themselves on the small end of a 9-7 score.

Varsity: Irwin, Davey, Bell, Paisley, McIntyre, Bailey, Jarvis, Hodgkiss, Duncan, Webster, Plaxton, Grosskurth, subs: Stampe, Murray, Sweet, Galway, Dunford, Thorn, Wells, Scrivener.

the campaign, reshuffled his deck in an effort to rake in the blue chips. On a revamped backfield Reve started Ken Preston at flying wing and gave Bob Simpson a half-line spot in place of Bob Davis. And it looked in the first few moments as though the cagey Queen's mentor had hit a winning deal, as Jack's kick-off took a wicked hop and Archie Kerr, Tricolour inside, raced up to rescue the loose ball at the Varsity 43. Brown's kick transferred play to the Varsity five. When Cam Gray juggled a snap-out behind his goal-line he was besieged by a swarm of tacklers and forced to concede a safety touch. Varsity got one point back in the second quarter when Georgie Meen rounded Bud Johnston on Prince's kick. A wide pass from Prince to Gray, plus a short sweep to the right by McQuarrie, put Gray in position for a field goal, making the score 4-2 for Varsity. Then it was Queen's turn as Stollery picked up a fumble by Gray at the Varsity 12 and shot over a successful placement from a slight angle to put the Tricolour one up.

With only three minutes to go to the half, the Blues struck again. As Jack Brown prepared to kick from his own 25, Sirdevan broke through to block the kick. The oval did a neat spin in the air, and Norm Beattie, who happened to be passing at the time, snugged the ball happily in his arms and sifted over the last chalk stripe for five points. Cam Gray added the extra point via placement, leaving the half-time total Varsity 10, Queen's 5.

The Tricolour's persistent Mr. Stollery eased Queen's back into the picture in the third quarter, producing an unconverted touchdown to knot the count at 10-10. Nick Patihouki, aggressive centre for the Kingstons, recovered a blocked kick on the locals' 25-yard line. A no-wards penalty and a couple of plunges moved play to the 5-yard line. From here it was no trick for Stollery to hurdle over for a try, which went unconverted.

In the final session Brown kept gunning for singles in a futile attempt to give Queen's the verdict, but Varsity turned up a hole card in the person of Charlie Prince, who trumped Brown's efforts' with lofty, lengthy punts. On two occasions, Prince returned Brown's boots, one of the shots going for a point. Two other singles from the boot of Charlie Prince completed scoring in this chapter, and the final whistle blew with the score Varsity 13, Queen's 10.

Besides the quartet of Somers, Prince, Sirdevan and Beattie, Rowland, Meen, MacLachlan and McQuarrie also went well for the Blues.

Varsity: Scott, Gray, Somers, Rowland, Prince, McMillan, Schwenger, Meen, Sirdevan, MacLachlan, Holden, Jarvis; subs, Ross, N. Beattie, W. Beattie, McQuarrie, Ishister, Shuken, Owen, Rogin.

Queen's: Preston, Brown, Stollery, Johnston, Simpson, Patihouki, Kerr, Conlin, Jack, Sprague, Carson, Edwards; subs: Carry, Clarke, Bishop, Norman, Turner, McGill, Mulvihill, Jones.

Friday Afternoon Recital

With three well chosen groups of songs Reginald Heal presented a most interesting recital in Hart House Friday afternoon. Weldon Kilburn, who so ably assisted at the piano, added much to the enjoyment of the program.

Mr. Heal's singing is very pleasant and he possesses an ability to enunciate the words of a song which, alas, too many singers never take the trouble to do. This was clearly evident in his singing of Orpheus with his Lute, a melodious song by Linley.

His last group, a trio of romantic love songs, were especially well received. Bridge's Love Went A-Riding, a robust song full of exuberance and gusto, was repeated as the encore.

NICKEL FROM CANADA'S MINES MAKES MINING EQUIPMENT MORE DURABLE

Compare the slow, uncertain methods of hoisting ore from a mine forty years ago with equipment used today. Man's ingenuity and better materials have brought amazing advances.

The modern Nickel Steel skip hoists eleven tons of ore to the surface at 3000 feet a minute. Drills with Nickel Steel parts bite into the ore wall. Ore trains with Nickel Alloy parts and operated by Nickel Iron Alkaline batteries haul the ore to the hoists.

And above ground the ore is broken in mighty crushers of Nickel Steel and Iron, ground in mills lined with abrasion resisting Nickel Iron. From ore to refined metal, Nickel Alloys are used to stand up under the terrific strains, stresses and abrasive conditions.

Mines the world over operate more economically; all branches of industry carry on more efficiently, because of the superior qualities of Nickel Alloys.

And because Nickel Alloys perform better longer, the demand for Nickel in peaceful industry continues to grow. Every Canadian share in the wealth the Nickel industry brings to Canada.

RETURN OF COLONIES TO NAZIS FAVOURED AT VICTORIA DEBATE

Hitler Described by Some as "Miracle of Bluff" and
"Madman"

The motion "Resolved that this house is in favour of restoration to Germany of her pre-war colonies," was upheld by a small majority in a Victoria College debate last night.

Dudley Bristow, as leader of the affirmative, felt it was unchristian to accept the Treaty of Versailles which Greta Riddell and Geoffrey Dale, on the negative, justified. Bristow's colleague, Genevieve Taylor, supported him with an appeal to British justice.

The speakers from the floor referred to Hitler as a "miracle of bluff" and a "madman with an empty revolver". The members on the opposite side of the question agreed to deny emotionalism in favour of "grim realities".

Professor E. A. Havlock, honorary president, in his remarks, ascribed the Nazi regime to a "semi-civilized clique" which would inevitably make colonization and exploitation go hand in hand.

MORRIS AND BOOTH TO ADDRESS WOMEN

Whether or not the students of this university will agree with the policies of the Communist party more than they did with those set forth by Adrian Arcand last week is a question which may be answered at the S.C.M. symposium on "Christianity and Communism" to be held in the Women's Union Theatre at 1.30 Tuesday.

Leslie Morris, a member of the executive committee of the Communist party, and Raymond Booth, secretary of the Toronto Society of Friends, will be the speakers. Their talks will probably follow the same pattern as last week's, parallel statements of an analysis of society, why it should be changed, and in what way.

WOODSIDE SPEAKS TO AVUKAH SOCIETY ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Wilson Woodside, Canadian writer on foreign affairs, will address the Avukah Society's second general meeting tonight at the Women's Union. Mr. Woodside will speak on the topic, "After Munich, What?"

Tonight's speaker has been writing his monthly articles for the Canadian Magazine for several years. This spring he visited Europe, and saw the recent crisis approaching.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

London: Chamberlain told the House of Commons that the people of Great Britain sympathized with the Jews in Germany, and disclosed that the Government had placed a strong complaint against Nazi press attacks on certain British leaders.

Berlin: Detailed regulations to ostracize the Jews have been drafted by expert German cabinet ministers, confirming Germany's anti-Semitic campaign.

Ottawa: Dr. R. J. Manion was elected to the Dominion House of Commons in the by-election today. Of the two other by-elections, Homuth, a Conservative, won by a large margin, and early returns from Brandon showed a liberal in the lead.

RUGBY WINNERS TO MEET IN FINALS

Dents, Jr. S.P.S., Sr. Meds.
Are Interfaculty Rugby
Group Champions

By Bruce Smith
Once again the good ship "Interfaculty Rugby" has almost completed its season's voyage and, with its decks cleared for play-off action, turns its prow towards Mulock Day.

Dents, Jr. S.P.S. and Sr. Meds. are the three group winners who will meet in the championship tussle at Varsity Stadium this week. Noticeable by their absence from the money series this year are those perennial finalists from Victoria, who were gently persecuted by the Junior Engineers and U.C. that the time had come. Likewise St. Mike's double blue men are on the outside looking in, having been unfortunately noticed to land in the same group as Sr. Meds.

Thus, as in senior intercollegiate rugby, the playoffs bring together some new names who were previously also-rans. On Wednesday at 3.00 the molar-men and Schoolmen meet to decide which twelve will run up against the Medicos in the finals to be played on Friday at 2.30. If university students had any money they might put it on S.P.S. in that semi-final game on the strength of a slight superiority in the kicking department, thanks to dependable Ron Fugler, an all-round good.

TAYLOR DISCUSSES SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Prof. Griffith Taylor of the Department of Geography, will address the Social Problems Club tonight at 8.00 o'clock in the Women's Union, on "Race and Nation in Europe".

Prof. Taylor, author of such works as "Environment, Race and Migration", "With Scott—the Silver Lining", is an eminent authority on his subject. In Cambridge, this year, he received the honour of President of the Geographical Section for the Advancement of Science.

This summer, while travelling in Fascist Italy, he was imprisoned for five hours on a charge of sketching in a fortified area. A letter of introduction, prepared by President Cody, secured ultimately his release. He had a similar experience some five or six years ago, when assaulted by a police officer with a baton in Yugoslavia, on a charge of spying.

VARSITY BEATS WESTERN IN CHAMPIONSHIP RACE

Varsity's intermediate harrier team won the intercollegiate championship in a close race in London Saturday afternoon. The placing was so close that the fifth man's score had to be counted to break the tie for first place between Western and Toronto.

Varsity's score was 31, London 32, and O.A.C. 34. This is the closest score in any harrier race in recent years. Nick Loutit was first man to complete the five and a half mile course, for Toronto, finishing in second place after London. Fayle placed third for Varsity.

The race started at the football stadium and ended there, after winding over a very rough rolling cross-country course.

Burglar Invades Campus Buildings While Co-eds Sleep

DETECTIVES INVESTIGATE

More than 400 dollars worth of goods was taken from the Alpha Phi sorority house early yesterday morning. A fur coat, and a pearl necklace, the property of Vivian Neil, and seven dollars belonging to the sorority, were stolen from Miss Neil's room about 3.30 in the morning.

Residents of the house were aroused by a scream. Investigation revealed Miss Neil excitedly peering over the staircase at the retreating form of a man.

Later that morning Whitney Hall girls described having seen a brown-suited man trying the bedroom doors on the first floor. At nine a.m. the burglar alarm in the Don's room of Mulock House went off, but was disregarded because it was thought to be an alarm clock. Not till after one o'clock was the loss of three dollars noticed from one of the rooms.

Miss Kilpatrick, resident of the house next to the Alpha Phi house, also reported the theft of 70 dollars from an upstairs room. She explained that she had had the money ready to pay her servants.

Police are patrolling the campus and detectives are investigating the case. The parlour maid in the Women's Union reported having seen a man wandering through the rooms on the first floor. Miss Barber, head dietitian, said the University police and described the man as being thin faced, tight-lipped, fairly short, wearing a brown suit.

The comparative ease with which the thief was able to enter the buildings was attributed in the case of the sorority house to a skeleton key, and in the case of Whitney Hall to the fact that

Jitterbugs Consider Forming Swing Club

Saddened by the untimely demise of Sam Lipin's Big Apple Club, local jitterbugs have decided to form a swing club at Victoria. The idea was born in the romantic atmosphere of a hamburger stand with George Carty and Bruce Harris listening to Artie Shaw force forth on the agony pipe.

The meeting will not be primarily for dancing, but there will be plenty of juice for the rug-cutters at each session. Members will be invited to bring any hot swing records to the meetings and it is hoped that each meeting will end in a terrific jam session provided by enthusiastic cats.

Any allergists who are really hep to the jive will find a spot in the groove. Members of other colleges will be welcomed if they are not ickies, i.e., anti-swingers.

REQUESTS FOR BOOKS SOAR

Records show a 40 per cent increase in the number of books given out at the counter of the main University Library in October, 1938, over the same month last year, according to Miss M. L. Newton, head of the circulation and reference department of the University Library.

She believes this increase may be due to the epidemic which delayed study last year.

"Statistics show that the total number of books given out to students during October, 1938, is approximately 35,000 or an average of about 1,400 a day," said Miss Newton.

LASKI DEMANDS WAR TO FREE HUMANITY

Foresees Ultimate Jeopardy of Traditional Academic Freedom

ADDRESSES STUDENTS

By Arthur J. Benson
Staff Writer for The Varsity
New York, November 9.—"The university should be a place where ideas as such may claim full citizenship," contended Professor Harold J. Laski of the London School of Economics in an address to the American Student Union here tonight, "and students and professors should regard themselves as soldiers in the war for the liberation of humanity."

"With you, as with us, the tradition of academic freedom is in very real jeopardy," he warned further, and pointed out the dangers inherent in a "society in contraction". By way of example he cited the increase in Britain since the Great War of convictions for "free speech", and recent legislation against trade unionism.

Stressing the fact that he had been born into a wealthy family, enjoying all its advantages, Professor Laski voiced the necessity for making such advantages available to all who may profit by them. He praised recent tendencies among students not alone in the social sciences, to do really creative research work, and scored sterile academic theses.

CHEMISTS RELAX AT COFFEE CLUB

Second Year Metallurgists Imbibe Coffee from Laboratory Beakers

Two U.C. co-eds were invited to partake coffee with the metallurgists of second year chemistry yesterday afternoon, and were surprised to find their regular afternoon stimulant, amidst the melody of bunsen burners and radio melodies.

The manager, Pete McCurdy, declared the coffee club ran on an absolutely co-operative no-profit basis. Each student donates ten cents every week for his share of the expenses, and the boys agree that the Demi is always the first one ready with his dime. The cook, Don MacLean, makes extra special coffee, according to the co-eds.

One day, however, an unwashed beaker resulted in a solidified coffee mixture. But now the coffee drinkers suffer from nothing worse than vegetable alkaloid nerves, as they drink their beverage from well-drained beakers.

Coffee is served twice on Mondays and Fridays, and once on Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Control of Armaments Favoured By Students

Registration Card Check

The Registrar of the University is now checking with the College Registrars the Registration Cards of all students in the Faculty of Arts. After the checking is completed changes in these cards will not be permitted unless the Council approves. All students should at once make sure that the information given the Registrar of the University corresponds with that given the College Registrar.

Larger Defense Expenditure Warrants Arsenal, They Believe

MILITARY ATTITUDE

Most students, when questioned as to the form which Canadian armament should take, expressed the view that manufacture for such should be in the hands of a Government Arsenal and controlled by the government regardless of the huge price which such an enterprise would cost. In view of the $16,000,000 increase in the Canadian defense estimate it is assumed that such a program will take place within the near future.

A fourth year Modern History student expressed the view that if Canadian armament was necessary at all, it should take the form of an adequate coastal defense, but he felt this armament program would be in reality nothing more than an expeditionary force to support Britain in a future war, and since the United States would be the first to come to Canada's aid in case of an invasion, there was, from a purely self-interested point of view, no real reason for Canada arming "for protection".

The viewpoint of another Modern History student, P. G. Cornell, III U.C., was that Canadian industry might well benefit from a munition industry publicly owned as well as supplying Britain.

HOOVER DESCRIBES EASTERN SITUATION

Money Sent by Canadians Used for Most Pressing Needs

How 800 students in Shanghai applied for relief when there were only funds available to help 150 was described by Lyman Hoover, international Y.M.C.A. Student Secretary, when he met the Far Eastern Student Relief Committee at the week-end.

The $18,000 raised by Canadian students together with the $30,000 sent from other countries has been used to provide for the most pressing needs of China's hard pressed collegians. In Shanghai only one college is on its own campus. Most of the classes were in crowded office buildings and although the International Settlement is one of the most expensive places in China to live the students could not stay outside as they were marked people. Jammed into dormitories with three bunks they subsist on rice gruel, cold boiled salted peanuts, starchy bread, and very little meat, with perhaps a feed of Ching Nien Hui Fan, the Y

SCHOLARSHIP BILL PROMPTS MEETING

Assembly Meets to Arouse Interest in Bill Proposed for Scholarships

To arouse enthusiasm for a bill proposed by Paul Martin, M.P., calling upon the Federal Government for a national scholarship grant, the Toronto Student Assembly will hold an open meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in Wymilwood.

Martin introduced a bill in the House of Commons whereby the Federal Government should grant $500,000 for matriculation, undergraduate and graduate scholarships. The bill was thrown out because of the apathy of the students towards more scholarships.

The National Scholarship Committee, however, feel a definite need for additional scholarships for needy students. The movement has been taken up in several leading Canadian universities and has received student endorsement.

Further interest is focused on the movement in view of Dr. Cody's recent request for $100,000 from the city of Toronto.

SKIING PICTURES WILL BE SHOWN AT JARVIS COLLEGIATE

With the first snowfall of the season yesterday comes the report from the Ontario Ski Zone Committee of a movie preview of the winter sport to be shown on Thursday, November 17 in Jarvis Street Collegiate auditorium at 8.30 p.m.

Besides coloured slides of Dagmar and Bambi, there will be a two-hour show of new moving pictures on skiing, including skiing in Norway, downhill racing on the Richard Taft Trail in New Hampshire, Dry Skiing Gymnastics from Switzerland, Yosemite Ski School from California, a news reel of 1936 Olympics, and for the first time in Canada the F.I.S. races, in Innsbruck of 1936.

Wanted--A Revolution

Encouraged by the response to an editorial of some ten days ago entitled "Moral Rearmament", we have concluded that on the whole college undergraduates are intensely interested in finding some solution to the deepest problems of their lives. Although with accustomed professorial dispatch, a protest to the editor was launched before the paper had been two hours off the press, since then we have received letters from students as far as Montreal and New York, in agreement with the thoughts expressed.

A McGill student writes, "More and more I am coming to see these days that the moral re-arming of our nation is going to bring back vitality to the whole country. Recently I read an editorial which very clearly pointed out some of the short-comings of a University training which has no more than a curriculum . . . it recognized the tragedy of a fellow leaving college emptied of all his faith and full of questions."

But college does not only ask questions; herein are found the answers also. At no other time in our lives, perhaps, do we look at life with such optimistic idealism . . . we see what is wrong with the world and in our enthusiasm we plan to go out and right those wrongs. We know that the whole world needs a complete revolution, that there is plenty for all the needs of mankind, but certainly not enough for all his greeds.

In certain quarters today it is hoped that there will be a revolution in Germany, and that all those who must be inwardly revolting at the persecution of the Jews and the subversive tactics of the Nazis, must only be biding their time to rebel. Right now with the recent successes of the German leader, the democracies realize there is little hope of such a revolution coming unprovoked by outside forces. But Germany is not the only place where a revolution is needed. It is needed in Canada, in Toronto, and on this campus.

There is only one hope for the forces of peace to make headway during this time of respite as we anxiously peer out across the Atlantic and fear for the peace of the world. That hope has been taught by the church down through the ages. There has got to be a spiritual revolution. The lives of men and women must be changed individually. The greatest man who ever lived revealed that truth almost two thousand years ago, and He devoted His life to propagating it, rather than to changing the economic, social or political orders.

It is foolish to stand back, and like grand-stand quarter-backs preach about what the diplomats should do, when our own lives are filled with deceit, fear, envy, and selfishness. For years economists have been teaching certain facts, and practicing altogether differently in their daily lives.

Oftentimes the idealistic young graduate, after several years of a somewhat protected and cloistered life, goes out into the world to be disillusioned by the cold realities of business life. In short order he may lose the keenness of his youth and ten years later, will find himself settled down into some monotonous round of making a living . . . having forgotten all about contributions to civilization, social reforms, and national readjustments.

At a great international conference at Interlochen during the European crisis, a large assembly of national representatives prayed for peace for one year, in which time the representatives, many of them writers and journalists of note, promised to change the attitude of the nations. During this year they have asked us to throw the energies which would have otherwise been used for war to promote the cause of peace. We have our reprieve . . . let us do our job. Let us remember that we can be socially effective only insofar as we are big individually; we must cease to be guided by selfish motives, and be guided by God's truth revealed through His Word, His Son and the saints and prophets of history.

What About Russia?

Is Russia to be the English tory cabinet's sacrifice to Germany on the altar of peace?

This question seems at first glance absurd. The interests of the British nation could obviously be best served by a close pact of friendship with France and Russia in order to counter-balance the Rome-Berlin axis. But do the interests of the English nation and the interests of the ruling classes coincide? Certainly the conservatives now in power despise and fear the communistic government which is essentially a government of the labouring classes.

Glance back over past events. When Japan started her undeclared war upon China, Russia was China's logical protector in order to prevent Japanese domination of the Far East. If England had followed her traditional policy of collective security, she would have backed up Russia and warned Japan to stay out of China. But Russia significantly received no aid from England.

In France, England's so-called best friend, why did Blum's socialist cabinet fall? Blum himself said the hostile attitude of the British conservative government undermined faith in his cabinet. Spain was the opportune place to crush once and for all the fascist drive under Franco. Why did not England act? Could it be that British leaders did not approve of a Spanish liberal republic befriended by French socialists and Russian communists?

In the crisis just passed, Czechoslovakia may have alienated herself even farther from Britain's aid by her selection of a Russian for prime minister.

In his "Mein Kampf", Hitler admitted he preferred the Russian borderlands to far-away colonies. His present promises to steal more land in Europe may be attributed to the fact that he does not consider Russia a European nation. English conservative leaders must realize before it is too late that fascist domination of Russia means fascist domination of Europe—including England itself. In the near future they may decide an advanced democracy is preferable—when they are living under a fascist regime.—Oklahoma Daily.

AP Music Drama

Casavant Society

Sir Ernest MacMillan once more displayed his musical versatility at the second Twilight Musicales sponsored by the Casavant Society of Toronto. The eminent position that Sir Ernest occupies among organists has by no means been exaggerated for in his hands the organ becomes a flexible and fascinating vehicle for the enhancement of good music.

The opening chorale by the favourite French composer, Cesar Franck, was beautiful in its flowing smoothness and contrapuntal treatment. Preceding it Sir Ernest played Purcell's Short Suite, which is effectively arranged for the modern organ. Of the four movements, all charming in tonal variety and intricacy, the trumpet tune is probably the favourite. Next was a Toccata in E minor by a less familiar composer, but nevertheless animated and interesting with alternating passages of fugal work.

The latter half of Sir Ernest's program was delightful and perhaps because it included two compositions by the greatest master of contrapuntal form. The interesting structural designs that J. S. Bach has employed are so clear-cut that it only requires logic to derive unlimited pleasure and satisfaction from his works. The Adagio from Bach's Toccata in C was played masterfully. This quiet section from one of the most brilliant works seems to have an appeal of melodic passion which is at once consoling and profound. In contrast to it was Widor's Scherzo from his fourth Symphony, which gave scope for varied instrumental effects and in this instance was performed with amazing skill.

The only true modern piece among Sir Ernest's selections was Claire de Lune by the late Professor Karg Elert of Leipzig Conservatory. It is one of a set of three beautiful and almost ecstatic "Impressions" which Sir Ernest rendered with delicate charm. And the finale—what could be more glorious than Bach's immortal Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor? The grand tonal designs lend themselves to the most arduous and varied musical expression and Sir Ernest exhausted almost every possibility for thematic effects and climaxes.

Sir Ernest is a man of many activities and responsibilities yet we had frequent occasion to be amazed at his magnificent playing. Since the organ at the auditorium has been elevated we were able to observe his fluent manual and pedal technique, his interesting and perfect registration and his complete mastery of the resources of the modern organ. Sunday Concert

A capacity audience at Sunday night's concert was held spellbound by a sixteen year old pianist. Short, stony-faced Jack Samaloff gave a concert in which he exhibited a completely mature technique and a facility of tonal colouring which has greatly improved since this writer last heard him.

Samaloff has the complete ease of an accomplished pianist, and there was no necessity to take into account his age to enjoy the concert fully. His two opening Bach preludes and fugues were executed with an irreverent disregard for difficulties, although the colouring of the C sharp major fell a little short of that in the C sharp minor.

He did the delightful sonata in E flat major by Haydn exquisitely. From the pyrotechnics of the allegro through the richness of the adagio to the abandon of the presto he kept up a display of musicianship and a knowledge of the fact that he wasn't playing a Beethoven symphony but an enjoyable selection.

The most interesting work on the program was Ravel's suite for piano, Le Tombeau de Couperin. This masterpiece of impressionism, which uses the classical musical forms to present the most modern conceptions, presented an interesting concert with the Bach, the Haydn, the Brahms and the Mendelssohn which made up the rest of the program.

The opening prelude and fugue were especially intriguing because of the inevitable comparison, or, rather, contrast, with the Bach that opened the program. Although the treatment was not as full as it might have been, Samloff's presentation of Le Tombeau de Couperin was well-done. More could have been done in the way of expression, and a few extra nuances would not have been amiss, but the performer's technical ability and the merits of the work itself made it outstanding in the program.

We were going to comment upon the fact that this young artist, who, when interviewed, professed such a profound admiration for Chopin, should have presented an all non-Chopin program, but he played the waltz in C sharp minor and the Minute Waltz as encores, so we won't.

BEFORE THE SNOW FLURRIES

Now that the coal company executives are starting to wear broad smiles, and the gasoline stations are running out of anti-freeze we look forward towards a white winter and the prospects of some skiing at the Varsity ski club in Aurora. But whenever we think of the Aurora tract where a great many of the students do their skiing we have to picture the road leading up to Newton's farm in the same vision that conjures up scenes of enjoyable trails and Mrs. Newton's delicious apple pie. And every time we think of the offending piece of gravel, covered with snow and ice so that it becomes merely a one-way path in winter, we picture a car stuck in a snow bank every one hundred yards or so where they have tried to pass another vehicle bound in the opposite direction. All of which is only a rather long-winded way of saying that if anything is going to be done about rectifying the situation, which is really extremely annoying if you happen to be in a hurry, now is the time to do it. If the road can be worked on before the snow starts to cover it, and a place made every quarter of a mile for cars to pass each other, it would be a definite boon to the ski enthusiasts around the campus.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Usually when a team finishes the season undefeated in six starts and only tied twice in a four-team league, it ends up the season with a title. But that is not the case with our intermediate soccer satellites. In both their games with O.A.C. the seconds tied the Aggies. Both squads won all the rest of their fixtures. The net result is that the team with the most goals scored according to the league's constitution, are champs, and so Varsity passes out of the picture. This is not meant to be a kick at the way this year's title is being decided, but a suggestion that the rules committee get together and change the system of deciding champions in the future. For because a team scores more goals does not mean that it is better. The size of the score often depends on other conditions such as the weather and the home field's speed. We have been told that Western are considering a change for a play-off game to decide the title in future. It would be a desirable move.

WITH THE PUCKSTERS

Varsity's much-wanted hockey prospects turned out 35 strong last night and now Ace Bailey is trying to decide whether he should pick the team by pulling the names out of a hat or by putting all the boys out on the ice at once and making it a case of "survival of the fittest". If anyone on the six forward lines out yesterday are eligible for junior company here's hoping Ace makes them stay down and have a strong junior team as well as a good senior one. The most encouraging development is the discovery of one or two defencemen with a chap by the name of L'Heureux standing out.

Bob Copp of junior hockey fame is out for centre, but he also plays defence and if he can be shifted back to the rearguard. While on the question of rearguards we wonder who will get the goaltending call, Caswell, Shipman or Blackhall. They all rate highly.

SPORT SPLASHES

By Sam Lipin

Last Saturday night at Central Y.M.C.A. a fighting but inexperienced Queen's University water polo team lost to Central Y 8-1.

The Tricolour squad fought hard all the way and are determined to make a good showing against McGill later this year. They have arranged an ambitious schedule with teams in Montreal and the game with McGill should find Queen's not only enthusiastic but experienced.

This week the Varsity polo squad are playing three consecutive games. The first two are home games against Y.M.H.A. and High Park, and the third against Broadview at Broadview. The first game is scheduled for tonight at 8 o'clock in the Hart House pool. Coach Winst McCarty hopes that these games while important in themselves, will also serve the purpose of developing a team of fast-breaking, hard-shooting players so that this year the Blue team will defeat the highly polished aggregation usually turned out by McGill.

Tonight's game against Y.M.H.A. should see another Varsity victory, but Y.M.H.A., who have yet to win their first game, will be fighting hard to gain a triumph. The Blue matadors tied their first game but have since then hit their stride and made a fine showing when they defeated Hamilton 7-2 last Wednesday.

Judging from the results of the games played so far it looks like a toss-up as to whether Varsity or Central Y will finish out on top, although Broadview is still in the running and may cause some upsets yet.

OVER THE NET

Junior U.C. suffered their second defeat of the year last night when Junior Vic took two out of three games, the scores being 15-9, 1-15, 15-7.

Victoria managed to beat the boys in red and white quite easily the first game, but U.C. swamped Vic 15-1 in the second. The third tilt was a thriller but when Victoria started putting the ball away U.C. found themselves unable to cope with the scarlet and gold combination play.

Vic: Fox, Rutledge, Ferguson, Gillespie, Fallis, Mackay, Annis, Hoffman. Jr. U.C.: Gould, Epstein, Kates, Dubin, Cowan, Willinsky, Gold.

'ACE' BAILEY COACHES SR. HOCKEY TEAM

First Game will be Exhibition Match with McGill at Rye, N.Y., in Holidays

A squad of over 30 aspirants turned out to greet Coach "Ace" Bailey last night in Varsity's first senior hockey practice, and the former Maple Leaf star should have one of the best Blue teams in many a year. With all of last year's forwards except "Mucky" McIlquham, and last year's goalies "Bing" Caswell and Frank Blackhall out with the Beavers again, Coach Bailey has the nucleus of a squad which should carry a serious threat into the International Intercollegiate Union. The twice-champion McGill Redmen are already in session in Montreal, and are scheduled to meet Varsity in an exhibition game in Rye, New York, some time in the Christmas holidays.

If any of last year's regulars show any sign of weakening, there are plenty of good reserves ready to step in and fill their shoes.

As Sr. Meis pass in review two men stand out in the persons of Fred Clinkett, hoover de luxe, and Paul McGoy, one of the best players in interfaculty rugby. Earl Seikirk's proteges will also have an advantage in weight and experience over the other two teams, and 1938.

although all three squads have remained undefeated for the season, the doctors have shown the greatest scoring punch. It is therefore concluded that Dents are the dark-horses and if newcomer Hawton continues his recent punting prowess, who knows but what they might be right in there.

So it looks like two good final games will be served up tomorrow and Friday and it may be the breaks that decide who will take the Mulock Cup for interfaculty over the other two teams, and 1938.

VICTORIA, ST. MIKE'S, SCIENCE GIRLS WIN IN BASKETBALL

Playing the strongest defence they have shown this season, Vic Seniors defeated St. Mike's Freshies 16-3 at the O.C.E. gym last night. Lacking accurate forwards, the Saints put up a great defence against the six-man attack featured by the Seniors from Vic. Mary Skeeles, on the Freshie defence line, turned in a brilliant effort. North Ren counted up 9 points for the Seniors, while her fellow defence-men gave the Freshies few chances at the basket. Play became quite rough in the last half.

Vic Seniors: Norah Rean (9), Mary Lou Bott (5), E. Hethington (2), Marg Pickering, Jean Lemox, Gladys Kippen, Ella Wilson.

St. Mike's Fresh: Agnes Ireland (3), Yvonne Wells, Betty Brodie, Nancy Tyrell, Connie Harrison, Elinor McLaughlin, Mary Skeeles, Leatha Young.

In a game which matched two of the best forwards in the Intercollegiate Basketball League, Household Science defeated Nurses 22-16 last night at the U.T.S. gym. In the first half Elsie Courtney piled up eleven points for Nurses, while the Scientists trailed with seven. Jean Clark, who starred for the winners, was held to two points in the first half, but broke away after the second half began to score 13 points. Checking was closer after the half-time whistle, and the Nurses' chief hope, Elsie Courtney, was held to 3 points by Peggy Arnold's fine defence.

Nurses: Betty Burland, Helen Engle, Doris Storm, Elsie Courtney, Barb Waite, Sally Stillman, Phyllis Dawson, Harriet Brown, Ruth Bourne.

Household Science: Peg Griggs, Diz Dean, Jean Clarke, F. Richardson, Peggy Arnold, Helen Abell, Eileen Elson, Muriel Dobson.

St. Mike's were never extended last night in their game against Meds, which they won 56-15. Mary Bennett, star of St. Mike's captain, started her team early in its quest for points and Meds guards never got organized long enough to check the Saints' attack. Doris Prouse turned in a brilliant but poor performance for the Medettes. Vic Longo and "Deed" McGovern turned in fine defensive games for the Irish.

St. Mike's: Mary Bennett (18), Annabelle Macklin (32), Get Mulachy (6), Kay Bennett, Jean de Cola, Edith McGovern, Vic Longo.

Meds: Doris Prouse (15), M. Brereton, M. Mathers, Helen Holden, Lil Sugarman, Fran Allen, M. Hall, Marj Mosbaugh, Lil Karmalaska.

O.C.E. LACROSSE TEAM DEFEATS ST. MIKE'S 7-6

O.C.E. lacrosse team strengthened its hold on the group leadership in yesterday's 7-6 victory over St. Mike's. This game marked the third straight win for the Teachers.

After a slow start, O.C.E. ended the first period with a 3-1 lead. Although the Double Blue team pressed hard in the rest of the game, they were unable to click for the needed goals.

Cassidy and Doyle were best for the losers, while Dal White was the outstanding man for O.C.E., garnering three goals.

St. Mike's: Sylvester, Gendron, Wimpenny, Fitzpatrick, Doyle (2), Cassidy (3), McLean, Coates (1), Hector.

O.C.E.: White (3), Aitchison, Bailey (2), L'Heureux, Glenn, Fraser, Box (1), Masterson (1), Donihoe, Stenson.

with munitions. "Public manufacture of arms could not cause any more trouble than private, it would seem. Why can we not build up a large munition industry, supplying Britain and ourselves at the same time? Canadian industry would surely benefit by this."

Art Trickey, 1 Arts, Victoria College, felt that if Canada is really going to arm on a large scale the investment of an arsenal would be a paying one in the long run, rather than chancing the "grat" of some munition makers in the last war.

Another 1st year student, G. E. Cutler, U.C., held similar views, favouring the government arsenal proposed, even if the price did seem a little "stiff" at present.

Third year Moderns student Neil McIntyre, believed that profits on such manufactured goods as munitions should go to the government rather than to private profiteers, but that it would take really too long for Canada to re-arm to a point where she could defend herself.

Two co-eds after much thought, said they wished to sleep on the matter before passing comment. Another girl who dislikes publicity, said that while most women do not give much thought to these matters she believed that which was in the interests of the people as a whole was best.

"It is my opinion, that if an armament program is to be undertaken, that it should definitely be nationalized, so that it will represent the interest of the people of Canada; under such a method, the people may know more directly whether these armaments will be used to further peace, by way of collective security, or whether they will be used to attain the ends of a few profiteers and war-mongers," was the comment of J. Gurland, fourth year M. and P., U.C.

Orr, III U.C., "requires a high degree of nervous, muscular and respiratory control. Accurate marksmanship gives the thrill of a triumph of self-control."

"The best shots seems to come from S.P.S.," admitted the secretary. "I don't know whether it is because there are more men there or because they are used to working with precision instruments, for that it what good rifles are."

At West China University six more universities have been dumped on the campus and temporary buildings have had to be erected to supplement the accommodation rendered inadequate by the emergency. The government has tried to make living as cheap as possible and there 80c will feed a student for a month. Work scholarships are arranged, under which the recipients in return for aid devote a certain amount of time to first aid or general relief work or serve in the mass education movement.

Follies News Photos Said Banned By Dean

Permission to Publish Denied to Downtown Reporters by Miss Ferguson

COMMITTEE INSTRUCTED

Girls in the Follies of University College may no longer be allowed to expose their legs to thousands of people throughout the country by the medium of newspaper photographs.

This information was revealed when a camera man from a downtown newspaper was said to have been refused permission by Miss Marian B. Ferguson, Dean of Women of University College, to publish photographs which he had taken of the chorus girls who were rehearsing in practice costumes recently.

According to reliable information, the camera man, gathering material for a feature story on the Follies, had taken a series of pictures of the chorus. When Miss Ferguson was informed of the fact, she is believed to have instructed the Follies Committee to block the publication of the pictures.

Miss Ferguson could not be contacted by phone last night.

Famed Exhibits Seen At Ontario Museum

Recent Specimens Acquired by Museum Include Chinese Idol

A royal Chinese tomb, artistically illuminated medieval manuscripts, a representation of Indian home life—these are some of the unusual features at the Royal Ontario Museum.

Especially interesting are the acquisitions of the last year—rare Japanese printed scrolls of the seventh century, Florentine china, and a delicately coloured Chinese mosaic. Considered by Professor Corcoran as the best find of last year is the artistically wrought Chinese Sun God.

The museum's Chinese exhibit is famed throughout the world. The massive Chinese tomb of the Ming dynasty is perhaps the most impressive feature of the building. At the entrance of the tomb stand two dogs of Fo (Buddha) who were supposed to act as a protection against evil influences. Especially interesting are the temple wall frescoes and a huge bell inscribed with Buddhist prayers.

A fifteenth century Flemish Book of Hours and a French service book of the same period are also exhibited.

In addition to the large museum collection even more specimens are available to students and to other museums in a research collection.

The second luncheon meeting of the Macdonald-Gartier Conservative Club which takes place at Hart House on Thursday, Nov. 17, will be honoured by the presence of the club's honorary president, the Hon. Leopold Macaulay, B.A., K.C., M.P.P. After the luncheon Mr. Macaulay will deliver an address.

There will be a limited accommodation for the second meeting and those attending Thursday's meeting will receive first consideration. The location of the meeting will be announced in Thursday's Varsity.

The Conservative leader's address is of special importance as the Ontario Conservative party is holding its convention on Dec. 8 and 9 and Mr. Macaulay should be able to throw a great deal of light on any problems that confront the party and the country as a whole.

Hart House Shoe Shine Boy Hopes To Become Great Painter

Plying a blacking brush by day and painting by night is the achievement of Stan Elias, 24-year-old shoe shine boy in Hart House.

Stan, who has shined shoes in Hart House since September, spends his spare time doing oil paintings. He works in an upstairs room, since his family will not allow him to paint down stairs, for fear he will spill paint on the floor and furniture. His family, he said, are against painting, since they consider it a waste of time. His father, who works in an abattoir, believes that art for art's sake is a miserable thing, he intimated.

Stan has always wanted to paint, and his dream is to quit the shoe-shining business and spend all his time at his art. "Oh boy and how," was his answer when asked if he wanted to go down in history as one of Canada's great painters.

His family has never had artistic ambitions, nor are they interested in any of the other arts. Two brothers,

DEMOCRACY THREATENED

"The issue at Munich was one between Britain and Germany," said Willson Woodside to an Avukah meeting last night. "The French were pitifully hanging on to British apron strings: the Russians were pretty much off the stage during the whole affair, and any statements the Russian foreign office made were not emphatic."

"As for Italy," the speaker continued, "the situation was absolutely pitiful. Mussolini, facing a country that was split from top to bottom, was scared stiff that he would have to live up to the alliance which was forced upon him by Hitler. If war ever came, the King's party would have taken power."

Mr. Woodside, who has written for many years on affairs in Europe, and is currently writing for the Canadian Magazine, and several American periodicals, visited Europe last summer, and gave some of his impressions, especially those on the Munich settlement of last month.

Mr. Woodside asserted that the fear of Communism was a logical result of the revolutionary propaganda coming out of the Soviet Union until six or (Continued on page 4)

QUESTIONED BY POLICE

Entering a room in Hutton House at noon yesterday, a short man wearing a brown suit fled when he found the room occupied. A few minutes later, a man answering to the same description was apprehended in the Parliament Buildings by Brock McElheran, III Arts, and a constable.

It is believed that the man entering Hutton House did so for the purpose of removing valuables, as someone of the same description did Monday to a sorority house and Whitney Hall.

The girl whose room was entered said that she did not scream, but gave the man a cold look, upon which he fled. He ran from the house in the direction of Hoskin Avenue. The incident was reported to the Dean of Women.

Brock McElheran, whose house was entered by a man of the same description, said that he believed the man was the one who had just fled from Hutton House. McElheran's home is at Wycliffe College, on Hoskin Avenue.

The man was apprehended by McElheran and a provincial constable in the Parliament Buildings, and was allowed to go after his name and address were taken.

SEEK AMERICAN BAND

Determined to give Schoolmen the best Formal Dance on the campus, or else none at all, the Engineering Society executive are negotiating for one of the foremost swing bands in America for their At-Home.

Approached as to their plans, it was learned that no definite bargain has been made, although a rumour was circulating to the effect that Larry Clinton's band had been hired.

P. C. Anderson, president of the society, said that a special effort is being made this year to provide a dance of such guaranteed success that every Schoolman will want to attend. Unless the very best arrangements can be made, he said, there will be no School (Continued on page 4)

Certificates of attendance in connection with the payment of the first instalment of University of Toronto Scholarships (not including College Scholarships) may be obtained at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

ROBINS TO BE GUEST OF VICTORIA WRITERS

Dr. J. D. Robins will be guest critic at a work meeting of the Victoria College Writers' Group on Thursday. This meeting will be devoted entirely to the study of short stories.

All group members who will be at the meeting should sign the list before noon today as this is a supper party. Miss Rosemarie Schawlow, the convener, asks that anyone who wishes to submit a story for criticism should give it to her as soon as possible. Three copies should be made of all manuscripts.

What Nazism Means

In the light of recent events, it is most painful to think that Great Britain has made peace with such barbarians. The wildest pessimist would never have believed that such utter savagery as is being practised in Germany right now could be possible in a supposedly enlightened age in a supposedly civilized country. Such vile atrocities against an innocent section of the population were not possible in Europe's darkest ages—and now we have them.

Germany of this week and last week is Nazi Germany in its true colours. Tolerance, democracy and ordinary, common decency are things of the past, and the country seethes with attack, pillage and murder directed against four hundred thousand hostages held captive by people who have lost all that is good in man.

Last week a half-crazed lad, half-crazed by the sufferings inflicted upon him and his family by the Nazi rulers of Germany, shot a minor official in the German embassy in Paris. What has happened since then, the murders, the brutal desolation, the completely and efficiently organized campaign of terror which emanated from the government of the country as much as it did from the people—these have shocked the world into realization of what Nazism means.

This is not a blow at British interests, although British statesmen have been denounced by Nazi officials. It is not a blow at democracy as such, although democratic traditions have been vilified and ridiculed by the leaders who perpetrated the outrages. But it is a blow at everything that our system of living rests. It is a blow at tolerance, without which there would be no British democracy. It is a blow at freedom, without which no one brought up in a civilized country would consider life worthwhile. Finally, it is a blow at the essential principles of decency and social behaviour, without which no man can live at peace with his fellow.

American public opinion has spoken. Leaders of all parties, of all sectarian groups, of all shades of opinion, have uttered their emphatic protest against what is happening—and the American ambassador was summoned home from Berlin. British public opinion has roused itself into undeniable action. But we in Canada have not yet spoken with anything like real force and conviction.

The problem is not one which affects Germany, or even Europe, alone. Our system of life is threatened by what is happening. As Canadians, we must speak out against the unspeakable occurrences in Germany. And as students, as the supposed vanguard of light and truth and democracy, we must say, in no uncertain terms, that we protest against what is happening.

Worthy of Support

To think constructively we must have criteria.

Only as we study the nature of man's relation to man, his inherent religious nature, and deep-rooted concern for the common good, can we truly judge what is of fundamental worth. Only as we comprehend the nature of God, are we able to evaluate the problems of daily life as related to ultimate good.

On this campus there are many clubs and organizations providing leadership in thought and action. One of the largest and most active is the Student Christian Movement. This Movement sponsors study groups with topics ranging from the "Life of Jesus" to "Fascism as a Threat to World Culture"; Hart House noon-addresses; a course in the Christian approach to marriage; a women's noon-hour series; University Sunday services; weekly worship services; the Far Eastern Student Relief Committee; a Jewish-Gentile relationship group; and many others.

The finance for all this work—secretaries, publicity, organization, even the electric light bill for the Convocation Hall services—is raised entirely by a University-wide canvass of students and staff for voluntary contributions. It has no grants, nor fees. This week the S.C.M. is making its appeal for financial assistance. It is worthy of widespread support, and will appreciate the contributions of all those who are interested in its work.

Hard Times

The era in which we live is one in which it is difficult to get rich quickly. Long before the Great War economists foretold that the next generation would have to be content with less material goods than their fathers enjoyed. This prophecy has turned into a solid truth; employment seekers are just as well qualified to take positions in this generation as they ever were, but economic conditions have made it increasingly difficult to expand financially.

College graduates in the last twenty years have had reason to deplore the indifference of the business world to a B.A. degree. Students now accept the fact that they must not expect a large cash value for their university education. But the fact remains that most candidates for a degree are perforce interested in cash as well as culture. To give prospective graduates an idea of their financial prospects Stanford University conducted a survey. It was found that before 1929 80 per cent of graduates got jobs immediately, but by 1932 only 65 per cent did so. Teachers, engineers, and lawyers had the hardest time getting positions. Of those who obtained employment, some 40 per cent had to take jobs other than those they had prepared for. First year salaries of men graduates averaged about $1200. By 1936 graduates had found as many jobs as before the depression, but the salaries were lower. Conductors of the survey forecast: Barring a war or a recurring depression college students can reasonably expect to earn between $2000 and $3000 eight years after graduation.

These statistics are American; salaries in Canada will probably be even lower. Except for the minority who get lucky breaks or who inherit money, the university graduate of today will have to become accustomed to a moderate share of this world's goods. In such times a university education assumes a new significance. Rather than train us to make money, it can show us how to live gracefully without it. Contact with literature, science, and the humanities opens the way to non-economic fields of expansion.

ART MUSIC

Toronto Symphony

Last night's Nine O'Clock by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra featured as soloist Albert Pratz, a member of the first violin section of the orchestra, in a performance of the Glazounov Concerto. We highly commend the plan of using local artists as soloists in the series, especially if those artists are of the calibre of Mr. Pratz.

The melodious Glazounov Concerto was played by Mr. Pratz with the sureness of an experienced soloist. His very rich tone, fluid dexterity, and studied craftsmanship merited the enthusiastic applause he received for the performing of this concerto. The only fault in the otherwise admirable reading of the work was the lack of tonal balance between the orchestra and the soloist. Throughout

 2. What is wrong with this sentence . . . "five years and lashes"?
 3. What is your candid opinion of Havelock Ellis?
 4. Do you intend to enrol in S.P.S. next year?
- Test for 2 year-old.
1. Is man a machine?
 2. In one word explain the work the League of Nations has done since it was organized.
 3. What do you think of the 1938 Ontario license plates?
 4. Is the sphygmomanometer a technically perfect instrument? What improvements would you suggest?
- Test for 3 year-old.
1. Give your opinion of Mein Kampf.
 2. Do you honestly think that there is any connection between Osgoode Hall and the Casino Theatre?
 3. Do you think that the molecular theory is rot?
 4. Discuss Freud.

Correspondence

To the Editor.
Dear Sir:

Amused—may, amazed—though we are at the spectacular display of misinformation afforded by Friday's editorial Going Rambling, we nevertheless can scarcely refrain from acknowledging our admiration for its adventurous author. Few and far between in the annals of literary history are the names of men who write even as he . . . combining in a miraculous manner the uncertain knowledge of many half-truths with confidence so great as to deceive even the Elect; dazzling us (Continued on page 4) the whole work the orchestra was heavy and ponderous in movement, never just (quite) matching its tonal quality with that of the violinist. This same defect is unfortunately present in most of the Toronto Symphony concerts which feature soloists.

The orchestral feature was Ravel's whimsical Mother Goose Suite. All of the subtle, quaint, yet delicious orchestral effects to be found in this very Ravelian composition were exploited to the full by Sir Ernest MacMillan in a very satisfying reading of the work. The Pagoda movement, with the lovely Chinese effects, and the limpid Pavane both conjuring up such fanciful visions, were especially good. One bit in the Beauty and the Beast movement caused tittering in the audience. The "Beast" was represented by a passage played by the double-bassoon at the bottom of its register, which produced an effect which closely resembled a derisive "rabbzberry". This should by no means be interpreted symbolically.

Haydn's lucid, cheerful Surprise Symphony was played perfectly, and proved that when no great virtuosity is required of the orchestra, the Toronto Symphony is pliable and completely in the hands of the conductor, enabling him to introduce into the scores the innumerable little innuendos and subtle enunciations which produce great performances.

Wagner's crowded, soaring Master-singer Prelude, his Prelude to Act III of Lohengrin, and parts of Handel's charming The Gods Go A'begging, made up the rest of the program.

In three jazzy, daffy exhibitions of volleyball, Forestry spikers finally downed U.C. Thirds by scores of 15-10, 4-15, 15-5 in the upper gym last evening. The defeat marked U.C.'s second loss in two contests.

Capitalizing on the many errors of their opponents in the first game, the Artsmen got off to a 10-2 lead, but the Foresters quickly registered thirteen points to take the tilt 15-10. University College sent out an entire new team for the second affair, and they had little difficulty winning a poorly played game 15-4 to give each team a win.

The third match was closely played in the first few moments, but Forestry struck their stride soon after the start and rolled up a ten-point 15-5 verdict.

In the first of the triple header volleyball games, Sr. U.C. defeated the class of the league, Sr. Meds, in two straight games 15-13 and 15-7, in the upper gym yesterday afternoon.

The game proved to be one of the finest volleyball exhibitions of the current season with excellent form demonstrated by both teams. Charlesworth utilized all his six foot three for U.C. in crashing to the floor the balls set up by Walt MacGregor and Al Rose. But this combination was matched by "Roly-Poly" Wise and "Little" Cash of Meds in the first game, and U.C. first managed to defeat the Docs. In the second game, however, U.C. demonstrated a brilliant attack and soon piled up enough points to keep the Docs from even hoping of winning.

By a 5-2 count a fighting Y.M.H.A. team pulled a surprise victory over a more experienced Varsity water polo team last night in Broadview pool. Jumping into an early lead the Y.M.H.A. held the advantage all through the game despite the improvement of the Blue matadors. Fighting furiously the Varsity team tried to rally but were unable to click. Rosen notched all of Y.M.H.A.'s 5 counters. Mabec and Earl were responsible for Varsity's two points.

Rosen and Fleishman starred for Y.M.H.A., while Green, Jackson and Earl stood out for the losers.

 Varsity: Lipin, Jackson, Laari, Earl, Mabec, Baldwin, Adams.

Tonight at 8 o'clock Varsity take on High Park. High Park is starting an all-star team including such famous swimmers as Bob Pirie, Bill Bel, Bill Brass and others. The game will be played in Hart House and only male spectators will be admitted.

 IN DECISIVE MATCH

The Knox lacrosse team moved into second place in the league with a decisive victory, 7 to 2, over Trinity. Knox has won 2 and lost 1.

First period opened with a goal by Ron Davis for Knox. White, Trinity, clicked very closely throughout the period, Davis again scored, ending the period with a 2-0 lead for Knox.

Second period saw much closer checking by both teams, the only score being made by Caslor of Knox. Trinity seemed unable to break through for any score.

RUGBY PLAY-OFFS FOR MULOCK CUP TO START TODAY

Dents will Meet Schoolmen
 This Afternoon at Varsity Stadium

BOTH TEAMS UNDEFEATED

Interfaculty rugby play-offs get under way at Varsity Stadium this afternoon at 3 o'clock as Dentistry and Junior S.P.S. fight it out for the privilege of opposing a powerful football team from the Faculty of Medicine, in the Mulock Cup finals. Dents will be trying to regain the trophy they last held in 1934. Both teams have been undefeated this season and the game should be a hard fought one from beginning to end. The winner will meet the Doctors on Friday at two-thirty p.m.

On paper the Schoolmen appear much stronger than their rivals, who will be without the services of Smith, ace line-man who dislocated his shoulder in last week's game against Trinity. In Ronnie Fugler they have a quarterback who has been a consistent kicker throughout the season, and who last year was picked on the all-star interfaculty team. Supporting Fugler on the backfield cast will be Kilpatrick, Munro and Barry.

Dame Fortune has favoured School this year in that they have come through their season unscathed and were not extended in their games with Victoria and U.C. On the other hand Dents have had a hard time of it and were hard pressed to nose out Trinity in their group series. However, it will not be the first time that the Molarmen have entered a game as the underdogs, and with a fair amount of breaks the Dentists should have better luck than last year when they fought their way into the playoffs only to be beaten by St. Mike's. Earl Racher, Murray Hawton and Red Humenik all have turned in excellent performances during the past few weeks and are bound to show up well in the crucial spots.

scored a goal, later tied by Caslor.
 Knox: Caslor, Wilson, Renshaw, Cochran, Near, Stur, Spencer, Davis.
 Trinity: Carliis, Hodgins, O'Grady, Northgrave, Edmonds, Templeton, Andrews, Sturgeon, Stephens, Telfer.

The Sportsman

By Frances Barbour
 Since interfaculty basketball is now in full swing, all ardent basketballers should begin to think of the intercollegiate league which is played after Christmas. Miss Marjorie Rean, who so well coached last year's team, is being married some time early in the new year. She will be a great loss to St. Mike's and the intercollegiate team, both of which she coached last year. As yet, the athletic directors have come to no decision regarding a new coach, but any coach will have a nucleus of last year's team. Except for Marg Glass and Joy Brownley, who graduated, the team seems fairly intact, with such players as Bobby MacDonald, Janie Church, Norah Rean and Molly Moore, and of course, plus the freshies and any new outstanding players. No one in Nursing, Physiotherapy, Occupational Therapy or Household Science can play intercollegiate basketball due to the fact that all players must be proceeding to a degree.

The Women's Athletic Society has drawn up the rule by which, those taking graduate degrees or attending O.C.E. can play intercollegiate sports, but they must be in the university where they took their undergraduate work. Women adopted this regulation regarding graduates of O.C.E., and wonder of wonders, the men are now following suit—a very interesting note. At any rate, the idea of the Athletic Society was not so much in winning, but in giving undergraduates a chance to compete with other universities rather than allow older students to play again and again.

Now that winter is rolling around, badminton, the ever-popular sport, will be resumed if — (the supposition is rather annoying but definitely must be considered). Metropolitan Church, on the corner of Shuter and Church Sts., may be used to play badminton on Mondays from two to six o'clock and on Thursdays from two to five, "if enough join to make it worth while. Fifty is the number required so if you are a badminton enthusiast sign up on the lists in the women's common room in U.C.

Intercollegiate badminton tournaments will be held again this year, so here's your "long-hoped-for chance", girls!

Speaking OF SPORT

By Alan Harvey

SECOND THOUGHTS

This afternoon the Varsity Seconds, better known as the junior hockey team, stage their first practice session of the season. Their rivals in the Big Seven Junior O.H.A. group have been practicing steadily for several weeks, but it is customary for the University squads to delay practices until the football season is finished.

In previous years the Varsity junior representatives have been pretty well snowed under at the bottom of their section. However, last year they managed to pick up a couple of victories and at the conclusion of their regular calendar they moved up to intermediate company, where they dusted off teams from O.A.C., Hamilton and Western. The "Little Jints", composed largely of juniors and players who were ineligible for junior competition owing to the age limit, swept through their intermediate schedule without a defeat.

The McPherson-coached Blues seem slated this semester to stack up against some really tough company. Young Rangers, who yesterday acquired Herb Carnegie, star for Northern Vocational last year, via a committee room decision, are strengthened considerably for the coming campaign. The luckless Lions, who occupied the cellar spot last year, have done some rebuilding, and their probable line-up at post time will likely include Charlie Robertson, Vic Russell, Jack Riley, Dave Robertson, Charles Demick and Murray Douglas. Native Sons have done some wholesale importing, with Red Raney of Barrie Colts headlining the list of out-of-town stars. Stuart Cechman of Brantford Lions, Dalt McKenna of London and Lem Crawford of Kingston Indians, all stars in their own right, will help bolster the Cotton Clubbers, who just missed the play-downs last year.

Oshawa Generals are stronger than ever, and they were good enough last year to go to the Memorial Cup finals. Marlboros, showiest team in the Big Seven in 1937, have lost most of their top-notchers, but will probably be right up there at the finish. St. Mike's, Varsity's collegiate rivals, have come up with a host of American stars, who will make the Geds a formidable force in the coming ice contests.

AROUND THE CIRCUIT

The turn-out for the junior basketball team has been highly gratifying. Only two candidates, McWha of London and Bill Flaherty of Hamilton, have failed to make an appearance to date. Chief prospects for this year's senior cage team are Walt McGregor, Chick Mahoney and Perc Singer, holdovers from last year, along with Frankie Minchin, Red Humenik, Red McLaughlin and Jim Craig of the 1937 intermediates. Moose Rogin and Scrubby Aitchison of Assumption College turned up for practice this week and are sure to make the squad. A couple of fellows from St. Mike's, Vern Lavarney and Red Cahill, have been prominent in practice thus far. To date the preparatory sessions have consisted largely of shooting practices, and the boys have been putting the ball through the hoop with mid-season dexterity. It looks like a big season. . . . attendance records released yesterday reveal that exactly fifty-four more people than last year attended this season's football games. A total of 44,691 elbowed their way through the turnstiles this fall, while 44,637 fans witnessed college matches in the Bloor Bowl in 1937. The 1937 total, incidentally, was 6,964 ahead of the previous term. McGill proved the greatest drawing card this autumn, packing in 17,613 spectators, while Western and Queen's attracted 16,176 and 10,902 on their respective visits. The Kingston figure is considerably lower than the 15,155 and 13,213 totals they attracted in previous years. . . . Dents meet Junior S.P.S. in the first bracket of the Mulock Cup semi-finals this afternoon and the Molarmen appear up against it. . . . the Dents barely squeaked through their grid program this year, encountering tough opposition from Trinity, while the Schoolmen were much the best in all their matches.

INCIDENT

He was only a small man, and slender, yet there was about him an undoubted air of authority. He might, by his appearance, have been a sober merchant in the woolen industry or a graduate student in Kafoor customs, or a speaker on the value of the Ethical Life.

He advanced into the office importantly, brandishing a sheet of paper in his hand. "This," he said abruptly, as though he had rehearsed the speech, "is for the Sports Editor." And he vanished.

It was a neatly typed sheet of paper, double spaced, with all the crucial words underlined. The paper contained, it was ascertained, the Warren's selections for the intercollegiate all-star team.

He might have been the Warden, he might even have been Warren Stevens himself. But I don't agree with him, because he picked Lou Somers on the all-star team.

CORRESPONDENCE

with the gigantic unreasonableness of such declarations as "Vice-President Garner was anti-Roosevelt and reactionary even before the superior personality of his chief forced him into idleness and obscurity"; illuminating the past and present complexities of American politics with casual generalizations that stagger the imagination: "In the South the verdict was decided at Democratic primaries, where reactionary Democrats defeated progressive, and slid into Congress against their leader's wishes. . . . From now on the South will be represented by 'Cotton Ed' Smith, who sits in the Senate and rants against the least constructive measure." Slid into Congress! O eloquent indictment of democracy!

Believing that a few grains of truth would not be unwelcome amid the chaff gleaned from the author's teeming brain, might we venture to submit the following remarks?—

Application of the epithet reactionary to Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats evokes from United States citizens only a shrug and a yawn.

Southern folk are not quite so "hide-bound" as our author implies; the people of Texas at least gave their "liberal" Congressman Maury Maverick a term vote in Washington, until his policy revealed him Red to the innermost stich of his proletarian bellies.

The deplorable poverty of the South exists chiefly in the minds of Northerners. At any rate, the poor are seldom jammed into miles of brick tenements lining streets ten or fifteen feet wide.

The South's second largest city, Houston (in that same backward State of Texas whose seven million inhabitants, according to our omniscient author, grovel under conditions "as bad as they are in certain parts of the Toronto slums"), has since the first of this year issued $25,000,000 worth of new building permits—considerably more, we believe, than the combined total for all the major cities of Canada.

We are infinitely weary of the tendency to interpret current events in the pink light of drawing-room radicalism. George Delhomme, IV St. Michael's, a Texas Democrat.

BOOTH AND MORRIS DISCUSS ETHICS

"I am a Christian, but I am too radical to be a Communist," he added. Mr. Booth looked on Communism as being equally as burdensome to the people as capitalism and meaning only a seizure of power by other hands. Well socialized democracy was his answer to the needs of today. This considered true radicalism and the best possible form for diverse elements to find compatibility with and get behind.

Leslie Morris first maintained that he was a Communist for two reasons, first because "the idiosyncrasies of one man shouldn't be played upon and allowed to cause the issue." He admitted that the Communist party wanted to bring about social change in Canada, but that it was trying to do so gradually and peacefully with little sacrifice but that the fear of dictatorship might hasten things. We want to retain democracy, but to be more thoroughgoing about it and to bring about better distribution of wealth," he concluded.

seven years ago. "Democracy is under a greater menace from the Bolshevik bogey than it ever was from world revolution," he said. "Elderly statesmen are still shivering at the thought of a menace which passed ten years ago."

The speaker considered the bombing of Barcelona another potent factor in determining the final outcome at Munich. He believed that the British and French were profoundly influenced by the regular bombing of Barcelona at half-hour intervals for three days. "I feel," he went on, "that the bombing of this city in March was a deliberate part, on the part of the Rome-Berlin powers, of the psychological preparation for the September crisis."

ENGINEERS PLAN ANNUAL AT-HOME

The School At-Home is known on the campus as one of the best dances of the year. Leading all School activities, it is the high spot of School social life, even eclipsing such functions as School Dinner and School Nite.

Trump Davidson, well known to swing fans on the campus, will be the Canadian band present on the great night, it was learned, holding forth in one of the two halls reserved at the Royal York for early in February.

Messrs. Bowlen and Benson, in charge of the ticket sale, were in a jubilant mood. The books balanced, which, they claimed, was an unheard-of, unprecedented occurrence.

The bones of Sadie Hawkins may be interred but her ghost must be stalking the halls of University College, for the ratio between tickets sold to eds and co-eds was five to three.

SPEAKING OF SWING

No one needs to be told that Duke Ellington is coming to the Maple Leaf Gardens next Wednesday; nor should anyone need to be told of the position the Duke holds in twentieth century jazz. In order to give an outsider's viewpoint we print today a letter received by Dick McDougall of CKCL in a contest he conducted last week. This letter incidentally won first prize. Gentlemen:

Ellington's arrangements of American dance music, to my way of thinking, are truly superlative. He is able to take a simple melody and, as an artist paints a beautiful picture with but basic colours, so the Duke can create a musical masterpiece, a thing of living beauty. His music is soulful, vital, and is profound, capable of carrying one into another world; sometimes one overflowing with sadness, tragedy, sometimes one filled with gaiety, sunshine. He is the Chopin, the Beethoven, the Stravinsky of jazz.

Then again the Ellington aggregation has some of the most brilliant soloists in the world of jazz.

Johnny Hodges, alto and soprano sax exponent, is unexcelled. With his brilliant technique and taste of his alto chorus in Hyde Park or his plaintive, pleading soprano in Blue Reverie. At will he can be gay and flippant, or serene and catholic, as the mood commands. Another ace in the sax section is Barney Bigard. Now lending depth and body with his baritone, now interpreting the blues with clarinet. In the lower register his tone and execution is unsurpassed. Proof of this is his chorus on Blue Harlem. I believe I may select from the brass section, without fear of criticism, Juan Tizol, trombonist, and Cootie Williams, trumpeter. Tizol, aside from being an excellent composer, plays with refined, dignified taste. His tone too, is above reproach. Cootie Williams is dynamic, forceful, and lends a terrific drive to the band. His wild, muted choruses are thrilling, exciting. Inspired by a solid rhythm section, Duke's band is truly magnificent.

Duke Ellington, as a composer, has no equal. The emotions of his race, their oppressions and grief, have been depicted by a master. His Swanee Rhapsody, Blue Harlem, Solitude, Mood Indigo, and countless others, are unquestionably beautiful and will live through jazz history for ever.

William Frederick.

SCHOOL VANQUISHES FIGHTING DENTALS IN CLOSE BATTLE

Junior School Eliminate Molar-men in Hard-Fought Battle

MEET MEDS FRIDAY

A 13-9 victory over Dentistry at Varsity Stadium yesterday afternoon gave the S.P.S. Junior rugby team the right to meet the Faculty of Medicine squad in the Mulek Cup finals on Friday.

Led by Al Barry and Ronnie Fugler the Schoolmen dominated play right from the start and held a 1-1 lead at the end of the first quarter. Dentistry got the first point of the game when Barry of School fumbled on the ten yard line. Hawton's attempt for a field goal went wide but Barry was routed behind the line. Reuben gave School the first break of the game when he recovered a blocked kick and Barry booted a single for the winners. An exchange of kicks gave School possession on Dent's twenty-five. A Fugler to Barry forward pass gained ten more yards and on the next play Kilpatrick went around the end for a touch which was converted.

In the second quarter Hawton started kicking them high, wide and handsome and added two more points to the losers' total. A return kick before half time made the score S.P.S. 12, Dentistry 4. Dents blocked a punt on School's 2 yard line as the third period ended. Singer plunged it over for the Molar-men, making the count 12-9. At the start of the final School regained possession of the play and Fugler kicked the final point of the game.

S.P.S. Juniors: Fugler, Munro, Kilpatrick, Barry, Stirling, Sloane, Baker, DePaul, Vincent, Moore, Graham, Reuben, Campbell, Warner, Allan, V. Smith, O. Smith, Reeves, Barnes, and Coons.

Dentistry: Hamby, Warren, Campbell, Beatty, Parrott, Nefsky, Coleman, Singer, Hottner, McKee, Humenik, Racher, Reynolds, Goffrey, Hutchinson, Dixon, Weiker, Kulyk.

U.C. Follies Night At Silver Slipper

Honouring the cast of the U.C. Follies, the Silver Slipper announced last night that Saturday would be U.C. Follies night at the Riverside Drive supper-dance club, when the entire cast will be guests of honour.

"We have always felt that the University College Follies is the most outstanding show of its type in Toronto, and we are taking this opportunity of paying tribute to the cast and to all our friends at the university," Waldo Holden, Silver Slipper manager said.

Featured in the floor show will be pretty Audrey May, Argonau's drum major, who dances. Several numbers from the Follies may be repeated in the floor show by members of the cast.

Dean Confirms Stand Against News Photos

Unwanted Newspaper Publicity on Follies Deplored by Miss Ferguson

LETTER PROMPTS MOVE

News photos of the chorus of the University College Follies have been banned for publication by downtown newspapers, revealed Miss Marion B. Ferguson, Dean of Women, University College, today, in confirmation of a report in yesterday's Varsity that such action had been taken.

This move was prompted by a letter which appeared a week ago in the Telegram condemning college activities which turn co-eds into chorus girls, exposing their legs to the gaze of thousands of people throughout the country by medium of newspaper photographs. As part of downtown newspaper tendency on the part of downtown newspapers to misrepresent university life, the publication of the photograph which called forth the letter was objected to by an editorial in The Varsity on November 9. "There was nothing to the letter itself," stated Miss Ferguson. "There is no use fighting a thing like that. But I do object to the principle which makes such a letter possible. It is quite in order for folks to pose in the role of chorists at a family affair such as the U.C. Follies, but it should not be made possible for all co-eds to be looked upon as such ever afterwards by the eyes of the whole province."

Women's Scholarships

The Canadian Federation of University Women are offering a junior scholarship for 1939-40 of the value of $700.00. This scholarship is open to any woman graduate of a Canadian university who is not more than 25 years of age on February 1st, 1939. The award will be based on evidence of character, intellectual achievement and promise. The place of study must be approved by the Scholarship Committee. Preference will be given to students who have studied in only one university and who desire to continue their studies in another.

Also offered is a Travelling Scholarship of the value of $1250.00 open to any woman holding a degree from a Canadian university. This award is based on evidence of character, intellectual achievement and promise. Preference will be given to candidates who have completed one or more years of graduate study and have a definite course of study or research in view. As far as possible the principle will be observed of granting the scholarship alternately to students engaged in scientific research, and those engaged in literary, historical or philosophical studies.

Application forms may be obtained from the Convener of the Scholarship Committee. They are to be returned to the Convener. All communications with regard to the scholarship are to be addressed to Committee: Miss Muriel V. Roscoe, Acadia University, Wolfville, N.S., the Convener of the Scholarship.

CULVER TO SPEAK AT WOMEN'S UNION SUNDAY

Mr. Charles P. Culver, who served for many years in the United States Consular Service in the Orient, will speak on "The Crisis in China" at 4 p.m. on Sunday in the Women's Union.

Mr. Culver, who is now connected with the Christian Herald Industrial Mission at Foo Chow which is concerned with the training of Chinese orphans, is touring the continent in the interest of the refugees.

Certificates of attendance in connection with the payment of the first instalment of University of Toronto Scholarships (not including College Scholarships) may be obtained at the Registrar's office, Simcoe Hall.

STUDENTS PLAN HEALTH SURVEY

Newly Formed Association Perform Tests on Med. Students

A health survey of medical students by committees of the Canadian Association of Medical Students and Internes is being conducted this fall.

The association was formed last March at a meeting of representatives from Western, McGill, Queen's and Toronto Universities to facilitate co-operation between Canadian hospital doctors, interne committees, faculties, students and internes.

The immediate objective is to improve the methods of early diagnosis of tuberculosis among medical students and internes. Routine tuberculosis testing and X-ray examinations of positive reactors was decided upon.

To standardize the time for appointment of internes in Canadian hospitals, a central bureau is to be set up for the filing of applications.

An advisory board will be chosen from members of the medical profession at a conference of students and internes to be held in January.

Mr. Lore is known for his modern newspaper scoop when he anticipated the Nazi blood purge in 1933.

The forum is dealing with current problems, especially in connection with the recent European crisis. Other speakers in the series include Professor Oscar Janowsky, professor at City College, New York.

SERPENT SLITHERS SAFELY

On the top floor of the Biology Building there lives a blond snake. It is one of the few hundreds of snakes in the vivarium which are used in experiments throughout the university.

The blond snake is merely a faded specimen of the garter snake. Like other animals the snake can be born without colour. (However, this Albino snake, an easy prey for enemies, has a brief existence.)

The living conditions of the snake are of the best. Many have a whole acre. A 9-foot South American boa coiled nonchalantly on the top of a box. Beside him lay his skin.

Some were all wrapped up in themselves—a method of cleansing—by drawing through their own coils.

Their diets alter with their constitutions. In the vivarium, their food is

RESULT OF TESTS FOR TUBERCULOSIS TO BE ANNOUNCED

Survey of Medical Students not yet Completed by Dr. McLean

EXAMINATION COST SMALL

"Nothing definite in regard to the tuberculosis examinations of the medical students can be announced as yet," was the opinion expressed by Dr. McLean, who is in charge of the tuberculin tests, in an interview with The Varsity yesterday afternoon. No statistics have been compiled, because the first year students remain to be tested. The subjects are first given the skin-test. An extract of tuberculo-protein is injected under the skin. This test separates those who have been exposed to T-B or have it from those who have not. About 70 or 80 per cent of the students react positively. These students then undergo an X-ray examination, which costs two dollars, to determine if the disease has taken hold.

The cost of giving the skin-test is very small. The tuberculo-protein costs but a few cents, and one person is sufficient to give the test. The average cost of health service in the universities of the United States is nine dollars per student, while here at Toronto the student.

Parkes Pleads Cause Of German Refugees

S.C.M. Speaker Blames Church for Growth of Anti-Semitism

Cleric Points Moral Danger of Refusing Aid to Jewish Exiles

AT CONVOCATION SUNDAY

"Christianity is to blame for the Gentiles' dislike of Jews," said Dr. James Parkes of London, England, at the S.C.M. noon-hour address yesterday.

"There are two fundamental reasons why the Jew is abnormally placed in present society," continued Dr. Parkes. "The Jews had won complete citizenship in the Roman Empire, but by the commencement of the Dark Ages in 500 A.D. they had lost their much-earned freedom under the Feudal Laws. Medieval life was wholly bound up in the Christian oath of piety to the overlord. But Jews couldn't take the oath, so they were expelled from their lands."

"The second reason grows from the medieval expulsion of Jews from Craft Guilds. Thus, was the Jew pushed into the remaining field of livelihood, commerce, in which he became the much-hated usurer or money lender. Even here, the Jew was curbed by stern restrictions."

"There is only one Christian body among the mass of Christian sects which has done any great work in the settling of Jewish problems, the Society of Friends, and to their organization," said Dr. Parkes, "I take off my hat." "The Gentiles and Jews of Canada must wake up to the situation. America to the south is already awakening. American Jews are becoming desirable citizens, practicing the arts like normal beings."

Dr. Parkes is speaking in Convocation Hall at 3 p.m. this Sunday on "The Christian, the Jew and the Future."

The Registrar of the University is now checking with the College Registrars the Registration Cards of all students in the Faculty of Arts. After the checking is completed changes in these cards will not be permitted unless the Council approves. All students should at once make sure that the information given the Registrar of the University corresponds with that given the College Registrar.

WEBBER DISPLAYS MURALS IN HOUSE

University Activities Depicted By Student Arts Group

Mr. Gordon Webber is a young man with ideas. He looks forward to the day when murals depicting the changing phases of university life will enliven Hart House, and the work of students will be prominently displayed throughout the building.

"But that may not come for another year," admitted the newly appointed Art Director. "My idea, however, is to try to correlate all the activities of Hart House with this form of expression. For instance, we could utilize the ideas in a debate or a theatrical presentation for a series of sketches or a stage setting. Our first venture will probably be a backdrop for the Glee Club in their program of sea shanties."

Nor does the athletic wing escape the notice of Mr. Webber. He wants to record sporting activity in what he termed "three-dimensional mediums"—woods, metals and plastics, and to this end he is working with a small arts and crafts group.

STUDENTS MUST FIND WAY

By Rowen Frank
"The democratic countries are taking a tremendous amount upon the moral appeal of the present situation and do not accept the refugees," said Dr. James Parkes in an interview yesterday. "There are at least half a million people in Germany today facing extinction, and we must not refuse their call."

Dr. Parkes admitted that the economic difficulties of the present day made it difficult for governments to allow migration. "It is a dilemma," he said, "but more difficult problems have been solved. We must find some way of getting groups of refugees into every country, and make economic adjustments afterwards."

He was unwilling to commit himself as to what students should do, although he said they could do something. "I can outline the problem as an observer, but the solution of it must be handled by Canadians in their own way," was his only comment.

Dr. Parkes is an Englishman, an Anglican clergyman, and discussed the problems over a cup of "English tea" at a small tea-shop on Bloor Street. He has been brought to Canada by the Committee for Jewish-Gentile relations, and has already made one appearance on the campus at yesterday's

FUTURE POPULATION TO BE DISCUSSED

College Parliament Debate Potential Capacity of Canada

Canada's potential future population will be the subject of discussion at the U.C. Parliament this afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Junior Common Room as the resolution: "Resolved that Canada cannot support a larger population," will be debated.

"As Canadians we might as well realize that we are on the fringe of world economic development," said the Rt. Hon. Sally MacDonnell, Prime Minister. "Our future development will be conditioned by that fact and our economic progress and power of supporting a larger population will be slower, and less intense than similar expansion to the south. Not only is it doubtful whether future developments will allow any large-scale immigration movements to this country, but it is evident already that we cannot support adequately the present population despite the fact that various economic problems seen in more developed nations have not struck Canada forcibly as yet."

The Wrong Results

Although the producers of the University College Follies doubtless do not object to the publicity that has been given to the members of their chorus during the past few days, we wonder if it is all to the good of the University in general.

It certainly isn't anything out of the ordinary for co-eds to appear in the chorus of a high class college show, and as they appear as dancers it is natural that they should be attired in costume. It is also natural that downtown newspapers in writing features on such a popular and well-known show would wish to publish pictures of what might be considered the most attractive part of the production. And the chorus of the Follies is certainly attractive.

When a columnist wants to attract some attention to himself, criticizing a popular institution is a very good way of accomplishing that very thing. But the criticism by a publicity-seeking writer doesn't mean that the public believes that the students waste the tax-payers' money by putting on semi-nude show.

However, in the future pictures are to be banned, although last night's issue of the Star didn't seem to fall in line with the new policy.

There was no justification for the charges made in the first place, but the banning of the pictures has only drawn further attention to these charges, and carries with it the implication that perhaps they were justified.

Photographs were already taken, and it was only natural that these photographs would be re-published with a nice little feature story as soon as the ban was issued. On the whole the results of the picture ban does not merit the action.

Political Action Needed

Inaction has always been the bane of democracy. Because of red tape or the pressure of certain interests, or because of their belief in "pass the buck" methods, popularly elected governments have put off for years legislation which was immediately necessary. A certain amount of time and deliberation in passing laws is no doubt a good thing but an undue postponement of important legislation can, especially in what we call times of crisis, have very disastrous results. At the present time democracies are faced by nations who have an entirely different type of government which, on the surface at least, has a knack of getting things done. To meet this challenge democratic governments must stop their shilly-shally tactics of delay and prove that they too are powerful and active forces.

In Canada (as in practically every other democratic country) we are faced with a problem of unemployment. Instead of trying to find some plan which would solve this problem our respective governments (federal, provincial, and municipal) have spent their time bickering as to how much of the relief costs each is responsible. Unemployment is unquestionably the most vicious enemy we have to deal with, for continued unemployment leads to discontent which expresses itself in the statement "What we need is a strong man to lead us out of our difficulties", and it is not hard to see how such feeling becomes the breeding ground for the overthrow of the democratic and the establishment of the dictatorship.

Other questions which require our immediate attention in Canada have to do with legislation regarding the workers' welfare, such as Unemployment Insurance, Wages and Hours, and Collective Bargaining. There has been much talk in Parliament about these but little, if any, action. Of course, certain business interests, when any of the above legislation is mentioned, issue wild and violent objections. They shout about the God-given right of business-men to regulate their own affairs and that any government interference would only result in disaster. Of course, these self-same business men would raise even louder objections if the government suddenly announced that it was removing all tariffs on industrial imports. (A move which, by the way, would be very favourably regarded both in the Prairie and Maritime provinces.) Yet such a move could easily be interpreted as realization by the government that it shouldn't interfere with the course of trade. These business men believe that it is wicked for the government to interfere in establishing minimum wages but that it is quite proper for the government to interfere to break a strike.

However, it is true, though unfortunate, that most people's views are determined by their pocketbooks. Democratic governments, therefore, must cease yielding to the pressure of financial interests and pass necessary social legislation. If democracy is to survive it must guarantee the worker a certain minimum wage, regularity of income and security in old age. Democracy must be economic as well as political to have any meaning.

It is up to the men who make up the Canadian government to take action. The time for platitudes such as "We will bring back prosperity" or "We will end unemployment" has long passed. It is up to the various political parties to tell the public clearly and definitely just what is their specific plan for ending unemployment and also just what is their attitude towards legislation regarding Unemployment Insurance, Wages and Hours, Old Age Insurance, and various other social problems. If any political party is unable or unwilling to make such statements to the electorate, then there is no room for it in the Canadian scene.

College Values

(From Idaho Bengal)

One of the prevalent fallacies of contemporary thought is the attempt to evaluate a college education, especially a basic liberal arts education, in terms of dollars and cents. One very frequently hears college condemned because of the many Joe Zilches that have studied through to their degrees and then have had to fall back on the honourable but comparatively non-lucrative professions of selling bonds or officiating at oil stations.

It is granted that sooner or later we all must face the somewhat annoying problem of making a living. But it is necessary to enrich our lives intellectually, culturally, and spiritually as well as materially. A common enough idea, but one can stand a little emphasis. It is not only possible, it is certain that there are benefits and values to be derived from college that are intrinsically separate from food, clothing and shelter.

The powerful lure of knowledge itself, for example, is sufficient in many cases to justify the attending of college. To a great many individuals, learning is no less an adventure than climbing the Grand Teton is to others. In other cases, enrichment is found in contacts made in music, art, dramatics and allied fields. Social contacts, divorced though they may be from actual college work, open the door to a richer life for others. This line of reasoning could be extended almost indefinitely; in fact, it has been. The point to be made is that these values are no less values because they are intangible from a cash standpoint.

Measuring a college education, then, in terms of dollars and cents is, in most cases, as futile as the attempt to put a money value on friendship. It is like attempting to see how many glasses of cider can be extracted from a dozen oranges.

Capt. L. C. Schlötel, an anti-gas expert, speaking at Plymouth about air-raid precautions, said: "It is difficult to fit bearded men with gas masks, and, should an emergency arise, those with beards more than a hand long might be faced with the alternative of either cutting their beards off or being gassed." —Evening Standard.

"Long ago dreamers whose visions were troublesome to the powerful, were executed. Nowadays they are dealt with in an equally effective, but much more subtle manner. They are often induced to compromise with their dreams, or principles, for the sake of money, or for the security of their families." —Reported from a speech by Dr. J. S. Thomson.

An interview with the director of the U.C. Follies:

Q. Have you ever seen the Follies?
A. No, but I hope to after I graduate, if I graduate, and come early enough.

Q. Why haven't you seen them?
A. I've been in them.

Q. Have you ever danced at the Follies?

A. Oh, is there any dancing?
Q. Don't you bring a girl?

A. Yes.
Q. What does she do during the three shows?

A. She curses the day she was born.
Q. What does she do after the shows?

A. She curses the day I was born.
Q. What do you do after the Follies?

A. I start taking lectures again.
Q. Anything else?

A. Yes, I look around for a new girl.

RESULT OF TUBERCULOSIS TESTS TO BE ANNOUNCED

dent is required to pay for health service only a dollar a year for his first two years. Dr. Edith Gordon, Medical Advisor for Women, has been testing the women for tuberculosis and X-raying the positive cases for many years.

Although there are no definite statistics it is believed that tuberculosis is of higher incidence among medical students than those in other courses for several reasons. The medical faculty's time-table is very strenuous, and a student who is over-worked and in a low physical condition, can re-infect himself. Medical students are also exposed to many undiagnosed cases which other students wouldn't come into contact with. It is planned to give the skin-test to the Meds every six months.

VARSITY MEETS R.M.C.

For the first time in the history of senior intercollegiate soccer, there will be a play-off this year between the winners of the eastern and western sections, it was announced yesterday. Royal Military College, champions of the two-team eastern group comprising R.M.C. and McGill, has challenged Varsity, top team in the western intercollegiate division, and will come west-ming with the senior Blues.

The match will take place on the front campus at ten-thirty. The seniors, boasting one of the strongest teams Varsity has fielded in many years, are confident of winning another intercollegiate title for the University of Toronto, and have been practicing steadily all week in anticipation of the title game with the Cadets.

Speaking OF SPORT

By Alan Harvey

ABOUT THE AGGIES

In a statement released to the press Tuesday afternoon, Fred Baldwin, coach of Ontario Agricultural College, spiked rumours that the Aggies would meet University of Toronto seniors, or any other ranking senior football squad, in a post-season test of strength.

And so the razzle-dazzle, nigger-dipper Redmen will not have a chance this season to demonstrate whether or not they are of senior calibre. Ever since those classy red-clad, ball-totin' Aggies slapped down Varsity Seconds by that preposterous 51-3 count a week ago last Saturday, there have been mutterings among the football-minded gentry about the possibility of the Guelph team entering in senior ranks.

Guelph is one of the hottest sports centres in the province, and the facility is right behind the team. With an attendance of over one thousand students, the Royal City fans feel they can support a senior team, despite the fact that at the present time playing facilities are limited. The objection has also been raised that the inclusion of Guelph in the Big Time would necessitate a five-team group, which would prolong the rah rah schedule beyond its ordinary limits.

In the face of this opposition, advocates of the Aggies suggested that an exhibition game should be arranged between O.A.C. and Varsity seniors. However, Coach Baldwin delivered his ultimatum, and there will be no practice tilt for the Aggies this fall. Saturday afternoon the Baldwintines meet R.M.C., champions of the eastern intermediate section, to decide the provincial title. It is expected that the Cadets, who were badly mauled by the senior teams in pre-season tilts, will be a soft touch for the Redmen.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

Pontiac's Red Indians, entrants in the T.H.L. Major Commercial Series, picked up a good defenceman yesterday when they signed Ernie Rey, beat of the Varsity blue line guardians last year. Another ex-Varsity player to perform in this league is 'Muck' McIlquham. Driscoll, Rey's defence mate last year, is teaching near North Bay. Still on the subject of hockey, competition for the cup awarded by the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association gets under way this Saturday. The first half of the twin bill matches Upper Canada College and St. Mike's Buzzers, while St. Mike's Majors and Lions collide in the wind-up affair.

There is plenty of activity among members of the cauliflower cult these chilly afternoons. No less than thirty of the beard beaters were going through their paces when we passed by the other afternoon. ... Switching to soccer, a team that really deserves student support will perform on the front campus at ten-thirty Saturday morning, when Varsity's undefeated senior soccerites oppose O.R.C.C. champions of the eastern division. This is the first time in the history of intercollegiate soccer that such a play-off has been held.

Tomorrow afternoon is Mulock Cup day and the teams that will battle for the battered mug are Junior S.P.S. and Senior Meds. A team representing S.P.S. last won the trophy in 1932. Victoria has grabbed off the cup every year but one since 1931. Dents copping the honours in 1934.

Baiting for the intercollegiate all-star team is still open. From the early returns the favoured twelve seem to be Stollery, Westman, Faust, Farmer, Perowne, Willis, Anton, Stridevan, Oliphant, Rushin, Turner and Beattie. The

By Marg Conlin

Featuring Jean Crawford, former London Collegiate star, Vic Frosh out-passed and out-ran U.C. Srs. in the third cage game at O.C.E. last night. Jean Crawford, a member of the team which won the W.O.S.S.A. trophy last year, is one of the best forwards produced in freshie ranks this year. Beryl Pollock, playing for the Frosh, shone at centre.

More constructive criticism from our downtown contemporary (ahem), Phil Griffiths suggested last night that if the Basketball Club could invest in a time-clock which is badly needed, it might also arrange to have cards on the sidelines indicating which team had the throw-in. These cards are used in high school games, and their absence at Varsity games causes much unnecessary confusion. And furthermore (while we are on the subject)—the rule book specifies them.

Of the two other games last night, Kay Bennett's guarding job for St. Mike's in holding the famed Elsie Courtney of Nurses, scoreless, is noteworthy. The game between Vic Jrs. and U.C. Frosh was distinguished by the fine guarding of Molly Moore of the Jrs. The guards certainly had a night of it.

SPORT SPLASHES

By a 6-3 count a victorious Varsity water polo team outscored a powerful High Park Swimming Club team in Hart House pool last night. Against the all-star team pooled by the High Park Club, comprising nation-wide famous swimmers and water polo players like Bob Pirie, Bill Bell, Bill Brass and Les Curry, the Blue team clicked like a perfectly oiled machine. Checking was hard, breaking was fast and the forwards were getting their shots away hard and accurately. Bob Pirie opened the scoring and gave High Park an early lead but the Blue team came right back and Mabec tied the score. Another play and Varsity took the lead, which, although threatened seriously several times, they managed to hold for the rest of the game.

In the third quarter of the game the fast pace began to tell on the visitors and the well conditioned Blue natators slowly began to dominate the play and slowly forged ahead in their lead. Playing a man short in this period, because of a penalty, the home team showed what they had by forcing play for two minutes before High Park notched up a counter. Bill Brass, playing a great game in goal for the visitors, turned back many hard shots as did Taylor in the Varsity goal, although the Blue team's shots were the better placed. Pirie, Curry and Stevens were good for the losers, while Taylor in the net, Jackson, Mabec and Green were outstanding for the winners.

started something at the U. of Alabama when he told one of his classes that "the national debt was now $37,558,369,963". . . . One of these guys who keeps the pencil business booming figured this one out . . . He figured that if the debt were in $1 bills, they would encircle the earth at the equator 145 times, or they could be used to make a bridge to the moon $15 wide. . . . If the currency was stacked sixteen to the sixteenth of an inch, it would form a pile 1,181 feet high, higher than the Chrysler building . . . in area, the bills would cover 149.6 square miles . . . YES, BUT WHY BOTHER.

HERE'S A FRESHMAN who should be given credit . . . He is a pretty clever boy even for a freshman . . . He needed a date, and this is his advertisement in the local newspaper. . . . WANTED: blonde co-ed, preferably not over 18 years old. Height not to exceed 5 ft. 4 and weight in the friendly neighbourhood of 100 pounds. Successful applicant receives place nearest my heart and escort to the military ball. . . . The freshman received eight replies. . . . Perhaps there's too much of a good thing.

THIS IS THE RIGHT SPIRIT. . . . the browsing room of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, has a sign which reads, "No students allowed in this room". . . . It seems that the powers that be decided that the room should be used solely for the casual reading of light fiction. . . . THIS IS A GOOD THING. . . .

Isn't it funny how people will keep on reading drivel like this when they know it isn't anything at all but something to fill the space. And now that you've read this far, You'll probably read this far, which exactly fills the column. Suckers.

PARKES PLEADS CAUSE OF GERMAN REFUGEES

S.C.M. noon-hour address. He will make at least one more here at Convocation Hall on Sunday, and may revisit the University when he returns from Montreal in December.

"The astounding thing that I found with regard to the immigration situation here," he confided, "is that Canadians who are students of the subject do not know definitely whether the country can or cannot profit from an influx of emigres. Until you yourselves find out the answer to this problem nothing can be done. And the answer must be found."

"Palestine can't solve the present problem," he said. "This is the most terrible situation in which the Jewish people has found itself in the world today, and the responsibility of alleviating this rests with the Gentiles. You may stress that as much as you like."

Referring to the conference which may be called by the British government to discuss the refugee problem, Dr. Parkes confessed that he did not know what to think. His chief objection was that Chamberlain was accepting the "German blackmail" completely. "If the problem is to be solved, Germany must take a certain responsibility and financial liability for its solution," he said.

The conversation drifted to the spread of fascism in England. Dr. Parkes' opinion was that Mosley has gotten as far as he could get. "Mosley has succeeded in making life hell for some of the Jewish communities in the larger cities, but his national effect has been nil. He has not succeeded in getting anyone elected, and his supporters are continually deserting him in disgust."

We referred to the alleged curtailment of liberty of speech in Britain, which Dr. Parkes admitted was true. He said that it had not gone far, but there was a great deal of fear that it would. "The present government is decidedly averse to having anything said against Germany, and there is no doubt that if the leaders of the government had their way, freedom of expression would be cut to a minimum," was his opinion.

POPULATION DISCUSSED

The Hon. H. H. Boulton, leader of the opposition, declared, "Geographically and from the standpoint of resources we know that Canada can support a much larger population. We see in Europe nations with populations ranging from forty to eighty millions, nations which from the standpoint of resources cannot compare with the potentialities of our vast Dominion. Once our ideas in relation to economic planning are sufficiently developed it ought to be possible to distribute the products of Canadian resources among a population of at least fifty millions."

TRADITIONAL RIVALS MEET IN MULOCK CUP FINAL TO-DAY

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

King to Washington
Washington, D.C., Nov. 17: The Canadian Prime Minister left for Washington to discuss with President Roosevelt their common problems. The defense of Canadian waters will be one of the chief topics for discussion.

Jews Terrorized
Berlin, Nov. 17: As the aftermath of the funeral of Von Rath in Dueseldorf, Jews fear more violence on the part of the Nazis. New prohibitions have been made and a mass eviction from homes is feared.

Sign Trade Agreements
Ottawa, Nov. 17: A new trade agreement has been signed in Washington by which Canada acquires new concessions from the United States although the Dominion looses her wheat preference in the United Kingdom. A new Anglo-American pact was signed at the same time.

Lends Itself to Realistic Portrayal of Many Plays

Radio drama as a new field of art was brilliantly put forward by Robert Edmonds of the CBC, speaking to the New Writers' Group last night.

Orson Welles' famous blunder was taken as an example of the difficulties as well as the possibilities of this new medium. Mr. Welles was necessarily quite out of touch with his listeners and emotional feeling accumulated unchecked like a giant snowball. "Had it taken place in a hall, they would have laughed at themselves," said Mr. Edmonds.

Shakespeare lends itself well to radio adaptation because of its profuse colloquialisms. This was due to the lack of scenery and properties on the Elizabethan stage. On the other hand, Shakespeare is too verbose, action is too long delayed.

Time is the ruling element in radio. A run-over of 10 seconds can put a whole network out of schedule. The average speed of speaking on the air is estimated at 125 words per minute. A radio sketch must be carefully moulded to fit a 15 minute or 28 minute space. Music is a very important factor in this medium.

ROBINS SAYS FICTION STRESSES "ROMANTIC"

"The great bulk of fiction that has been written has been romantic," Dr. J. D. Robins told the Victoria Writers' group last evening. He maintained that it always would be so, for romantic fiction alone can provide the escape that the reading public demands.

He held that the subjective method was a good device but only if used sparingly; its danger lay in the tendency to use it merely as an excuse to cover lazy writing.

Stories submitted by the group members were discussed at the meeting, the first one which has been devoted entirely to prose fiction. The members felt that the number of manuscripts submitted justified the experiment; in past meetings it has been customary to deal with the poetry first, the prose receiving very scant attention.

Macaulay Gives Warning Against Fascist Menace

Conservative Leader Declares Dictators Plotting World Rule

SPEAKS AT LUNCHEON

A warning against the encroachments of fascism on Canadian soil was made by the Leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, Hon. Leopold Macaulay, yesterday.

"We are fooling around at the moment dealing with industrial reforms," he told the Macdonald-Carter Club at their monthly luncheon meeting, "when we should be considering how we can contribute to the strength of democracy."

Declaring that there was a definite plan by dictators to divide and rule the world, Macaulay urged that "insurance premiums" be paid by democracies for the freedom they now enjoy. According to Macaulay, Canada is not an inviolable part of the British Empire and is not safe from attacks by totalitarian powers.

"Canada is a luscious prize for a piratical raid by some dictatorial nation," he said.

"It rests with today's generation," he went on, "whether the British Empire stands or falls into dust. We are faced today for the first time in 100 years with a struggle to maintain the ideals of our forefathers. Our freedom is challenged today like it never was before."

Efforts by democracies to consolidate their defence were visible in the creation of liberty in economic and (Continued on page 4)

CRATED AEROPLANE AROUSES COMMENT

Machine Intended for S.P.S. Seen Outside Mining Building

Causing much speculation among interested spectators yesterday morning, a crated aeroplane arrived outside the Mining Building. The Flying Club all most obtained several new members, as students assumed the aeroplane was for the club, and several inquiries were made as to when actual flying would be done.

Professor T. R. Loudon cleared up the situation when he revealed that the machine was a gift of the government, to be used in the aeronautical course at S.P.S. Much interest is being evinced. (Continued on page 4)

Follies To Put on Show Without Elephant, Tootsie Tied Up With Movies

Coming into the last stretch before the show proper, the Follies rehearsals are proceeding apace and a high pitch of excitement is prevailing among the members of the cast and the committee. And what about the elephant? Well, it seems that the elephant had a contract with M.G.M., and this is going to make it impossible for Tootsie to appear on the stage of Hart House. The committee received a personal message from her in the form of a trumpet solo in which she said: "... Am tied up ... Tootsie."

Conservatives View Recent Success As Portent of Republican Uptrend

By Ross Munro
CUP Correspondent

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—Many old-line Conservatives here view the Republican revival in the recent United States elections, as a portent of the times and an optimistic sign for the Tory party in this country.

While it is interpreted broadly as a revolt against the New Deal and no parallel can be drawn in Canada, it is considered by some authorities that the underlying cause for the Republican comeback was a trend in public opinion towards a more conservative form of democratic government.

With an election likely in Canada next fall, any indication of voting sentiment, even in a neighbouring country, is a valuable asset to the political pundits that chart the courses of the various Canadian parties. So they are studying the American vote closely with the Tories especially deriving the most satisfaction by a hypothetical comparison between the obvious trend of American public opinion and the possibility that such a trend will become

NEGATIVE UPHELD BY NARROW MARGIN IN COLLEGE DEBATE

Parliament Decides Canada Can Support Larger Population

VOTE IS 16-13

A vote of 16-13 defeated the resolution that "In the opinion of this house Canada cannot support a larger population" in the U.C. Parliament yesterday afternoon. The Prime Minister, Sally MacDonald, and her supporters maintained that the one million unemployed whom Canada is at present straining every effort to support, make it impracticable and impossible for her to import refugees from Europe.

It was maintained that Canada's soil, both in the West and East is becoming more and more barren, and unfit to support her present population; that the benefit accruing to Canadian industry will be small, inasmuch as immigrants will not be allowed to leave their European homes with capital of any amount.

Further, although a few selected industries need immigrants, on the whole Canadian manufacturers cannot make places for this country's present citizens, and therefore since Canada cannot support her present population "we should not import people who will be branded as unwanted, and who will in the jungles of our cities, be dragged (Continued on page 4)

SENIOR RUGBY PLAYERS TO BE SORORITY GUESTS

From sources other than a gridiron comes news of the University of Toronto senior rugby team. Warren Stevens' boys, who have put up a valiant struggle this year in the inter-collegiate series, are to experience something new and different from the average run of rugby week-ends.

Saturday evening in the Crystal Ballroom of the Royal York Hotel the Blue team will be the guests of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority. After a season in training with even the meals supervised the boys will be glad no doubt to throw off the yoke and partake of an evening's entertainment on the dance floor.

STUDENTS DIVIDED ON FOLLIES QUIZ

Pictures of Follies' Chorus Arouse Varied Opinions

On the question of whether or not shorts-clad Follies girls should pose for newspaper photographs, student opinion is divided. There are some who strongly disapprove, but the majority seem to consider the pictures harmless. Wycliffe College was absolutely silent.

Said Frances Carlisle, IV U.C.: "If outsiders get the wrong impression about our college activities from those photographs then they should not be published." Dick Stuart, I Theology, also stated that Toronto citizens have to be considered.

That the pictures were undignified, and the display of legs quite unnecessary was the opinion of Alf Dadds, I Theology. "I think the Casino's the place for that," he said.

Paul Christensen, II Theology, stated that the pictures were likely to offend many, and therefore should not be allowed to appear.

On the other hand, groups of students at Lorretto College and Annesley Hall, (Continued on page 4)

FORMER MEDS STUDENT RECEIVES APPOINTMENT

Doctor S. Murray, former prominent undergraduate of the Faculty of Medicine, has been appointed Medical Health Officer of Greater Vancouver, it was learned yesterday. The new appointee succeeds Dr. J. W. Macintosh, who has retired.

A native of Dundas, Ontario, Murray attended Varsity, from where he was graduated in 1926. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Murray, are still living there.

His staff includes 11 physicians, 48 nurses, 4 dentists, and several inspectors and laboratory workers, a total of almost one hundred.

Anticipate Kicking Duel Between Fugler and Clinkett

AT VARSITY STADIUM

With both their faculties declaring half-holidays in honour of the occasion, University of Toronto's bitterest inter-faculty rivalry will be renewed this afternoon, when Sr. Meds and Jr. School football squads meet in the Mulock Cup finals at Varsity Stadium.

As both squads have gone through a complete season united and unbeaten and both have shown a strong, wide-open attack, the game should be a worthy example of the fighting feuds that the Doctors and Schoolmen have carried on since the league's innovation in 1894.

The Medico attack is sponsored by Fred Clinkett, blond triple threat ace, who can pass, boot and run as well as many senior backs in the country. He will be given stellar support by Paul McGee on the half line, while Gus O'Brien, former Varsity intermediate snap, forms their main defensive cog. S.P.S., on the other hand, sport a well balanced half line with Ronny (Continued on page 4)

BLUE SOCCERITES TAKE ON CADETS

Title Tilt Takes Place on Front Campus Tomorrow

An inspired Wycliffe soccer team were held to a scoreless tie in their first play-off game with Vic on the front campus yesterday. The two teams will meet again as part of their round robin series with the winner of the Meds-Dents clash.

Paced by the tricky Jim Morris at outside left, and cheered on by an enthusiastic crowd, the Theologs pressed hard from the start.

Rush after rush by the Anglicans produced several scoring chances, but each time the shot was wide or Victoria were able to clear. Once a shot by Morris hit the goal post for the closest call of the game.

Professor Denies Play Caused Injuries To Trinity "Hay Fever" Cast

"That ramour is maliciously false," stated Professor R. K. Professor Hicks, director of Hay Fever, refused to comment on the possible origin of the ramour, but asserted that his cast were "pleasantly elated" by Noel Coward's lines. All of them are "thoroughly prepared" for the opening next Wednesday.

Canada Can Help

Has the world gone mad? The Nazi fires of hell seem to have been turned loose again on the Jewish people, subjecting them to the most inconceivable atrocities, and as yet little has been done to provide for them a place of refuge. How the intelligent, enlightened German people, one of the finest and most intelligent races on the face of the earth has allowed itself to be duped into allowing its government to perpetrate such persecutions is incomprehensible—but nevertheless true.

We in the Western hemisphere need to keep our sanity, or we will allow prejudice and propaganda to carry us off our feet too. Right on this campus at the present time there is a student from Japan, who although in possession of a scholarship which provides for his fees, is unable to secure enough work to keep himself in food. In fact he can't find any work—not because he isn't capable of, or skilled in work, but simply because the feeling against the Japanese people has grown too fanatical for individuals to give him work. It's rank hypocrisy. We have no quarrel with the average Japanese citizen. Nor with the average German citizen either for that matter.

When Canadians are willing to stop accepting profits for materials exported to the Japanese to help them carry on their wars, then we may have a right to talk.

What can we do?

Yesterday a survey of the campus revealed that professors and students agreed that Canadians should forget about economic difficulties, and work constructively to provide relief and a home for the Jewish refugees in Europe. It was the general view that Canada should have her fair share of the refugees along with the U.S.A., and other parts of the British Empire.

We may well profit by receiving into our country some of the greatest minds of the world which Hitler seems to feel he does not need. And we wouldn't be the first country that found that out. We are mighty proud of the Jewish people which we have in our country now, and especially in this University.

And we feel that it would not be amiss if the wealthy Jewish people of America and the rest of the world were to take the lead in helping their unfortunate brethren.

Ineffectual Albion

As self-appointed policeman of the Holy Land, John Bull is not an unqualified success. The irresistible force of Zionism has met the immovable object of Arab nationalism, resulting in a tense and bloody deadlock. Britain's conciliatory measures have done nothing to improve the situation. Last year a Royal Commission under the late Lord Peel made a survey and recommended that the country be partitioned into a Jewish State, an Arab State, and a British Corridor. So great was the Arab terrorism following this announcement that the project was dropped.

In April another commission under Sir John Woodhead restudied the situation, and submitted its proposals last week. This report suggested two new partition schemes, but admitted that it was impossible to divide that country into satisfactory economic, political, and racial units. The British Government thereupon abandoned partition as "impracticable" and tried another time-honoured, time-stealing method. The Cabinet called in London a round-table conference of Jews and Arabs, and urged them to settle their differences under supervision or accept an arbitrary settlement. The terrorism prevailing in Palestine today is eloquent testimony of the success of this measure.

Meanwhile the Zionists, whose plight has been the instigation of these manoeuvres, have begun to speak for themselves. American publisher William B. Ziff in his volume "The Rape of Palestine" directs a series of accusations against Great Britain. He deplores the divide-and-rule policy by which Britain has nursed a weak Arab nationalism to full strength and subsidized anti-Semitism. He points out that though they constitute one-third of the population, Jews hold less than 5 per cent of public jobs; that this one-third lives on one-fifth of the land, and is effectively prevented from obtaining more; that Palestine is underdeveloped and underpopulated, and supports only one-tenth of the population of Roman times; that Jewish immigration has been checked, Arab and Egyptian unrestricted. Unkindest cut of all, he claims that Britain has made millions in Palestine, since while costs of policing are paid from the Palestine treasury, she has secured herself an excellent naval base and foothold in the Near East.

Whether Mr. Ziff, speaking for the friends of Zionism, has a real case or is merely ungrateful, it is apparent that British policy in Palestine is satisfactory to none of the parties concerned. It is true that the referee is always subject to the derision of the crowd; but her position as an ineffectual mandate is doing Britain's international prestige no good. Since she has assumed the knotty problem of settling racial and economic disputes in the Holy Land, it is her business to adopt a firm policy and enforce it without further bias toward Jew or Arab.

The College Factory

(From McGill Daily)

It has often been said that the modern college is too much like an automobile factory where each student goes through a stereotyped curriculum and comes out a rather distorted product. A wide educational survey of 45 Pennsylvania colleges made by the Carnegie Foundation seems to bear out some of these criticisms.

The data is rather technical, but it shows that the distinction between senior and sophomore is little more than nominal, that students are working in faculties for which they are not fitted, and that not enough stress is laid on the individual.

This survey, which has been going on for some ten years, uses an adaptation of the "new type examinations". The work is the first of its kind and it may produce results of great significance to college organizations.

The tests show that in general knowledge or education, Engineering students stand highest, with Arts coming close second. Education students are lowest in this rating.

But the most important point is, that improvement from year to year is hardly noticeable among the students, showing that something is wrong with the present system and with the method of choosing courses.

Suggestions, however, of a sweeping change for greater freedom for students in their work should be looked upon with suspicion. To use such freedom well, education is itself a prerequisite. The proper method of improvement seems to be that now in progress—more attention to the individual. But hardly anything has been done so far. A great deal more work along these lines remains to be completed.

It has been estimated that every student in the Arts Faculty of a university costs the state approximately ten thousand dollars for the four years' education, over and above the fees paid by the student. The state probably considers it a good investment, but if there is a loss it should be remembered that it is the other members of the community who bear the weight of it. Every student therefore has a very definite responsibility in seeking a higher education because his failure will mean that he has betrayed a trust which was put in him by others.

SANTAGRAM

Hello, you little pests:
Well, now I have to give you little pains-in-the-neck another dose of trash on my trip from the North Pole. To think that I took four years of an Honour English course just to write this tripe. I should have taken Physiotherapy.

So you little dopes thought I was talking to Eskimo paposes and little bear-cubs yesterday, didn't you? Well, I was having a few classes of beer, and shot some pool, so there.

Soon I'll have to ride down Bloor Streets when it's cold as hades, and wave at a gaping bunch of boobs till my arm aches. Then I'll sit on a chair in a rickety arkhway and take you drooling little ragamuffins on my knee and say nice things to your pimply big brothers and gawky sisters.

I'm already storing up a stock of lozenges for the laryngitis I get from laughing like an ape.

Don't forget, I'm broadcasting today, and if I don't die of boredom listening to my own baldersdash, it's because I stuff my ears. It is indicative of a rising generation of morons, when you screwy brats can listen to my tripe. And it's indicative of the moral decay of humankind, when I consent to dish it out.

And if any dirty little gutter-snipe wipes his nose in my beard this year, so help me, I'll murder him.

So here's hoping you all fall down the stairs or get measles.

Lovingly,

Santa.

The Sportsman

Introducing the Women's Sports Editor of the Western 'Gazette' about whom we were telling you last week. For your information and pleasure, Miss Joan Breakpear, who also starred in Western's intercollegiate tennis team, has consented to write the column today. Take it away, Joan.

By Joan Breakpear
Women's Sports Editor, The Gazette
University of Western Ontario
Women's sports at Western come second, of course, to men's sports. This is, I suppose, to be expected, but in spite of it we have activities covering every field and attracting the intense interest of all the girls.

For the purpose of intramural sports the university is divided into four houses corresponding to the various courses: Keyes House—all secretarial students; Meds—all medical and public health students; Neville—all second, third and fourth year Arts students; open—all first year students. During the fall and winter competition is held in archery, badminton, basketball, volleyball, swimming and tennis. The coveted trophy awarded for highest total points in all these is the Lang Trophy and interest in interhouse sports is as keen among the girls as is the interest in intercollegiate rugby among the boys. (Well, almost.)

Then we have what is known as the inter-Western League which includes competition with our affiliated colleges—Alma College, Brescia Hall and Waterloo College. In the fall a meet is held at which the teams take part in archery, volleyball, softball, tennis, track and field. In the winter there are home and home games in basketball and badminton. Credits are awarded for inter-Western activities and make participation worth-while.

Intercollegiate sports rank first in importance. Those in which Western takes part are basketball, badminton, swimming, tennis and telegraphic archery. While we have not distinguished ourselves particularly in badminton, swimming and tennis during the last few years we may be permitted to brag a little about our senior girls' basketball team. Western has brought home the Bronze Baby now for three successive years. We are looking forward to the tournament which is to be held in London this year and hope to make it four straight for the Purple and White. However, that remains to be seen.

This completes the list of sports in which the girls of Western take part. Women's athletic activities are rather feebly and often unwillingly supported by the men in spite of feminine enthusiasm for the sports of the stronger sex. That, I suppose, is natural, but regrettable nevertheless.

Meanwhile the eyes of all athletic circles at Western are turned this week on the rugby final at McGill on Saturday. Perhaps after eight years we are going to have a rugby championship at Western!

Speaking OF SPORT

By Bernie Shifman

STICKS AND STONES MAY... BUT NAMES...

Somewhere, on this sport-filled page you will notice if you scrutinize this paper carefully, an unobtrusive little head, called "Over the Net". You will glance at the head and sneeringly pass quickly over it, turning to so-called more manly sports, and sub-consciously murmur "Sissies, fraidy-cats, or anything that your sub-conscious mind murmurs when you look at an object sneeringly. We hope to revolutionize this entire misconception—we are going to crusade against the confused and unenlightened sports world who associate volleyball with hoops, long curls, and the song "When you and I were young Maggie".

In that little column, Over the Nets, which everyone ignored (Sports Staff included until we played this week), is packed more thrills, more heart-aches, than in a column and a half of... well ping-pong, for instance. This game is a science, with plays as complex as any football formation. It requires the co-ordination of six men, in both defensive and offensive play. Among the players on the teams you will find senior football stars, basketball giants, harrier men, and even some of the Sports Staff if you watch the lowly "third team" play. Thus we assume it requires from the athletes the strength of a football player, the speed and deception of a basketball player and the endurance of a harrier man. Surprising, eh?

This game with the enlarged, air-filled puff-ball has statistically as many active participants as the entire intercollegiate football squads. The rules are simple, fundamentally requiring on the serve to clear the net to the other court, where the opposition are allowed only three hits to return the ball. It is in these three hits that a team shows the science it has mastered, for here is the opportunity to set up a player in such a position that he can use terrific force in returning the ball and at the same time placing it in the court so that it is impossible to return it.

For too long this game has been pushed in the background as no account... an athletic outcast. Even the downtown papers hardly give it the cognizance it is worthy of. If anybody has seen the teams, Dents, Sr. Meds and Sr. U.C., in action, they will guarantee that a better game to watch is hard to find. These teams have the co-ordination that gives the spectator a thrill to see.

BLOW! BLOW! YE ICY WINDS!

The only thing sissified we found about this game was the fact that the boys are complaining in no uncertain terms after the games and showers just because the windows in the dressing room are kept open and there's a little 60 miles per hour gale blowing through the dressing room. Starting in the Debates Room upstairs and sweeping down through the pool room (Ed. note: swimming), and into the locker room for a distance of a mile and a half this wind sweeps. This is really unworthy of you red-corpused participants in this masculine sport. Just because you find your sweater frozen stiff when you come back from the showers is no reason to get mad (think of the poor guys who are playing for the Mulock Cup).

But it was explained to me by one of the boys and I think I can see their point. They don't seem to mind the trivial incidents like catching pneumonia, losing their teeth because of the fierceness of their shivering, they don't even mind the snow that drifts in around their knees but they do object when their hand shakes so that they can't open the combination lock and get their clothes out. That's understandable isn't it?

FOOTBALL FIXED FOR THE FREEZIN'

But talking about the cold and shivering, the Mulock Cup (which according to the 1931 Varsity has remained at U. of T. since its donation and will never be lost to any other university), is up on the block today and bidding is keen. Not for many a year has the competition been as good as it has this year. Victoria, the ex-champs, have released their vice-like grip as Sr. Meds and Jr. S.P.S. have to decide who is going to take the silverware.

We promised the manager of Sr. Meds not to bet his team by calling them for the cup so we'll call the Young Schoolmen. But you know who we really like for the cup. Sparked by Clinkert, who throws and kicks, the Sr. Meds outfit with a heavy front line consisting of Hilda, Bolley, and O'Brien, should force the Engineers to play the best game they are capable of. But whoever wins, congratulations for you are all invited to join the honorable Eskimo Club.

OVER THE NET

Knock, Sr. S.P.S. and Forestry registered victories over their respective rivals, St. Mike's B, Sr. Vic and Pharmacy B in the upper gym yesterday afternoon.

In the first game the senior Schoolmen had little difficulty effacing a hand-banded Sr. Vic team 15-6, 15-8. The best tussle of the day, between Forestry and Pharmacy B, resulted in a three-game 8-15, 16-14, 15-3 triumph for the Foresters.

Fugler, their chief scoring threat, and Munro, Barry and Kilpatrick rounding out the attack. Up to date the Schoolmen have also shown a strong hard-charging line that should give them a slight wingline advantage.

To Sr. Meds goes the honour of being the first team to win the Muldock Cup when it was donated by Sir William Mullock in 1894. But since that time they have only repeated five times, the last champion victory coming thirteen years ago. Jr. School have seven titles to their credit, the first in 1902 and the last in 1926. All of which boils down to the fact that when both teams take the field at 2.30 tomorrow there is more than a title at stake. There is the blood rivalry of two major faculties of Varsity that dates back for nearly half a century.

down to the depths of wretchedness. Charity begins at home." The honourable member from Bottick, leader of the opposition, countered that "We have a marvelous, diversified country, and everything here to make it one of the foremost producers of the world"; that large deposits of clay in the Dominion would provide employment for the trained artisans of Central Europe and result in a prosperous pottery industry and that immigrants skilled in the concentrated farming of Europe could teach Canadian farmers the principles of crop rotation, and such devices to restore its original productivity to the land.

If a state socialism were introduced, and a system of economy under which those who at present do not want employment would have to work, and be distributed in the right sections of the Dominion, Canada could not only support its present population but find a place for large numbers of these educated useful citizens of Europe.

SWING CLUB HEARS VIPOND ON MUSIC

"Of course," Mr. Vipond pointed out, "contemporary swing clubs sprang up in various parts of the country, mainly New York, Duke Ellington has, in my opinion, the world's greatest band. There are two main classes of swing bands—Class A, consisting of the Duke, and Class B, comprising all the others."

The meeting, led by Mr. Vipond, led to a discussion of modern bands, various orchestras and their personnel. Negro bands were compared with white orchestras, and the qualities of each considered. At future meetings the executive promise to have recordings at hand so that the qualities of the various bands can be considered first hand. The next meeting will be held Wednesday, Nov. 23, with Ellington, if at all possible, as guest speaker.

CRATED AEROPLANE ARDOUSES COMMENT

denched in the course by official quarters, as they have donated a great deal of equipment, including instruments and engines.

The aeroplane in question is a De Havilland Moth, a tandem bi-plane, which is standard training equipment. It is to be used for ground training, and chiefly for rigging.

The aeronautical course itself is a very popular one, with 20 students enrolled in it. It is an intensive course, being practical rather than theoretical. There is great opportunity for the graduates of this two-year course, in such fields as that of transport operation. A knowledge of radio is needed, which includes the ability to operate transmitters and receivers, as well as the ability to send and receive code signals.

An interesting sidelight is the fact that at one time, during the Great War, School was given over entirely to the training of men for the air force. The names of the men who took it may still be seen written on the side of one of the windows in Room S-32 on the second floor.

The aeronautical course is now, with the equipment recently acquired, of greater value than ever, and inquiries are numerous, coming even from graduates of School.

The only fly in the ointment is where to keep the aeroplane, as there are no facilities anywhere on the campus, either for storage or for working on the plane. At present, it is lodged in the Wind-tunnel Building, and will have to be trundled over to the basement of School whenever work is to be done on it.

That the root of the trouble with the Jews is the lack of practical sympathy shown by Christians was pointed out yesterday by Dr. James Parkes, in his lecture on "The Christian, the Jew and the Future" in Convocation Hall. There is yet time, however, he maintained, for Christians to determine their policy and stay the progress of anti-Semitism. The time for church protestation in Germany against differentiation between Christian and Jew was in 1933 when it first started, he said. Dr. Parkes outlined the situation of the Jews in the world today, showing that never before in all their long history had they more so terribly confronted with such tragic circumstances as at this time.

"In Poland and former Austria," he said, three and one half million Jews are living in conditions far below average, and another million are on the verge of starvation."

In Palestine, he added, four hundred thousand Jews are wondering what the future will hold for them.

The economic, social, political and cultural contributions made by the Jews toward the good of humanity were pointed out. "We have extraordinary allies in our persecuted Jews who we shall need," said Dr. Parkes.

Dr. Parkes stressed the need for more Christian leadership, and pointed out that it is slowly growing.

A REVIEW OF WORLD EVENTS

Toronto, Nov. 20: At a mass meeting of Jews and Gentiles, held this afternoon in Maple Leaf Gardens, concern was expressed by all shades of the religious world for the plight of German Jewry. Fear that the present petty persecutions of German Catholics and Protestants might shortly grow to the same proportions as the terror visited upon the Jews, was felt by all.

Paris, Nov. 20: That the chief subject for discussion in the Chamberlain-Daladier conference this week would be the growing Nazi threat to Rumania via Hungarian claims, was the opinion of Parisians "in the know".

New York, Nov. 20: Authoritative sources today claimed knowledge of Washington rearrangement plans which are said to be on a scale dwarfing those of any other nation and powerful enough to protect the whole western hemisphere.

Diners in Great Hall Discover "Areopagitica" Difficult Reading

That the inscription around the Great Hall in Hart House takes three years to read is the opinion garnered from students in the House. Freshmen usually try to read it, but seldom manage to complete it at one time. Second year men never get around to reading it at one sitting, but during their third year make a determined attempt to complete the circuit of the Hall, and usually succeed.

Several freshmen said that they have been trying to read the whole quotation, but cannot manage without letting people know they are new in the House, and usually forget where they finished last day.

Opinions varied about the origin of the quotation, and its author, some students ascribing it to Wordsworth and more to Milton. Only two students knew the source of the quotation, Milton's

Speaks to Royal Canadian Institute on Hot Springs of New Zealand

"Hot Springs and Volcanic Activity in New Zealand" was the lecture given by Dr. Arthur Day in Convocation Hall under the auspices of the Royal Canadian Institute on Saturday night. Dr. Day, a graduate of Yale University and a former professor at the Carnegie Institution, has done much in the field of Physical Geography and is an authority on the geological structure of New Zealand.

His talk included colored slides of the natural phenomena in the volcanic area and such wonders as the Taupo-weira volcano and the famous White Terraces destroyed in the eruption of 1886. He also showed slides of world-famed geysers and mineral springs whose waters can be used as ink.

New Zealand was chosen as the spot for his investigations, not only because the phenomena for investigation were situated there, but because there, they were ideal for study.

He stressed the theory that the composition of mineral springs depends not... (Continued on page 4)

Westman Sparks Redmen
As McGill Win
Intercollegiate Title 9-0

Montreal, Nov. 18.—The McGill Redmen clinched a successful season at Molson Stadium this afternoon, piling up a nine-point margin over the superb looking of Herbie Westman, to defeat Western Mustangs 9-0 on a rain-soaked gridiron and take their first intercollegiate rugby title in ten years. A superb attack offensive sparked by Herbie Westman and a brilliant running attack led by Ronnie Perowne, both of whom were chosen on the intercollegiate all-star team, were the two weapons which McGill used to carve their way to their all-important triumph. Westman accounted for all of McGill's points with single points, while Perowne tore holes in the Western line time after time for large gains.

PARTY-GIVER TALKS ON ENTERTAINMENT

Elsa Maxwell to Speak in Town Hall Series
Tonight

The man who contrived the old saw about the better mousetrap and the beaten path through the woods never heard of Elsa Maxwell, yet in crowded Manhattan where she lives, the world has beaten a path to her door. Still she does not make a mousetrap, but she does something better than anyone else ever did.

She gives parties. She entertains international celebrities as casually and frequently as you entertain your next door neighbour or the boss and his wife, yet she puts on no side. She is entirely unpretentious.

Billed as a lecturer in the Town Hall series at Eaton Auditorium (opening Monday night), she refuses to lecture. Common as an old shoe and approachable by anybody—she simply talks to the folks, chummily, jovially, informally.

Years and years ago (she admits how many) she discovered that people liked coming to her parties. She made a career of giving parties. Deciding that society was too cluttered up with formality and ceremonious red tape she cut it all away from her entertainments.

"If you're stuck with a bunch of bores at a party, put them all together. You'll be astonished at how gay they'll all get trying to show up the others!"

'NATIONALISM CAUSE OF ANTI-SEMITISM'

Since the history of anti-Semitism antedates the Christian era the Church can not be blamed for its inception, it was pointed out by Professor W. McCullough at the first of a series of discussions on the relationship of Jews and Christians, sponsored by the S.C.M. and Avukah, and held in the Women's Union last night.

McCullough showed that the Book of Esther bears witness to the fact of maltreatment between the Jews and their neighbors at least 200 B.C. Nevertheless the rise of Christianity increased their difficulties and partly perhaps because the Jews regard as a schismatic heretic, Jews, whom the Church declared to be the Christ. The speaker maintained that Jewish nationalism in conflict with other nationalisms was an important cause of friction. This nationalism, with no sphere of political independence to support it rests on the deep-rooted belief of the Hebrews that they are in a special sense the "Chosen People" and their destiny can only be achieved by maintaining their separateness.

The legacy of the Middle Ages, when the Jews were excluded from most vocations, has segregated them in most very few callings and their survival... (Continued on page 4)

U. OF T. EASTERN CHAMPS

Toronto's senior soccer squad completely outclassed R.M.C. 9-0 Saturday morning on the front campus, to prove beyond a doubt it is the best university soccer team in eastern Canada.

This game came as a climax to a sensational season for the Blue soccerers. They won the Senior title over Western, McMaster and O.A.C., and then proceeded in Saturday's test match to demonstrate their marked superiority over the red and white cadets, winners of eastern honours from McGill.

Varsity opened the scoring after 8 minutes of play as George Fraser headed in number one, after which the reds of goals continued with three more in the first half and another five for good measure before full time. Speedy Frankie Silts and dependable Al Dadds accounted for three Toronto tallies each, Jack Convey netted a penalty shot and another halfback, Forbes Thomson, made it a grand total of five. The Kingstons attack was pressed, but when they did their attack was led by Captain Phil Nation at centre.

Once again the Varsity eleven worked like a machine and every man deserved four-star rating. Harvey Ward in goal earned his third shut-out of the season, the backs and halves played like pros, and the forward line never let the various arts do not aim at the same effects, yet their affinity despite the difference of media, lies in their human quality.

R.M.C.: Chipman, Sweeney, Pirie, Nation, McBrien, Lawrence, Smith, Allen, Caldwell, Houghton, Williams, Fisher, Hindman.

Toronto: Ward, Powell, Muchan, Baird, Thomson, Convey, Rutherford, Dadds, Silts, Mullett, Fraser, McDonald.

Art Exhibit Opened By Dr. Pelham Edgar

"Not merely sincere vehemence, but passionate feeling artistically controlled, is needed for the production of a masterpiece," said Dr. Pelham Edgar when he opened the Fifth Annual Exhibition of the Royal Academy in the Art Gallery Friday evening.

The Emeritus Professor of English from Victoria College pointed out that is worthwhile. The former is tragically unaware of modern methods and the latter unfortunately seem to take pride in being misunderstood. The hope for progress lies in sympathy with the craftsman who treats tradition with intelligent respect and yet feels it is inadequate to his purpose.

"Despite the qualities common to all spheres of life," he said, "What is inspired but the mood to work and the sacredness of art—a good price makes it sacred enough. All artists want appreciation and tangible reward, yet mercenary motives are not the main incentives to production."

Dr. Edgar's address was in sympathy with Innovation is false. No traditionalist will maintain that art is static, nor any innovator be sure that all the past is worthless. Yet the former are tragically unaware of modern methods and the latter unfortunately seem to take pride in being misunderstood. AS RELIGIOUS LEOAER

"While we believe that it is the destiny of Japan to rule the white world, we are sorry that we have to use force before we are ready," said a Japanese bishop, as quoted by Mr. Charles P. Culver, who addressed Dr. Gordon's Bible Class in the Women's Union yesterday.
